The Consumer Law Practice Series

Fair Debt Collection

TENTH EDITION

Updated text, bonus material, and interactive tools at nclc.org/library

NCLC Digital Library
National Consumer Law Center

Summary Contents

Using the Digital Library iii

The Leading Resource for All Consumer Law iv

Contents ix

Chapter 1 Introduction 1

Chapter 2 Overview of Initial Steps in Bringing an FDCPA Case 45

Chapter 3 Overview of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act 61

Chapter 4 Coverage and Definitions, FDCPA § 1692a 77

Chapter 5 FDCPA §§ 1692b, 1692c: Collector Communications with Consumers and Third Parties 139

Chapter 6 Harassing, Oppressive, or Abusive Conduct; FDCPA § 1692d 177

Chapter 7 FDCPA § 1692e: False, Deceptive, or Misleading 199

Chapter 8 FDCPA § 1692f: Unfair or Unconscionable Collections 299

Chapter 9 Validation Notices, Disputes, and Verification, FDCPA § 1692g 331

Chapter 10 FDCPA §§ 1692h, 1692*i*, 1692j: Applying Payments; Distant Forum Abuse; False Impression of Debt Collector Involvement 383

Chapter 11 FDCPA Litigation and Remedies 391

Chapter 12 Debt Collectors' Defenses and Counterclaims 571

Chapter 13 Bankruptcy and Affirmative Claims Arising from Debt Collection 62

Chapter 14	Other Federal Claims	669
Chapter 15	Tort Remedies	721
Chapter 16	Other State Remedies	803
Appendix A	Text of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act	897
Appendix B	CFPB Regulations and Interpretations	907
Appendix C	FTC Interpretations of the FDCPA	943
Appendix D	Summary of State Debt Collection Statutes	969
Appendix E	Fair Debt Collection Practices Act Case Summaries	987
Appendix F	The FDCPA Case Connector, Practice Tools, Pleadings, Primary Sources	989
Appendix G	Abbreviations Commonly Used by Collectors	991
Appendix H	Debt Collection on the Web	993
	Index	994

Contents

Using the Digital Library iii

The Leading Resource for All Consumer Law iv

Chapter 1 Introduction

1.1 NCLC Resources About Fair Debt Collection 1
1.1.1 About This Treatise 1
1.1.1.1 All Subscribers Have Access to the Digital and Print Version 1
1.1.1.2 Organization of the Treatise 1
1.1.1.3 Additional Pleadings, Primary Sources, and Practice Tools 2
1.1.1.4 The FDCPA Case Connector 2
1.1.1.5 How Sections in This Treatise Correspond to the FDCPA 2
1.1.1.6 How Sections in This Treatise Correspond to Regulation F 2
1.1.1.7 Regulation F Treatment of Electronic Communications 4
1.1.1.8 Defining "Debt Collector" in This Treatise 5
1.1.2 Topics Covered in Other NCLC Treatises 5
1.1.3 Trainings and Continuing Legal Education 6
1.1.4 Debt Collection Webpage and Listservs 6
1.2 A Brief History of Debt Collection and Its Regulation in the United States 6
1.3 Parties Commonly Involved in Debt Collection 8
1.3.1 Consumers 8
1.3.1.1 Overview 8
1.3.1.2 Consumer Complaints about Debt Collection 10
1.3.1.3 Mental Health and Consumer Debt 11
1.3.1.4 Lower-Income Consumers and Debt Collection 13
1.3.1.5 Race, Ethnicity, and Debt Collection 14
1.3.1.6 Older Americans and Debt Collection 16
1.3.1.7 Servicemembers, Veterans, and Debt Collection 18
1.3.1.8 Debt Collection and Consumers with Limited English Proficiency 18
1.3.2 Consumer Attorneys 19
1.3.3 Original Creditors 19
1.3.4 Debt Buyers 20
1.3.4.1 Generally 20
1.3.4.2 Amount and Types of Debt Sold in the United States 20
1.3.4.3 Average Price of Debt 21
1.3.4.4 Age of Purchased Debt 22
1.3.4.5 Identifying Some of the Largest Debt Buyers 22
1.3.5 Debt Collection Agencies 22
1.3.5.1 First-Party Collection 22
1.3.5.2 Third-Party Collection 23
1.3.5.2.1 Introduction 23
1.3.5.2.2 Number, size, and distribution of collection agencies 23

1.3.5.2.3 Compensation for collection agencies and individual collectors 24
1.3.5.2.4 Types of debts collected 24
1.3.5.2.5 Check diversion programs 25
1.3.6 Collection Attorneys 25
1.3.7 Consumer Locating Services, a.k.a. "Skip Tracers" 26
1.3.8 Consumer Reporting Agencies 26
1.3.9 Debt Relief Services 26
1.4 How Debts Are Collected 27
1.4.1 Overview 27
1.4.2 Credit Reporting 27
1.4.3 Cancellation of Debt and Taxes 27
1.4.4 Collection by Credit Card Issuers 28
1.4.4.1 Collection Prior to Charge-Off 28
1.4.4.2 Charge-Off 28
1.4.4.3 Collection After Charge-Off 28
1.4.5 Collection by First-Party Debt Collectors 29
1.4.6 Collection by Third-Party Debt Collectors 29
1.4.6.1 Length of Placement 29
1.4.6.2 Information Transferred at Placement 29
1.4.6.3 Methods of Consumer Contacts 30
1.4.6.4 Consumer Disputes and Requests for Verification 30
1.4.6.5 Collection Procedures 30
1.4.7 Collection by Debt Buyers 30
1.4.7.1 Mechanics of Debt Sales 30
1.4.7.2 Representations and Warranties 31
1.4.7.3 Account Information Available to Debt Buyers 31
1.4.7.4 Chain of Title 32
1.4.8 Collection by Attorneys 32
1.4.9 Collection Lawsuits in State Court 33
1.4.9.1 Number of Debt Collection Lawsuits 33
1.4.9.2 Top Filers of Collection Lawsuits Against Consumers 34
1.4.9.3 Costs of Litigation 35
1.4.9.4 Default Judgments 36
1.4.9.5 Representation by Attorneys 37
1.4.9.6 Hallway Conferences and Judgeless Courtrooms 38
1.4.10 Using Arbitration to Collect Consumer Debts 39
1.4.11 Collection on the Judgment 39
1.5 Use of Technology in Debt Collection 40
1.5.1 Collection Management System 40
1.5.2 Websites and Portals 40
1.5.3 Telephone Technologies 41
1.5.4 Email, Text, and Social Media 41
1.5.5 Collection Analytics 42

Chapter 2 Overview of Initial Steps in Bringing an FDCPA Case

2.1 Introduction 45
2.2 Initial Interview 45
2.2.1 Strategy for Initial Interview 45
2.2.2 Questions to Uncover Damages 45
2.2.3 Examining the Validity of the Debt 46
2.2.4 Clarifying the Client's Legal Objectives 47

2.2.5 Careful Case Selection....47
2.2.6 Developing a Plaintiffs Fair Debt Collection Practice....48
2.3 Bankruptcy and Fair Debt Collection Practices Claims....48
2.4 Stopping Debt Harassment Without Litigation or Bankruptcy....48
2.4.1 Overview....48
2.4.2 Directing the Collector to Stop Dunning Contacts....48
2.4.3 Notifying the Collector That Bank Account Is Exempt from Seizure....49
2.4.4 Proposing a Workout Agreement....50
2.4.5 Complaining to Consumer Protection Agencies....50
2.4.6 Complaining About Billing Errors....51
2.4.7 Lawyer Letter Requesting the Collector to Stop Contacts....51
2.4.8 Evaluating Strategies for Harassed Debtors....52
2.5 Preparation of a Suit for Damages....52
2.5.1 Client's Recording of Phone Calls....52
2.5.2 Client's Written Statement....53
2.5.3 Some Fee-Generating Debt Collection Cases Must Be Referred to Private Lawyers by Legal Services Corporation Grantees....53
2.5.4 Developing the Case Chronology of Events....53
2.5.5 The Collector's Documents and Other Sources of Evidence....53
2.5.6 Pattern or Practice Evidence....54
2.5.7 Pleadings....54
2.5.7.1 Importance of State Claims....54
2.5.7.2 Choice of Federal or State Court....54
2.5.7.3 Specificity of Pleading....54
2.5.7.4 Avoiding Dismissal....54
2.5.7.5 Structuring the Case....54
2.5.7.5.1 Requesting a jury trial and joining additional parties....54
2.5.7.5.2 FDCPA as a counterclaim....54
2.5.7.5.3 The burden of persuasion of exceptions to FDCPA violations falls on the defendant....55
2.5.7.5.4 Filing an FDCPA class action....55
2.5.7.6 Do Not Send Demand Letters to Unknown Debt Collectors....55
2.5.7.7 Sample Complaints....55
2.5.7.8 Proper Service....55
2.5.7.9 Debt Collectors' Defensive Strategies....55
2.5.8 Mandatory Arbitration of Consumers' Claims....55
2.5.9 Discovery....56
2.5.10 Prepare for Trial at the Beginning of the Case....56
2.5.11 FDCPA Claims Are Frequently Determined by Summary Judgment....56
2.5.12 Jury Trials Advised....56
2.5.13 Offers of Judgment or Settlement in Individual Actions....56
2.4.14 Pitfalls with Using Surveys and Experts on Deception....56
2.6 Proving the Nature, Cause, and Value of Actual Damages....56
2.6.1 Maximizing Damage Awards....56
2.6.2 Actual Damages in Collection Abuse Cases....57
2.6.2.1 General Principles....57
2.6.2.2 Common Types of Compensable Injuries Resulting from Debt Collector Misconduct....57
2.6.2.2.1 Introduction....57
2.6.2.2.2 Emotional distress injuries arising from debt collector misconduct....57

2.6.2.2.3 Medical conditions arising from debt collection abuses 57
2.6.2.2.4 Out-of-pocket losses 57
2.6.2.2.5 Injuries to personal relations 57
2.6.2.3 Using FDCPA Damages to Settle a Debt 57
2.6.3 Evidence Establishing an Injury's Existence, Cause and Value 58
2.6.4 Compensable Emotional Stress and Other Losses Vary Among States 58
2.6.5 Causation Is an Important Element in the Proof of Damages 58
2.6.6 Preparing for a Jury Trial of an FDCPA Case 58
2.6.7 Establishing Deception 58
2.7 Punitive Damages 58
2.7.1 Overview 58
2.7.2 FCRA Punitive Damages Awards Against Debt Collectors 58
2.8 Consumer Claims Against Collector's Professional Liability Insurer 58
2.9 Creditor's and Debt Collector's Liability for Acts of Their Employees, Collection Agency, or Attorney 58
2.10 Keeping Time Records for Awards of Attorney Fees 59
2.11 Injunctions, Administrative Agency Complaints, and Community Education 59
2.12 Careful Evaluation of Appealing Adverse Lower Court FDCPA Decisions 59
2.13 Consumers Representing Themselves in Court 59

Chapter 3 Overview of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

3.1 Scope, Purpose, and Effective Date 61
3.2 General Principles of Construction of the Act 62
3.2.1 Act Protects Least Sophisticated Consumers 62
3.2.1.1 Origin of Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard 62
3.2.1.2 Least Sophisticated Consumer vs. Unsophisticated Consumer 62
3.2.1.3 Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard Applies to Multiple Types of FDCPA Claims 63
3.2.1.4 Applying the Least Sophisticated Consumer Test 63
3.2.1.5 Standard for Communications to Bankruptcy Trustees and Consumer Attorneys 65
3.2.2 Interaction of the FDCPA with State Law 65
3.2.3 Waiver of FDCPA Protections Disfavored 65
3.2.4 Strict Liability Under the FDCPA 66
3.2.5 Liberal Interpretation of the FDCPA 67
3.2.6 Debtors Deserve Reasonable and Civil Treatment 67
3.3 Constitutionality of the FDCPA 67
3.4 Sources of Law Interpreting the FDCPA 68
3.4.1 Construing the Language of the Act 68
3.4.2 Legislative History 69
3.4.2.1 1977 Act 69
3.4.2.2 1986 Amendment 70
3.4.2.3 1996 Amendment 70
3.4.2.4 2006 Amendments 70
3.4.2.5 2010 Amendment 71
3.4.3 Case Developments 71
3.4.4 Interpretation and Enforcement of the FDCPA by Federal Agencies 71
3.4.4.1 Overview 71
3.4.4.2 Regulations 72

3.4.4.3 Advisory Opinions 73
3.4.4.4 Guidance, Staff Commentary, and Informal Letters 73
3.4.4.5 Supervision and Enforcement 74
3.4.4.6 Amicus Briefs 75
3.4.4.7 Reports and Consumer Education Materials 75
3.4.4.8 Deference to Federal Agency Interpretations of the FDCPA 75

Chapter 4 Coverage and Definitions, FDCPA § 1692a

4.1 Introduction 77
4.2 Communication, FDCPA § 1692a(2); Attempt to Communicate, Reg. F § 1006.2(b) 77
4.2.1 Overview 77
4.2.2 Conveying Information Regarding a Debt Directly or Indirectly 78
4.2.3 Conveying Information Not Required for Attempt to Communicate 78
4.2.4 "Any Person Through Any Medium" 79
4.2.5 "Regarding a Debt" and "About a Debt" 80
4.2.6 Voicemail and Messages for Third Parties 81
4.3 Connection with Collection of a Debt 81
4.3.1 Overview; No Payment Need Be Demanded 81
4.3.2 Is a Required Notice in Connection with Collection? 85
4.3.3 Collection Litigation 87
4.3.4 Foreclosures and Repossessions 88
4.3.5 Property Preservation Contractors 89
4.3.6 Evictions 90
4.4 Consumer, FDCPA § 1692a(3) 91
4.5 Creditor, FDCPA § 1692a(4) 92
4.6 Debt, FDCPA § 1692a(5) 92
4.6.1 Overview 92
4.6.2 Arising Out of a Transaction Involving Money, Property, Insurance, or Services 93
4.6.3 Debts Not Involving Transactions 95
4.6.4 Transactions Primarily for Personal, Family, or Household Purposes 97
4.6.5 Where Consumer Has No Knowledge of Nature of Alleged Debt 100
4.7 Debt Collector, FDCPA § 1692a(6) 101
4.7.1 Overview 101
4.7.2 Principal Purpose Being Debt Collection 102
4.7.2.1 Generally 102
4.7.2.2 Debt Buyer's Principal Purpose 103
4.7.3 Regularly Collecting Debts Owed to Another 105
4.7.3.1 Generally 105
4.7.3.2 Requirement that Debts Are Owed to Another 107
4.7.3.3 Attorneys Regularly Collecting Debts 108
4.7.3.4 Enforcement of Security Interests As Debt Collection 109
4.7.3.5 Landlord-Tenant Collections and Evictions 111
4.7.3.6 Debt Collector Employees, Managers, Officers 111
4.7.4 Creditor or Debt Buyer's Use of a False Name 112
4.7.5 Special Treatment of Those Enforcing Security Interests As Their Principal Purpose 114
4.7.5.1 Generally 114
4.7.5.2 Security Interest Enforcement As Principal Purpose 115
4.7.5.2.1 Introduction 115

4.7.5.2.2 Conduct of judicial foreclosures 115
4.7.5.2.3 Mortgage servicers, foreclosure trustees, foreclosure law firms 117
4.7.5.2.4 Evidence of purposes beyond security enforcement 119
4.7.5.3 Obduskey Ruling Limited to Steps Required to Enforce Security Interest 119
4.7.5.3.1 Introduction 119
4.7.5.3.2 Conduct only related to required steps to enforce a security interest 121
4.7.5.4 Pleading Tips to Avoid the Obduskey Limited-Purpose Loophole 122
4.8 Exclusions from "Debt Collector" Definition 123
4.8.1 Creditor Employees Collecting in the Creditor's Name, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A) 123
4.8.2 An Entity Not Principally a Collector, Collecting for a Commonly Owned or Affiliated Entity, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(B) 124
4.8.3 State and Federal Officials, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(C) 124
4.8.4 The Service of Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(D) 125
4.8.5 Nonprofit Consumer Credit Counselors, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(E) 126
4.8.6 Attorney Exclusion No Longer Applies 126
4.8.7 Collecting Debts Incidental to Fiduciary or Escrow Arrangements, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(i) 127
4.8.8 Credit Originator Collecting on Behalf of Another, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii) 128
4.8.9 When Person Obtains Debt Not Yet in Default, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) 129
4.8.9.1 Generally 129
4.8.9.2 When Does Default Occur? 130
4.8.10 Secured Parties Involving Commercial Credit, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iv) 132
4.8.11 Private Bad Check Diversion Programs, FDCPA § 1692p 132
4.8.12 Debt Collectors Not Covered Under Regulation F, § 1006.1(c) 133
4.9 Limited-Content Message, Regulation F § 1006.2(j) 134
4.9.1 Overview 134
4.9.2 Required Information in a Limited-Content Message 135
4.9.3 Optional Information in a Limited-Content Message 136
4.10 "Person," Reg. F § 1006.2(k) 136
4.11 "State," FDCPA § 1692a(8) 137

Chapter 5 FDCPA §§ 1692b, 1692c: Collector Communications with Consumers and Third Parties

5.1 Introduction 139
5.2 Third-Party Contacts for Consumer Location Information, FDCPA § 1692b 139
5.2.1 Text of FDCPA §§ 1692b, 1692a(7) 139
5.2.2 Overview 139
5.2.3 The Legislative History 140
5.2.4 Role of Definition of Communication in FDCPA § 1692b Analysis 140
5.2.5 FDCPA § 1692b Does Not Apply to Communications with the Consumer 141
5.2.6 FDCPA § 1692b Only Applies Where Purpose Is to Acquire Location Information 142
5.2.7 Burden of Proof Under FDCPA § 1692b 142

5.2.8 Required Disclosures While Seeking Location Information 143
5.2.9 Collector Must Not Indicate the Consumer Owes a Debt 143
5.2.9.1 Generally 143
5.2.9.2 Exception Where Consumer Is Deceased 144
5.2.10 Limits on the Number of Location Communications 144
5.2.11 No Communication Allowed If Consumer Is Represented 145
5.2.12 Enforcement of FDCPA § 1692b 145
5.3 Communication with the Consumer Generally, FDCPA § 1692c(a) 145
5.3.1 Overview 145
5.3.2 Prohibitions Apply to Communications in Connection with Collection of a Debt 146
5.3.3 Consumer's Prior Consent to the Communication 146
5.3.4 A Court's Express Permission for the Communication 147
5.4 Contacts at Unusual or Inconvenient Times or Places, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) 148
5.4.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1) 148
5.4.2 Contacts at Inconvenient Times 148
5.4.3 Contacts at Inconvenient Places 150
5.4.4 The Known or Which Should Be Known Standard 151
5.4.5 Other FDCPA Provisions Also Regulate Phone Calls 152
5.5 Contacting a Consumer Known to Be Represented by an Attorney, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) 152
5.5.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2) 152
5.5.2 Overview of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) 152
5.5.3 Collector's Knowledge that Consumer Has Legal Representation 154
5.5.3.1 Actual Knowledge 154
5.5.3.2 Imputed Knowledge of the Consumer's Representation 155
5.5.4 Consumer's Attorney Must Reasonably Respond to Debt Collector's Communications 156
5.6 Contacts at Workplace Are Restricted, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(3) 156
5.7 Prohibited Third-Party Contacts, FDCPA § 1692c(b) 157
5.7.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(b) 157
5.7.2 Contacting Third Parties Generally Prohibited 158
5.7.3 Is a Third-Party Contact a Communication for Purposes of FDCPA § 1692c(b)? 160
5.7.4 Parties With Whom Debt Collectors May Communicate Without Violating FDCPA § 1692c(b) 161
5.7.5 Exceptions to the Prohibition on Third-Party Communications in FDCPA § 1692c(b) 161
5.7.6 Other Allowed Third-Party Contacts 163
5.7.7 Leaving Messages with Third Parties for the Consumer 163
5.7.8 Voicemails for Consumers Overheard by Third Parties 164
5.7.9 Emails and Texts Viewed by Third Parties 165
5.7.9.1 Generally 165
5.7.9.2 Procedures Where the Debt Collector Acquires the Email Address from the Consumer 166
5.7.9.3 Procedures Where the Creditor Obtains the Email Address from the Consumer 167
5.7.9.4 Procedures Where a Prior Debt Collector Obtains the Email Address from the Consumer 168

5.7.9.5 Procedures for When a Debt Collector Obtains a Phone Number for Text Messages . . . 168
5.7.10 Third Party Enforcement of FDCPA § 1692c(b) . . . 169
5.8 Right to Stop Collection Contacts, FDCPA § 1692c(c) . . . 170
5.8.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(c) and Reg F § 1006.6(c) . . . 170
5.8.2 The Consumer's Right to Stop Collection Contacts . . . 170
5.8.3 Consumer's Subsequent Waiver of Right to Avoid Collection Contacts . . . 172
5.8.4 Exceptions to Right to Cessation of Contacts . . . 173
5.8.5 Debt Referred to Another Collector After Request to Cease Collection . . . 174
5.8.7 State Requirements As to Notice to Consumer of Right to Terminate Collection Contacts . . . 174
5.9 Opt-Out Notice for Electronic Communication, Reg. F § 1006.6(e) . . . 174
5.10 Definition of Consumer for Purposes of FDCPA § 1692c under § 1692c(d) . . . 176

Chapter 6 Harassing, Oppressive, or Abusive Conduct; FDCPA § 1692d

6.1 Introduction . . . 177
6.2 General Prohibition of Harassing, Oppressive, or Abusive Conduct . . . 177
6.2.1 General Prohibition and Relation to Specific Prohibitions . . . 177
6.2.2 FDCPA § 1692d Coverage . . . 178
6.2.3 Harass, Oppress, or Abuse Defined . . . 179
6.2.4 Least Sophisticated and Susceptible Consumer Standards . . . 179
6.2.5 Abusive Language and Repetitive Calling . . . 180
6.2.6 Contacting Third Parties . . . 180
6.2.7 Legal Proceedings and Postjudgment Conduct . . . 181
6.3 Use or Threat of Use of Violence or Criminal Means; FDCPA § 1692d(1) . . . 182
6.4 Obscene, Profane, or Abusive Language; FDCPA § 1692d(2) . . . 182
6.5 Publishing Lists of Debtors Who Allegedly Refuse to Pay; FDCPA § 1692d(3) . . . 183
6.6 Advertising a Debt for Sale to Coerce Payment; FDCPA § 1692d(4) . . . 184
6.7 Repeated or Continuous Telephone Calls; FDCPA § 1692d(5) . . . 184
6.7.1 Overview . . . 184
6.7.2 Call and Conversation Frequency Limits Under Regulation F . . . 186
6.7.2.1 Regulation F's Presumptions As to Call and Conversation Frequency . . . 186
6.7.2.2 Rebutting the Presumption of Compliance . . . 187
6.7.2.3 Rebutting the Presumption of Violation . . . 188
6.7.2.4 Limits on Regulation F's Safe Harbor for Call Frequency . . . 189
6.7.2.5 Prior Consent to Additional Calls . . . 189
6.7.2.6 When Does a Call Count Toward the Frequency Limits . . . 189
6.7.2.7 Counting Call Frequency When the Collector Calls About Multiple Debts . . . 190
6.7.2.8 State or Local Law Limitations on Call Frequency . . . 191
6.7.2.9 Frequency Standard Prior to Regulation F Standards . . . 191
6.7.3 Establishing Intent to Annoy, Abuse, or Harass . . . 193
6.8 Meaningful Disclosure of Caller's Identity; FDCPA § 1692d(6) . . . 194
6.9 Prohibited Communication Media; Reg. F § 1006.14(h) . . . 196

Chapter 7 FDCPA § 1692e: False, Deceptive, or Misleading

7.1 Introduction . . . 199
7.2 The Sixteen Enumerated FDCPA § 1692e Prohibitions . . . 199
7.2.1 False Implication of Government Affiliation, FDCPA § 1692e(1) . . . 199

7.2.2 Debt's Character, Amount, Status; Collector Services or Compensation, FDCPA § 1692e(2) 200
7.2.2.1 Generally 200
7.2.2.2 Strict Liability 201
7.2.2.3 Demanding Payment When No Debt Is Owed 201
7.2.2.4 Misrepresentations As to the Total Amount Due 203
7.2.2.5 Misrepresentations As to Interest Charges 205
7.2.2.6 Misrepresentations As to Accruing Interest and Fees 206
7.2.2.7 Misrepresentation of Collection Costs, Other Compensation, and Fees 209
7.2.2.8 Attorney Fees and Court Costs 210
7.2.2.9 Penalties and Charges for Dishonored Checks 212
7.2.2.10 Misrepresentation of Collector Services 213
7.2.2.11 Other Misrepresentation of Debt's Character or Legal Status 213
7.2.3 Falsely Implying Person Is an Attorney or That Communication Comes from an Attorney, FDCPA § 1692e(3) 214
7.2.3.1 Generally 214
7.2.3.2 Non-Attorneys Impersonating Attorneys 214
7.2.3.3 Attorney Letters Without Attorney Review of the Account 215
7.2.3.3.1 Introduction 215
7.2.3.3.2 Does a letter indicate it is from an attorney? 217
7.2.3.3.3 Where lawyer letter discloses attorney has not reviewed the account 217
7.2.3.3.4 Creditor liability for letters on attorney letterhead 218
7.2.4 Claims That Nonpayment Will Result in Arrest, Garnishment, or Property Seizure, FDCPA § 1692e(4) and e(5) 218
7.2.4.1 Generally 218
7.2.4.2 Threats of Arrest 219
7.2.4.3 Threats Involving Postjudgment Remedies 220
7.2.5 Threatening Unlawful or Unintended Lawsuits, Other Actions, FDCPA § 1692e(5) 221
7.2.5.1 Generally 221
7.2.5.2 Veiled, Implied, or Ambiguous Threats 222
7.2.5.2.1 Introduction 222
7.2.5.2.2 Implied threats to sue 223
7.2.5.3 Threats to Take Actions Not Intended to Be Taken 225
7.2.5.3.1 Introduction 225
7.2.5.3.2 Proving lack of intent to sue 225
7.2.5.3.3 Proving lack of intent to take other actions 227
7.2.5.4 Threats to Take or the Taking of Unlawful Actions 228
7.2.5.4.1 Introduction 228
7.2.5.4.2 Threats to unlawfully file a collection lawsuit 229
7.2.5.4.3 Threats to take other unlawful actions 231
7.2.6 False Implications As to a Debt Transfer, FDCPA § 1692e(6) 232
7.2.7 Misrepresenting Consumer Engaged in a Crime, Other Misconduct, FDCPA § 1692e(7) 233
7.2.8 Disclosure of Consumer's Dispute; Communicating or Threatening to Communicate False Credit Information, FDCPA § 1692e(8) 234
7.2.8.1 Generally 234
7.2.8.2 Threats Aimed at the Consumer 234
7.2.8.3 Reporting False Information to CRAs and Others 234

7.2.8.4 Disclosure of the Consumer's Dispute of the Credit Information 236
7.2.8.4.1 Nature of the disclosure obligation 236
7.2.8.4.2 Disclosure requirement applies to communications with any third party 237
7.2.8.4.3 Informing the debt collector of the dispute 237
7.2.8.5 Collector Defenses to FDCPA § 1692e(8) Claims 239
7.2.8.6 FCRA Claims Complementing FDCPA § 1692e(8) 239
7.2.9 False Impression of Writing's Source, Authorization, or Approval, FDCPA § 1692e(9) 240
7.2.9.1 Generally 240
7.2.9.2 Where Debt Collector Is Related to Source, Authorizer, or Approver 241
7.2.10 Deception in Collecting a Debt or Obtaining Consumer Information, FDCPA § 1692e(10) 242
7.2.11 Notice of Attempt to Collect a Debt, FDCPA § 1692e(11) 243
7.2.11.1 Generally 243
7.2.11.2 Is a Voicemail or Other Contact a "Communication"? 245
7.2.11.3 Collector's Adequate Disclosure of FDCPA § 1692e(11) Notices 246
7.2.11.4 Exemption for Legal Pleadings 248
7.2.11.5 Other Situations Where FDCPA § 1692e(11) May Not Apply 249
7.2.12 False Implication That Accounts Have Been Transferred to Innocent Purchasers, FDCPA § 1692e(12) 250
7.2.13 Falsely Implying That Documents Are Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692e(13) 250
7.2.14 Collector's Use of a False Name, FDCPA § 1692e(14) 251
7.2.14.1 Generally 251
7.2.14.2 Misleading Use of One of Collector's Alternative Names 252
7.2.14.3 Use of Employee Aliases 253
7.2.15 Misrepresenting How Consumer Should Respond to Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692e(15) 253
7.2.16 Implying Collector Is a Consumer Reporting Agency, FDCPA § 1692e(16) 254
7.3 General Deception Standards 255
7.3.1 Selected Text and Legislative History of FDCPA § 1692e 255
7.3.2 In Connection with Collection of Any Debt 255
7.3.3 Relation of Enumerated FDCPA § 1692e Provisions to Its General Deception Standard 255
7.3.4 False vs. Deceptive or Misleading 256
7.3.5 The Deception Standard 256
7.3.5.1 Generally 256
7.3.5.2 Seventh Circuit's Unique Approach 257
7.3.5.3 Actual Injury 257
7.3.5.4 Literal Truth, Half-truths, and Deception 257
7.3.6 The Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard 258
7.3.7 Deception in Communications to the Consumer's Attorney 258
7.3.8 Proving Deception—Is It a Matter of Law or Fact? 259
7.3.9 Materiality in FDCPA § 1692e Claims 261
7.3.9.1 Generally 261
7.3.9.2 Materiality as to Consequences of Payment or Non-Payment 262

7.3.9.3 Materiality As to Inaccuracy of the Amount Due 263
7.3.9.4 Materiality As to the Nature or Identity of the Creditor or Collector 263
7.3.9.5 Materiality As to the Nature of the Debt and Debtor Rights 264
7.3.9.6 Materiality of Deceptive Practices in Collection Litigation 265
7.4 Application of FDCPA § 1692e to Selected Collection Topics 265
7.4.1 Nature of the Debt Collector and the Payment Process 265
7.4.2 Debt Collector's Use of Social Media 266
7.4.3 Misrepresentations About Third-Party Contacts and Location Information 267
7.4.4 Misrepresentation As to Consumer's FDCPA Rights 267
7.4.5 Communications Where Format or Language Is Confusing 268
7.4.6 Deception Related to Credit Reporting 268
7.4.7 Deceptive Offers to Settle the Debt 269
7.4.7.1 Generally 269
7.4.7.2 Limited One-Time Offers to Settle 270
7.4.7.3 Representations Regarding Tax Consequences of Forgiven Debt . . . 271
7.4.8 Student Loans 271
7.4.9 Unfair and Deceptive Practices Involving Time-Barred Debts 272
7.4.9.1 Generally 272
7.4.9.2 Statute of Limitations Law in Three Paragraphs 272
7.4.9.3 Suits on Time-Barred Debts 273
7.4.9.4 Threats to Sue on Time-Barred Debts 274
7.4.9.5 Time-Barred Proofs of Claim in Bankruptcy Cases 274
7.4.9.6 Deceptive Collection Contacts Related to Time-Barred Debts . . 275
7.4.9.6.1 Introduction 275
7.4.9.6.2 Failing to Disclose That Payment Revives the Limitations Period 276
7.4.10 Deceptive Practices in Collection Lawsuits 277
7.4.10.1 Generally 277
7.4.10.2 Does FDCPA § 1692e Apply to Filings Submitted to the Court? . . . 278
7.4.10.3 Deceptive Initiation of a Case and Excessive Requests for Relief . . 278
7.4.10.3.1 Service of the complaint and accompanying documents 278
7.4.10.3.2 Complaints that mislead as to collector's right to sue the consumer 280
7.4.10.3.3 Suing on an inapplicable or unclear legal theory 280
7.4.10.3.4 Amounts sought 281
7.4.10.4 Initiating a Case Without Evidence or Review by the Attorney . . 282
7.4.10.4.1 Initiating lawsuit without meaningful attorney involvement 282
7.4.10.4.2 Initiating a lawsuit without sufficient evidence of debt 283
7.4.10.5 Deceptive Affidavits and Business Records 284
7.4.10.6 Requests for Admissions and Other Discovery 285
7.4.10.7 Misrepresentations in Seeking a Default Judgment 285
7.4.10.8 Garnishment; Postjudgment Remedies 286
7.4.10.8.1 Pursuing postjudgment remedies when debt no longer or never owed 286
7.4.10.8.2 Misrepresentations concerning exemptions 286
7.4.10.8.3 Misrepresentations concerning creditor rights or the amount owed postjudgment 287

7.4.11 Deception re Mortgage Servicing and Foreclosures 287
7.4.11.1 Generally 287
7.4.11.2 Misrepresentation of the Homeowner's Legal Rights As to Mortgage Servicing and Foreclosures 288
7.4.11.3 Misrepresentation As to the Parties Involved in the Mortgage Loan 290
7.4.11.4 Misrepresentation of the Amount Owed 291
7.4.12 Deception Regarding Rental Debt 292
7.4.12.1 Residential Eviction Actions 292
7.4.12.2 Regulation F Provisions Related to CDC COVID-19 Residential Eviction Halt 293
7.4.13 Unlicensed Debt Collection 295

Chapter 8 FDCPA § 1692f: Unfair or Unconscionable Collections
8.1 General Prohibition; Construing "Unfair" and "Unconscionable," 15 U.S.C. § 1692f 299
8.1.1 Relation of General Standard to More Specific Enumerated Prohibitions 299
8.1.2 Sources for the Unfairness Standard 299
8.1.3 Sources for the Unconscionability Standard 300
8.1.4 Relation of FDCPA § 1692f to Other FDCPA Provisions 300
8.1.5 Strict Liability; Least Sophisticated Consumer; Conduct Addressed to Consumer's Attorney; Materiality; Constitutional Standing 301
8.2 Conduct Prohibited Under FDCPA § 1692f General Standard 302
8.2.1 Unfair Collection Contacts 302
8.2.1.1 Unauthorized Taking of the Consumer's Money or Property 302
8.2.1.2 Aggressive or Overreaching Collection Conduct 302
8.2.1.3 Hiding Key Information from the Consumer 303
8.2.1.4 Evasion or Obfuscation of Other FDCPA Provisions 304
8.2.1.5 State Law Violations 304
8.2.2 Collecting Time-Barred Debts 305
8.2.3 Unfair Practices in Debt Collection Suits Against the Consumer 305
8.2.3.1 Service of Process 305
8.2.3.2 Suing Where There Is No Right to Sue 305
8.2.3.3 The Conduct of the Litigation 306
8.2.3.4 Litigation Mills As an Unfair Practice 307
8.2.4 Unfair Postjudgment Practices 307
8.3 FDCPA § 1692f(1): Collecting an Amount Not Permitted by Law or Contract . . . 309
8.3.1 Overview 309
8.3.2 Where Debt Discharged, Extinguished, or Not Owed 310
8.3.3 Interest Charges Not Authorized or Permitted 311
8.3.4 Collection Costs 312
8.3.5 Attorney Fees 313
8.3.6 Court Costs 315
8.3.7 Other Fees, Charges, or Any Other Amount 315
8.4 FDCPA § 1692f(2) to f(4): Restrictions on Postdated Payment Instruments 316
8.5 FDCPA § 1692f(5): Causing Charges to a Person by Concealing Communications' Collection Purpose 317
8.6 FDCPA § 1692f(6): Threats and Actions to Dispossess Property Non-Judicially . . 318
8.6.1 Overview 318
8.6.2 When Collector Has No Present Right to Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) 319

8.6.3 When No Present Intent to Take Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(B) 321
8.6.4 Taking or Threatening to Take Exempt Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(C) 322
8.7 FDCPA § 1692f(7): Sending Consumers a Postcard 322
8.8 FDCPA § 1692f(8): Language and Symbols on Envelopes 322
8.8.1 Overview 322
8.8.2 Language or Symbols 323
8.8.3 "On" an Envelope 324
8.8.4 Names Indicating Sender Is a Debt Collector 324
8.9 Reg. F § 1006.22(a), (g): Language and Symbols in Emails and Texts 324
8.10 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3): Emails to Employer-Provided Email Addresses 325
8.11 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4): Use of Social Media 326
8.12 Reg. § 1006.30(a): Preconditions to Furnishing Information to Reporting Agencies 326
8.13 Reg. F § 1006.30(b): Sale or Placement for Collection of Cancelled Debt 327
8.13.1 Overview 327
8.13.2 Exceptions 328

Chapter 9 Validation Notices, Disputes, and Verification, FDCPA § 1692g

9.1 Introduction 331
9.2 When Validation Notice Must Be Given 331
9.2.1 Meaning of "Initial Communication" 331
9.2.2 Exclusions from "Initial Communication" 332
9.2.3 Validation Notice Where Consumer Is Deceased 333
9.2.4 Each Debt Collector Must Send the Notice 334
9.3 Delivery of Validation Information 335
9.3.1 Oral Notice 335
9.3.2 Electronic Notices 336
9.3.2.1 Generally 336
9.3.2.2 Expected to Provide Actual Notice and In Form Consumer Can Keep 336
9.3.2.3 Compliance with the E-SIGN Act 337
9.3.3 Written Notices and Burden of Proving Mail Delivery 337
9.3.4 Delivery of Notice to Consumer's Attorney 339
9.3.5 Notice Must Effectively Convey Required Information 339
9.4 Required Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34(c) 342
9.4.1 Overview 342
9.4.2 The Itemization Date 343
9.4.2.1 Generally 343
9.4.2.2 The Five Reference Dates 343
9.4.3 Disclosure That Notice Is from a Debt Collector 344
9.4.4 Debt Collector's Name and Mailing Address 344
9.4.5 Consumer's Name and Mailing Address 344
9.4.6 Creditor's Name and the Account Number 344
9.4.7 The Debt Amount and Its Itemization 345
9.4.7.1 Generally 345
9.4.7.2 Debt Amount As of Itemization Date 345
9.4.7.3 Itemization of Charges Since Itemization Date 345
9.4.7.4 Current Amount Due 346
9.4.7.5 Exception for Certain Residential Mortgage Debt 347
9.4.8 Notice of Rights to Dispute or Request Original Creditor Information 348
9.4.8.1 Calculating the End of the Validation Period 348
9.4.8.2 Three Disclosures of Consumer Rights 348

9.4.9 Disclosure of CFPB Website for More Information 349
9.4.10 Method of Consumer Electronically Requesting Creditor's Address or Disputing the Debt 349
9.4.11 Consumer Response Information 350
9.5 Form of Required Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34 350
9.5.1 Clear and Conspicuous 350
9.5.2 The Model Form B-1 Safe Harbor 350
9.5.2.1 Extent of the Safe Harbor 350
9.5.2.2 Optional Information and the Safe Harbor 351
9.5.2.3 Permitted Deviations from the Model Validation Notice 351
9.5.3 Form of Electronic Validation Notice 352
9.5.4 Translations into Other Languages 352
9.6 Optional Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34 352
9.6.1 Overview 353
9.6.2 Optional Disclosures Under Applicable Law 353
9.6.2.1 Generally 353
9.6.2.2 Applicable Law Disclosures on Front of Validation Notice 353
9.6.2.3 Applicable Law Disclosures on Back of Validation Notice 354
9.6.3 Disclosure of Ability to Request Spanish Language Translation 355
9.6.4 Merchant Brand, Affinity Brand, or Facility Name 355
9.7 Substance of Validation Notice Prior to Regulation F 355
9.7.1 Overview 356
9.7.2 Amount of the Debt 358
9.7.3 Name of Person to Whom the Debt Is Owed 360
9.7.4 Assumption of Validity Unless Dispute 361
9.7.5 Verification Required If Consumer Timely Disputes Debt in Writing 362
9.7.6 Name and Address of Original Creditor If Timely Requested 362
9.7.7 Courts' Recommended Notices 363
9.8 Collector Actions After Providing Notice 363
9.8.1 Overview 364
9.8.2 Limits on Immediate Demand for Payment 367
9.8.3 Limits on Suit or Threat of Suit 369
9.8.4 Limits on Credit Reporting 369
9.8.5 Limits on Informing Consumer to Telephone Debt Collector 370
9.8.6 Restrictions on Other Debt Collection Activity During Validation Period 372
9.9 Where Consumer Does Not Dispute a Debt 372
9.10 Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity 372
9.10.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692g(b) 373
9.10.2 Regulation F Requirements As to Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity 373
9.10.2.1 Generally 373
9.10.2.2 Requests or Disputes from a Deceased Consumer's Estate 373
9.10.3 A Sufficient Consumer Request or Dispute Prior to Regulation F 375
9.11 Collector Response to Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity 375
9.11.1 Debt Collector Obligations Under Regulation F 375
9.11.1.1 Obligations After a Dispute 375
9.11.1.2 Obligations After a Request for Original-Creditor Information 376
9.11.1.3 Form of Collector Responses 376
9.11.2 Ceasing Collection Prior to Regulation F 376
9.11.2.1 Generally 376

9.11.2.2 Putting Lawsuits on Hold 377
9.11.2.3 Limits on Credit Reporting 378
9.11.3 Collector's Verification of Debt 378
9.11.3.1 Generally 378
9.11.3.2 Fourth, Seventh, and Ninth Circuits Provide Weak Verification Rights 380
9.11.3.3 Sixth Circuit Provides More Robust Verification Rights 381

Chapter 10 FDCPA §§ 1692h, 1692*i*, 1692j: Applying Payments; Distant Forum Abuse; False Impression of Debt Collector Involvement

10.1 Introduction 383
10.2 Consumer May Direct Application of Payments When a Collector Holds Multiple Accounts 383
10.3 Restrictions Against Bringing Suits in Inconvenient Forums 383
10.3.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692*i*, Legislative History, and Regulations 383
10.3.2 Where Suit Can Be Filed 384
10.3.3 Applicability of FDCPA § 1692*i* Protections in Different Types of Proceedings 385
10.3.4 Additional Issues Related to the Debt Collector's Choice of Forum 386
10.4 Forms Providers Who Misrepresent Their Collection Involvement Violate the Act, FDCPA § 1692j 387
10.4.1 Flat-Rate and Other Collectors Covered 387
10.4.2 Extent of Participation in the Collection Process 388
10.4.3 Lawyers Must Review File Before Signing Collection Letter 389

Chapter 11 FDCPA Litigation and Remedies

11.1 Private Remedy Is Primary Enforcement Mechanism 391
11.2 Jurisdiction and Venue 391
11.2.1 State and Federal Courts Have Concurrent Jurisdiction 391
11.2.2 Personal Jurisdiction over Out-of-State Collectors 393
11.2.2.1 Generally 393
11.2.2.2 "Transaction of Business" Test in Long-Arm Statutes 393
11.2.2.3 Tort Tests in Long-Arm Statutes 395
11.2.3 Federal Court Venue 395
11.2.4 Joining State Law Claims in Federal Court 396
11.2.5 Federal Court Joinder of Creditors Subject to State Claims 398
11.3 Mandatory Arbitration of Consumers' Claims 398
11.3.1 Overview 398
11.3.2 Defendant Must Produce Arbitration Agreement Binding on the Consumer 399
11.3.3 Debt Buyer's Right to Enforce the Creditor's Arbitration Agreement 400
11.3.4 Can a Collection Agency or Attorney Enforce the Creditor's Arbitration Agreement? 401
11.3.4.1 Generally 401
11.3.4.2 Primacy of the Arbitration Agreement's Language 401
11.3.4.3 Is the Collector an Agent 402
11.3.4.4 Collateral Estoppel or Third-Party Beneficiary As Grounds to Enforce Arbitration Requirement 403
11.3.5 Defendant's Waiver of Right to Enforce Arbitration Agreement 403
11.3.5.1 Waiting Too Long to Enforce Arbitration Agreement 403

11.3.5.2 Refusing to Cooperate in the Arbitration Proceeding 403
11.3.5.3 Waiver Based on Prior Collection Lawsuit 403
11.3.6 Does the Consumer and the Nature of Consumer's Claims Fall Under the Arbitration Agreement? 404
11.3.7 Effect of Judgment in Prior Collection Action 405
11.3.8 Congress Overrides CFPB Rule Restricting Arbitration of Class Actions 405
11.3.9 Federal Law Prohibits Mandatory Arbitration in Mortgage Loans 405
11.3.10 No Mandatory Arbitration Where Debt Incurred by Active-Duty Military Personnel or Their Dependents 406
11.3.11 Unavailability of the Sole Arbitration Provider? 407
11.3.12 Other Grounds to Challenge the Arbitration Clause's Enforceability . . . 407
11.3.13 Does the Court or Arbitrator Decide the Challenge to the Arbitration Requirement? 408
11.3.14 Bringing an Individual Case in Arbitration 408
11.3.15 Punitive Damages in Arbitration 409
11.3.16 Class Arbitration 409
11.4 Evaluating Cases 409
11.4.1 Overview 409
11.4.2 Considerations Concerning Remedies 409
11.4.2.1 Increasing FDCPA Individual Awards 410
11.4.2.2 Class Actions Seeking FDCPA Damages 410
11.4.2.3 Bringing a Class Action Seeking Declaratory or Injunctive Relief 410
11.4.3 A Wide Range of Parties May Bring FDCPA Actions 411
11.4.4 A Wide Range of Defendants May Be Named Under the FDCPA 411
11.4.4.1 Employees and Officers 411
11.4.4.2 Owners, Partners, Franchisors, and Parent Companies 412
11.4.4.3 Collection Attorneys and Collectors Employing Attorneys . . 412
11.4.4.4 Forms Suppliers, Repossessors, and Insurers 413
11.4.4.5 Creditors 414
11.4.5 Jury Trials 415
11.4.5.1 Right to a Jury Trial 415
11.4.5.2 Benefit of a Jury Trial 415
11.4.5.3 Preparing for a Jury Trial of an FDCPA Case 415
11.4.5.4 Jury Does Not Determine Attorney Fees 416
11.5 Developing the Facts 416
11.5.1 First Steps 416
11.5.2 Recording of Phone Calls 417
11.5.2.1 Generally 417
11.5.2.2 Is It Legal for a Consumer to Record the Collector's Call? . . 418
11.5.2.3 Is It Ethical for the Consumer's Attorney to Suggest or Assist in the Recording? 419
11.5.2.4 Alternative Means to Substantiate a Call's Substance 420
11.5.2.5 Can the Collector Record Its Own Call? 420
11.5.2.6 How to Use Recordings to Support a Case 420
11.5.3 The Collector's Own Documents 421
11.5.4 Discovery 422
11.5.4.1 Initial Focus 422
11.5.4.2 Areas of Inquiry Permitted 424
11.5.4.3 Record Retention 427

11.5.4.4 Compelling Debt Collector to Respond to Discovery Requests . . . 428
11.5.4.5 Protective Orders . . . 428
11.5.4.6 Additional Discovery Approaches and Issues . . . 429
11.6 Pleading and Proof . . . 430
11.6.1 Specificity of Pleading . . . 430
11.6.2 Proving an FDCPA Violation . . . 434
11.6.3 Surveys . . . 434
11.6.4 Experts . . . 436
11.6.5 Pattern Evidence . . . 436
11.6.6 Burden of Proof As to FDCPA Exceptions . . . 438
11.7 Offers of Judgment or Settlement . . . 439
11.7.1 Offers of Judgment in General . . . 439
11.7.2 Offers of Incomplete Relief . . . 439
11.7.3 Ambiguity in Defendant's Offer of Reasonable Attorney Fees . . . 440
11.7.4 Other Issues in Settlements and Offers of Judgment . . . 441
11.8 Actual Damages . . . 442
11.8.1 Overview . . . 442
11.8.1.1 Importance of Developing Actual Damages . . . 442
11.8.1.2 Actual Damages and Settlement of Consumer's Underlying Debt . . . 442
11.8.1.3 General Standards for FDCPA Actual Damages . . . 443
11.8.2 Emotional Distress Damages . . . 443
11.8.2.1 Importance of Emotional Distress Damages . . . 443
11.8.2.2 Supreme Court Case Law on Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages . . . 444
11.8.2.3 Older State Law Tort Standards for Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages . . . 444
11.8.2.4 The FDCPA Standard for Emotional Distress Damages . . . 444
11.8.2.5 Injuries and Symptoms Related to Stress . . . 445
11.8.3 Medical Conditions Arising from Debt Collection Abuses . . . 447
11.8.4 Out-of-Pocket Losses . . . 448
11.8.5 Injuries to Personal Relations . . . 449
11.8.6 Proof of Actual Damages . . . 450
11.8.6.1 When to Introduce Proof of Damages . . . 450
11.8.6.2 Proof of Out-of-Pocket Damages . . . 450
11.8.6.3 Proof of Existence and Extent of Emotional Distress Injury . . . 450
11.8.6.4 No Proof Required for Dollar Value of Mental Suffering . . . 451
11.8.7 Standards of Causation . . . 452
11.8.8 Relation Between FDCPA Actual Damages and Other Awards . . . 452
11.9 Statutory Damages in Individual Actions . . . 453
11.9.1 Overview . . . 453
11.9.2 Factors for Determining Amount of Statutory Damages Award in Individual Actions . . . 453
11.9.3 Are Statutory Damages Mandatory? . . . 455
11.9.4 Actual Damages Not a Prerequisite . . . 455
11.9.5 Enhancing Statutory Damages . . . 456
11.9.6 Factors Reducing Statutory Damages Awards . . . 458
11.9.7 Relation Between FDCPA Statutory Damages and Other Awards . . . 458
11.9.8 Multiple Statutory Damages Awards . . . 459
11.9.8.1 Where There Are Multiple Plaintiffs . . . 459

11.9.8.2 Where There Are Multiple Defendants 459
11.9.8.3 Where There Are Multiple Wrongful Acts 460
11.9.9 Prejudgment Interest on Statutory Damage Award 460
11.10 Punitive Damages 461
11.10.1 FDCPA Punitive Damages May Be Unavailable 461
11.10.2 Fair Credit Reporting Act Punitive Damages Claims Against Debt Collectors 461
11.10.3 Punitive Damages in Supplemental State Claims 462
11.11 FDCPA Class Actions 462
11.11.1 Practical Considerations 462
11.11.2 Rule 23 Requirements for Class Certification 463
11.11.2.1 Generally 463
11.11.2.2 Rule 23(a) Requirements 465
11.11.2.2.1 Introduction 465
11.11.2.2.2 Numerosity 465
11.11.2.2.3 Commonality 466
11.11.2.2.4 Typicality 468
11.11.2.2.5 Adequacy of representation 469
11.11.2.3 Rule 23(b) Requirements 471
11.11.2.3.1 Introduction 471
11.11.2.3.2 Rule 23(b)(1) 471
11.11.2.3.3 Rule 23(b)(2) 471
11.11.2.3.4 Rule 23(b)(3) 472
11.11.2.3.5 Special Rule 23(b)(3) considerations where class action seeks actual damages 476
11.11.3 FDCPA Class Actions for Statutory Damages 477
11.11.3.1 Generally 477
11.11.3.2 Computing One Percent of Net Worth 478
11.11.3.3 Increasing Each Class Member's Recovery of Statutory Damages 479
11.11.3.4 Factors Affecting Amount of Class Statutory Damages Award 481
11.11.4 Defense Tactics in Class Actions 481
11.11.4.1 Generally 481
11.11.4.2 Offers of Judgment or Settlement 481
11.11.4.3 Counterclaims by Defendants 482
11.11.4.4 Defense Requests to Consider Merits First 482
11.11.5 Discovery 482
11.11.6 Class Settlements 482
11.12 Declaratory or Injunctive Relief 484
11.12.1 Declaratory Relief 484
11.12.2 Injunctive Relief 485
11.12.3 Injunctive Relief Under Supplementary State Law Claims 486
11.13 Attorney Fees and Costs for Prevailing Consumers 486
11.13.1 Overview 486
11.13.2 Is a Fee Award Mandatory? 487
11.13.3 Attorney Fees Where Claim Is Settled 488
11.13.3.1 Right to Attorney Fees 488
11.13.3.2 Negotiating a Settlement Containing Attorney Fees 490
11.13.4 To Whom Does the Fee Award Belong? 491
11.13.5 Tax Consequences of Attorney Fee Awards 493
11.13.6 Record-Keeping for Attorney Fee Awards 493

11.13.7 Common Fund Attorney Fee Awards in Class Actions 493
11.13.8 The Lodestar Approach to Calculating Attorney Fees 494
11.13.8.1 Generally 494
11.13.8.2 Determining the Allowable Hours 494
11.13.8.2.1 General standards 494
11.13.8.2.2 Examples of allowable hours 497
11.13.8.2.3 Computing allowable hours where consumer does not prevail on all claims 499
11.13.8.2.4 Fees for work on fee petition, appeal, collection of the award, and related proceedings 500
11.13.8.3 Establishing the Hourly Rate 502
11.13.8.4 Downward Adjustments to the Lodestar 504
11.13.8.5 Upward Adjustments to the Lodestar 504
11.13.9 Costs 505
11.13.10 Fee Applications 506
11.13.10.1 Requirements 506
11.13.10.2 Preparation of the Fee Application 507
11.13.11 Appealing Attorney Fee Awards 509
11.14 Tax Consequences of Consumer's Recovery and Attorney Fee Award 509
11.14.1 Overview 509
11.14.2 Tax Considerations for Prevailing Consumers 510
11.14.2.1 Generally 510
11.14.2.2 Statutory, Minimum, and Multiple Damages 510
11.14.2.3 Return of Capital; Reduction of Purchase Price 510
11.14.2.4 Physical Injury Damages 510
11.14.2.5 Cancelled Debt 511
11.14.2.5.1 The general rule 511
11.14.2.5.2 Statutory exemptions 511
11.14.2.5.3 Non-statutory exclusions 512
11.14.2.5.4 Exception for operation of law; TILA rescission 512
11.14.2.6 Form 1099-C evidencing debt cancellation 512
11.14.2.7 Allocation Between Taxable and Non-Taxable Portions 513
11.14.3 Tax Consequences of Attorney Fee Awards 513
11.14.3.1 Generally 513
11.14.3.2 Attorney Fees Not Taxable to Client Where Damages Recovery Not Taxable 514
11.14.3.3 Where the Consumer Is Not Obligated to Pay the Consumer's Attorney 515
11.14.3.4 No Tax Is Owed on Fees in "Civil Rights" Cases 515
11.14.3.5 Taxability of Fees in Class Actions 516
11.14.3.6 Implications to Consumers if a Fee Award is Taxable to the Consumer 516
11.15 Article III Constitutional Standing Under Spokeo As Applied to the FDCPA 516
11.15.1 Introduction; Basic Elements of Standing in Federal Court 516
11.15.2 The Supreme Court's Interpretation of Article III's Requirements in Spokeo and Ramirez 518
11.15.2.1 Article III Standing As Interpreted by Spokeo 518
11.15.2.2 Article III Standing As Interpreted by Ramirez 519
11.15.2.2.1 The holding in Ramirez 519

11.15.2.2.2 Physical harm, monetary injury, defamation, privacy, constitutional rights 519
11.15.2.2.3 When does harm have a close relationship to harm traditionally recognized as a basis for a lawsuit? 520
11.15.2.2.4 The role of Congress's judgment 520
11.15.2.2.5 Procedural vs. substantive requirements—does it make a difference? 521
11.15.2.2.6 Is the risk of harm a concrete injury? 522
11.15.2.2.7 "Downstream consequences" must be shown for disclosure format violations; informational injuries 523
11.15.2.2.8 Private rights vs. public rights 524
11.15.3 The Lay of the Land Since Spokeo and Ramirez: Overview and Strategy Considerations 524
11.15.3.1 Circuit-by-Circuit Overview of Decisions Applying Ramirez to FDCPA Claims 524
11.15.3.2 Strategic Considerations 526
11.15.3.3 Distinguishing Between Procedural and Substantive Violations 528
11.15.3.4 Types of Harms That FDCPA Violations May Cause 529
11.15.4 Article III Standing for Deception or Nondisclosure Violations 536
11.15.4.1 Generally 536
11.15.4.2 Article III Standing for Claims That Collector Misstated Amount Owed or Demanded an Unauthorized Fee 538
11.15.4.3 Article III Standing for Claims Regarding Collector's Misstatements to Credit Reporting Agencies 541
11.15.4.4 Article III Standing for Claims Involving False or Fabricated Statements in Collection Actions 543
11.15.4.5 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Collector's Failure to Identify Itself As a Collector and Disclose the Debt Collection Purpose of the Contact 545
11.15.4.6 Article III Standing for Other Claims of False, Deceptive, or Misleading Acts 546
11.15.5 Article III Standing for FDCPA § 1692g Claims 551
11.15.5.1 Generally 551
11.15.5.2 Whether Violations of FDCPA § 1692g's Disclosure Requirements Cause Concrete Harm 551
11.15.5.2.1 The purposes behind FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements 551
11.15.5.2.2 Article III standing for violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements prior to Ramirez 552
11.15.5.2.3 Article III standing for violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements after Ramirez 554
11.15.5.3 Whether a Collector's Failure to Perform its Duties upon Receipt of a Dispute is Concrete Harm 555
11.15.6 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Unwanted, Inconvenient, or Repeated Calls or Other Contacts with Debtor 556
11.15.7 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Third-Party Contacts or Public Disclosure of Information About a Debt 557

11.15.8 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Collector's Contacts with Represented Debtor 560
11.15.9 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Conduct Serving to Harass, Oppress, or Abuse 561
11.15.10 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Unfair or Unconscionable Collection Methods 562
11.15.11 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Lawsuits in Distant Forums 564
11.15.12 Burden of Proof 566
11.15.13 Removal; Benefits of Initially Filing in State Court 566
11.16 Relation of the FDCPA to State Laws and Other Federal Statutes 567
11.16.1 FDCPA Preemption of and Relation to State Law 567
11.16.2 Relationship to Other Federal Statutes 569

Chapter 12 Debt Collectors' Defenses and Counterclaims

12.1 Introduction 571
12.2 Bona Fide Error Defense 571
12.2.1 Overview 571
12.2.2 Mistaken Interpretation of FDCPA Not a Bona Fide Error 573
12.2.3 Errors of State Law or Other Federal Law 574
12.2.4 Clerical and Factual Errors and Clerical Mistakes 575
12.2.5 The Error Must Be Bona Fide 576
12.2.6 Violation Must "Result From" Bona Fide Error 577
12.2.7 Is Collector's Reasonable Reliance on the Creditor's Information a Defense? 577
12.2.8 The Error Must be Unintentional 579
12.2.9 The Collector Must Have Maintained Reasonable Procedures to Avoid the Error 581
12.2.9.1 Generally 581
12.2.9.2 When Is Reliance on the Creditor a Reasonable Procedure? 585
12.2.9.3 Debt Collection Employee Training As a Reasonable Procedure 586
12.2.9.4 Reasonable Procedures for Emails and Text Messages 587
12.3 FDCPA Statute of Limitations 587
12.3.1 Overview 587
12.3.2 Events That Start the Limitations Period Running 588
12.3.2.1 Determining the Applicable Date for Debt Collectors' Letters 588
12.3.2.2 The Applicable Date for Violations Involving Collection Lawsuits 588
12.3.2.3 The Applicable Date for Postjudgment Remedies 589
12.3.2.4 Other Applicable Dates 590
12.3.3 When a Series of Violations Occurs 590
12.3.3.1 The General Rule 590
12.3.3.2 Litigation Activity 591
12.3.3.3 The "Continuing Violation Theory" 592
12.3.4 Equitable Tolling and the Fraud-Based Discovery Rule 593
12.3.5 Counting the One-Year Period 595
12.3.6 When Is the FDCPA Complaint Deemed Filed? 595
12.3.7 Recoupment After Running of the Limitations Period 596
12.4 Good Faith Conformity with CFPB Advisory Opinions 597

12.4.1 Overview 597
12.4.2 Inapplicability of FTC Advisory Opinions 597
12.5 Regulation F Safe Harbors 598
12.6 Defenses Based on Prior Litigation or Immunities 598
12.6.1 Overview 598
12.6.2 Res Judicata, Preclusion, Collateral Estoppel, and Compulsory Counterclaim Rules 599
12.6.3 Comity and Abstention 603
12.6.4 The Rooker-Feldman Doctrine 604
12.6.4.1 The Doctrine's Supreme Court History 604
12.6.4.2 Doctrine Requires a Final State Judgment for the Collector 605
12.6.4.3 FDCPA Claims Vulnerable to Rooker-Feldman 605
12.6.4.4 Defense Inapplicable Where Conduct Is Independent of State Court Judgment 606
12.6.5 Sovereign Immunity and Government Agencies 608
12.6.6 Litigation and Witness Immunity 608
12.6.6.1 Generally 608
12.6.6.2 Litigation Immunity and Litigation Privilege 608
12.6.6.3 Witness Immunity 610
12.7 Other Defenses 610
12.7.1 Overview 610
12.7.2 Technical, De Minimis, or Harmless Violations 610
12.7.3 Defendant's Good Faith or Lack of Intent 610
12.7.4 Consumer's Culpability 611
12.7.5 Consumer's Waiver of FDCPA Protection 611
12.7.6 Preconditions to FDCPA Lawsuit 612
12.8 Collection Counterclaims to Consumer's FDCPA Claim 612
12.9 Creditor Garnishment of Consumer's FDCPA Claim or Recovery 612
12.10 Attorney Fees and Sanctions Against Consumers or Their Attorney 613
12.10.1 Statutory Attorney Fees Awards to FDCPA Defendants 613
12.10.1.1 Generally 613
12.10.1.2 The Bad Faith and Harassment Standards 614
12.10.2 Rule 11 Sanctions 617
12.10.3 Sanctions for Multiplying Proceedings, 28 U.S.C. § 1927 618
12.10.4 Cost Awards for Prevailing FDCPA Defendants 618
12.10.5 Other Sources of Fee Awards for the Collector's Attorney 619

Chapter 13 Bankruptcy and Affirmative Claims Arising from Debt Collection

13.1 Introduction 621
13.1.1 Effect of Bankruptcy on Debt Collection Claims 621
13.1.2 Organization of This Chapter 621
13.2 Bankruptcy Basics 621
13.2.1 Chapter 7 Overview 621
13.2.2 Chapter 13 Overview 622
13.2.3 Choosing to File and Choosing a Chapter 623
13.2.4 The Automatic Stay 623
13.2.5 Property of the Estate and Exemptions 627
13.2.6 Discharge 628
13.3 Bankruptcy's Impact on Consumers' Claims Arising Before Bankruptcy 630
13.3.1 The Importance of "Scheduling" a Debt Collection Claim 630
13.3.2 Unscheduled Debt Collection Claims—the Standing Problem 633

13.3.2.1 Generally 633
13.3.2.2 Other Limits to Postbankruptcy Standing Challenges 635
13.3.2.3 When Standing Problems Cannot Be Avoided 636
13.3.3 Unscheduled Debt Collection Claims—the Judicial Estoppel Problem 636
13.3.3.1 Generally 636
13.3.3.2 When Judicial Estoppel Should Not Apply 638
13.3.3.3 Amending Bankruptcy Schedules to Avoid Judicial Estoppel 641
13.3.3.4 Alternatives to Amending the Schedules 643
13.3.3.5 Judicial Estoppel Other Than Where Claims Omitted from Schedules 645
13.4 Bankruptcy's Effect on Claims Arising During and After a Bankruptcy Case 646
13.4.1 Claims Arising During a Bankruptcy Case 646
13.4.2 Claims Arising After a Bankruptcy Case 647
13.5 Litigating Claims in Bankruptcy Court 647
13.5.1 Overview 647
13.5.2 The Supreme Court's Decision in Stern v. Marshall 649
13.5.3 Enforcement of Arbitration Clauses in Bankruptcy 650
13.6 FDCPA Attorney Fees and Bankruptcy 652
13.7 Federal and State Fair Debt Collection Claims Relating to a Bankruptcy 653
13.7.1 Overview 653
13.7.2 Does the FDCPA Apply to Claims Arising Out of a Consumer's Bankruptcy? 653
13.7.2.1 The Seventh Circuit Decision in Randolph 653
13.7.2.2 The Third Circuit Decision in Simon 655
13.7.2.3 The Second Circuit Decision in Garfield 655
13.7.2.4 The Ninth Circuit Decision in Walls 656
13.7.2.5 The Second Circuit Decision in Easterling 657
13.7.2.6 Randolph Represents the Prevailing View 657
13.7.2.7 Claims Against Debt Buyers 658
13.7.2.8 Common Debt Collector Defenses to FDCPA Claims Based on Discharge Order Violations 659
13.7.3 FDCPA and Proof of Claim Abuses 661
13.7.3.1 Overview of the Bankruptcy Claims Process 661
13.7.3.2 FDCPA Liability for Creditors' Abuse of the Claims Process 661
13.7.3.3 Filing a Stale Proof of Claim As an FDCPA Violation—the Supreme Court's Midland Funding Decision 662
13.7.3.4 Midland Funding Does Not Affect FDCPA Enforcement of Stale Claims Outside of Bankruptcy 663
13.7.3.5 Midland Funding Does Not Address the Bankruptcy Code's Implied Repeal of the FDCPA 664
13.7.3.6 Midland Funding Should Be Limited to Its Peculiar Facts 665
13.7.3.7 Despite Midland Funding, Proof of Claim Abuses May Be Subject to Challenge Under State Law 665
13.7.3.8 Practical Tips in Challenging Proofs of Claim As FDCPA Violations 666
13.7.4 Preemption of State Debt Collection Laws 666

Chapter 14 Other Federal Claims

14.1 Fraudulent or Defamatory Use of Mails 669
14.2 Collecting for Unordered Merchandise May Be Illegal 670

14.3 Telephone and Email Harassment 670
14.3.1 Criminal Statutes 670
14.3.2 Protections Under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act 671
14.3.2.1 Potential Applications to Debt Collection 671
14.3.2.2 Scope of the Prohibition on Autodialed or Prerecorded Calls to Cell Phones 672
14.3.2.3 What Is an Autodialer? 673
14.3.2.4 What is a Prerecorded or Artificial Voice Call? 674
14.3.2.5 Exceptions to the Prohibition on Autodialed or Prerecorded Calls to Cell Phones 675
14.3.2.5.1 Exceptions in the statute and regulation; calls to collect government debts 675
14.3.2.5.2 Prior express consent 675
14.3.2.5.3 Who may give consent; reassigned numbers 677
14.3.2.5.4 Revocation of consent 678
14.3.2.5.5 What methods of revoking consent are reasonable? 679
14.3.2.5.6 Revocation of consent that was provided as a term in a contract 680
14.3.2.5.7 Partial revocation of consent 681
14.3.2.6 Numerical Restrictions on Prerecorded Debt Collection Calls to Residential Lines 681
14.3.2.7 Burden of Proof Regarding Exceptions 682
14.3.2.8 TCPA Remedies 682
14.3.2.8.1 Private cause of action; relief 682
14.3.2.8.2 Who may sue 682
14.3.2.9 Litigation Issues 683
14.3.2.9.1 Jurisdiction and class actions 683
14.3.2.9.2 Article III standing 684
14.3.2.9.3 Liability of creditors for debt collectors' violations; corporate officers and individuals 684
14.3.2.9.4 Statute of limitations and other defenses 685
14.3.2.9.5 Other litigation issues 686
14.3.3 Caller ID and Debt Collection 686
14.3.3.1 Generally 686
14.3.3.2 Spoofing and The Truth in Caller ID Act 686
14.3.3.3 FDCPA and Other Claims for Falsifying Caller ID Information 687
14.3.3.4 Consumers' Ability to Keep Their Phone Numbers Private 687
14.3.4 Protection from Electronic Messaging Harassment 689
14.4 Truth in Lending Act Disclosures 689
14.4.1 Are TILA Disclosures Required When Collector Enters Into a Repayment Agreement with the Debtor? 689
14.4.2 Collector's Liability for Originator's TILA Violation 690
14.5 Extortionate Collection Methods and Other RICO Violations 690
14.5.1 Advantages and Disadvantages of RICO Claims 690
14.5.2 Qualifying Conduct—Collection of an Unlawful Debt or Pattern of Racketeering Activity 691
14.5.2.1 Generally 691
14.5.2.2 Collection of an Unlawful Debt 691
14.5.2.3 Pattern of Racketeering Activity 692

14.5.3 RICO's Substantive Prohibitions 693
14.5.4 RICO and Debt Collection 693
14.5.5 State Racketeering and Civil Theft Statutes 694
14.6 The Fair Credit Reporting Act 694
14.6.1 Overview 694
14.6.2 Accuracy of Credit Reports; Furnisher's Duty of Investigation. 696
14.6.2.1 Generally 696
14.6.2.2 Common Types of Inaccuracy by Debt Collectors 696
14.6.2.3 Creditors' and Collectors' Liability for Making Inaccurate Reports to Credit Bureau. 697
14.6.2.3.1 Notice of the dispute 697
14.6.2.3.2 Furnisher's duty to conduct a reasonable investigation 697
14.6.2.3.3 Reinvestigation time limits 698
14.6.2.3.4 Prohibition against re-reporting inaccurate information 699
14.6.3 Improperly Acquiring Credit Reports. 699
14.6.4 Special Duties Where Debt Arises from Fraud or Identity Theft. 699
14.6.5 Creditors and Collectors As Consumer Reporting Agencies 700
14.6.6 FDCPA and Other Prohibitions Relating to Credit Reports 700
14.6.6.1 Publicizing Indebtedness; Deceptive Implication That a Collector Is a Credit Bureau. 700
14.6.6.2 Disputed Debts and the Verification Process. 700
14.6.6.3 Threatening to Report Debt. 701
14.6.7 Negotiating a Debt Settlement Covering Credit Reporting 701
14.7 Payments to Debt Collectors 701
14.7.1 Overview 701
14.7.2 Checks and Electronic Fund Transfers; the Role of NACHA Rules 702
14.8 Discriminatory Collection Tactics Based on Race, Other Prohibited Categories 703
14.9 Federal Credit Repair Organizations Act 704
14.9.1 Overview 704
14.9.2 Whether Creditors and Collectors Are "Credit Repair Organizations" 705
14.9.3 Substantive Restrictions on Credit Repair Organizations 707
14.9.4 Substantive Prohibitions Applicable to Any "Person" 707
14.9.5 Private Remedies 707
14.10 Collection of Taxes by Private Debt Collection Agencies 708
14.10.1 Requirement that IRS Engage Private Collectors 708
14.10.1.1 Scope of requirement. 708
14.10.1.2 Exemptions 708
14.10.1.3 Scope of collection activities. 709
14.10.2 History of IRS Private Debt Collection Program. 709
14.10.3 Protection for Taxpayer Rights. 710
14.10.4 Remedies for Violations by Private Collectors. 710
14.11 Constitutional Torts. 711
14.11.1 Overview 711
14.11.2 State Action 711
14.11.2.1 Government Officials As State Actors. 711
14.11.2.2 Private Parties 712
14.11.2.3 The State As Creditor 715
14.11.3 What Protections Due Process Requires 715

14.11.4 Fourth Amendment Claims. . . . 719
14.11.5 Immunity; Municipal Liability. . . . 720
14.12 Other Federal Restrictions on Debt Collection. . . . 721

Chapter 15 Tort Remedies . . . 721
15.1 Introduction . . . 721
15.1.1 Overview . . . 722
15.1.2 Preemption . . . 722
15.1.2.1 FDCPA and State Debt Collection Statutes Do Not Preempt Tort Claims . . . 722
15.1.2.2 Preemption by Federal Banking Laws, Higher Education Act, and the Bankruptcy Code . . . 723
15.1.3 Privilege . . . 723
15.1.3.1 Privilege for Statements Made in Judicial Proceedings . . . 728
15.1.3.2 Common Interest Privilege . . . 729
15.1.3.3 Anti-SLAPP Statutes . . . 729
15.1.4 Immunity Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act . . . 730
15.1.5 Identity Theft . . . 731
15.2 Intentional or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress . . . 731
15.2.1 Elements of Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress . . . 732
15.2.2 What Constitutes Severe Mental Distress . . . 733
15.2.3 Whether Physical Injury or Other Non-Emotional Injury Is Required . . . 733
15.2.4 What Constitutes Actionable Conduct . . . 742
15.2.5 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress . . . 746
15.2.6 Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages for Other Collection Torts . . . 747
15.3 Invasion of Privacy . . . 747
15.3.1 Overview . . . 749
15.3.2 Intrusion Upon the Debtor's Right to Seclusion . . . 754
15.3.3 Holding Up to False Light . . . 755
15.3.4 Public Disclosure of Private Facts . . . 758
15.4 Intentional Interference with Contractual Relationships or Prospective Economic Relations . . . 758
15.4.1 Overview . . . 760
15.4.2 Tortious Interference with a Contract . . . 762
15.4.3 Tortious Interference with Prospective Economic Relations . . . 763
15.4.4 Justification As a Defense . . . 764
15.5 Defamation . . . 764
15.5.1 Overview of Elements . . . 765
15.5.2 Defamation Per Se and Defamation Per Quod . . . 766
15.5.3 Is It Defamatory to State That a Person Has Failed to Pay a Debt? . . . 767
15.5.4 Truth As a Defense . . . 768
15.5.5 Immunity and Privilege . . . 769
15.5.6 Pleading and Proof . . . 770
15.6 Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process . . . 770
15.6.1 Description of the Two Torts and State Variants . . . 772
15.6.2 Malicious Prosecution . . . 772
15.6.2.1 Summary of Elements . . . 772
15.6.2.2 Institution of a Proceeding . . . 774
15.6.2.3 Lack of Probable Cause . . . 776
15.6.2.4 Malice or Improper Purpose . . . 776

15.6.2.5 Termination in Favor . . . 778
15.6.2.6 Examples . . . 780
15.6.3 Abuse of Process . . . 781
15.6.3.1 Elements . . . 781
15.6.3.2 "Process" Defined . . . 784
15.6.3.3 Ulterior Purpose . . . 785
15.6.3.4 Examples . . . 788
15.7 Other Debt Collection Torts . . . 790
15.7.1 Torts Involving Personal Injury or Restraint . . . 790
15.7.2 Trespass . . . 791
15.7.3 Conversion and Other Torts Directed Against the Consumer's Property . . . 791
15.7.4 Negligence . . . 792
15.7.5 Misrepresentation, Civil Conspiracy, and Extortion . . . 794
15.7.6 Other Potential Tort Claims . . . 795
15.7.7 Framing a Criminal Law Violation As a Tort Claim; Prima Facie Tort . . . 797
15.7.8 Tort Claims Against Governmental Entities . . . 798
15.8 Attorney's Liability to Third Parties for Collection Negligence and Other Torts . . . 798
15.9 Liability of Principals, Officers . . . 800

Chapter 16 Other State Remedies

16.1 Introduction . . . 803
16.1.1 Benefits of State Statutory Claims . . . 803
16.1.2 Preemption Issues . . . 803
16.1.3 Litigation Privilege . . . 805
16.1.4 State Governmental Immunity . . . 807
16.1.5 Special Issues in Utility Collection Cases . . . 807
16.2 Consumer Protections Under State Debt Collection Statutes and Regulations . . . 808
16.2.1 Overview . . . 808
16.2.2 Constitutionality of State Debt Collection Statutes . . . 808
16.2.3 Scope of State Debt Collection Statutes . . . 809
16.2.3.1 Types of Debts Covered . . . 809
16.2.3.1.1 "Claim" vs. "debt"; "credit" . . . 809
16.2.3.1.2 Must the debt arise from a "transaction"? . . . 811
16.2.3.1.3 Is the statute limited to consumer debts? . . . 811
16.2.3.1.4 Other state provisions regarding particular types of debts . . . 813
16.2.3.2 Types of Activities Covered . . . 813
16.2.3.3 Types of Collectors Covered . . . 814
16.2.3.3.1 Creditors collecting their own debts . . . 814
16.2.3.3.2 Assignees and debt buyers . . . 816
16.2.3.3.3 Entities not in the business of debt collection . . . 818
16.2.3.3.4 Attorneys . . . 819
16.2.3.3.5 Repossessors . . . 822
16.2.3.3.6 Child support collectors . . . 823
16.2.3.3.7 Out-of-state collectors . . . 824
16.2.3.3.8 Other specific entities . . . 824
16.2.3.3.9 Servicing, billing, and mortgage foreclosure; eviction . . . 825
16.2.3.4 Persons Who Do Not Owe the Debt . . . 828

16.2.4 State Debt Collection Statutes' Protections 830
16.2.4.1 General Standards 830
16.2.4.2 Privacy Protections 831
16.2.4.2.1 Introduction 831
16.2.4.2.2 Credit reporting 831
16.2.4.2.3 Workplace calls 832
16.2.4.2.4 Third-party contacts 832
16.2.4.3 Abusive Collection Activities 833
16.2.4.3.1 Telephone harassment 833
16.2.4.3.2 Threatening or filing unfounded criminal charges 835
16.2.4.3.3 Contacting represented debtors 836
16.2.4.4 Unfair and Deceptive Debt Collection Activities 837
16.2.4.4.1 Introduction 837
16.2.4.4.2 Deception regarding the existence or amount of a debt 837
16.2.4.4.3 Deception regarding collection remedies and in collection suits 842
16.2.4.4.4 Deception regarding the identity of the collector or the owner of the debt 845
16.2.4.4.5 Validation notices and documentation requirements 847
16.2.4.4.6 Wrongful garnishment 847
16.2.4.4.7 Other unfair or deceptive tactics 847
16.2.4.5 Unlicensed Collection Activity 848
16.2.5 State Debt Collection Statutes' Remedies 849
16.2.5.1 Is There a Private Cause of Action? 849
16.2.5.2 Relief Available 851
16.2.5.2.1 Actual damages 851
16.2.5.2.2 Statutory damages 852
16.2.5.2.3 Punitive damages 854
16.2.5.2.4 Attorney fees 855
16.2.5.2.5 Other relief under state debt collection statutes 855
16.2.5.3 Defenses 856
16.3 General State Consumer Protection Statutes Prohibiting Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (UDAP) 858
16.3.1 Nature and Advantages of a UDAP Claim 858
16.3.2 Validity and Interpretation of State UDAP Statutes in the Debt Collection Context 859
16.3.3 UDAP Coverage of Debt Collection Activities 859
16.3.3.1 Generally 859
16.3.3.2 Debt Collection Is in Trade or Commerce 860
16.3.3.3 Coverage Under Statutes Requiring a "Consumer Transaction" or Acts in Connection with the Sale of Merchandise 860
16.3.3.4 Types of Creditors, Collectors, and Debts Covered 861
16.3.3.5 What Consumers Are Protected? 863
16.3.3.6 State-by-State Survey of UDAP Statute's Coverage of Debt Collection 864
16.3.4 Deceptive Debt Collection Activities 872

16.3.5 Unfair and Unconscionable Debt Collection Activities Under UDAP Statutes 876
16.3.6 Violation of Another Debt Collection Statute or Regulation As UDAP Violation 878
16.3.7 CFPB Examples of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Debt Collection Practices; Rulemaking 880
16.3.8 UDAP Remedies for Debt Collection Violations 881
16.4 State Credit Repair Organization Statutes 884
16.4.1 Overview 884
16.4.2 Scope 884
16.4.3 Substantive Prohibitions 884
16.4.4 Private Remedies 884
16.5 Unauthorized or Unethical Practice of Law by Creditors, Lawyers, and Collection Agencies 885
16.5.1 Unauthorized Practice of Law by Creditors 885
16.5.2 Unauthorized Practice of Law by Collection Agencies 885
16.5.3 Unethical Practice of Law by Lawyers Engaging in Debt Collection 888
16.5.4 Attorneys' Unethical Practices When Collecting Their Own Fees 890
16.5.5 Remedies 891
16.5.5.1 Remedies for Unauthorized Practice of Law 891
16.5.5.2 Remedies for Ethical Violations 892
16.6 State Criminal Statutes 893
16.7 Enjoining Abusive Debt Collection Practices 893
16.8 Other State Limitations on Debt Collection 894
16.8.1 State Laws Governing Specific Businesses 894
16.8.2 Usury Laws 894
16.8.3 Privacy Laws 894
16.8.4 State Loan Broker Laws 895
16.8.5 State Laws Regulating Telemarketing, Autodialing, and Artificial Voice Messages 895
16.8.6 State Garnishment Laws 895

Appendix A Text of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act
A.1 Cross-Reference Table of Public Law 95–109 Section Numbers with 15 U.S.C. Section Numbers 897
A.2 Fair Debt Collection Practices Act 897
A.3 Senate Report No. 95–382 on the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act 903

Appendix B CFPB Regulations and Interpretations
B.1 Regulation F 907
B.1.1 Introduction; Regulation F Table 907
B.1.2 Regulation F and Its Official Interpretations 908
B.2 CFPB Advisory Opinions 939
B.2.1 Introduction 939
B.2.2 Safe Harbors from FDCPA Liability for Certain Actions in Compliance With Mortgage Servicing Rules 939
B.3 CFPB Guidance 940
B.3.1 Introduction 940
B.3.2 CFPB, Bulletin 2013-7: Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts 940

B.3.3 CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores 940
B.3.4 CFPB, Bulletin 2014-01: The FCRA's Requirement that Furnishers Conduct Investigations of Disputed Information 940
B.3.5 CFPB, Bulletin 2014-01: Compliance Bulletin and Policy Guidance: Mortgage Servicing Transfers 940
B.3.6 CFPB, Bulletin 2015-06: Requirements for Consumer Authorizations for Preauthorized Electronic Fund Transfers 940
B.3.7 CFPB, Bulletin 2015-07: In-Person Collection of Consumer Debt 940
B.3.8 CFPB, Bulletin 2017-01: Phone Pay Fees 941
B.4 Interagency Guidance 941
B.4.1 Introduction 941
B.4.2 FFIEC, Social Media: Consumer Compliance Risk Management Guidance 941

Appendix C FTC Interpretations of the FDCPA 943
C.1 FTC Advisory Opinions 943
C.1.1 Introduction 943
C.1.2 June 23, 2009, FTC Advisory Opinion 943
C.1.3 March 19, 2008, FTC Advisory Opinion 943
C.1.4 October 5, 2007, FTC Advisory Opinion 943
C.1.5 March 31, 2000, FTC Advisory Opinion 943
C.1.6 July 28, 2006, Denial of Request for FTC Advisory Opinion 944
C.2 FTC Staff Commentary 944
C.3 FTC Informal Staff Letters 969

Appendix D Summary of State Debt Collection Statutes 987

Appendix E Fair Debt Collection Practices Act Case Summaries 989

Appendix F The FDCPA Case Connector, Practice Tools, Pleadings, Primary Sources
F.1 The FDCPA Case Connector 989
F.2 Locating and Using Practice Tools, Pleadings, Primary Sources 989
F.3 Practice Tools Found on This Treatise's Digital Version 989
F.4 Sample Pleadings Found on This Treatise's Digital Version 989
F.5 Primary Source Documents Found on This Treatise's Digital Version 991

Appendix G Abbreviations Commonly Used by Collectors 993

Appendix H Debt Collection on the Web
H.1 Trade Associations 993
H.2 Debt Collection Press 993
H.3 Credit Reporting Agencies 993
H.4 Website Archive 993
H.5 Federal Resources for Consumer Information 993
H.6 Key FDCPA Resources 994

Index 994

Chapter 1 Introduction

1.1 NCLC Resources About Fair Debt Collection

1.1.1 About This Treatise

1.1.1.1 All Subscribers Have Access to the Digital and Print Version

Fair Debt Collection is available in both a print and digital version. Print revisions are released every few years and the digital version is updated more frequently, with all changes integrated into the text. The digital version also contains additional pleadings, practice tools, and primary source material, described at § 1.1.1.3, infra.

The digital version is available at www.nclc.org/library. It allows pinpoint searches of the book, easy navigation between subsections, and active links to external websites, other sections in the book and other National Consumer Law Center (NCLC) treatises. Material in the digital version can be copy/pasted, downloaded, printed, or emailed. The digital version also allows users to annotate, highlight, and bookmark text for their own use.

Clicking on "highlight updates" in the online version at the top of the screen will highlight digital-only additions to the treatise since release of the print book. This option also shows, in curly brackets at the beginning of footnotes, the corresponding footnote number in the print book of a digital footnote. Important law changes are shown on the digital version with red flags, and very recent updates with blue flags.

Subscription options are available as either digital-only or print + digital. Subscribers to print + digital subscriptions receive, as part of their subscription price and at no additional charge, any revised print edition that is released during their subscription period.

1.1.1.2 Organization of the Treatise

This treatise is designed to help lawyers and paralegals representing consumers who are victims of abusive debt collection practices. It may also be useful to debt collection professionals as a part of their legal compliance efforts.

The chapters of the treatise are divided as follows:

- Chapter 1 provides information about the types of entities involved in debt collection and an overview of the process of debt collection;
- Chapter 2 details how to prepare a suit for debt collection abuse;
- Chapters 3 through 12 discuss the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) as follows:
  - Chapter 3 provides an overview of the development of the FDCPA, amendments, and regulatory authority;
  - Chapter 4 outlines coverage under the FDCPA;
  - Chapters 5 through 10 discuss claims under specific sections of the FDCPA;
  - Chapter 11 details FDCPA remedies and other issues arising in litigation; and
  - Chapter 12 summarizes different defenses and counterclaims likely be raised by debt collectors;
- Chapter 13 discusses claims in and related to bankruptcy;
- Chapter 14 outlines other possible federal claims consumers may wish to file;
- Chapter 15 discusses different tort remedies that may be available under state law; and
- Chapter 16 summarizes other state law remedies that may be available to consumers.

The appendices of this treatise include the following content:

- Appendix A contains the text of the FDCPA and the full text of a 1977 U.S. Senate report about the FDCPA;
- Appendix B contains the full text of Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) Regulation F interpreting the FDCPA, with specific Official Interpretations integrated with the corresponding regulatory provision. The appendix also includes a table showing where significant Regulation F provisions are examined in this treatise, and also provides summaries of other CFPB interpretations and guidance on the FDCPA;
- Appendix C contains summaries of Federal Trade Commission advisory opinions and the staff commentary on the FDCPA, as well as a list of informal staff letters;
- Appendix D provides a state-by-state summary of state debt collection statutes;
- The print version of Appendix E includes twelve case summaries of FDCPA case decisions, organized by topic. The digital version now includes fifteen thousand;
- Appendix F describes practice aids, pleadings, and primary sources available online;
- Appendix G lists debt collection abbreviations; and
- Appendix H contains a list of websites related to debt collection.

1.1.1.3 Additional Pleadings, Primary Sources, and Practice Tools

The digital version of this treatise contains thousands of additional documents: Pleadings and Discovery, Practice Tools, and Primary Sources. These materials are listed at the bottom of the digital version's table of contents, available at www.nclc.org/library. (The table of contents is found on the digital version's left pane.)

All of these materials are searchable through the standard search box at the top of the screen or using the advanced pleadings search link just above the search box. Search filters allow users to search only for pleadings, only for primary sources, or only for practice tools. Just like the chapters and appendices, these additional materials can be copy/pasted and downloaded and printed. Virtually all pleadings and discovery are available in Microsoft Word format, allowing easy adaptation for an actual case.

1.1.1.4 The FDCPA Case Connector

A special feature of Fair Debt Collection's digital version is the "FDCPA Case Connector" that allows rapid display of relevant case summaries from the over fifteen thousand summaries found in the digital version of Appendix E, infra. The digital version of Appendix E is a unique resource only found with this treatise—summaries by topic for all significant FDCPA decisions since the statute was first enacted.

The FDCPA Case Connector allows identification and display of relevant FDCPA case summaries by any combination of the plaintiff or defendant names, the court, the date range, the citation, key words, or the Appendix E subsection.

Once a summary is displayed, the FDCPA Case Connector allows immediate linking to other summaries for the same decision, other summaries on the same topic, and summaries of related decisions for that case. All decisions and summaries meeting a search criteria are displayed, and this listing or portions of it can be copy/pasted into documents.

1.1.1.5 How Sections in This Treatise Correspond to the FDCPA

Chapters 3 through 12, infra, of this treatise are devoted to the FDCPA, as are most of the appendices. With a few exceptions, this book follows the organization of the FDCPA.

Codified Heading at 15 U.S.C.	Treatise Section	Public Law Section	U.S.C. Section
Congressional findings and declaration of purpose	§ 3.1	§ 802	§ 1692
Definitions	Ch. 4	§ 803	§ 1692a
Acquisition of location information	§ 5.2	§ 804	§ 1692b
Communication in connection with debt collection	Ch. 5	§ 805	§ 1692c
Harassment or abuse	Ch. 6	§ 806	§ 1692d
False or misleading representations	Ch. 7	§ 807	§ 1692e
Unfair practices	Ch. 8	§ 808	§ 1692f
Validation of debts	Ch. 9	§ 809	§ 1692g
Multiple debts	§ 10.2	§ 810	§ 1692h
Legal actions by debt collectors	§ 10.3	§ 811	§ 1692*i*
Furnishing certain deceptive forms	§ 10.4	§ 812	§ 1692j
Civil liability	Chs. 11, 12	§ 813	§ 1692k
Administrative enforcement	§§ 3.2.1.1, 3.4.2.5, 3.4.4	§ 814	§ 1692*l*
Reports to Congress by the Commission	§ 3.4.4.1	§ 815	§ 1692m
Relation to State laws	§ 11.16	§ 816	§ 1692n
Exemption for State regulation	§§ 3.1, 3.4.4.2	§ 817	§ 1692o
Exception for certain bad check enforcement programs operated by private entities.	§ 4.8.11	§ 818	§ 1692p

1.1.1.6 How Sections in This Treatise Correspond to Regulation F

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau has now, effective November 30, 2021, enacted Regulation F, interpreting the FDCPA.[1] The Regulation is reproduced at Appx. B.1.2, infra. While certain regulation provisions track the statutory language, other provisions and the Regulation's Official Interpretations provide new FDCPA interpretations.

The table below indicates subsections of this treatise that examine specific Regulation F provisions. The table also displays, where applicable, the corresponding FDCPA provision and the corresponding United State Code provision of the FDCPA.

1 12 C.F.R. Part 1006. See § 3.4.4.2, infra.

Reg. F Section	Treatise Section	Public Law Section	U.S.C. Section
§ 1006.1(a), Authority	§ 3.4.4	§ 814(d)	§ 1692l(d)
§ 1006.1(b), Purpose	§ 3.1	§ 802	§ 1692
§ 1006.1(c), Coverage	§ 4.8.12	§ 803(6)	§ 1692a(6)
§ 1006.2, Definitions	Ch. 4	§ 803	§ 1692a
§ 1006.2(b), Attempt to communicate	§ 4.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.2(d) Communicate or communication	§ 4.2	§ 803(2)	§ 1692a(2)
§ 1006.2(j) Limited-content message	§ 4.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.6, Communications in connection with debt collection	§§ 5.3 to 5.9	§ 805	§ 1692c
§ 1006.6(a), Definition (including deceased consumer)	§ 5.3.1	§ 805(d)	§ 1692c(d)
§ 1006.6(b)(1), Prohibitions regarding unusual or inconvenient times or places.	§ 5.4	§ 805(a)(1)	§ 1692c(a)(1)
§ 1006.6(b)(2), Prohibitions regarding consumer represented by an attorney.	§ 5.5	§ 805(a)(2)	§ 1692c(a)(2)
§ 1006.6(b)(3), Prohibitions regarding consumer's place of employment	§ 5.6	§ 805(a)(3)	§ 1692c(a)(3)
§ 1006(c), Communications with a consumer—after refusal to pay or cease communication notice	§ 5.8	§ 805(c)	§ 1692c(c)
§ 1006.6(d), Communications with third parties—	§ 5.7	§ 805(b)	§ 1692c(b)
§ 1006.6(e), Opt-out notice for electronic communications or attempts to communicate	§ 5.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.9, Debt collection practices in connection with the global COVID-19 pandemic	§ 7.4.12.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.10, Acquisition of location information	§ 5.2	§ 804	§ 1692b
§ 1006.14, Harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct	Ch. 6	§ 806	§ 1692d
§ 1006.14(b), Repeated or continuous telephone calls or telephone conversations	§ 6.7.2	§ 806(5)	§ 1692d(5)
§ 1006.14(h), Prohibited communication media	§ 6.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.18, False, deceptive, or misleading representations or means	Ch. 7	§ 807	§ 1692e
§ 1006.18(d), Social media	§ 7.4.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.18(e), Disclosures required	§ 7.2.11	§ 807(11)	§ 1692e(11)
§ 1006.18(f), Assumed names	§ 7.2.14	§ 807(14)	§ 1692e(14)
§ 1006.22, Unfair or unconscionable means	Ch. 8	§ 808	§ 1692f
§ 1006.22(f)(3), Restrictions on use of certain media (emails sent to employer email addresses)	§ 8.10	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.22(f)(4), Restrictions on use of certain media (social media)	§ 8.11	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.22(g), Safe harbor for certain emails and text messages relating to the collection of a debt	§ 8.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.26, Collection of time-barred debts	§ 7.4.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.30(a), Required actions prior to furnishing information	§ 8.12	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.30(b), Prohibition on the sale, transfer for consideration, or placement for collection of certain debts	§ 8.13	n/a	n/a

Reg. F Section	Treatise Section	Public Law Section	U.S.C. Section
§ 1006.30(c), Multiple debts	§ 10.2	§ 810	§ 1692h
§ 1006.30(d), Legal actions by debt collectors	§ 10.3	§ 811	§ 1692i
§ 1006.30(e), Furnishing certain deceptive forms	§ 10.4	§ 812	§ 1692j
§ 1006.34, Notice for validation of debts	Ch. 9	§ 809	§ 1692g
§ 1006.34(a)(3), Itemization date	§ 9.4.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(c), Validation information	§ 9.4	§ 809(a)	§ 1692g(a)
§ 1006.34(d)(2), Safe harbor	§ 9.5.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(d)(3), Optional disclosures	§ 9.6	§ 809(a)	§ 1692g(a)
§ 1006.34(d)(4), Validation notices delivered electronically.	§ 9.5.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(e), Translation into other languages	§ 9.5.4	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.38, Disputes and requests for original-creditor information	§§ 9.10, 9.11	§ 809(b)	§ 1692g(b)
§ 1006.42, Sending required disclosures	§ 9.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.100, Record retention	§ 11.5.4.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.104, Relation to State laws	§ 11.16.1	§ 816	§ 1692n
§ 1006.108, Exemption for State regulation	§ 3.4.4	§ 817	§ 1692o
Appendix A to Part 1006—Procedures for State Application for Exemption from the Provisions of the Act	§ 3.4.4	§ 817	§ 1692o
Appendix B to Part 1006—Model Forms. B–1 Model Form for Validation Notice	§ 9.5.2	n/a	n/a
Appendix C to Part 1006—Issuance of Advisory Opinions	§ 3.4.4.3	§ 813(e)	§ 1692k(e)

1.1.1.7 Regulation F Treatment of Electronic Communications

The FDCPA does not specifically address electronic communication, and issues arise as to how FDCPA provisions apply to electronic communications between debt collectors and consumers. Regulation F clarifies that, in the definition of "communication," "any medium" includes email, text message, social media, or other electronic media.[2]

Regulation F includes new provisions relating to debt collector email, text message, and social media communications with the consumer, as well as consumer email, text message, or web portal communications with the debt collector. This subsection lists these provisions, with reference to other subsections of this treatise where these provisions are examined.

Restrictions on Debt Collector Use of Electronic Mediums to Collect Debts. Regulation F places the following restrictions on electronic communication in connection with collection of a debt:

- Debt collectors cannot send collection emails to a consumer's email address that the debt collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer, unless the consumer's provision of the address to a debt collector has met certain conditions. See § 8.10, infra.
- Electronic communications intended for the consumer cannot be viewed by third parties. Regulation F provides a safe harbor if the debt collector acquires the email address or phone number for text messages using certain procedures and the collector has no knowledge that prior electronic communication at that email address has led to disclosure to a third party. See § 5.7.9, infra.
- The limits and presumptions as to a debt collector communicating at an unusual or inconvenient time apply to electronic communication. Electronic communication occurs when the debt collector sends it, not, for example, when the consumer receives or views it. See § 5.4.2, infra.
- Electronic communication media are not associated with a place, and usually their use does not violate the prohibition on contacting the consumer at an inconvenient place. Nevertheless, there is a violation if the debt collector knows that the communication will be received by the consumer at an unusual place, or at a place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. See § 5.4.3, infra.
- Regulation F has no specific frequency standards for emails, text messages, or other electronic communications sent to consumers, but they are still subject to the general standard as to harassment. The total amount of cumulative communications, including electronic communications, can violate the general standard. See § 6.7.2.4, infra.

2 See § 4.7.1, infra.

- Regulation F requires the debt collector to provide notice in any electronic communication to the consumer of the right to opt out of the specific medium of electronic communication, and requires the debt collector to disclose to the consumer a reasonable, simple, and free method to opt out of a specific mode of electronic communication. See § 5.9, infra.
- Where a consumer has opted out of a medium of electronic communications, the collector can communicate with the consumer through that medium only in limited circumstances. See § 6.9, infra.
- Regulation F prohibits debt collector use of social media in connection with collection of a debt when contacting the consumer or third parties (seeking location information), if a person's social media contacts or the general public can see the message. See § 8.11, infra.
- Debt collectors must disclose their identity as a debt collector when sending a private message, in connection with the collection of a debt, requesting to be added as one of the consumer's contacts on social media. See § 7.4.2, infra.
- When using social media to obtain the consumer's location information from a third party, the profile must accurately identify the debt collector's individual name. See § 7.4.3, infra.

Debt Collector Use of Electronic Mediums to Make Required Disclosures. Regulation F sets restrictions on a debt collector's use of electronic mediums to provide validation notices and other required disclosures:

- Electronic validation notices must include the right to opt out of that means of communication. See § 9.3.2.1, infra.
- Any electronic validation information in the initial communication or in a subsequent notice must be done in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later. See § 9.3.2.2, infra.
- When an electronic validation notice is sent after an initial communication, the debt collector must first have complied with E-SIGN's consumer consent provisions. See § 9.3.2.3, infra.
- Regulation F sets out optional guidelines as to the form for an electronic validation notice. See § 9.5.3, infra.
- After a consumer's request for verification of a debt or the identity of the original creditor, the debt collector response, if electronic, must be sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later. See § 9.8.1, infra.
- With the exception as to notice to the consumer that the consumer's dispute is duplicative, the debt collector, prior to an electronic response, must comply with E-SIGN's consumer consent provisions. See § 9.8.1, infra.

Consumer Use of Electronic Communication. Regulation F provides consumer rights, triggered by a consumer request of the debt collector. Regulation F establishes guidelines if such a consumer request is made electronically:

- A request for debt verification, to dispute a debt, or to seek the identity of the originating creditor can be made electronically through a medium of electronic communication that the collector uses to accept communications from consumers. See § 9.10.2, infra.
- A consumer can send a cease communication request electronically using a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers. See § 5.8.2, infra.
- A consumer can opt out of a debt collector's email, text message, or other electronic method of debt collection. This opt out method must be reasonable, simple, and free. Regulation F Official Interpretations provide examples where the consumer's response is in the same electronic medium by which the collector's electronic communication was sent. See § 5.9, infra.

1.1.1.8 Defining "Debt Collector" in This Treatise

This treatise covers laws applicable to all types of debt collectors—creditors, first-party debt collectors, third-party debt collectors, debt buyers, collection attorneys, and the employees of each that make the phone calls asking for money. Unless the context indicates otherwise, the term "debt collector" or "collector" may be used in this treatise to mean any person collecting a debt.

However, some laws restrictively define the term "debt collector." Great care is thus required to determine parties are covered by the various laws described in this treatise. In Chapters 3 through 12, infra, the term "debt collector" is usually given the restricted, multi-layered meaning of that term in the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.[3]

1.1.2 Topics Covered in Other NCLC Treatises

This treatise comprehensively covers affirmative litigation against abusive debt collectors, but it cannot cover all areas of consumer law. Other relevant manuals published by NCLC include:

- Collection Actions provides a comprehensive guide to consumer defenses, counterclaims, and other strategies in response to debt collection lawsuits filed against a consumer; this treatise also sets out extensive consumer rights to respond to postjudgment creditor remedies;
- Fair Credit Reporting discusses the Fair Credit Reporting Act and other laws applying to credit furnishers such as debt collectors;
- Federal Deception Law contains an extensive chapter analyzing all aspects of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, which provides strong private remedies for robocalls and other unwanted calls; this treatise also examines the regulation of debt relief and debt settlement services;

3 See § 4.7, infra.

- Home Foreclosures includes reverse mortgages, tax leins, condominium loans, land installment sales, and seizure of manufactured homes;
- Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications covers loan modification programs anr rights to deal with mortgage servicers;
- Repossessions deals with the seizure of personal property, including cars, manufactured homes, and personal property;
- Student Loan Law addresses collection of federal and private student loans;
- Consumer Class Actions provides step-by-step instructions on all aspects of bringing a consumer class action;
- Consumer Arbitration Agreements examines approaches to defeat a binding arbitration clause that a collector may rely on to avoid court litigation; and
- Surviving Debt provides guidance to consumers and advocates about how to deal with debt.

Additionally, NCLC maintains a digital collection of over 2000 consumer law pleadings that can be accessed at www.nclc.org/library for subscribers to Consumer Law Pleadings.

1.1.3 Trainings and Continuing Legal Education

National Consumer Law Center staff participates in a variety of in-person training events on fair debt collection laws. NCLC organizes the annual Consumer Rights Litigation Conference for consumer advocates. This conference generally provides sessions on fair debt collection issues. NCLC and the National Association of Consumer Advocates have sponsored a two-day training on fair debt collection issues annually since 2004. For more information about NCLC conferences and eligibility to attend, see our conference website.

NCLC staff also participate in other in-person trainings on this and other topics covered by our treatises. See our website to submit a training request form.

1.1.4 Debt Collection Webpage and Listservs

NCLC maintains a Debt Collection website. This website includes links to model statutes, policy analysis, testimony, webinars, and consumer resources.

NCLC also hosts a variety of listservs, including Debt Collection Policy and Fight Debt Scams. Information about subscribing to NCLC listservs is available online. The descriptions of each listserv contain information about who is eligible to join.

1.2 A Brief History of Debt Collection and Its Regulation in the United States

In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, one of the factors that propelled emigration from England to the American colonies was the harsh enforcement of early English bankruptcy laws.[4] Fear of debtors' prison—where debtors were kept without bedding, blankets, coal, or access to medical care until their debts could be paid[5]—drove "shiploads" of Englishmen to relocate to the colonies.[6] At the time, English bankruptcy laws gave the right of action to the creditor, not the debtor, and granted discharge only to merchants and traders.[7] By contrast, the early bankruptcy laws of the American colonies allowed for voluntary bankruptcy, taking the position that "it was the debtor, rather than the creditor who needed assistance."[8]

At the time the U.S. Constitution was drafted, discontent with Britain's practices surrounding debt was at its peak.[9] While the Constitution did not do away with debtors' prisons, it did grant the federal government the authority to issue bankruptcy laws.[10] The first bankruptcy statute, passed by near unanimous consent of Congress and signed into law by John Adams in 1800, allowed debtors to discharge their debts and provided for their release from prison upon surrender of nonexempt assets.[11] It also granted people the right to sue for damages if they had been erroneously accused of owing debt.[12]

Through most of the nineteenth century, the bulk of America's economy was subsistence agriculture.[13] Not much credit was available for farmers other than that offered by local merchants, who would sometimes barter goods for produce, or extend credit based on the promising crops of the farmer.[14] Farmers suffering crop failure would lose the ability to

4 Tracy Woodard, Statutory Research Conundrum: 11 U.S.C. § 507(A)(7) in the United States Bankruptcy Code, 41 Int'l J. of Legal Info. 179, 182 (Summer 2013).

5 Andrew J. Duncan, From Dismemberment to Discharge: The Origins of Modern American Bankruptcy Law, 100 Com. L.J. 191, 213–214 (1995).

6 Tracy Woodard, Statutory Research Conundrum: 11 U.S.C. § 507(A)(7) in the United States Bankruptcy Code, 41 Int'l J. of Legal Info. 179, 182 (Summer 2013); Andrew J. Duncan, From Dismemberment to Discharge: The Origins of Modern American Bankruptcy Law, 100 Com. L.J. 191, 215 (1995).

7 Andrew J. Duncan, From Dismemberment to Discharge: The Origins of Modern American Bankruptcy Law, 100 Com. L.J. 191, 217 (1995).

8 Id. at 216.

9 Id. at 215.

10 U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 4 ("To establish . . . uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States").

11 Tracy Woodard, Statutory Research Conundrum: 11 U.S.C. § 507(A)(7) in the United States Bankruptcy Code, 41 Int'l J. of Legal Info. 179, 183 n.17 (Summer 2013).

12 Id. at 183 n.16.

13 Curtis P. Nettels, The Emergence of a National Economy, 1775–1815 (Holt, Rinehart and Winston 1962).

14 Paul W. Gates, The Farmers' Age: Agriculture, 1815–1860 (The Economic History of the United States, Volume III) (Holt, Rinehart, barter or obtain credit for merchandise, and would frequently move their family westward seeking more favorable land and pastures.[15]

Debt collection and its regulation would come to play a significant role in the westward settlement of the United States.[16] For example, the Panic of 1819 touched off a depression that drove settlers to migrate to Texas, where they found refuge from debtors' prisons.[17] Texans recognized that "desperate fortunes had driven many of their countrymen to enwrap themselves in the protective folds of the Lone Star Flag,"[18] and established strong legal protections for borrowers.[19] Many of these legal protections survive to this day. For example, the Texas Constitution bans wage garnishment for most debts[20] and regulates home equity loans.[21]

In urban areas, the second half of the nineteenth century saw the rise of loan sharks who made high-interest, short-term loans.[22] Also known as "salary lenders," these individuals made loans to employees on a Monday that needed to be repaid that Friday. Annualized interest rates of more than 1000% were common and were frequently even higher for African-American borrowers.[23] A commonplace collection tactic was for creditors to "employ a 'bawler-out'—usually a woman with a stentorian voice and rich vocabulary" who would stand outside the borrower's workplace and loudly scold the borrower for failing to repay the loan.[24] Debt collectors not only used humiliation as a cudgel to induce borrowers to settle, but they also confronted relatives and friends.[25]

In the wake of the Panic of 1893 and the resulting economic depression, Congress enacted a new bankruptcy law.[26] The Bankruptcy Act of 1898 eased restrictions on discharge policies for borrowers, allowed for consumers to file for voluntary bankruptcy, and also provided protections against involuntary bankruptcy.[27] These reforms made it more difficult for creditors to use bankruptcy to collect debts.[28]

By the early 1900s, one in five American workers owed money to salary lenders.[29] In an attempt to curb salary lending and promote licensed lending, two-thirds of the states adopted versions of the Uniform Small Loan Law published in 1916.[30] Small loan businesses sprang up under the new laws.[31] Simultaneously, during the 1920s, corporations such as Sears, General Motors, and Steinway & Sons began making installment loans to purchase high-priced consumer goods like cars, washing machines, pianos, and sewing machines.[32] One survey in 1928 found that 41% of respondents purchased an item on installments.[33] Household debt rose steadily through the 1920s.[34]

In the 1930s, the consequences of defaulting on an installment contract were generally harsh.[35] Goods were repossessed if payments were thirty days late.[36] Items were resold but no surplus was returned to the consumer, resulting in a loss of wealth where large deposits and short repayment terms usually meant significant financial investment over a short period of time.[37]

In 1939, the American Collector's Association (now ACA International) was founded after the creation of some state-based groups in the 1920s and the Pacific Coast Association of Collection Agencies in 1924.[38] Debt collectors began to use the telephone to collect debts as early as the 1940s, and by the 1960s some collection agencies began to use automated systems to interact with debtors.[39] In the 1950s and 60s, groups and Winston 1960).

15 Id.

16 During the Great Depression, for example, over 2.5 million destitute farmers moved West after losing their farms due to mounting debts and environmental crises like the Dust Bowl. Timothy Egan, The Worst Hard Time: The Untold Story of Those Who Survived the Great American Dust Bowl 104 (Houghton Mifflin, Co. 2006); Glenn Deane and Myron P. Gutmann, Blowin' Down the Road: Investigating Bilateral Causality between Dust Storms and Population in the Great Plains. Population Res. & Pol'y Rev., vol. 22, no. 4, 1 (Aug. 2003).

17 Mark E. Nackman, Anglo-American Migrants to the West: Men of Broken Fortunes? The Case of Texas 1821–1846, 5 Western Hist. Quarterly 441, 446 (1974).

18 Id. at 453.

19 Id. at 454.

20 Tex. Const. art. XVI, § 28.

21 Tex. Const. art. XVI, § 50(a)(6).

22 Christopher I. Peterson, Truth, Understanding, and High-Cost Consumer Credit: The Historical Context of the Truth in Lending Act, 55 Fla. L. Rev. 807, 850–851 (2003).

23 Id. ("In a typical transaction, a debtor would borrow five dollars on Monday, and repay six on Friday. This 20% per week loan translates into a 1040% per annum rate. African-Americans borrowing in the South were often charged rates twice as high in the same type of transaction, where a loan of five dollars was repaid with seven at the end of the week.").

24 Id. at 854.

25 Id. at 857.

26 Bankruptcy Act of 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544.

27 Christopher I. Peterson, Truth, Understanding, and High-Cost Consumer Credit: The Historical Context of the Truth in Lending Act, 55 Fla. L. Rev. 857–858 (2003).

28 Id.

29 Id. at 852.

30 A Short History of Payday Lending Law. The Pew Charitable Trusts (2012), available at www.pewtrusts.org.

31 Christopher I. Peterson, Truth Understanding, and High-Cost Consumer Credit: The Historical Context of the Truth in Lending Act, 55 Fla. L. Rev. 863 (2003).

32 Id. at 864.

33 Martha L. Olney, Avoiding Default: The Role of Credit in the Consumption Collapse of 1930, The Quarterly Journal of Economics, 114(1), 323 (1999).

34 Int'l Monetary Fund, World Economic Outlook: Growth Resuming, Dangers Remain, Figure 3.9. Foreclosures and Household Debt during the Great Depression in the United States (2012), available at https://www.imf.org.

35 Martha L. Olney, Avoiding Default: The Role of Credit in the Consumption Collapse of 1930, The Quarterly Journal of Economics, 114(1), 320, 27 (1999).

36 Id. at 320.

37 Id. at 320, 327.

38 Anne Rosso May, An Abridged History of ACA, Collector, Jan. 2019.

39 Deville, Joe. Lived Economies of Default: Consumer Credit, Debt Collection and the Capture of Affect 88 (Routledge 2015) (describing how, during the 1960s, the Credit Bureau of Greater Syracuse (CGBS) began to use IBM punch card machines to prepare collection notices and forwarding notices to out of state collection agencies that could assist with retrieving debts from those who moved out of their direct area of operations).

of creditors in a region began pooling information about consumers with delinquent accounts, forming early credit reporting companies.[40]

From 1938 to 1977, the federal government's primary tool to protect consumers from unfair or deceptive acts or practices by debt collectors was through enforcement actions brought by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45.[41] In 1968, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws developed the Uniform Consumer Credit Code to remedy "impediments to the free flow of credit."[42]

Concerned about the Code's impact on consumers, fifty-five consumer experts gathered in June 1969 at a meeting co-sponsored by the newly formed National Consumer Law Center (NCLC).[43] As a result of that meeting, NCLC undertook the drafting of a National Consumer Act that was released in 1970.[44] The National Consumer Act served as a model for state reforms, including the Wisconsin Consumer Act in 1973.[45] State reform efforts and proposed revisions to the Uniform Consumer Credit Code informed NCLC's drafting of the Model Consumer Credit Act, which contained a section specifically addressing consumer protections in debt collection.[46]

While some states had amended their laws by the mid-1970s to protect consumers from abusive debt collection practices, "13 states, with 40 million citizens, ha[d] no debt collection laws" and "another 11 states . . . provide[d] little or no effective protection."[47] This left nearly forty percent of the American population without "meaningful protection from debt collection abuse."[48]

In 1975, Congressman Frank Annunzio of Chicago introduced a bill to protect consumers from abusive debt collection that bore a striking resemblance to NCLC's Model Consumer Credit Act. In 1977, after debate and amendment, the bill passed the House by one vote and the Senate by voice vote with bipartisan support in both houses. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) was signed by President Carter on September 20, 1977, and became law in 1978.[49] For more information about the passage of the 1977 Act and subsequent amendments, see § 3.4.2, infra.

Since the FDCPA's passage, many states have passed or amended state debt collection statutes. These state statutes are discussed in more detail in § 10.2 and Appx. D, infra.

In 2010, Congress passed the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, which created the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) and gave it enforcement and rule-making authority over debt collectors.[50] The Bureau subsequently enacted debt collection regulations effective November 30, 2021.[51]

1.3 Parties Commonly Involved in Debt Collection

1.3.1 Consumers

1.3.1.1 Overview

As used in this treatise, consumers are individuals who borrow money or purchase goods or services on credit for personal, rather than business debts.

Americans owe large amounts of money for consumer debts.[52] In the first quarter of 2021, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that Americans owed $4.15 trillion in non-housing debt and $10.49 trillion for housing debt.[53] However, only a portion of this outstanding debt is delinquent.[54]

Contact with a debt collector is a common experience for Americans. In 2019, the CFPB estimated that third-party debt collectors contact at least 49 million consumers each year about a debt in collection.[55] A researcher at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia estimated that the third-party collections industry contacts Americans more than a billion

40 Mark Furletti, Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, An Overview and History of Credit Reporting Payment Cards Center of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia 3–4 (2002), available at https://www.philadelphiafed.org.

41 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Proposed Rule, 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23,278 (May 21, 2019).

42 Barbara A. Curran and David I. Fand, An Analysis of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code, 49 Neb. L. Rev. 727 (1970).

43 National Consumer Law Center, National Consumer Act: First Final Draft, Prefatory Note (Jan. 1970), available at https://www.nclc.org.

44 Id.

45 National Consumer Law Center, Model Consumer Credit Act, Introduction and Article 6 (1973), available at https://www.nclc.org; Edward J. Heiser, Jr., Wisconsin Consumer Act—A Critical Analysis, 57 Marq. L. Rev. 389, 390–391 (1974).

46 National Consumer Law Center, Model Consumer Credit Act, Introduction (1973), available at https://www.nclc.org.

47 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

48 Id.

49 For a more detailed history of the enactment of the FDCPA, see § 3.4.2, infra.

50 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d). See § 3.4.2.5, infra.

51 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020); Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021).

52 While this discussion focuses on consumer debts, individuals may struggle with other types of debts, including criminal justice debts. For more about unique issues that may arise when representing individuals with criminal justice debts see National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 11 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

53 Fed. Reserve Bank of N.Y., Household Debt and Credit Report: Q2 2020 ($4.12 trillion for non-housing debt breaks down as: student loans ($1.54 trillion); auto loans ($1.34 trillion); credit card ($0.82 trillion) and other non-housing debt ($0.42 trillion)), available at https://www.newyorkfed.org.

54 Id. (percentage of debt that is 90+ days delinquent: 6.2% for student loans, 10% for credit cards, 7.7% for other non-housing debt, and 4.8% for auto loans, 1.2% for home equity lines of credit, and 0.6% for mortgages).

55 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23,384 (May 21, 2019).

times a year,[56] and the debt buyer Encore Capital Group, Inc. claims that twenty percent of American consumers either owe it money currently or have owed it money in the past.[57]

Millions of Americans have one or more debts in collection listed on their credit reports. In 2021, the CFPB reported that "26 percent of consumers have a third-party collection tradeline furnished to their credit report."[58] The Urban Institute reported that, in 2019, 68 million adult Americans with a credit report had one or more debts in collection reported in their credit files,[59] down from 71 million in 2017[60] and 77 million in 2013.[61] In contrast, TransUnion reported that the number of consumers with one or more collection trade lines increased from 66.8 million in 2009 to 79.1 million in 2018, with a high of 81.8 million in 2016 and a low of 63.2 million in 2015.[62]

In a nationally-representative survey of consumer experiences with debt collection conducted in 2015, the CFPB found that medical bills were the most common type of past-due debt[63] and credit or charge cards[64] were the most common types of loans for which consumers were contacted by debt collectors.

Debt is not evenly distributed around the country.[65] Even within a city or state, significant differences about the prevalence of debts exist at the neighborhood level.[66] A study by the Urban Institute concluded that, "people who live in neighborhoods with lower health insurance coverage, lower housing values and less homeownership, more delinquent mortgages and homes with negative equity, lower educational attainment, a higher share of African Americans and Hispanics, and higher unemployment rates are significantly more likely to have debt in collections."[67]

Lawmakers who originally enacted the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act recognized that most consumer delinquency is not voluntary, rejecting the myth that substantial numbers of consumers are deadbeats who refuse to pay their debts.[68] Frequently, the reason that consumers do

56 Robert Hunt, "Understanding the Model: The Life Cycle of a Debt," presented at FTC-CFPB Roundtable "Life of a Debt: Data Integrity in Debt Collection" (June 6, 2013).

57 Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016). See also Encore Capital Group, Comments to Federal Communications Commission Re: CG Docket Nos. 18-152, 02-278 (Oct. 16, 2018) (noting that company works with one out of five American consumers).

58 CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: CFPB Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021) (analyzing data from the Bureau's Consumer Credit Panel). See also Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 31, 2021) (nationally 29% of American adults with a credit report have one or more debts in collection in their credit files), available at https://apps.urban.org; CFPB, Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019) ("Between Q2 2004 and Q2 2018, the percentage of consumers in the sample with a third-party collections tradeline on their file never went below 27% or above 34%."), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov; Breno Braga et al., Urban Institute, Local Conditions and Debt in Collections (June 2016) ("Nationally, we find that nearly one-third of Americans have a debt in collections recorded in their credit report."); Caroline Ratcliffe, Urban Institute, Delinquent Debt in America (July 2014) (35% of adults with credit files have debt in collections reported in their credit files).

59 Andrew Warren et al., Before COVID-19, 68 Million US Adults Had Debt in Collections. What Policies Could Help? (Urban Institute, Apr. 17, 2020), available at https://www.urban.org.

60 Hannah Hassani and Signe-Mary McKernan, 71 million US adults have debt in collections (Urban Institute, July 19, 2018), available at https://www.urban.org.

61 Caroline Ratcliffe, Urban Institute, Delinquent Debt in America (July 2014) (77 million American consumers had non-mortgage debts in collections reported in their credit files).

62 TransUnion, Challenges, Trends and Innovations: The State of Third-Party Collections (2019), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

63 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt, Fig. 2 (Jan. 2017) (reporting types of past-due debt in collection as: medical bills (59%), telecommunications bills (37%); utility bills (28%); taxes (21%); legal judgment or expenses (14%); and rent (11%); noting that "Estimates are for consumers who were contacted about a debt in collection. Sums across columns may exceed 100 percent because consumers could report having been contacted about multiple types of debts.").

64 Id. at Fig. 1 (reporting types of loans in collection as: credit or charge (44%), student loan (28%), auto-purchase loan (18%); mortgage or HELOC (12%); and payday loan (11%); noting that "estimates are for consumers who were contacted about a debt in collection. Sums across columns may exceed 100 percent because consumers could report having been contacted about multiple types of debts").

65 See Breno Braga et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 31, 2021) (visual representation of areas where debts in collection are more prevalent), available at https://apps.urban.org. See also Breno Braga et al., Local Conditions and Debt in Collections, Table A.1 (Urban Institute, June 2016); Caroline Ratcliffe, Delinquent Debt in America, Table A.1 (Urban Institute, July 2014).

66 New York City Department of Consumer Affairs, Unequal Burden: Black Borrowers and the Student Loan Debt Crisis (July 2020) ("In . . . predominantly Black and Hispanic neighborhoods [in New York City], approximately 16 percent of student loan debt holders have debt in collections compared to 8 percent of student loan debt holders in predominantly White and Asian neighborhoods."), available at https://www1.nyc.gov; Anmol Chaddha, The Concentration of Financial Disadvantage: Debt Conditions and Credit Report Data in Massachusetts Cities and Boston Neighborhoods (Fed. Reserve Bank of Boston, June 27, 2018) ("About 1 in 3 residents of Roxbury and Mattapan have debt collections on their credit reports, compared to just 5 percent in several higher-income Boston neighborhoods."), available at https://www.bostonfed.org; Breno Braga, et al., Local Conditions and Debt in Collections 1 (Urban Institute, June 2016); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015, available at https://static.propublica.org.

67 Breno Braga et al., Urban Institute, Local Conditions and Debt in Collections (June 2016).

68 The Report of the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs stated:

> One of the most frequent fallacies concerning debt collection legislation is the contention that the primary beneficiaries are "deadbeats." In fact, however, there is universal agreement among scholars, law enforcement officials, and even debt collectors that the number of persons who willfully refuse to pay just debts is miniscule. Prof. David Caplovitz, the foremost authority on debtors in default, testified that after years of research he has found that only 4 percent of all defaulting debtors fit the description of "deadbeat."

not pay what they owe is that they have fallen on hard times due to loss of a job, illness, injury, or loss of a breadwinner to illness, divorce, or death.[69] Income variability can also lead to difficulty paying bills or expenses.[70] A smaller portion of consumers overextend themselves financially so that their income and savings are only sufficient to keep up with some of their debts.[71]

This conclusion is supported by the National Commission on Consumer Finance which found that creditors list the willful refusal to pay as an extremely infrequent reason for default.

S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra, citing David Caplovitz, Consumers in Trouble: A Study of Debtors in Default 54 (The Free Press 1974).

69 See, e.g., CFPB, Insights from the Making Ends Meet Survey 3 (July 2020) ("Households that suffered a period of unemployment, reduced work hours, or an inability to work because of illness were nearly twice as likely to report having difficulty paying a bill or expense than households that had not experienced these events."), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov; David U. Himmelstein, et al., Medical Bankruptcy: Still Common Despite the Affordable Care Act, American Journal of Public Health (Feb. 6, 2019) (respondents listed contributors to bankruptcy, including: income loss (77.8 %); medical expenses (58.5%); unaffordable mortgage or foreclosure (45%); student loans (25.4%); divorce/separation (24.4%) (multiple responses permitted)), available at https://ajph.aphapublications.org; Office of Pol'y Dev. & Res., U.S. Dept. of Housing & Urban Dev. Report to Congress on the Root Causes of the Foreclosure Crisis 15 (2010) ("It is generally understood that most borrowers become delinquent due to a change in their financial circumstances that make[s] them no longer able to meet their monthly mortgage obligations. These so called 'trigger events' commonly include job loss or other income curtailment, health problems, or divorce."); J. Michael Collins, Exploring the Design of Financial Counseling for Mortgage Borrowers in Default, 28 J. Fam. Econ. Issues 207, 213 tbl. 2 (2007) (showing job loss as the most common self-reported cause of mortgage nonpayment, followed by medical problems (affecting 28% of borrowers in default), unfair loan terms (20%), income reduction (20%), injury/accident (19%), home repair/improvement (19%), death in family (18%), and credit card management (15%)); Elizabeth Warren and Amelia Warren Tyagi, The Two-Income Trap: Why Middle-Class Parents Are (Still) Going Broke 81 (Basic Books 2016 ed.), citing 2001 Consumer Bankruptcy Project (87% of families with children cite job loss, medical problems, or divorce or separation as the reason for their divorce while the remaining 13% cite bad investment, crime victim, credit card overspending, natural disaster, other explanation, or no explanation); Barry Adler, Ben Polak, & Alan Schwartz, Regulating Consumer Bankruptcy: A Theoretical Inquiry, 29 J. Legal Stud. 585, 589 (2000) ("Many scholars and reformers believe that the insolvency is exogenous: the consumer borrower becomes insolvent through no fault of his own, in consequence of job loss, illness, or the like."); Theresa A. Sullivan, Elizabeth Warren, and Jay Lawrence Westbrook, The Fragile Middle Class: Americans in Debt (Yale University Press 2000), citing 1991 Consumer Bankruptcy Project (respondents' reasons for filing for bankruptcy were: job (67.5%), family (22.1%), medical (19.3%), creditor problems (13.6%), other (13.6%), and housing (6.2%) (multiple responses permitted)).

70 CFPB, Insights from the Making Ends Meet Survey 8 (July 2020) (56% of survey respondents whose income varies a lot reported difficulty paying a bill or expense in the past year compared to 37% of respondents whose income is about the same every month), available at https://files.consumerfinance gov.

71 See, e.g., David U. Himmelstein, et al., Medical Bankruptcy: Still Common Despite the Affordable Care Act, American Journal of Public Health (Feb. 6, 2019) (44.4% of survey respondents agreed that spending/living beyond means contributed to their bankruptcy), available at https://ajph.aphapublications.org; J. Michael Collins, Exploring the Design of Financial Counseling for Mortgage Borrowers in Default, 28 J. Fam. Econ. Issues 207, 213 tbl. 2 (2007) (showing that credit card management was only a self-reported cause of mortgage nonpayment for 15% of borrowers in default); Darryl E. Getter, Contributing to the Delinquency of Borrowers, 37 J. Consumer Aff. 86, 98–99 (2003) (examining whether delinquency was more attributable "to the unanticipated negative shocks that alter economic circumstance or to the size of the payment burden which could indicate that households may be "overextended" and concluding that "delinquency risk is more likely to increase as a result of unanticipated shocks to household wealth and unexpectedly low income").

1.3.1.2 Consumer Complaints about Debt Collection

Debt collection is a leading topic of consumer complaints to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau[72] through its Consumer Complaint Database.[73] The most common types of debt collection complaints in 2020 were complaints about: attempts to collect debt not owed (49%), written notification about debt (20%), took or threatened to take negative or legal action (10%), and false statements or representations (10%).[74] These statistics are published annually.

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau began accepting consumer debt collection complaints in 2013 and makes available online some of its data, including the complaint issue, the response, and the name of the debt collector.[75] Organizations have issued reports based on their own analysis of CFPB complaint data, which can be downloaded or manipulated online.[76] Consumers filing complaints at the CFPB also have the option of publicly sharing the narrative behind a complaint.[77]

In addition to its consumer debt collection complaint data, in 2017 the CFPB published the results of its survey of consumer experiences with debt collection, in which respondents

72 CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: CFPB Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021) ("The Bureau received approximately 82,700 complaints about first-party and third-party debt collection in 2020, an increase of approximately 10 percent compared to 2019, making debt collection one of the most prevalent consumer complaint topics."), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

73 Available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

74 CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: CFPB Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021) ("The Bureau received approximately 82,700 complaints about first-party and third-party debt collection in 2020, an increase of approximately 10 percent compared to 2019, making debt collection one of the most prevalent consumer complaint topics."), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

75 Consumer Complaint Database, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

76 See, e.g., Frontier Group and U.S. PIRG Education Fund, Debt Collectors: CFPB Data Reveal Consumer Complaints by Company (June 2018); Alliance for a Just Society, Unfair Deceptive & Abusive: Debt Collectors Profit from Aggressive Tactics (Jan. 2016), available at www.allianceforajustsociety.org; U.S. Public Interest Research Group, Debt Collectors, Debt Complaints (Feb. 2014), available at www.uspirg.org.

77 Press Release, CFPB Finalizes Policy to Give Consumers the Opportunity to Voice Publicly Complaints About Financial Companies (Mar. 19, 2015), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

indicated that they had experienced a variety of debt collection problems.[78] For example, of respondents who had been contacted about a debt:

- 53% "indicated that the debt was not theirs, was owed by a family member, or was for the wrong amount";
- 63% "said they were contacted too often";
- 36% were called after 9 p.m. or before 8 a.m.; and
- 27% were threatened.[79]

The Federal Trade Commission is another federal agency that tracks debt collection complaints. The FTC does this by compiling and publishing consumer complaints from a variety of sources, including the CFPB, state law enforcement agencies, the Better Business Bureau, and other contributors to publish in its annual Consumer Sentinel Network Databook.[80] From 2015 to 2017, debt collection complaints were the most common type of consumer complaint compiled and reported in the Data Book.[81] In 2020, debt collection was the eighth most common source of complaints, with 120,190 complaints.[82]

The FTC does not report the breakdown of debt collection complaints in its Consumer Sentinel Network Data Book.[83] However, an analysis of information produced by the FTC in response to a Freedom of Information Act request found that in 2017 the most frequent types of law violations reported in the debt collection complaints compiled by the Consumer Sentinel Network were: calls after getting a "stop calling" notice, calls repeatedly, and making false representations about the debt.[84]

In addition to the CFPB and FTC, state law enforcement agencies may also share information related to consumer complaints about debt collection or be subject to state record requests for such information.[85] Organizations like the Better Business Bureau[86] and Consumer Federation of America[87] also publish consumer complaint statistics about debt collection.

Representatives of the collection industry have tried to diminish the significance of consumer complaint statistics as representing a small fraction of consumer interactions with debt collectors.[88] However, it is likely that consumer complaints that are reported in the sources described above represent a small fraction of actual consumer complaints. Even though the Consumer Sentinel Network reports compile complaints from different sources, these reports do not manage to compile complaints from every state law enforcement agency or the Better Business Bureau.[89] Moreover, not all consumers know that they can report problems to state or federal regulators. Some who know about this possibility do not file such complaints because they do not believe that filing a complaint will help, because they face barriers like limited English proficiency, or due to fears about interacting with government agencies because of immigration status. Additionally, many consumers complain in ways that go uncounted by the FTC and the CFPB, such as complaints directly to debt collectors or creditors instead of to regulators.[90]

1.3.1.3 Mental Health and Consumer Debt

Indebtedness is associated with poor mental health.[91] This relationship remains significant even after controlling for socioeconomic status and other factors.[92] Several studies have

78 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt (Jan. 2017).

79 Id. at 5, 46.

80 See, e.g., FTC, Consumer Sentinel Network: Data Book 2020 (Feb. 2021), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

81 April Kuehnhoff and Ana Girón Vives, National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Complaints about Debt Collection: Analysis of Unpublished Data from the FTC 2 (Feb. 2019), available at https://www.nclc.org.

82 FTC, Consumer Sentinel Network: Data Book 2020 (Feb. 2021) (this number includes the debt collection complaints received from the CFPB), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

83 See, e.g., FTC, Consumer Sentinel Network: Data Book 2020 (Feb. 2021), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

84 April Kuehnhoff and Ana Girón Vives, National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Complaints about Debt Collection: Analysis of Unpublished Data from the FTC 15 (Feb. 2019), available at https://www.nclc.org.

85 See, e.g., Office of the Massachusetts Attorney General, List of Complaints Received by the Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (allowing the public to download complaint information), available at https://www.mass.gov.

86 Better Business Bureau, View BBB Complaint Statistics (compiling statistics from multiple years; complaints about "collection agencies" and "debt buyers" are reported separately).

87 See, e.g., Consumer Federation of America, 2019 Consumer Complaint Survey Report (July 27, 2020), available at www.consumerfed.org (ranking credit and debt complaints fifth in its "annual survey of city, county and state consumer agencies").

88 See, e.g., Josh Adams, A Review of Debt Collection Complaints Submitted to the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection's Complaint Database in the First Half of 2018 (ACA International, Nov. 2018).

89 FTC, Consumer Sentinel Network: Data Book 2020 Appx. A3–A4 (Feb. 2021) (listing data contributors by state law enforcement agencies), available at https://www.ftc.gov (Feb. 2021).

90 See FTC, Annual Report 2011: Fair Debt Collection Practices Act 2–3 (Mar. 2011).

91 See, e.g., Dyvonne Body, The Burden of Debt on Mental and Physical Health (The Aspen Institute, Aug. 2, 2018) (summarizing research); Thomas Richardson, Peter Elliott, & Ronald Roberts, The Relationship Between Personal Unsecured Debt and Mental and Physical Health: A Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis, 33 Clinical Psychol. Rev. 1148, 1153 (2013) (analyzing 65 studies and concluding there is "a statistically significant relationship between debt and presence of a mental disorder, depression, suicide completion, suicide contemplation or attempt, problem drinking, drug dependence, neurotic disorders (Depression, OCD, Panic, Phobia, GAD [Generalized Anxiety Disorder]), and psychotic disorders"); Sarah Brown, Karl Taylor, & Stephen Wheatley Price, Debt and Distress: Evaluating the Psychological Cost of Credit, 26 J. Econ. Psychol. 642, 647 (2005) ("there is considerable evidence of a strong statistical association between financial distress and severe psychological problems in the general population").

92 Patricia Drentea & John R. Reynolds, Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be: The Relative Importance of Debt and SES for Mental Health Among Older Adults, 24 J. Aging & Health 673, 685 (2012) ("Indebtedness increases symptoms of depression, anxiety, and anger, above and beyond the influences of income, wealth, education, occupational status, employment, various controls, and earlier mental health."); R. Jenkins et al., Debt, Income, and Mental Disorder in the General shown that debt is a risk factor for depression,[93] anxiety,[94] substance abuse,[95] and mental disorders.[96] The psychological burdens of carrying debt—including the fear of never being able to pay off debt and the stress of being contacted by collectors—lead to feelings of hopelessness, shame, and despair.[97] In addition, debt strains relationships and makes social support harder to come by.[98] Even the children of indebted adults show impaired socioemotional development.[99]

Indebtedness has also been shown to be a risk factor for suicidal ideation[100] and suicide completion.[101] A meta-analysis of several studies conducted in the United States, Hong Kong, Finland, and the United Kingdom found that people who commit suicide are nearly eight times more likely to have financial debt.[102] A study of adults in the UK found that people in debt were twice as likely to contemplate suicide.[103] Suicidal ideation is common enough that debt collectors frequently report encountering suicidal customers. A 2017 survey of debt collection organizations found that one in four frontline staff reported having spoken to at least one customer in the past year who seemed serious about committing suicide.[104]

Population, 38 Psychol. Med. 1485, 1485 (2008) ("The more debts people had, the more likely they were to have some form of mental disorder, even after adjustment for income and other sociodemographic variables."). See also K. A. McLaughlin et al., Home Foreclosure and Risk of Psychiatric Morbidity During the Recent Financial Crisis, 42 Psychol. Med. 1441, 1444 (2012) ("The association between foreclosure and symptoms of depression and anxiety was observed even after rigorous adjustment for sociodemographics, prior history of psychiatric disorder, and exposure to other financial stressors, including job loss.").

93 See, e.g., Patricia Drentea & John R. Reynolds, Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be: The Relative Importance of Debt and SES for Mental Health Among Older Adults, 24 J. Ageing & Health 673 (2012) (surveying 1463 adults in Florida and concluding that indebtedness is associated with symptoms of depression); K. A. McLaughlin et al., Home Foreclosure and Risk of Psychiatric Morbidity During the Recent Financial Crisis, 42 Psychol. Med. 1441 (2012) (surveying 1547 adults in Detroit and observing an association between home foreclosure and clinical symptoms of major depression); Craig Evan Pollack & Julia Lynch, Health Status of People Undergoing Foreclosure in the Philadelphia Region, 99 Am. J. Public Health 1833 (2009) (studying 250 Philadelphia-area residents undergoing mortgage foreclosure and finding that 36.7% met the screening criteria for major depression).

94 Patricia Drentea, Age, Debt and Anxiety, 41 J. Health & Soc. Behav. 243 (2000) (surveying 1037 Ohio adults and finding that anxiety is associated with being in default and that anxiety increases as the ratio of credit card debt to income grows); Patricia Drentea & John R. Reynolds, Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be: The Relative Importance of Debt and SES for Mental Health Among Older Adults, 24 J. Ageing & Health 673 (2012); K. A. McLaughlin et al., Home Foreclosure and Risk of Psychiatric Morbidity During the Recent Financial Crisis, 42 Psychol. Med. 1441 (2012).

95 See, e.g., R. Jenkins et al., Debt, Income, and Mental Disorder in the General Population, 38 Psychol. Med. 1485, 1490 (2008) ("The more debts people had, the more likely they were to have . . . alcohol dependency and drug dependency.").

96 See, e.g., Elizabeth Sweet, Arijit Nandi, Emma K. Adam, & Thomas W. McDade, The High Price of Debt: Household Financial Debt and its Impact on Mental and Physical Health, 91 Soc. Sci. & Med. 94, 95 (2013) ("several empirical studies have found that financial strains such as personal debt and home foreclosures are strong predictors of depression, general psychological distress, mental disorders, suicidal ideation and behavior"); Thomas Richardson, Peter Elliott, & Ronald Roberts, The Relationship Between Personal Unsecured Debt and Mental and Physical Health: A Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis, 33 Clinical Psychol. Rev. 1148, 1154 (2013) ("Odds ratios demonstrate more than a three-fold risk of a mental disorder in those with debt, or alternatively a three-fold risk of debt in those with a mental disorder."); R. Jenkins et al., Debt, Income, and Mental Disorder in the General Population, 38 Psychol. Med. 1485, 1490 (2008) ("People with six or more separate debts had a six-fold increase in mental disorder after adjustment for income."); Simon Hatcher, Debt and Deliberate Self-Poisoning, 164 British J. of Psychiatry 111 (1994) ("Psychiatrists were more likely to diagnose mental illness in those in debt.").

97 See Patricia Drentea & John R. Reynolds, Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be: The Relative Importance of Debt and SES for Mental Health Among Older Adults, 24 J. Aging & Health 673, 676 (2012) ("Indebtedness has negative mental health consequences for various reasons, possibly including the perception of not being able to get out of debt or the potential shame and anxiety resulting from defaulting on loans or declaring personal bankruptcy"). See also H. Meltzer et al., Personal Debt and Suicidal Ideation, 41 Psychol. Med. 771 (2011) ("Feelings of hopelessness partially mediated the relationship between debt and suicidal ideation.").

98 Patricia Drentea & John R. Reynolds, Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be: The Relative Importance of Debt and SES for Mental Health Among Older Adults, 24 J. Aging & Health 673, 674 (2012) (arguing that worry about debt leads to "externalizing behaviors, such as irritability and conflict with others, and a general state of anger").

99 Lawrence M. Berger & Jason N. Houle, Parental Debt and Children's Socioemotional Well-Being, 137 Pediatrics 1, (2016) ("unsecured debt is negatively associated with socioemotional development, which may reflect limited financial resources to invest in children and/or parental financial stress").

100 H. Meltzer et al., Personal Debt and Suicidal Ideation, 41 Psychol. Med. 771, 776 (2011) (finding a "strong association of debt and suicidal ideation" after controlling for various sociodemographic and lifestyle factors); J. Hintikka et al., Debt and Suicidal Behaviour in the Finnish General Population, 98 Acta Psychiatr. Scand. 493, 493 (1998) ("difficulties in repaying debts were found to be a factor independently associated with suicidal ideation").

101 Richardson, Peter Elliott, & Ronald Roberts, The Relationship Between Personal Unsecured Debt and Mental and Physical Health: A Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis, 33 Clinical Psychol. Rev. 1148, 1154 (2013) (finding that across the four autopsy studies, 31% of suicide completers had debt whereas only 5% of control group individuals had debt). Debt is also a risk factor for suicide attempts. See Simon Hatcher, Debt and Deliberate Self-Poisoning, 164 British J. of Psychiatry 111, 111 (1994) (examining British hospital records, finding that 37% of self-harmers had problem debt, and concluding that individuals with debt were "more likely to harm themselves with greater suicidal intent and, after the episode, to report more symptoms of depression and hopelessness").

102 Richardson, Peter Elliott, & Ronald Roberts, The Relationship Between Personal Unsecured Debt and Mental and Physical Health: A Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis, 33 Clinical Psychol. Rev. 1148, 1154 (2013) (pooling together several studies and concluding that suicide completers have "nearly an eight-fold risk of debt").

103 H. Meltzer et al., Personal Debt and Suicidal Ideation, 41 Psychol. Med. 771 (2011) ("Those in debt were twice as likely to think about suicide, after controlling for sociodemographic, economic, social and lifestyle factors.").

104 Chris Fitch et al., Vulnerability: A Guide for Debt Collection 54 (Pers. Fin. Res. Ctr. 2017).

A 2016 study by the Federal Reserve Board of Atlanta found that "that individuals with better credit risk and smaller amounts of delinquent debt have a lower probability of mortality."[105]

1.3.1.4 Lower-Income Consumers and Debt Collection

Low- and moderate-income consumers are disproportionately impacted by debt collection activity. Faced with juggling pressing financial needs for immediate expenses, low-income consumers may engage in a variety of debt coping strategies for bills that they cannot pay in full such as: borrowing from others, using nonprofit assistance, paying with an earned income tax credit (EITC) refund, skipping or rotating payments, paying less than the minimum, paying off a bill with a credit card or loan, ignoring or rejecting certain debts, taking on extra work, or going without.[106]

In a national survey conducted in 2019, the CFPB found that respondents from households with lower annual incomes were significantly more likely to report having difficulty paying a bill or expense in the past year than respondents from higher income households; 62.4% of respondents from households earning $20,000 or less reported having trouble paying bills compared to 17.7% of respondents from households earning more than $100,000.[107]

The Urban Institute's December 2017 Well-Being and Basic Needs Survey found that consumers with family incomes between 100% and 199% of the federal poverty level (FPL) were mostly likely to report being contacted by a debt collector while those with incomes below FPL were the second most likely to be contacted.[108] The CFPB's 2015 survey of consumer experiences with debt collection found that the consumers earning less than $20,000 were three times more likely to have been contacted about a debt in collection than consumers earning over $70,000 per year.[109]

Of all consumers who had been contacted about a debt, the CFPB's 2015 survey found that those with lower household incomes were also more likely to have been sued.[110] In addition to being more likely to be sued on a debt, low-income consumers may be less likely to have a collection lawsuit decided in their favor. For example, one study concluded that higher median income was positively correlated with the rate of case dismissals.[111]

An analysis of national payroll data found that "[t]he average number of garnishments and garnishment rate for all types of garnishment is highest for those earning between $20K and $60K with more than sixty percent of employees with a 105 Laura M. Argys, Andrew I. Friedson, and M. Melinda Pitts, Killer Debt: The Impact of Debt on Mortality, Working Paper 2016-14 (Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, Nov. 2016).

106 Laura M. Tach & Sara Sternberg Green, Robbing Peter to Pay Paul: Economic and Cultural Explanations for How Lower-Income Families Manage Debt, 61 Social Problems 1 (Feb. 2014).

107 CFPB, Insights from the Making Ends Meet Survey 5 (July 2020), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov. See also CFPB, Perceived Financial Preparedness, Saving Habits, and Financial Security (Sept. 2020), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

108 K. Steven Brown and Breno Braga, Financial Distress among American Families: Evidence from the Well-Being and Basic Needs Survey 5 (Urban Institute, February 2019) (percentages of respondents contacted by a debt collector were 19.7% for those earning <100% FPL, 23.6% for those earning 100 to 199% FPL, 16.9% for those earning 200 to 399% FPL, and 6.5% for those earning 400% FPL or more). See also Breno Braga et al., Local Conditions and Debt in Collection 14, 23 (Urban Institute, June 2016) (reporting that median household income for consumers without debt in collection was $63,938, compared to median household income of $51,438 for someone with debt in collection; noting that "[p]eople living in more economically disadvantaged census tracts—defined by higher unemployment rate and lower per capita income—have more debt in collections").

109 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt 15 (Jan. 2017) (52% of consumers with annual household incomes of less than $20,000, compared to 16% of respondents with household incomes over $70,000). See also FINRA Investor Education Foundation, Financial Capability in the United States 2016, p. 27 (July 2016) (25% of respondents to the 2015 National Financial Capability Study with incomes of less than $25,000 reported being contacted by a debt collection agency in the past year, compared to 18% of all survey respondents).

110 Id. at 28 (20% of consumers with annual household incomes of less than $20,000 and 16% of consumers with household incomes between $20,000 to $39,999 that had been contacted about a debt in collection were sued, compared to 12% of respondents with household incomes over $70,000). See also Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (analyzing debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018, to June 30, 2020, and concluding that "the rates of debt collection lawsuits filed and judgments against defendants peak in census tracts with median household incomes of around $50,000"); Kate Owen, Presentation at the University of Nebraska at Omaha on "The High Cost of Being Poor" (Legal Aid of Nebraska, Oct. 21, 2016) (reporting that 56.3% of all judgments in Douglas County, Nebraska were against individuals residing in high poverty zip codes); Peter A. Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4,400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers (Mar. 2014) ("In Maryland, debt buyers disproportionately sued in jurisdictions with larger concentrations of poor people and racial minorities. For example, Prince George's County has only 15% of the [sic] Maryland's population, yet 23% of all debt buyer complaints were filed against Prince George's County residents."); Claudia Wilner & Nasoan Sheftel-Gomes, Neighborhood Economic Development Advocacy Project, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Low Income New Yorkers 10 (2010) ("91% of people sued by debt buyers and 95% of people with default judgments entered against them live in low- or moderate-income communities."); Richard M. Hynes, Broke but Not Bankrupt: Consumer Debt Collection in State Courts, 60 Fla. L. Rev. 1, 42 (2008) (civil filings in Virginia were positively correlated with poverty).

111 Mary Spector and Ann Baddour, Collection Texas-Style: An Analysis of Consumer Collection Practices in and out of the Courts, 67 Hastings Law Journal 1427, 1458 (June 2016) ("Median income appears to have the strongest correlation with the court outcome category of nonsuited or dismissed by plaintiff. From 2014 to 2015, the correlation increased from .30 to .40. The trend in correlation points to a pattern: the rate of nonsuits or dismissals increases as precinct median income increases.").

garnishment in this income range."[112] Prior analysis of national payroll data broke this salary range down even more, concluding that individuals earning between $25,000 and $40,000 had the highest rates of garnishment.[113]

Low-income consumers may also be less likely to file for bankruptcy or to obtain bankruptcy's promise of a fresh start than middle-class consumers.[114]

1.3.1.5 Race, Ethnicity, and Debt Collection

Racial and ethnic disparities exist with respect to who is in debt. As discussed below, these disparities exist at various stages in the lifecycle of a debt. Wealth and asset gaps might explain at least some of the observed disparities in debt collection.[115]

Who Is Behind on a Bill: In a national survey conducted in 2019, the CFPB found that Hispanic and African-American respondents were more likely to report having difficulty paying a bill or expense in the past year than non-Hispanic white or other respondents.[116] The CFPB notes that, "[t]he difference in the estimates between African American's and other groups persists even when controlling for income, age, gender, education, and rural status"[117] but that "Hispanics were somewhat more likely to report having difficulty paying a bill or an expense, but the difference is explained by other characteristics such as income and age."[118]

Data from the Federal Reserve shows that Black and Hispanic survey respondents in 2019 were less likely to be able to fully pay current month's bills than white respondents.[119] While those with more education were less likely to report that they could not fully pay the current month's bills, disparities persisted for each level of education.[120]

Who Files Debt Collection Complaints: Research by the FTC analyzing who files complaints found that people living in areas with a 50% or larger Black population have a higher rate of debt collection complaints as compared to people living in areas where the Black population is less than 5%.[121] In contrast, the rate for debt collection complaints was lower in communities with a 75% or larger Hispanic population as compared to communities with a Hispanic population of 5% or less.[122] Analyzing consumer complaints from 2020, the CFPB has also found higher complaint volumes from consumers living in predominantly minority counties.[123]

Who Has Debt Reported on a Credit Report: The Urban Institute's analysis of credit reporting data from December 2020 found that 39% of individuals with a credit report living in communities of color had one or more debts in collection on their credit report, compared to 24% of individual with a credit report living in white communities.[124] The data also shows disparities for specific types of debt, including: auto,[125] credit card,[126] medical,[127] and student 112 ADP Research Institute, The U.S. Wage Garnishment Landscape: Through the Lens of the Employer (2017).

113 ADP Research Institute, Garnishment The Untold Story (2014) (study of payroll data found the highest rates of garnishment (10%) among those earning between $25,000 and $40,000 with an 8.4% garnishment rate for those earning $15,000 to $24,999).

114 See, e.g., Paul Kiel and Hannah Fresques, Data Analysis: Bankruptcy and Race in America, ProPublica, Sept. 27, 2017, at 11 (reporting that the discharge rate in Chapter 13 bankruptcies clearly rises with debtors' income for both black and white zip codes); Richard M. Hynes, Broke but Not Bankrupt: Consumer Debt Collection in State Courts, 60 Fla. L. Rev. 1 (2008) ("This Article finds that few civil defendants file for bankruptcy, that civil litigation is concentrated in cities and counties with lower socio-economic characteristics, and that civil defendants in Virginia have a significantly lower rate of homeownership than the general population. In other words, the bankruptcy statistics exclude many defaulting and insolvent consumers, and these consumers may be disproportionately drawn from the more disadvantaged segments of society.").

115 See LaVoice, Jessica and Vamossy, Domonkos F., Racial Disparities in Debt Collection 26 (September 2019), available at https://ssrn.com ("a wealth gap of this size [$35,000 wealth gap not driven by housing equity] would explain almost all of our most conservative estimate of the judgment gap across black and non-black communities"); Breno Braga, et al., Urban Institute, Local Conditions and Debt in Collection, 24 (June 2016) (noting that the racial disparities identified in the study were consistent with literature documenting a racial wealth gap in the United States); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015, at 19 (noting that residents of majority Black census tracts were sued on debts that were, on average, smaller in size than residents of white census tracts and that this might be evidence of the impact of the wealth gap on debt collection, since white consumers might be able to pay small debts more readily than black consumers).

116 CFPB, Insights from the Making Ends Meet Survey 5 (July 2020) (64.9% of Black or African-American respondents, 47.4% of Hispanic respondents, 35% of non-Hispanic white respondents, and 33% of other respondents reported difficulty paying a bill or expense in the past year), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

117 Id. at 6

118 Id. at 6, n.9. See also id. at 7.

119 Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Report on the Economic Well-Being of U.S. Households in 2019, Fig. 16 (May 2020).

120 Id.

121 Devesh Raval, FTC, Which Communities Complain to Policymakers? Evidence from Consumer Sentinel 20 (July 2018), available at www.ftc.gov.

122 Id at 22.

123 CFPB, Complaint Bulletin: County-level demographic overview of consumer complaints (Apr. 2021).

124 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 31, 2021) ("White communities and communities of color are based on zip codes where most residents are white (at least 60 percent of the population is white) or most residents are people of color (at least 60 percent of the population is of color)."), available at https://apps.urban.org. See also Breno Braga et al., Local Conditions and Debt in Collection 2, 14 (Urban Institute, June 2016) (debt in collection was more prevalent in areas with more African Americans and Latinos and less prevalent in areas with more non-Hispanic whites and Asians).

125 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 2021) (listing the auto/retail loan delinquency rate as 3% in white communities versus 6% in communities of color), available at https://apps.urban.org.

126 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 2021) (listing the credit card delinquency rate as 3% in white communities versus 5% in communities of color), available at https://apps.urban.org.

127 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 2021) (listing the share with medical debt

loan[128] debts. In addition to national data, the Urban Institute's research includes information at the state and county level, which also shows evidence of racial disparities.[129] Other research analyzing credit reporting data has examined city-level data about the prevalence of debt collection.[130]

Who Is Contacted by a Collector: Racial and ethnic disparities are also evident in data about who is contacted about a debt. The CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection found that non-white[131] and Hispanic[132] respondents were more likely to report being contacted about a debt in collection than white and non-Hispanic respondents. These differences between white and non-white respondent contact rates lessened, but did not disappear, when controlling for income.[133]

Urban Institute tabulations of data from the December 2017 Well-Being and Basic Needs Survey found that the rate of contact by debt collectors was more than twice as high for non-Hispanic Blacks as it was for non-Hispanic whites.[134] Another nationally representative survey of households with credit card debt found that 71% of African-American middle-income households were called by bill collectors, compared to 50% of white middle-income households, despite similar rates of default and late payments.[135]

Who Is Sued on a Debt: Of those contacted about a debt, the CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection found that similar percentages reported having been sued.[136] However, as noted above, the survey also found that non-white and Hispanic respondents were more likely to have been contacted about a debt.

Other studies have found evidence of racial and ethnic disparities in the filing of collection lawsuits[137] and the quality in collections as 13% in white communities versus 17% in communities of color), available at https://apps urban.org. See also Michael Karpman and Kyle J. Caswell, Urban Institute, Past-Due Medical Debt among Nonelderly Adults, 2012–2015, 7–8 (Mar. 2017) (30.9% of Black, non-Hispanic adults ages 18–64 reported past-due medical debt, compared to 23.6% of Hispanic respondents, 23.4% of white, non-Hispanic respondents, and 16.6% of "other race, non-Hispanic" in 2015); Jacqueline C. Wiltshire, Medical Debt and Related Financial Consequences Among Older African American and White Adults, Am. J. of Pub. Health (Apr. 14, 2016) (reporting that older African Americans had 2.6 times higher odds of having medical debt than did older whites, and older African Americans were more likely to be contacted by a collection agency and borrow money because of medical debt, while older whites were more likely to use savings).

128 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 2021) (listing the share of student loan holders with student loan debt in default as 9% for white communities and 14% for communities of color), available at https://apps.urban.org. See also AAUW, Deeper in Debt: Women and Student Loans 19 (May 2017) (showing that black women had the highest mean cumulative undergraduate debts in 2011–2012, followed by Black men, Hispanic men, Hispanic women, white women, white men, Asian women, and Asian men), available at https://apps.urban.org; Ben Miller, New Federal Data Shows a Student Loan Crisis for African American Borrowers (Center for American Progress, Oct. 16, 2017) (for students entering college in 2003–2004, the median percentage of original student loan balance owed 12 years after college entry was 113% for African Americans, 83% for Latinos, and 65% for whites).

129 Breno Braga, et al., Debt in America: An Interactive Map (Urban Institute, last updated Mar. 2021), available at https://apps.urban.org.

130 Compare Anmol Chaddha, Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, The Concentration of Financial Disadvantage: Debt Conditions and Credit Report Data in Massachusetts Cities and Boston Neighborhoods 10, 12 (June 2018) (showing maps of Boston neighborhoods with the percent with at least one account 60+ days past due and percent with third party debt collections), available at https://www.bostonfed.org, with Boston Planning & Development Agency Research Division, Neighborhood Profiles (April 2019) (neighborhood profiles report data about race in each neighborhood), available at www.boston plans.org.

131 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt, 17 n.17, 18 (Jan. 2017) (44% of non-white respondents were contacted about a debt in collection, compared to 29% of white respondents; "[t]he non-white category includes individuals who self-identified alone or in combination as: Black or African American; American Indian or Alaska Native; Asian; or Native Hawaiian or other Pacific Islander"). See also FINRA Investor Education Foundation, Financial Capability in the United States 2016, p. 27 (July 2016) (31% of African American respondents to the 2015 National Financial Capability Study reported being contacted by a debt collection agency in the past year, compared to 18% of all survey respondents).

132 Id. at 18 (39% of Hispanic respondents were contacted about a debt in collection, compared to 31% of non-Hispanic respondents). See also Renato Rocha, Three Key Findings on Hispanics with Debt in Collection: Results from CFPB's Recent Survey (UnidosUS, Feb. 8 2017), available at http://blog.unidosus.org.

133 Id. at 18 n.18. ("the estimated difference for whites compared with non-whites narrows by roughly one-quarter when comparing consumers with similar incomes in a regression framework"; no regression analysis was reported for Hispanic and non-Hispanic respondents).

134 Email from Breno Braga, Urban Institute, to April Kuehnhoff, National Consumer Law Center (Mar. 5, 2019) (contact rate was 26.5% for non-Hispanic Blacks and 12.4% for non-Hispanic whites. While not statistically significant, the contact rate was 14% for Hispanics and 8.9% for non-Hispanics of other races). For more information about the source of the data see, Michael Karpman, et al., The Well Being and Basic Needs Survey: A New Data Source for Monitoring the Health and Well-Being of Individuals and Families (Urban Institute, Aug. 28, 2018).

135 Catherine Ruetschlin & Dedrick Asante-Muhammad, Demos and NAACP, The Challenge of Credit Card Debt for the African American Middle Class (Dec. 2013), available at www.demos.org.

136 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt, 28 (Jan. 2017) (14% of non-white consumers who were contacted about a debt reported being sued, compared to 16% of white consumers and 15% of Hispanic and non-Hispanic consumers of other races, who were contacted about a debt reported being sued).

137 Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (analyzing debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020 and concluding that the odds of being sued for a debt in tracts where the majority of residents are Black or Latino is 1.6 times higher than the odds for tracts where the majority of residents are white); Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (estimating that 49% of defendants in debt collection lawsuits filed between January 2016 and April 2020 were Black even though only 41% of Philadelphia households are Black), available at https://clsphila.org; Coalition for a Humane Hopkins, et al. Taking Neighbors to Court: Johns Hopkins Hospital Medical Debt Lawsuits (May 2019) ("Demographic data, including data on race, of claims filed in those lawsuits.[138] One study in Philadelphia found that the average amount sought in claims filed against Black and Hispanic defendants were lower than the average in claims filed against white and Asian defendants.[139]

Who Has Judgments Entered Against Them in Collection Lawsuits: Studies have highlighted racial disparities regarding which consumers are likely to have judgments[140] or default judgments[141] entered against them in collection lawsuits.

Additionally, one study has found evidence that there are racial disparities in who is subject to wage garnishment post-judgment. In St. Louis, holding income constant, defendants living in majority Black census tracks were twenty percent more likely to be subject to garnishment proceedings after obtaining a judgment.[142]

Who Successfully Discharges Debt in Bankruptcy: Racial disparities are also evident in data about who is able to successfully discharge debt in bankruptcy. A study of national bankruptcy data found that "for debtors living in black areas, the odds of having a case dismissed [failing to achieve a bankruptcy discharge] were about twice as high as those of debtors living in white areas, controlling for the court district where the case was filed, income, and other financial characteristics of the debtor."[143]

1.3.1.6 Older Americans and Debt Collection

Among families headed by older Americans, the percentage who are in debt has increased in recent years.[144] Data from the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System showed that more than half of families with a reference person seventy-five or older were in debt in 2019, compared to less than a quarter of similar families in 1989.[145] Indebtedness of households with individuals age 65–74 has also increased.[146]

Rates of indebtedness have increased even more dramatically for certain types of debt. For example, the percentage of consumers age sixty and older with student loan debt was available in more than 100 of the reviewed case files, revealing that 86% of defendants sued by Johns Hopkins Hospital in our sample set are African American."); Peter A. Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4,400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers (Mar. 2014) ("In Maryland, debt buyers disproportionately sued in jurisdictions with larger concentrations of poor people and racial minorities. For example, Prince George's County has only 15% of the [sic] Maryland's population, yet 23% of all debt buyer complaints were filed against Prince George's County residents."); Richard M. Hynes, Broke But Not Bankrupt: Consumer Debt Collection in State Courts, 60 Fla. L. Rev. 1, 3 (2008) (study of civil litigation in Virginia concluded that "civil litigation is disproportionately concentrated in cities and counties with lower median income and homeownership rates; higher incidences of poverty and crime; and higher concentrations of relatively young and minority residents").

138 The Legal Aid Society, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Lower-Income New Yorkers (May 2010) (reporting that, in a sample of 451 legal hotline calls, 66% of debt collection cases against Black and Latino clients were "clearly meritless," as compared to 35% of all cases), available at www.neweconomynyc.org.

139 Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (average amounts claimed were: Asian defendants—$3264; white defendants—$3143; Black defendants—$2822; and Hispanic defendants—$2773), available at https://clsphila.org.

140 Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (analyzing debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020 and concluding that the odds of a person having a debt collection judgment against them is 1.6 times higher in census tracts where the majority of residents are Black than the odds in tracts where the majority of residents are white and 1.8 times higher in census tracts where the majority of residents are Latino); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (analysis of collection actions in St. Louis, Chicago, and Newark found that the risk of judgment was twice as high in majority Black census tracts compared to majority white census tracts, holding income constant). See also LaVoice, Jessica and Vamossy, Domonkos F., Racial Disparities in Debt Collection 26 (Sept. 2019) (researchers analyzing Waldman & Kiel's St. Louis data concluded that "there are 40% more debt collection judgments in majority black neighborhoods compared to non-black neighborhoods even after controlling for differences in incomes and credit scores"), available at https://ssrn.com.

141 Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) ("cases involving Black defendants were somewhat more likely to end in a default—66% compared with 64% of cases with a White defendant"), available at https://clsphila.org; Mary Spector and Ann Baddour, Collection Texas-Style: An Analysis of Consumer Collection Practices in and out of the Courts, 67 Hastings Law Journal 1427, 1458 (June 2016) (study in Texas also indicated "a somewhat higher likelihood of default judgments in precincts with a higher non-White population"); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 ("Data from St. Louis indicated that suits against residents of majority black census tracts were more likely to result in default judgments or consent judgments"); Susan Shin & Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York: How the Industry Violates Due Process and Perpetuates Economic Inequality (New Economy Project, June 2013) (New York zip codes with highest concentration of default judgments include predominately non-white neighborhoods in Albany and Buffalo and middle income Black communities in Queens); The Legal Aid Society, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Lower-Income New Yorkers (May 2010) (in a study of 457,322 lawsuits filed by debt buyers in New York City, 56% of default judgments were entered against consumers living in predominantly Black or Latino neighborhoods).

142 Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (wage garnishment data was only available for St. Louis).

143 Paul Kiel and Hannah Fresques, Data Analysis: Bankruptcy and Race in America, ProPublica, Sept. 27, 2017, at 11.

144 See, e.g., United States Government Accountability Office, Retirement Security: Debt Increased for Older Americans over Time, But the Implications Vary by Debt Type (Apr. 2021).

145 Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Survey of Consumer Finances, 1989–2019: Debt by age of reference person (Sept. 28, 2020) (51.4% of households with a reference person 75 or older were in debt in 2019 compared to 21% in 1989), available at https://www.federalreserve.gov.

146 Id. (70% in 2019 compared to 49.7% in 1989).

quadrupled between 2005 and 2015.[147] Rates of delinquent and defaulted student loans have also increased among older borrowers[148] More older Americans also have mortgage debt.[149]

In addition to an increase in the percentage of older Americans who are in debt, the amount of indebtedness has also increased. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that, from 2003 to 2015, the amount of real per capita debt at age sixty-five increased over eight-fold (886%) for student loans, 47% for debt secured by a home, and 29% for auto loans, while staying the same for credit card debt.[150]

Researchers have also found dramatic increases in the percent of bankruptcy filers who are older Americans—reporting a 392.6% increase in the percent of filers that are age 65–74 from 1991 to 2016 and a 996.9% increase in the percent of filers that are 75 or older in the same period.[151]

Despite these increases, the CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection found that older Americans were still less likely to report being contacted about a debt in collection than younger Americans.[152] In that survey, 19% of survey respondents 62 or older reported being contacted by a debt collector or creditor in the prior year, significantly fewer than the 42% of 35-49 year old respondents.[153]

A separate CFPB survey found that respondents 62 or older were less likely to report having difficulty paying for a bill or expense in the past twelve months than younger respondents.[154]

Debt collection is a common subject for complaints from older consumers to the CFPB.[155] In the CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection, 59% of those age sixty-two or older who were contacted about a debt cited an issue with a debt in collection, 40% disputed a debt, and 20% had been sued on a debt.[156]

Older Americans may acquire debt for different reasons or use different repayment strategies than younger Americans. For example, one study found that consumers fifty or older were more likely to have credit card debt related to car repair, home repairs, or because they helped pay the debts of relatives.[157] Another study reported that in order to pay their debts, seniors may engage in debt coping strategies such as forgoing home or car repairs, cutting pills, missing medical appointments, or skipping meals.[158]

Older Americans may also be more likely to be subject to certain collection tactics, such as efforts to collect the debt of a deceased family member[159] or attempts to get seniors to make debt payments from exempt government benefits.

Older adults with Alzheimer or other forms of dementia may be more likely to miss payments or suffer negative financial consequences even years before a formal diagnosis.[160]

147 CFPB, Snapshot of Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt 4 (Jan. 2017). See also Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Survey of Consumer Finances, 1989–2019: Education installment loans by age of reference person (Sept. 28, 2020) (showing increase in rate of indebtedness from 0.9% in 1989 to 4.2% in 2019 for households with a reference person age 65–74 and from 0% to 1.8% for households with a reference person age 75 or older), available at https://www.federalreserve.gov; CFPB, Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt by State (Aug. 2017).

148 CFPB, Snapshot of Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt, 11 (Jan. 2017) ("The proportion of delinquent student loan debt held by borrowers age 60 and older increased from 7.4% to 12.5% from 2005 to 2012. Nearly 40% of federal student loan borrowers age 65 and older are in default.").

149 Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Survey of Consumer Finances, 1989–2019: Education installment loans by age of reference person (Sept. 28, 2020) (showing increase in rate of indebtedness from 20.7% in 1989 to 33.2% in 2019 for households with a reference person age 65–74 and from 5.8% to 22.6% for households with a reference person age 75 or older), available at https://www.federalreserve.gov; CFPB, Snapshot of Older Consumer and Mortgage Debt (May 2014) (increasing percentage of older Americans owe a mortgage on their home).

150 Meta Brown, The Graying of American Debt (Fed. Reserve Bank of N.Y., Feb. 12, 2016). See also CFPB, Snapshot of Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt, 6 (Jan. 2017) ("average amount of student loan debt owed by borrowers age 60 and older roughly doubled from 2005 to 2015, increasing from $12,100 to $23,500").

151 Thorne, Deborah and Foohey, Pamela and Lawless, Robert M. and Porter, Katherine M., Graying of U.S. Bankruptcy: Fallout from Life in a Risk Society (Aug. 5, 2018). Indiana Legal Studies Research Paper No. 406, available at https://ssrn.com.

152 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt (Jan. 2017), available at www.cfpb.gov. See also Breno Braga, et al., Local Conditions and Debt in Collections (Urban Institute, June 2016) ("People age 65 and older are the least likely to have debt in collections and have the lowest amounts of debt in collections.").

153 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt 17 (Jan. 2017).

154 CFPB, Insights from the Making Ends Meet Survey 5 (July 2020) (25.1% of respondents 62 or older reported difficulty, as compared to 47% of respondents under 40 and 44.3% of respondents between 40 and 61), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

155 CFPB, Monthly Complaint Report, Vol. 23 (May 2017) (showing 26,452 total complaints about mortgages and 25,561 total complaints about debt collection filed by those 62 or older). See also Gideon Wissman and Ed Mierzwinski, Older Consumers in the Financial Marketplace: An Analysis of Complaints and Results from the CFPB (U.S. PIRG Education Fund, Oct. 2017); CFPB, A snapshot of debt collection complaints submitted by older consumers (Nov. 2014).

156 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt 25 (Jan. 2017).

157 Amy Traud, Demos, In the Red: Older Americans and Credit Card Debt, AARP Public Policy Institute (Jan. 2013), available at www.aarp.org.

158 Nat'l of Council on Aging, Older Adults and Debt: Trends, Trade-offs, and Tools to Help (2015), available at https://www.ncoa.org.

159 See CFPB, A snapshot of debt collection complaints submitted by older consumers (Nov. 2014). See also FTC, Debts and Deceased Relatives (July 2011), available at https://www.consumer.ftc.gov.

160 Lauren Hersch Nicholas, et al., Financial Presentation of Alzheimer Disease and Related Dementias, JAMA Internal Medicine (Nov. 30, 2020) (Medicare beneficiaries that developed dementia "were at significantly higher risk of payment delinquency compared with similar beneficiaries who never developed [dementia] beginning 6 years prior to diagnosis").

1.3.1.7 Servicemembers, Veterans, and Debt Collection

Consumer debt can negatively impact the careers of military personnel and some debt collectors attempt to use this to leverage payments from servicemembers.[161] The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau has highlighted a variety of abusive debt collection practices targeting members of the military, such as:

- Contacting the servicemember's military chain of command as a way to coerce payment;
- Putting a clause in the loan contract that the servicemember must grant the debt collector the right to contact the chain of command;
- Threatening punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, threatening to have the servicemember reduced in rank, or threatening to have the servicemember's security clearance revoked; and
- Contacting a spouse after deployment of the servicemember and pressuring the spouse to repay right away without the benefit of communicating with the servicemember, or, in one particularly appalling instance, demanding that the widow of a servicemember killed in combat pay them immediately from the combat death gratuity.[162]

Other issues unique to servicemembers with debts in collection including the short turnaround time (usually sixty days) in which to address debts before risking problems with security clearance and the challenges that deployments present to repaying a debt.[163] The CFPB reports that "an average of 4,700 to 8,000 servicemembers are separated each year from the military for financial issues (e.g. losing their security clearance due to unpaid debts)."[164]

Debt collection was the second most common source of servicemember complaints to the CFPB in 2020.[165] Servicemembers were more likely to complain about debt collection than all consumers filing complaints at the CFPB.[166]

In 2015, 13% of servicemember complaints to the CFPB about debt collection focused on medical debt, with complaints originating primarily from veterans.[167] Veterans often believed that their health care was covered by VA health insurance, Medicare, or Medicaid and were surprised to later receive debt collection calls.[168]

In 2019, the CFPB estimated that servicemembers owed a total of more than 2.9 billion dollars in student debt.[169] Servicemembers may also face challenges accessing protections such as interest rate caps or military deferments for student loans.[170]

Servicemembers often experience extreme stress as a result of debts and debt collection. In a 2013 study, financial stress was found to be the second leading cause of suicide among fifty-seven Army Reserve suicides.[171]

A 2020 study by the CFPB also highlighted the problems with debt experienced by former servicemembers, reporting that "a sizeable fraction of young enlisted servicemembers go delinquent on debt or have severe derogatory marks appear on their credit record around the time they leave active duty" and that problems were most likely to arise among servicemembers who left before the end of their first contract for military service.[172]

1.3.1.8 Debt Collection and Consumers with Limited English Proficiency

In 2019, more than 25 million individuals, 8.2% of the U.S. population over age 5 spoke English less than "very well"[173] and are considered to have Limited English Proficiency (LEP).[174] LEP individuals use financial products and services, but those who are not proficient in English have greater difficulty navigating the marketplace and resolving challenges when they arise. Borrowers facing delinquency and default too often face an English-only system, creating additional barriers to responding to debt collection efforts and overcoming financial distress.

161 Holly Petraeus, CFPB, Are unpaid debts a military career-killer? (Jan. 9, 2015).

162 Written Testimony of Holly Petraeus before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs (June 26, 2012). See also Consent Order, In the Matter of Navy Federal Credit Union (Oct. 11, 2016); CFPB, Servicemembers 2015: A Year in Review (Mar. 2016); Consent Order, In the Matter of Security National Automotive Acceptance Company (Oct. 28, 2015).

163 FTC, A Closer Look at the Military Consumer Financial Workshop (Feb. 2018).

164 CFPB, Office of Servicemember Affairs Annual Report 7 (Jan. 2019).

165 CFPB, Office of Servicemember Affairs Annual Report (May 2021) (22% of complaints submitted by servicemembers to the CFPB).

166 Id. (22% of complaints by servicemembers compared to 15% of complaints by non-servicemembers. See also CFPB, 50 State Snapshot of Servicemember Complaints: A Nationwide Look at Complaints (Oct. 2017) (39% of complaints by servicemembers, veterans, and their families are about debt collection, compared to 26% of complaints from non-servicemembers); CFPB, The Office of Servicemember Affairs: Charting our course through the military lifecycle (May 2017) ("As of April 1 2017, the CFPB handled approximately 31,500 debt collection complaints from military consumers, which is 42% percent of the entire servicemember complaint population compared to debt collection complaints from the entire consumer population totaling 27% of the entire consumer complaint population.").

167 CFPB, Servicemembers 2015: A Year in Review 9 (Mar. 2016).

168 Id.

169 CFPB, Office of Servicemember Affairs Annual Report, 15 (Jan. 2019).

170 Id., citing CFPB, Overseas & Underserved: Student loan servicing and the cost to our men and women in uniform (July 2015).

171 Timothy L. Hale, Searching for Answers: A Panel Review of Army Reserve Suicides, Double Eagle 6 (Sept. 2014) (study examined primary stressors leading to suicide).

172 CFPB, Debt and Delinquency After Military Service: A Study of the Credit Records of Young Veterans in the First Year After Separation (Nov. 2020), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

173 U.S. Census Bureau, 2019 American Community Survey 1-Year Estimates, American Community Survey tbl. S1601 (accessed Oct. 1, 2020), available at https://data.census.gov.

174 U.S. Census Bureau, 2010–2014 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates, American Community Survey Table B16001 (U.S. Census Bureau).

In 2019, the New York Department of Consumer Affairs conducted a survey of debt collectors licensed to collect debts in New York City regarding language translation services they provide.[175] The survey found that out of 517 collectors surveyed, 54% did not provide any services in languages other than English.[176] In contrast, the CFPB in a 2021 report about large credit card issuers found that "[a]ll surveyed credit card issuers had the capacity, within their collections function, to accommodate consumers with Limited English Proficiency or consumers who express the desire to communicate in a language other than English."[177]

New York's Department of Consumer Affairs also reported that 46% provided at least one service in a non-English language—including multilingual customer representatives, a translation line for telephone communications, or translated collection letters.[178] However, only 20% of debt collectors surveyed provided translated collection letters.[179]

The CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection showed that only 79% of consumers contacted about a debt in collection were able to communicate in their preferred language.[180] Given that a large majority of the respondents likely were native English speakers, the fact that over 20% of those surveyed were unable to communicate with a debt collector in their preferred language is significant.[181]

The joint FTC-CFPB Debt Collection and the Latino Community Roundtable in October 2014 highlighted debt collection challenges in LEP communities.[182] Participants reported that LEP debtors tend to be less likely to challenge any representations made by a debt collector, including the amount owed.[183] In addition, translation issues result in problems, such as LEP debtors believing that a caller from a "debt collection agency" is in fact from a government agency. Even when translated documents are provided, they may only be partially translated, failing to provide meaningful access while also concealing key facts about the situation.[184] CFPB,[185] FTC,[186] and Department of Justice[187] enforcement actions have also highlighted abusive debt collection practices targeting LEP consumers.

In 2013, about twenty-five percent of LEP individuals lived in households with an annual income below the official federal poverty line –nearly twice as high as the share of English-proficient persons.[188] Because LEP populations tend to experience poverty at much greater rates, they also are likely to face greater challenges paying their debts as discussed in § 1.3.1.4, supra.

1.3.2 Consumer Attorneys

The "Find an Attorney" feature on the National Association of Consumer Advocates' website[189] lists hundreds of lawyers with "debt collection" as one of their practice areas. The "debt collection" practice area includes both attorneys who specialize in defending consumers who have been sued in a collection action and those who sue debt collectors for violations of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and other state and federal consumer protection statutes.

Lawyers new to this practice area may wish to consult Chapter 2, infra, which discusses preparation of an FDCPA case. Section 1.1.3, supra, discusses trainings and continuing legal education and § 1.1.4, supra, discusses listserv resources.

1.3.3 Original Creditors

Original creditors are entities that provide extensions of credit such as banks, credit unions, student loan lenders, 175 N.Y.C. Dep't of Consumer Affairs, Lost in Translation: Findings from Examination of Language Access by Debt Collectors (Sept. 2019).

176 Id.

177 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 135 (Sept. 2021).

178 N.Y.C. Dep't of Consumer Affairs, Lost in Translation: Findings from Examination of Language Access by Debt Collectors (Sept. 2019).

179 Id.

180 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt (Jan. 2017), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov.

181 The CFPB did not release the data for responses to the question "Is English your preferred language?" The CFPB noted that the 79% who communicated in their preferred language was lower than expected, although the CFPB believed that some respondents might have misunderstood the question. See id. at 47 n.34.

182 A video of the roundtable (as well as a Spanish language transcript) is available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

183 Id.

184 Id.

185 CFPB, Consent Order, In the Matter of American Express Centurion Bank and American Express Bank, FSB (Aug. 23, 2017) (respondents did not make the same collection offers available to customers with Spanish language preferences that they did to consumers who did not express a Spanish language preference).

186 FTC v. Centro Natural Corp., No. 14-23879-CIV (S.D. Fl. Oct. 20, 2014) ($1.5 million judgment against an abusive debt collection operation that targeted Spanish and English speakers, along with a complete ban on debt collection activity and other injunctive relief), complaint available at https://www.ftc.gov; FTC v. Rincon Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., No. 5:11-cv-01623-VAP-SP (C.D. Cal. Mar. 26, 2014) (monetary judgment of over $23 million against an abusive debt collection operation that targeted Spanish and English speakers, along with a complete ban on debt collection activity and other injunctive relief), complaint available at https://www.ftc.gov; FTC v. RTB Enterprises, Inc., No. 4:14-cv-01691 (S.D. Tex. June 19, 2014) (monetary judgment of $4 million against abusive Texas-based debt collector that targeted Spanish and English speakers), complaint available at https://www.ftc.gov.

187 Dept. of Justice, Three Peruvian Men Sentenced To Significant Terms Of Incarceration For Overseeing Call Centers That Threatened And Defrauded Spanish-Speaking U.S. Consumers (Sept. 3, 2020) (scheme targeted Spanish speakers with lies and threats to collect money not owed), available at https://www.justice.gov; Dept. of Justice, California Resident Pleads Guilty to Telemarketing Conspiracy to Defraud U.S. Consumers (Nov. 2019) (same), available at https://www.justice.gov; Dept. of Justice, Four Peruvians Sentenced For Overseeing Spanish-Speaking Call Centers That Threatened and Extorted U.S. Consumers (Sept. 4, 2019) (same), available at https://www.justice.gov.

188 Jie Zong and Jeanne Batalova, The Limited English Proficient Population in the United States, Migration Policy Institute (July 8, 2015), available at www.migrationpolicy.org.

189 www.consumeradvocates.org.

auto lenders, and payday lenders. Additionally, some original creditors provide goods or services on credit, such as utility companies, medical providers, and cell phone companies.

Original creditors frequently employ people in-house to collect on their delinquent accounts. In a survey of credit card issuers conducted by the CFPB, all respondents conducted at least some collection activity in-house.[190]

While original creditors collecting their own debts are not typically covered under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act,[191] the CFPB has made clear that its authority to prohibit unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices (UDAAPs) under the Dodd Frank Act extends to original creditors.[192] Moreover, original creditors collecting their own debts may be covered under state laws.[193]

1.3.4 Debt Buyers

1.3.4.1 Generally

Debt buyers are companies that purchase debts from original creditors, intermediaries, or other debt buyers. Debts are purchased for pennies on the dollar. The debt buyer may either try to collect the debts themselves, place them for collection with debt collectors, or sell the debts to other debt buyers.

In 2019, the CFPB estimated that there were 330 debt buyers in the United States, noting that many debt buyers also collect consumer debts owed to other owners.[194]

This sections below provide additional data about debt buyers. Their collection practices are discussed in § 1.4.7, infra.

1.3.4.2 Amount and Types of Debt Sold in the United States

Large scale debt buying began after the savings and loan crisis in the late 1980s and early 1990s.[195] Data from 1993 to 2013 from The Nilson Report (see table below) shows the dramatic growth in sales of consumer debt, which peaked in 2005. Unfortunately, there is no more recent data available from the Nilson Report.

Sales of Consumer Debt in Default 1993-2013 (in $ Billions, Face Value)*

Year	All Debt	Credit Card Debt
1993	6.0	0.7
1994	9.0	1.9
1995	12.1	4.4
1996	20.2	16.1
1997	22.9	19.5
1998	28.0	22.7
1999	39.1	30.3
2000	37.8	27.6
2001	53.8	37.1
2002	70.8	46.1
2003	67.8	57.3
2004	77.2	63.0
2005	127.8	88.4
2006	59.1	52.6
2007	91.1	68.2
2008	72.3	55.5
2009	59.7	44.2
2010	53.7	40.3
2011	64.0	51.5
2012	55.8	35.3
2013	98.0	18.9

* The Nilson Report: Issues 792 (July 2003); 806 (Mar. 2004); 835 (June 2005); 857 (May 2006); 880 (May 2007); 901 (April 2008); 921 (March 2009); 946 (Apr. 2010); 969 (Apr. 2011); 992 (Apr. 2012); 1019 (June 2013); 1041 (May 2014).

While the CFPB has not reported data about the total volume of debt sales, it has reported that the number of collection tradelines reported by debt buyers to credit bureaus was fifty percent higher in 2018 than in 2004, but down significantly from a peak in 2009.[196]

Reports about the credit card industry offer insight about the volume of credit card debt being sold. According to a CFPB survey of large credit card issuers, in 2019 and 2020, survey respondents sold "roughly 5 percent of total post-charge-off inventory" to debt buyers.[197] That is down from 12% of charged off debt in 2017 and 2018,[198] approximately 28% of charged off debt in 2015 and 2016,[199] and approximately 15% in 2014.[200]

CFPB reports also offer insights into the types of debts being collected by debt buyers. In a 2019 report, the CFPB

190 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 131 (Sept. 2021).

191 But see § 4.7.4, infra (discussing coverage for creditors using false names).

192 CFPB, Bulletin 2013-7: Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts (July 10, 2013). See also Appx. B.3.2, infra.

193 See § 16.2.5 (coverage under state debt collection laws), § 16.3 (coverage under state UDAP laws), infra.

194 See also CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Proposed Rule, 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23393 (May 21, 2019).

195 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry 12 (Jan. 2013), citing Rozanne M. Andersen & Andrew M. Beato, ACA Int'l, Comments of ACA International Regarding the Debt Collection Workshop 29 (June 6, 2007).

196 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

197 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 150 (Sept. 2021).

198 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 162 (Aug. 2019).

199 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 327 (Dec. 2017).

200 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 251 (Dec. 2015).

breaks down collection tradelines filed by debt buyers as follows: banking (37%), retail (28%), and financial (28%).[201] A 2017 CFPB study of three online debt marketplaces found that the breakdown of accounts being sold was payday loans (46%), credit card accounts (27%), and the remainder included medical debts, auto deficiencies, telecom, utility, and retail debts.[202]

A 2013 FTC study analyzed information about more than 5000 portfolios of debt containing more than ninety million accounts with a face value of almost $143 billion that had been purchased by nine debt buyers between 2006 and 2009.[203] This study found that the three most common types of accounts purchased were credit cards (45%), medical (28%), and telecom (15%).[204]

Testimony from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) in 2013 indicated that the nineteen largest banks sold about $37 billion a year in debt to debt buyers.[205] The OCC also found that the vast majority of debt sold by the nation's nineteen largest banks was credit card debt, but other debt sold included automobile, home equity, mortgage, and student loans.[206] It also reported that other non-bank entities sell different types of debt, such as cell phone, utilities, and medical debt.[207]

1.3.4.3 Average Price of Debt

Debt buyers purchase debt for pennies on the dollar, but the exact amount depends on a variety of factors such as the type of debt, the age of the debt, the number of times that it was previously placed for collection, and the amount of debt for sale in the market at that time.

A few government agencies have reported about the average price of debt sold. In 2013, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency reported to Congress that charged-off debt was selling for between five and ten cents on the dollar for most types of debt sold.[208] That same year, in a report based on the review of 3400 debt portfolios containing a variety of debts that were purchased by debt buyers from July 1, 2006 to June 2, 2009, the Federal Trade Commission found that the average price of debt in those portfolios was four cents on the dollar.[209]

Data filed by publicly traded debt buyers like Encore Capital Group, Inc. and PRA Group Inc. also provide insight into the average price of debts purchased by debt buyers. Encore reported that the average purchase price was 11.3% of face value for 2020.[210] PRA reported an average purchase price of 13.5% of face value in 2020.[211]

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau surveys credit card issuers and reports on the average price of credit card debt sold in its credit card market report every two years. The overall average price of credit card debt decreased from 12% to 11% between 2019 and 2020.[212] In 2018, the overall average price of credit card debt sold was 12% of face value,[213] approximately the same as the average price of debt sold in 2015 and 2016,[214] and higher than average prices of approximately 11% in 2014 and 8% in 2013.[215]

The price for debt that is older or has previously been placed for collection is typically lower.[216] For example, a CFPB survey of major credit card issuers found that between 2019 and 2020, the average price of credit card debt sold from originators to debt buyers soon after charge-off ("fresh debt") increased from 12% to 13%, while the average price for post-primary debt that was sold after one or more placements was 11%.[217] In 2018, the average price for credit card debt sold from originators to debt buyers soon after charge-off ("fresh debt") was approximately thirteen cents on the dollar, while the average price for post-primary debt that was sold after one or more placements was about nine cents on the dollar.[218]

In a 2017 CFPB report about online debt sales, the average price was less than one cent on the dollar for accounts that were typically over five years old and had often been sold

201 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

202 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Online Debt Sales 7 (Jan. 2017) (portfolios entered online marketplace between January and August 2015)

203 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry 8, App. D (2013).

204 Id. at T-4.

205 Shining a Light on the Consumer Debt Industry: Hearing Before the Subcomm. on Financial Institutions & Consumer Prot., Senate Comm. on Banking, Hous., and Urban Affairs, 113th Cong. (July 17, 2013) (statement of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency), available online as companion material to this treatise.

206 Id.

207 Id.

208 Shining a Light on the Consumer Debt Industry: Hearing Before the Subcomm. on Financial Institutions & Consumer Prot., Senate Comm. on Banking, Hous., and Urban Affairs, 113th Cong. (July 17, 2013) (statement of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency), available online as companion material to this treatise.

209 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry ii (2013).

210 Encore Capital Group, Inc. Annual Report on Form 10-K for 2020 at 32.

211 PRA Group, Inc. Annual Report on Form 10-K for 2020 at 58 ($905,118,000 in total purchase price / $6,707,293,000 face value * 100 = 13.5%).

212 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 151 (Sept. 2021).

213 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 163 (Aug. 2019).

214 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 329 (Dec. 2017).

215 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 256 (Dec. 2015).

216 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry 23 (2013). See also David E. Reid, The Value of Resale on the Receivables Secondary Market (DBA Int'l, Apr. 2016) ("Nonperforming receivables are at their highest value at the point they first become delinquent to approximately 240 days of default.").

217 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 151 152 (Sept. 2021).

218 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 163–164 (Aug. 2019). See also CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 329 (Dec. 2017) (reporting price of fresh debt versus post-primary debt); CFPB, Consumer Credit Card Market Report 258 (Dec. 2015) (reporting on price of fresh debt versus primary and secondary debt); U.S. Gov't Accountability Office, Credit Cards, GAO-09-748, 29 (Sept. 2009), citing Kaulkin Ginsberg, InsideARM (estimating price ranges for fresh, primary, secondary, tertiary, and quad debt for March 2007 and January 2009).

to two or more debt buyers.[219] The CFPB estimated that "the price of debt in the portfolios we reviewed decreases by an average of roughly 33% each year for the first five years after charge-off and roughly 29% each year for years 6–10."[220]

1.3.4.4 Age of Purchased Debt

The most comprehensive data available about the age of debts being collected by debt buyers comes from a 2013 FTC study of the debt-buying practices of some of the nation's largest debt buyers.[221] This study found that nearly twenty-five percent of debt acquired from the original creditor, and more than sixty percent of debt purchased from other debt buyers, was over three years old at the time of purchase.[222] More than thirty percent of the debt purchased from other debt buyers was over six years old.[223]

In a study of portfolios of debt for sale in an online marketplace, the CFPB found that the median age for a portfolio was five years after chargeoff.[224] The CFPB concluded that a "substantial portion" of accounts for sale were likely to be beyond the statute of limitations.[225]

Regardless of the age at the time of purchase, debts continue to age throughout the course of the collection process. Filings with the Security and Exchange Commission (SEC) demonstrate that some debt buyers are collecting on debts for a decade or more.[226]

1.3.4.5 Identifying Some of the Largest Debt Buyers

Using data from the Nilson Report, the FTC compiled a chart of the ten largest companies purchasing credit card debt from credit card issuers from 2005 to 2011.[227] In 2011, Sherman Financial Group, L.L.C. (subsidiaries include LVNV Funding, L.L.C. and Resurgent Capital Services, L.P.) ranked first, Encore Capital Group, Inc. (subsidiaries include Midland Funding, L.L.C. and Midland Credit Management, Inc.) ranked second, and Portfolio Recovery Associates (currently known as PRA Group, Inc.) ranked third.[228]

Unlike Sherman Financial, Encore Capital and PRA Group are both public companies whose filings with Security and Exchange Commission (SEC) provide information about the amount of debt these organizations purchase. For example, in 2020 Encore Capital purchased portfolios of debt with a face value of $5.8 billion[229] and PRA purchased portfolios of debt with a face value of $6.7 billion.[230] An analysis of 10-K filings by both companies from 2002 to 2015 found revenue growth of at least twenty percent every year during that period.[231] Encore claims that twenty percent of American consumers either owe it money currently or have owed it money in the past.[232]

Recent state and local studies of the number of lawsuits filed by certain debt buyers have consistently shown that Midland Funding and Portfolio Recovery are top filers.[233]

1.3.5 Debt Collection Agencies

1.3.5.1 First-Party Collection

Some creditors, like credit card issuers, hire "first-party" collectors, which the CFPB defines as "outside collectors who work under the name and direction of the creditor when collecting on delinquent debt."[234] Credit card issuers report paying "first-party" collectors on a "full-time employee" basis

219 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Online Debt Sales (Jan. 2017).

220 Id. at 5–6.

221 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry, at T-7 (Jan. 2013).

222 Id.

223 Id.

224 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Online Debt Sales 11 (Jan. 2017).

225 Id

226 See, e.g., PRA Group, Inc., Annual Report (Form 10-K), at 29 (Feb. 26, 2021) (reporting that, in 2020, the company received $18.8 million in payments on collection accounts purchased from 1996 to 2010); Encore Capital Grp., Annual Report (Form 10-K), at 46 (Feb. 24, 2021) (reporting that, in 2020, the company received more than $51 million in payments on collection accounts purchased prior to 2011).

227 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry, at T-6 (Jan. 2013).

228 Id.

229 Encore Capital Grp., Annual Report (Form 10-K), at 50 (Feb. 24, 2021).

230 PRA Group, Inc., Annual Report (Form 10-K), at 58 (Feb. 26, 2021).

231 Lisa Stifler, Debt in the Courts: The Scourge of Abusive Debt Collection Litigation and Possible Policy Solutions, Harv. L. and Pol'y R. Vol. 11-1, 96 (2017).

232 Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016). See also Encore Capital Group, Comments to Federal Communications Commission Re: CG Docket Nos. 18-152, 02-278 (Oct. 16, 2018) (noting that company works with one out of five American consumers).

233 See, e.g., Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending Oct. 2020) at Fig. 2 (listing top debt buyer filers in the five largest counties in California from 2012–2017); Testimony of April Kuehnhoff, National Consumer Law Center, Before the Massachusetts Joint Financial Services Committee in support of S.120/H.2811, An act relative to fairness in debt collection (Sept. 25, 2017) (statewide review of cases filed by debt buyers in Massachusetts for 2015 found that Midland Funding and Portfolio Recovery ranked first and second, with 32,009 lawsuits and 9,410 lawsuits, respectively); Ellen Harnick, Lisa Stifler, and Safa Sjadi, Center for Responsible Lending, Debt Buyers Hound Coloradans in Court for Debts They May Not Owe, Appx. 1 (Dec. 2016) (statewide review of cases filed by four debt buyers in Colorado for 2013–2015 found that Midland Funding ranked first with 22,121 lawsuits and Portfolio Recovery ranked second with 9,074 lawsuits); Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 15 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) (in New York state, debt buyers were four of the top ten filers in 2014; of these four, Midland Funding was first with 22,731 lawsuits, followed by Portfolio Recovery with 21,356); Peter Holland, "Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers," 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179, 216 (2014) (in Maryland in 2013, Midland Funding was the top debt buyer filing in state courts with 9619 lawsuits, followed by Portfolio Recovery with 6608).

234 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 131 (Sept. 2021).

and not on contingency.[235] Some credit card issuers also used performance-based incentive payments.[236]

First-party collection is attractive to collection agencies seeking to argue that they are exempt from FDCPA coverage.[237] The exemption claims are based on an informal staff letter issued by the FTC in 2000 and later revised in 2002.[238] Key considerations according to the FTC's informal staff letter are whether the debt is in default when it is acquired and, for debts that are in default when acquired, whether the first-party collector is a "de facto" employee of the creditor.[239] As discussed in § 4.8.9.2, infra, the determination of when a debt is in default can be complicated.[240] De facto employees are discussed in § 4.8.1, infra. Moreover, even if there is no coverage under the FDCPA, first-party collectors may be covered under state laws as discussed in Chapter 16, infra.

1.3.5.2 Third-Party Collection

1.3.5.2.1 Introduction

Third-party debt collection agencies are hired to collect accounts that are owned by original creditors or debt buyers. They are "third-party" collectors because they collect in their own name for debts that are owned by other entities.

Debt collection agencies may specialize in a variety of ways. Some focus on the collection of debts in a particular state or region, or the collection of decedent debt. Some specialize in the collection of consumer debt, commercial debt, child support debt, or dishonored checks. Agencies collecting consumer debt may further specialize in areas such as medical, student loan, credit card, automobile, mortgage, or utility debts.

A report commissioned by the collection industry found that, in 2018, third-party debt collectors collected 11.1% of the $923 billion (face value) in total debts that were placed with them, and that the average account size was $574.[241]

In 2019, the CFPB estimated that third-party debt collectors contact at least 49 million consumers each year about a debt in collection.[242] A researcher at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia estimated that the third-party collections industry contacts Americans more than a billion times a year.[243]

In 2020, a survey of collection agencies conducted by TransUnion reported that, of accounts placed for collection, 28% were paid in full, 14% were settled in full, 26% had partial payment arrangements, and 32% were unpaid—including accounts returned to the creditor, valid disputes, and accounts otherwise open.[244]

The sections below provide additional data about third-party debt collectors. Their collection practices are discussed in § 1.4.6, infra.

1.3.5.2.2 Number, size, and distribution of collection agencies

Reports about the number of debt collection agencies and the number of people they employ in the United States differ. Using 2018 data, the U.S. Census reports that there were 3684 collection agencies employing 135,212 employees.[245] The CFPB reported that in 2019 the third-party debt collection market employed 141,000 people in approximately 6950 collection agencies.[246] A 2020 survey of third-party collection agencies by TransUnion reported that there were 6699 third-party debt collection firms in 2020 that employed 124,212 people.[247] Some differences may be due to changes over time and different definitions about who to count as a collection agency.[248]

235 Id. See also CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 250 (Dec. 2015) ("Issuers reported that the average price for an onshore FTE was $4,915 per month. Offshore, it was $2,285 per month. Offshore locations include India and the Philippines.").

236 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 315 (Dec. 2017).

237 See Rozanne Anderson, Corporate Compliance Week Trivia Quiz for your Staff (Ontario Systems, Nov. 9, 2017), available at www.insidearm.com (listing as true the statement that "one way for a third-party collector to avoid liability under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act is to operate invisibly as a first party collector").

238 DeMayo, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 23, 2002); DeMayo, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 1, 2000).

239 Id.

240 See also National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 9.2.2.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing default in the context of medical debt).

241 Kaulkin Ginsberg, 2020 State of the Industry Report 1 (2020) (report commissioned by ACA International), available at https://www.acainternational.org.

242 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23,384 (May 21, 2019).

243 Robert Hunt, "Understanding the Model: The Life Cycle of a Debt," presented at FTC-CFPB Roundtable "Life of a Debt: Data Integrity in Debt Collection" (June 6, 2013).

244 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (based on data from 64 respondents), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

245 U.S. Census Bureau, All Sectors: County Business Patterns by Legal Form of Organization and Employment Size Class for U.S., States, and Selected Geographies: 2018 (NAICS code 561440), available at https://data.census.gov.

246 CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov, citing Gabriel Schulman, Debt Collection Agencies in the US, IBIS World (Dec. 2020).

247 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

248 For example, TransUnion reports the existence of "non-employer firms" that "do not have employees on the payroll . . . but may hire contractors to collect debt or to fulfill other duties." TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2019) (reporting 4,497 non-employer firms in 2016), available at https://solutions.transunion.com. Some counts may exclude these non-employer firms. See also CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Proposed Rule, 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23393 (May 21, 2019) (noting that in 2012 the Census Bureau estimated that there were over 5000 collection agencies without employees).

Different sources have reported consolidation in the debt collection industry and a decline in the number of collection agencies over the years.[249]

More than seventy percent of collection agencies have fewer than twenty employees.[250] While small collection agencies are more numerous, firms with more than one hundred employees generate nearly two thirds of industry revenue.[251] Smaller collection agencies are more likely to work with local or regional clients.[252]

Collection agencies are not evenly distributed between states in the United States. Of the 3684 collection agencies identified by 2018 U.S. Census Bureau data, New York had the most (385), followed by California (375) and Texas (280).[253] Vermont (3) was the state with the fewest collection agencies, followed by Rhode Island (7), and Maine (8).[254]

1.3.5.2.3 Compensation for collection agencies and individual collectors

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's survey of large credit card issuers found that contingency fees that allow third-party collection agencies to retain a percentage of what they recover were the most common payment structure.[255] The average contingency fee was 15.7% in 2020, with a range of 9.5 to 23% with higher fees awarded for accounts that are believed to be more difficult to collect.[256] Most issuers also reported paying performance-based incentives.[257] An earlier survey reported that a small number of issuers paid third-party collectors on a full-time equivalency (FTE) basis.[258]

A report commissioned by the collection industry found that, in 2018, third-party debt collection agencies earned $12.5 billion in commission and fees.[259] A 2019 survey of collection agencies reported that "the most common commission rates for each debt type are in the 20% to 29% range."[260]

In addition to contingent collections, collection agencies and attorneys are sometimes retained for a flat rate to send a series of collection letters. As discussed in § 10.4, infra, certain flat-rating practices may violate the FDCPA.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that in 2017 the mean hourly wage for bill and account collectors was $18.90, and the mean annual wage was $39,300.[261] The CFPB's 2016 survey of fifty-eight debt collectors reported that individual collection agents typically earn $10 to $11 per hour when they are new, or $13 to $20 per hour for more experienced collectors.[262] Both new and experienced collectors also earn "incentive pay" such as the "25 percent of contingency fees earned in excess of a certain threshold" that was provided as a commission by one respondent.[263] A training period of two to four weeks was common for new hires that contact consumers.[264] Respondents with 250 or more employees reported that turnover for collectors was between 75% and 100% annually.[265]

1.3.5.2.4 Types of debts collected

In a 2019 study of third-party collection tradelines, the CFPB found that the most common tradelines furnished by collection agencies to credit bureaus in 2018 were medical (66%), telecommunications (17%), and retail (11%).[266] However, in a 2019 study of the credit card market, the CFPB reported that financial services is the largest share of third-party debt

249 CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021) (reporting a decline in the number of collection agencies from 8,581 in 2015 to 6,969 in 2019), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov; TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020) (reporting that the number of third-party debt collection firms decreased from 9891 in 2011 to 6699 in 2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

250 U.S. Census Bureau, All Sectors: County Business Patterns by Legal Form of Organization and Employment Size Class for U.S., States, and Selected Geographies: 2018 (NAICS code 561440) (there were 1469 agencies with 1–4 employees, 613 agencies with 5–9 employees, and 527 agencies with 10–19 employees; thus, (1469+613+527) /3684 * 100 = 70.8%), available at https://data.census.gov.

251 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 6–7 (July 2016), citing U.S. Census Bureau (2012) (181 firms with 100 to 499 employees generated $3,007,472,000, 102 firms with more than 500 employees generated $4,804,633,00; total amount of revenue for all 3994 firms was $12,175,975,000; thus, ($3,007,472,000 + $4,804,633,000) /$12,175,975,000 * 100 = 64.2%). See also Viktar Fedaseyeu and Robert Hunt, Working Paper No. 14-7, The Economics of Debt Collection: Enforcement of Consumer Credit Contracts 10 (Fed. Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, Mar. 2014) (in 2007, the eight largest collection agencies generated less than 23.1% of collection industry revenue).

252 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 16 (July 2016) ("The smallest interviewee (excluding law firms) that reported working with national clients had 200 employees, and all but one of the respondents with more than 200 employees worked with at least some national clients.").

253 U.S. Census Bureau, All Sectors: County Business Patterns by Legal Form of Organization and Employment Size Class for U.S., States, and Selected Geographies: 2018 (NAICS code 561440), available at https://data.census.gov.

254 Id.

255 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 137 (Sept. 2021).

256 Id.

257 Id.

258 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 145 (Aug. 2019).

259 Kaulkin Ginsberg, 2020 State of the Industry Report 1 (2020), available at https://www.acainternational.org (report commissioned by ACA International) ($102.6 billion collected – $90.1 billion returned to creditors = $12.5 billion in commissions).

260 TransUnion, Challenges, Trends and Innovations: The State of Third-Party Collections (2019), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

261 Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Dept. of Labor, Occupational Employment and Wages, 43-3011 Bill and Account Collectors (May 2019), available at https://www.bls.gov.

262 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 17 (July 2016).

263 Id.

264 Id.

265 Id.

266 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov. Compare CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 10 (July 2016) (In the CFPB's survey of fifty-eight third-party collectors in 2016, the three types of debts most commonly collected (each representing at least twenty percent of revenue) were medical debt, credit card debt, and student loans).

collection revenue, noting that credit card issuers may be issuing this information directly to credit bureaus.[267]

A 2020 TransUnion survey identified the top three types of outstanding collection balances as medical (51%), banking and financial services (19%), and utilities/telecom (12%).[268] Prior industry surveys have reported different types of debts in the top three spots.[269]

Nearly half of all collection agencies collected four or more types of debts, while nearly a quarter collected only one type.[270] Collection agencies also specialize in collect of debt at varying ages—ranging from prime to time-barred debt.[271]

1.3.5.2.5 Check diversion programs

"Check diversion" programs consist of a partnership between a collection agency and a district attorney. Typically, the collection agency sends consumers who have written a check that was dishonored by their bank a letter on the district attorney's letterhead, threatening criminal prosecution and jail time if the consumer does not pay the check plus high fees and tuition for enrolling in "financial responsibility" classes they may conduct. The fees they demand may exceed a small check by more than $150. The fee collected is typically split with the district attorney's office providing that office much needed revenue but often at the expense of the poorest and least sophisticated consumers.

The FDCPA requirements for these companies are discussed at § 4.8.11, infra. In addition, at least one state prohibits debt collectors from using a district attorney's letterhead or seal,[272] and the American Bar Association has issued a formal ethics opinion about the practice.[273]

1.3.6 Collection Attorneys

In 2019, the CFPB estimated that there were "1,000 law firms in the United States that either have as their principal purpose the collection of consumer debt or regularly collect consumer debt owed to others."[274] Searching Martindale for "creditors rights" as an area of practice returns 6604 law firms and 13,475 attorneys.[275] Separately, the National Creditors Bar Association (NCBA) states that its membership consists of "over 500 law firms and individual members, totaling approximately 2000 attorneys."[276]

The size of private law firms with collection practices range from a single attorney[277] to firms with dozens or even hundreds of attorneys.[278] Some of the largest firms are collection lawsuit mills that employ significantly more support staff than attorneys,[279] raising questions about meaningful attorney involvement.[280] The largest law firms may file tens of thousands of lawsuits in a single year[281] and may have thousands of 267 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 139 (Aug. 2019) (using 2018 IbisWorld data).

268 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

269 Kaulkin Ginsberg, 2020 State of the Industry Report 2 (2020) available at https://www.acainternational.org (report commissioned by ACA International) (report did not specify the percentages but appears to show health care, financial services, and other (including retail and personal services) as the three most common types of debt collected); Ernst & Young, The Impact of Third-Party Debt Collection on the US National and State Economies in 2016, 7 (Nov. 2017) (report commissioned by ACA International) (Health Care (46.8%), Student Loan (21.2%), Government (16.4%)); Ernst & Young, The Impact of Third-Party Debt Collection on the US National and State Economies in 2013, 7 (July 2014) (report commissioned by ACA International) (Health Care (37.9%), Student Loan (25.2%), Financial Services (12.9%)); Ernst & Young, The Impact of Third-Party Debt Collection on the US National and State Economies, 8 (Feb. 2012) (report commissioned by ACA International) (Health Care (52.2%), Credit Card/Financial (20%), Other (9.1%)).

270 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

271 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020) (reporting that 83% of survey respondents collected prime debt compared to 15% that collected time-barred debt), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

272 See Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 135.925(9), 646.639(2)(p).

273 ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility. Formal Opinion No. 469 (Nov. 12, 2014) (unethical for prosecutor to lend its letterhead to collection agency that even implicitly threatens prosecution, unless lawyer in prosecutor's office determines prosecution is warranted or determines that letter complies with Model Rules 8.4(c) and 5.5(a) of Rules of Professional Conduct).

274 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Proposed Rule, 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23,393 (May 21, 2019).

275 Martindale, www.martindale.com (searched May 25, 2021).

276 Nat'l Creditors Bar Ass'n, About Us, available at https://www.creditorsbar.org.

277 See, e.g., Lannan v. Levy & White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77, 83 n.1 (D. Mass. 2016) (stating that White was sole proprietor of Levy & White).

278 See CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 3575882, at *7 (N.D. Ohio July 25, 2018) (law firm had 60 attorneys at time of testimony, but previously had 120–140 attorneys); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., Complaint, 14-cv-2211, ¶14 (N.D. Ga. July 14, 2014) (employing hundreds of people); CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 14 (July 2016) (two of five collection law firms that responded to the CFPB's survey indicated that they employed more than 100 people).

279 See In re Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., Consent Order, 2016-CFPB-0009, 5 (C.F.P.B. Apr. 25, 2016) (firm employed far more non-attorney support staff than attorneys); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., Complaint, 14-cv-2211, ¶14 (N.D. Ga. July 14, 2014) ("The Firm's non-attorney support staff has far outnumbered its attorneys. From 2009 through 2013, Defendants employed, at any given time, hundreds of non-attorney staff but only between 8 and 16 attorneys.").

280 See § 7.2.3, infra.

281 See In re Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., Consent Order, 2016-CFPB-0009, 5 (C.F.P.B. Apr. 25, 2016) (filing more than 500,000 collection actions against consumers from 2009 to 2014); Commonwealth v. Lustig, Glaser & Wilson, P.C., Complaint ¶1 (Mass. Super. Ct. Dec. 21, 2015) (firm filed more than 100,000 collection lawsuits from 2011 through 2015); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., Complaint, 14-cv-2211, ¶13 (N.D. Ga. July 14, 2014) (law firm filed more than 350,000 collection lawsuits in Georgia from 2009 to 2013).

creditor clients[282] or thousands of accounts placed with them by a single client, typically a debt buyer.[283]

The CFPB describes compensation for collection attorneys as follows:

> Attorneys are usually paid a percentage of the amount collected but may also be paid on a per hour basis or a fixed amount. When a judgment is obtained and a debt collector is able to recover on that judgment, the debt collector generally is entitled to recover its court costs first from amounts collected from the consumer, with the remaining balance after this recovery used to determine and pay the collector's contingent fee. Note, however, that in a significant share of cases collectors are ultimately unable to recover on judgments.[284]

1.3.7 Consumer Locating Services, a.k.a. "Skip Tracers"

Some businesses, known pejoratively[285] as "skip tracers," specialize in locating consumers' contact information when the consumer has changed addresses, employment, or phone number. They will try to match the information they are given—such as Social Security number, name, former address, employer, etc.—to try to locate consumers for creditors, collection attorneys, and collection agencies.

These businesses use consumer reporting agency and other databases to find current home and work addresses, telephone numbers, and email addresses. They will also use less structured Internet sources, such as using search engines or social networking sites, to get leads. Some companies have also used false pretenses to obtain current consumer contact information.[286]

A 2020 survey of debt collection agencies found that 76% of respondents used "manual skip tracing" and 49% used "batch skip tracing."[287]

1.3.8 Consumer Reporting Agencies

Consumer reporting agencies are businesses that maintain files of information relevant to consumers' creditworthiness, employability, and insurability and disseminate that information to businesses dealing with consumers. A delinquent debt on a consumer's credit report lowers the consumer's credit rating making it harder to get worthwhile credit. A consumer with a delinquent debt listed on their credit report, and wanting credit to buy a car, get an affordable credit card, or buy a house, has a strong incentive to pay off the delinquent debt and get lower fees and interest on future credit. Employers and landlords may also review credit reports as part of the hiring or rental process.

The National Consumer Law Center's treatise, Fair Credit Reporting,[288] is the authoritative source for the law applying to consumer reporting agencies. There is a summary of credit reporting law as it applies to debt collection at § 14.6, infra. Section 7.2.8, infra, addresses 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8), which often applies to debt collectors who use credit reporting to collect debts.

1.3.9 Debt Relief Services

There are legitimate credit counseling organizations that provide help to financially distressed consumers. However, there are also a wide variety of predatory debt relief scams.[289] Although the details differ, debt relief scams typically prey upon consumers by claiming that they can provide debt relief to financially distressed families and then failing to deliver any meaningful assistance, often at great cost to the consumer.

---

282 CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 3575882, at *4 (N.D. Ohio July 25, 2018) (law firm had 7000 creditor clients).

283 In re Encore Capital Grp., Inc., No. 2015-CFPB-0022, ¶48 (C.F.P.B. Sept. 9, 2015) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov ("Encore has placed tens of thousands of accounts with law firms staffed by fewer than ten attorneys."); In re Portfolio Recovery Associates, L.L.C., No. 2015-CFPB-0023, ¶46 (C.F.P.B. Sept. 9, 2015) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov ("PRA placed tens of thousands of Debts with Law Firms staffed by fewer than five attorneys.").

284 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 35 (July 2016).

285 The term is pejorative because most "skips" are actually people who have been forced to move to a different address because of their financial distress from unemployment, illness, or other hardships—not because they are trying to "skip" out on their debt.

286 See, e.g., Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998) (telecommunications company sent message asking consumer to call Western Union for message, then used caller ID technology to obtain consumer's unlisted telephone number for its debt collector client); Thompson v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5372577 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2012) (letter fraudulently claimed that there was message for consumers in attempt to induce call from consumer and obtain phone number for collection purposes). See also Andrea Ryan, et al., A Brief History of US Consumer Finance, Working Paper 11-058 (Harvard Bus. School, 2010) ("In many communities, the local 'Welcome Wagon' collected credit information on new arrivals to the town."); United States v. Zats, 298 F.3d 182, 184 (3d Cir. 2002) (to obtain bank account information for garnishment, collection attorney "often engaged in a phone 'survey' in which he called the debtor, offered him or her a free gift for completing his survey, and then asked questions until he obtained enough information to identify the account"); LeVine, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 20, 1998); Stanley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 13, 1996); Bergstrom, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 17, 1995); § 4.7.3, infra.

287 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

288 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

289 See, e.g., National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 11.2 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library (scams involving unsecured debts); National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law § 1.12.4 (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (student loan "debt relief" industry); National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 4.8 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (automobile sublease scams); National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures Ch. 16 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (foreclosure rescue scams).

1.4 How Debts Are Collected

1.4.1 Overview

This section provides a brief overview of some typical collection practices by different parties. Unless otherwise specified, this section is discussing the collection of unsecured credit card debts. The collection of secured debts like automobile loans and home mortgages involve a number of different practices.[290] The collection of other types of unsecured debts can have a number of important distinctions.[291]

1.4.2 Credit Reporting

Creditors and other collectors sometimes turn to consumer reporting agencies (CRAs) to obtain information such as a consumer's current address or to assess the collectability of their claim.[292] Some CRAs also offer monitoring services to debt collectors. For example, Experian offers the "Collection Triggers" program where debt collectors provide Experian with a list collection accounts, and Experian sends the debt collector a notification when the credit report of the consumer indicates the consumer is getting out of their financial crisis such as the listing of a new employer or line of credit.[293]

In addition to receiving information from CRAs, many debt collectors also furnish information to the CRAs. The CFPB reported that 898 debt collectors (including debt buyers and third-party collection agencies) had furnished third-party collection tradelines in the second quarter of 2018, down from nearly 2300 unique furnishers in 2004 and 2005.[294] Because debts may be re-assigned to different debt collectors or sold, the same account may be associated with multiple tradelines over time.[295]

In 2020, a TransUnion survey of collection agencies reported that 44% of respondents furnished to credit bureaus, although the percentage went up to 71% of larger respondents who collected one million or more accounts in the past twelve months.[296] Previously, in a 2016 CFPB report, 78% of third-party debt collectors surveyed by the CFPB reported furnishing data to credit bureaus.[297]

Currently, collectors sometimes use "passive" credit reporting or "parking" instead of active collection efforts like phone calls and letters.[298] Here the collector furnishes negative information to the CRAs without ever attempting to contact the consumer about the debt, waiting until the consumer discovers the negative information. Often, the consumer discovers the information when attempting to take out a loan and may simply pay off the small debt rather than taking time to dispute it. The CFPB's new debt collection regulations, effective November 30, 2021, will require notice to consumers about an alleged debt before the account can be reported to CRAs.[299] The FTC has already taken enforcement action against a debt collector "parking" debts on credit reports without notice to consumers.[300]

Some third-party debt collectors may choose not to furnish information to CRAs because they are worried about legal liability, because certain accounts are already reported by their clients, or because the amount in question is too small.[301] Debt collectors may also choose (or be required by clients) to wait a certain period of time before reporting new accounts to CRAs.[302]

1.4.3 Cancellation of Debt and Taxes

In some cases, consumers may be able to negotiate to reduce or eliminate an outstanding debt. Creditors and debt buyers that cancel or forgive a debt (or portion of a debt) worth at least $600 must file an information Form 1099-C with the Internal Revenue Service by March 31 of the following year, and must also send a copy to the consumer.[303] The principal of a cancelled or forgiven debt is generally considered taxable income to the consumer., although there are several important exceptions, including when the consumer disputes the debt, is insolvent, or is in bankruptcy.[304] Certain student loan debt 290 For more information about the collection of secured loans, see National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures and Mortgage Servicing (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

291 See, e.g., National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 9 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (collection of medical debt); National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (collection of student loans).

292 See, e.g., Experian's Locate Debtors tool, described at www.experian.com; Experian's Debt Collection Services, described at www.experian.com.

293 See Experian's Collection Triggers program, described at www.experian.com. See also Equifax's Business Products, described at www.equifax.com. See also TransUnion's Account Prioritization, described at www.transunion.com ("When consumer data changes, or shifts in credit activity indicate a greater likelihood of recovery, TransUnion can notify you as soon as the next day.").

294 CFPB, Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

295 CFPB, Quarterly Consumer Credit Trends: Collection of Telecommunication Debt (Aug. 2018) (describing collection of telecom debt).

296 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

297 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 19 (July 2016).

298 See CFPB, Consumer credit reports: A study of medical and non-medical collections 35–36 (Dec. 2014).

299 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(a) (effective Nov. 30, 2021). See § 8.12, infra.

300 FTC, FTC Stops Debt Collector's Alleged "Debt Parking" Scheme, Requires it to Delete Debts it Placed on Consumers' Credit Reports (Nov. 30, 2020), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

301 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 19 (July 2016).

302 Id. at 19–20.

303 Treas. Reg. § 1.6050P-1(a).

304 IRC § 108. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.5.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (litigation tax consequences for prevailing clients).

is also excluded.[305] There was also an exception for the mortgage indebtedness of a taxpayer's principal residence, but it expired on December 31, 2017 and has not yet been extended by Congress.[306] When the consumer receives a Form 1099-C, they must take affirmative steps to claim one of the above exemptions. Generally, the consumer uses a Form 982 and check the appropriate box in Part I. Most qualified tax return preparers should be familiar with this form. Cancellation of debt and taxes is discussed in more detail at § 11.14.2.5, infra.

1.4.4 Collection by Credit Card Issuers

1.4.4.1 Collection Prior to Charge-Off

In the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's survey of large credit card issuers,[307] all respondents conducted at least some collection activity in-house on overdue credit card accounts after a consumer misses a payment.[308] These initial collection contacts may come in the form of letters, calls, emails, voicemails, or text messages reminding consumers of their outstanding balance. As described in § 1.4.5, infra, the majority of respondents also used first-party collectors for at least some of these early collection efforts.

In the same report, all survey respondents reported having at least some contact limits on their in-house collectors.[309] The CFPB summarized responses about contact limits as follows:[310]

- Phone calls: 3–11 per account per day;
- Postal mail: 1–4 per account per month;
- Voicemails: 1–2 per phone number per day; and
- Email: 2–3 per week.

In 2019 and 2020, large credit card issuers placed an average of 4% of accounts with third-party collectors pre-charge-off.[311] This figure represents a significant decline from 2018, when the CFPB found that large credit card issuers placed an average of 11% of accounts with third-party collectors pre-charge-off.[312]

Issuers tended to assign accounts that were "high risk" to third-party collectors, "including accounts in the later stages of delinquency, closed accounts, and accounts where no contact had been made with the primary account owner for an extended period of time" or accounts that required special handling as the result of a deceased accountholder, bankruptcy filing, or involvement of a debt settlement company.[313]

1.4.4.2 Charge-Off

When a credit card account is more than 180 days past due, it must generally be charged-off.[314] This means that the debt is no longer carried as an asset of value on the company's books, giving investors and lenders a more accurate picture of a company's net worth. Charge-off accounts are treated as an expense or a loss[315] to the creditor, but the charged-off debt is not canceled.[316] Any payment on the charged-off debt is then treated as income—a recovery on a bad debt—on the creditor's books.[317]

1.4.4.3 Collection After Charge-Off

A CFPB report has found that, after charge-off, large credit card issuers can either retain accounts for in-house collection, place accounts with third-party collection agencies, place them for litigation, sell them, or warehouse them.[318] Each approach is discussed briefly below. If one approach to collection is unsuccessful, a new approach may be attempted after a period of time.

After charge-off some credit card issuers continue to collect on the account in-house. The CFPB found that an average of 8% of post-charge-off accounts were being collected internally in 2019 and 2020,[319] down from an average of 22% in 2017 and 2018.[320] Survey respondents indicated that issuers might score accounts based on likelihood of payment or separate certain accounts that should not be placed with third-party collectors when determining which accounts to retain for internal collection.[321]

All survey respondents reported placing accounts with third-party collection agencies post-charge off,[322] with an average of 18% of post-charge-off accounts placed with 305 IRC § 108(f).

306 IRC § 108(a)(1)(E).
307 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 65 n.119 (Sept. 2020) ("data are provided by a set of larger issuers that make up the substantial majority of the credit card market").
308 Id. at 131.
309 Id. at 132.
310 Id. at 132, 134 (also discussing use of text messages but not providing any numerical contact limits on such messages).
311 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 136–137 (Sept. 2021).
312 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 145 (Aug. 2019).
313 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 133, 137 (Sept. 2021).
314 See, e.g., CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 44 n.79 (Sept. 2021). citing Off. of the Comptroller of the Currency, Policy Implementation—The Guidance Attached to this Bulletin Continues to Apply to Federal Savings Associations, OCC Bulletin 2000-20, (June 20, 2000) ("Accounts that remain delinquent for 180 days must be 'charged off,' meaning that the issuer can no longer consider the outstanding balance as an asset on its balance sheet. Delinquent accounts may have to be charged off prior to 180 days in certain circumstances as, for example, with a bankruptcy."); Fed. Fin. Insts. Examination Council, Uniform Retail Credit Classification and Account Management Policy, 65 Fed. Reg. 39,603 (June 12, 2000).
315 Credit card issuers may also declare accounts as losses for other reasons.
316 See, e.g., Kelly v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1202 (D. Colo. 2008) (fact that bank had "charged off" credit card debt after 180 days after delinquency was an accounting device required by federal regulations and did not "extinguish" debt, as plaintiff alleged, or alter right of defendant to collect it).
317 See 5000—FDIC Statements of Policy, Uniform Retail Credit Classification And Account Management Policy, available at www.fdic.gov.
318 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 144 (Sept. 2021).
319 Id. at 146.
320 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 154 (Aug. 2019).
321 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 137, 146 (Sept. 2021).
322 Id. at 146.

third-party collectors post-charge-off in 2019 and 2020.[323] As discussed in § 1.4.4.1, supra, credit card issuers might designate certain accounts for placement with third-party collectors because the accounts were deemed high risk or involved specialized collection. Details of third-party collection practices are discussed at § 1.4.6, infra.

All survey respondents engaged in litigation to collect charged-off accounts, though only a minority of credit card issuers also reported using litigation pre-charge-off.[324] The volume of new accounts placed in litigation declined during 2019 and 2020, due to pandemic-related considerations, including court closures, though this volume has increased since the survey period (albeit not to pre-pandemic levels).[325] Among credit card issuers that used litigation, the share of post-charge-off accounts that were placed for litigation ranged from a low of 5% to a high of 24%.[326] All issuers that litigate use an external network of collection attorneys, and a minority also use internal collection attorneys.[327] Accounts with high balances were more likely to be selected for litigation and issuers also reported considering account balance and likelihood of payment, as determined by employment income and availability of assets, when selecting accounts for litigation.[328] Some credit card issuers have filed hundreds of thousands of collection actions per year.[329]

Fewer than half of survey respondents sold debt to debt buyers in 2019 and 2020.[330] Credit card issuers reported selling debt to only seventeen different debt buyers in 2020.[331] Volume of credit card debt sold and price paid to purchase debts are discussed in §§ 1.3.4.2 and 1.3.4.3, supra. Terms of debt sales are discussed at § 1.4.7, infra.

Finally, all respondents used "warehousing," or ceasing collection on accounts that are deemed uncollectible or unlikely to be repaid, with an average of approximately 28% of overall post-charge-off accounts warehoused in 2019 and 2020.[332]

The CFPB found that surveyed credit card issuers recovered an average of 17% of the face value of debt charged off debt within a four-year period, with nearly two-thirds of the recovery occurring within the first two years after charge-off.[333] The CFPB also looked at recoveries from accounts placed in litigation and found an average recovery of 34% of the total judgment over a 48-month period since those judgments were issued.[334] The CFPB noted that higher rates of recovery on those litigated accounts might be due to selecting accounts with a higher ability to repay for litigation.[335]

1.4.5 Collection by First-Party Debt Collectors

Most large credit card issuers surveyed by the CFPB reported using first-party collectors to supplement in-house collection pre-charge-off.[336]

First-party collectors used the credit card issuers' case management system and call technology.[337] Accounts were typically allocated randomly between credit card issuers' in-house collectors and first-party collectors based on collector availability[338]

1.4.6 Collection by Third-Party Debt Collectors

1.4.6.1 Length of Placement

The CFPB's 2015 survey of credit card issuers found that creditors place credit card accounts with a collection agency for a specific length of time, that the length of time ranges "from several weeks to several years," and that the length of placement tends to increase with the age of the debt.[339]

Respondents to the CFPB's 2016 survey of third-party collectors indicated that larger creditors typically place accounts with collection agencies for a period of six months to a year, after which the accounts are returned to the creditor who may place the account with a new collection agency.[340] Smaller clients, however, are more likely to leave accounts with a client "indefinitely or until the statute of limitations for filing a lawsuit expires."[341]

1.4.6.2 Information Transferred at Placement

The CFPB's 2016 survey of third-party collectors found that when an account is placed with a third-party debt collection agency, collection agencies generally receive account information electronically via a secure site.[342] Typically, review of new accounts was limited to "using external data sources to identify accounts belonging to bankrupt or deceased consumers, and often also to identify address changes, consumers covered by the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, and litigious

323 Id. at 145.
324 Id. at 153.
325 Id.
326 Id. at 154.
327 Id. at 153.
328 Id. at 153.
329 Paul Kiel, At Capital One, Easy Credit and Abundant Lawsuits, ProPublica, Dec. 28, 2015 (estimating that Capital One filed more than 500,000 lawsuits per year nationally between 2008 and 2010).
330 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 150 (Sept. 2021).
331 Id.
332 Id. at 145, 151.
333 Id. at 147 (based on debts charged off in the first quarter of 2017).
334 Id. at 154.
335 Id.
336 Id. at 131, 136.
337 Id.
338 Id. at 136.
339 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 245 (Dec. 2015). See also CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 310 (Dec. 2017) ("The length of a placement is determined by the creditor, and placement periods tend to lengthen as debt ages.").
340 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 13 (July 2016).
341 Id.
342 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 22, 23 (July 2016) (chart also lists frequency with which certain information was provided).

consumers."[343] Although creditors may provide access to underlying account documentation, either by transferring documents or providing access to the creditor's own system, few respondents reviewed documentation to check the accuracy of their account information.[344] Some respondents only obtain documentation from clients when needed and not at placement.[345]

1.4.6.3 Methods of Consumer Contacts

A 2020 TransUnion survey of collection agencies reports that 59% of collectors communicate with consumers by email, 22% via text, and 2% via social media, compared to 93% by letter and 87% by manually dialed telephone calls.[346] As discussed, in § 1.4.4.1, supra, all large credit card issuers surveyed by the CFPB reported having at least some contact limits on their in-house collectors.[347] For more information about different communication technology used in debt collection, see § 1.5, infra.

In the CFPB's survey of third-party debt collectors, some survey respondents indicated that clients imposed requirements around call frequencies —either maximum or minimum numbers of collection calls.[348] Additionally, some collection agencies reported having their own internal policies regarding call limits.

1.4.6.4 Consumer Disputes and Requests for Verification

A collection industry survey of third-party debt collection agencies found that consumers requested verification for 18.1% of accounts, raised a dispute in 9.6% of accounts, and closed 47.8% of accounts because of a "valid dispute, wrong person, etc."[349]

1.4.6.5 Collection Procedures

A third-party collector's goal is to contact consumers and convince them to pay as much as possible as soon as possible. Collection agencies are racing against the clock imposed by their time limited placement (discussed in § 1.4.6.1, supra) and because consumers may be more likely to pay newer collection accounts.[350] Agencies may also be in a competition with other collection agencies through "champion-challenger" placement that pits two collection agencies against each other with the promise that the winner will receive a larger share of accounts for collection in the future.[351]

In order to enhance their ability to obtain payments, creditors are generally given authority to offer discounts on the face value of the debt. As the debt ages, the amount of the discount they are authorized to offer consumers may increase.[352]

A 2020 TransUnion survey of collection agencies found that nearly two-thirds of respondents reported always use letters for an initial contact with consumers while approximately one-third always use phone for initial communications.[353] Previously, in 2016, the CFPB found that more than ninety percent of respondents to its survey of third-party collectors, sent validation notices shortly after new accounts were placed with their collection agency, often within forty-eight hours.[354] That same CFPB survey found that 86% of respondents used a letter vendor to send postal mail.[355]

When debt collectors start placing calls, they may use a variety of telephone technologies, such as autodialers, to try to reach the consumer and collection management systems to track collection efforts. For a discussion of technology used in collection efforts, see § 1.5, infra.

Once collection agents reach consumers on the phone, they may have detailed procedures in place governing those interactions. For example, some collectors use scripts or "talk offs" (written or oral) to deal with frequent themes such as sickness or unemployment that come up in collection calls. Some collectors use abusive talk offs to ratchet up the pressure on consumers to make a payment.[356]

1.4.7 Collection by Debt Buyers

1.4.7.1 Mechanics of Debt Sales

A debt buyer typically purchases thousands of accounts per sale from a creditor or another debt buyer. This group of accounts is called a "portfolio." Debt may be grouped into portfolios based on type of accounts, length of time since 343 Id. at 22. See also § 1.5.5, infra (discussing "scrubbing" portfolios).

344 Id.

345 Id. at 23–24.

346 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

347 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 132 (Sept. 2021).

348 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 28–29 (July 2016).

349 Ernst & Young, The Impact of Third-Party Debt Collection on the US National and State Economies in 2016, p. 4–5 (Nov. 2017) (report commissioned by ACA International). See also TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020) ("Over a quarter of respondents report that at least 10% of accounts are disputed."), available at https://solutions.transunion.com; CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 30 (July 2016) (summarizing a wide range of responses about frequency of consumer disputes).

350 TrueAccord Blog, What are accounts uncollectible? (Oct. 3, 2019) (collection agency data shows that "new accounts (those in collection for fewer than 90 days) are four times more likely to begin a payment plan than those who've been [in] collections for more than six months . . . [and] eight times more likely to begin paying off a debt than those who have been in debt for longer than two years."), available at https://blog.trueaccord.com.

351 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 310 (Dec. 2017).

352 Id.

353 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

354 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 28 (July 2016) (53/58 * 100 = 91.4%).

355 Id. at 32 (50/58 * 100 = 86.2%).

356 See, e.g., Planet Money, Episode 574: The Buffalo Talk-Off (Nov. 16, 2016).

default, or the number of prior collection placements.[357] Sellers typically market portfolios of debt for sale and prospective buyers bid on those portfolios.[358] Average amounts paid to purchase debts are discussed at § 1.3.4.3, supra.

Once a price is agreed upon, the parties enter into a purchase and sale agreement that outlines the terms of debt sale between the creditor and debt buyer, including details about the accounts being sold, a description of prior collection placements, any representations and warranties, any limits on resale, and details about information that will be provided at sale or after sale.[359] The purchase and sale agreement will also spell out what if any right the debt buyer has to go back to the debt seller to obtain additional information about an account.[360]

Debt sales can involve either "spot" or "forward flow" portfolio sales.[361] A "spot" sale is a one-time purchase of a portfolio of debt while a "forward flow" sale involves multiple sales of debts at regular intervals and pre-arranged prices.[362] The purchase and sale agreement for a forward flow sale is often called the forward flow agreement.

When a particular portfolio of thousands of accounts is sold, the parties execute a bill of sale or other short assignment document. That document simply references the portfolio and the purchase and sale agreement. This one page document says that, "Seller, for value received and pursuant to the terms and conditions of the Purchase & Sale Agreement, hereby assigns all rights, title and interest of Seller to those receivables identified in the Sale File."[363]

At the time of sale, the debt buyer also receives a data file, which is an electronic spreadsheet that lists the thousands of specific consumer accounts being transferred, as well as any additional documentation that is being transferred.[364] The sale data file will have information about each account.

Once the purchase is complete, debt buyers may choose to collect debts in-house or to place accounts with third-party debt collectors or collection law firms.[365]

1.4.7.2 Representations and Warranties

Many sellers do not guarantee the accuracy of the data that they transfer to the first debt buyer. Instead of affirmative promises, many debt purchase and sale agreements specifically disclaim important aspects of the transaction.[366] For example, many sellers do not warrant that they have title to the accounts they sell, disclaim that the amounts listed as owed are correct, and disclaim compliance with applicable laws.[367] Moreover, some debt purchasing agreements state, "Buyer expressly acknowledges that . . . documentation may not exist with respect to the Loans purchased by Buyer."[368]

Although the CFPB reported that their review of some 2013–2015 debt sale agreements from credit card issuers included affirmative representations about title, compliance with consumer laws, and accuracy, they noted that in some cases these representations contained significant caveats such as "to the best of the seller's knowledge" or stated that records are "an accurate copy of the seller's records," rather than stating that the records were true and correct.[369] More recent CFPB reports about the credit card industry have not addressed representations and warranties.[370]

1.4.7.3 Account Information Available to Debt Buyers

Debt buyers may obtain very little information about the consumer debts that they buy. The FTC reviewed the types of information transferred in 3400 debt portfolios sales between 2006 and 2009, finding that important pieces of information were not transferred with the data file.[371] For example, only 30% of accounts contained information about the interest rate, only 11% listed the principal amount, only 37% contained information about finance charges and fees, and only 35% reported the date of first default.[372] The FTC also found that debt buyers almost never received documentation at the time of sale, finding that account statements and terms and conditions were only transmitted with 6% of accounts.[373] Moreover, debt buyers rarely received any dispute history or information about whether a prior dispute had been resolved.[374]

The FTC further found that, although sellers typically agreed to provide missing documents upon request for a certain percentage of accounts, debt buyers typically had to pay $5 to $10 per document after they exceeded that percent or after the time to request additional documentation ran out.[375] If the first purchaser sells debts to a second debt buyer, the seller typically has no obligation to provide documents to the 357 See FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry 17 (Jan. 2013).

358 See id. at 20–22.
359 See, e.g., id. at 17, 24–27.
360 Id. at 39–40.
361 See id. at C-2.
362 See id.
363 Dalié Jiménez, Dirty Debts Sold Dirt Cheap, 52 Harv. J. on Legis. 41 (2015).
364 See, e.g., FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry 35 (Jan. 2013).
365 See, e.g., Pollak v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 285 F. Supp. 3d 812 (D.N.J. 2018) (summarizing debt buyer PRA's collection process).
366 Dalié Jiménez, Dirty Debts Sold Dirt Cheap, 52 Harv. J. on Legis. 41 (2015); FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry (Jan. 2013).
367 Id.
368 Loan Sale Agreement between FIA Card Services and Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C. 31 (Oct. 29, 2008), available at http://dalie.org and http://perma.cc; Loan Sale Agreement between FIA Card Services and CACH, L.L.C. 31 (Apr. 14, 2010), available at http://dalie.org and http://perma.cc; Loan Sale Agreement between FIA Card Services and CACH, L.L.C. 29 (Aug. 11, 2009), available at http://dalie.org and http://perma.cc.
369 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market (Dec. 2015).
370 See CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market (Sept. 2021); CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market (Aug. 2019); CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market (Dec. 2017).
371 FTC, The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry, at T-9 to T-10 (Jan. 2013).
372 Id.
373 Id. at T-11.
374 Id. at 37.
375 Id. at 39–40.

second debt buyer, who would have to submit any request for documents to the first debt buyer and ask them to transmit the request to the seller.[376]

In August 2014, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) issued guidance on debt sales to the banks and financial institutions that it regulates.[377] The Bulletin instructs banks to provide debt buyers with a signed contract and the last twelve account statements for each account.[378] It also requires banks to provide additional information such as details of any unresolved disputes and an itemization of the principle, interest and fees.[379]

In the CFPB's 2021 report about the credit card market, all surveyed credit card issuers that sold debt reported "that they provide buyers with key documents and account information at the time of sale, including the account's last twelve statements, amount and date of the last account payment, etc."[380]

Issuers reported that they may make additional documentation available upon request, including "cardholder agreements, written applications, affidavits, and earlier account statements."[381] A minority of respondents reported charging debt buyers a fee to access additional documentation after the sale.[382]

At this time, there are no regulations similar to the OCC guidance that applies more broadly to other types of debt sales. Thus, any improvements in information and documentation transfers observed in debts sales from banks may not be reflected in the practices of other debt sellers.

The lack of reliable information contributes to collection problems like collecting from or suing the wrong person or for the wrong amount or attempting to collect accounts that have already been paid or settled.

1.4.7.4 Chain of Title

In addition to original creditors selling debts, debt buyers may also choose to sell debts to other debt buyers. Debt that is sold multiple times may result in ambiguities as to which debt buyer owns the debt, making it difficult to establish an unbroken chain of ownership stretching from the original creditor. There can even be disputes as to who has proper title to a portfolio of debt.[383]

As discussed in § 1.4.7.3, supra, the increased separation between the entity suing on a debt and the original creditor means that the debt buyer plaintiff will also have difficulty obtaining documentation proving the underlying debt.

The CFPB found that credit card issuers were generally restricting the resale of credit card debt in a 2021 survey of large credit card issuers.[384] There is no indication of sellers of other types of debts adopting similar prohibitions.

1.4.8 Collection by Attorneys

When an account is placed with a law firm for collection, the law firm may be provided with limited information about the debt that may not include account-level documentation such as the operative contract, payment history, or collection history.[385]

Shortly after receiving the electronic data, law firms may use programs to "scrub"[386] their newly received files to identify accounts that belong to deceased individuals, those who have filed for bankruptcy, etc.[387]

While some clients may authorize the law firm to sue immediately after placement, others may require the law firm to make additional collection attempts first.[388] Additional collection attempts typically consist of one or more demand letters on law firm letterhead or additional collection calls using

376 Id. at 27–28.

377 Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Risk Management Guidance, Bulletin 2014-37 (Aug. 4, 2014).

378 Id.

379 Id.

380 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 152 (Sept. 2021). An earlier report indicated that the documents and information included an itemized account of all amounts claimed, including principal, interest, and fees; special status indicators, such as attorney representation or cease and desist; and information relating to prior collection efforts. CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 164 (Aug. 2019).

381 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 152 (Sept. 2021).

382 Id.

383 See Jake Halpern, Inside the Dark, Lucrative World of Consumer Debt Collection, N.Y. Times Magazine (Aug. 14, 2014) (describing a portfolio that was sold twice).

384 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 153 (Sept. 2021) (reporting that resale was "limited to special circumstances" (e.g., the buyer exiting the market)).

385 See In re Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., Consent Order, 2016-CFPB-0009, 5–6 (C.F.P.B. Apr. 25, 2016) ("Most accounts that are placed with Respondents for collection are transmitted through an electronic system using a collection software network such as 'You Got Claims' . . . For such electronically transmitted claims, Respondents normally received only either an Excel spreadsheet or a text file containing specific data regarding each account, or claim for a Debt. The data included in these submissions is provided in summary form only and documentation supporting the data was not included."); Commonwealth v. Lustig, Glaser & Wilson, P.C., Complaint ¶¶22–23 (Mass. Super. Ct. Dec. 21, 2015) (firm filed more than 100,000 collection lawsuits from 2011 through 2015) ("[T]he Lustig Firm regularly downloaded electronic information about alleged consumer debts from Debt Buyers in large batches . . . This information often consisted of little more than a summary electronic data file from the Debt Buyer. This summary data file was typically unaccompanied by meaningful account-level documentation—such as the original contract, monthly statements, a payment history, dispute history, and chain of title documentation—that would be necessary to establish the existence and accuracy of the debt."); Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86, 92–93 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (creditor granted first law firm access to store's electronic files on account, but second law firm—where account was transferred to file suit—only had access to consumer's basic identifying information but not credit card agreement, consumer's correspondence, payment history, or information about prior collection efforts).

386 See also § 1.5.5, infra (discussing scrubbing).

387 In re Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., Consent Order, 2016-CFPB-0009, 6 (C.F.P.B. Apr. 25, 2016).

388 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market Report 253 (Dec. 2015). See also CFPB, Consumer Credit Card Market Report 326 (Dec. 2017) ("Pre-litigation strategy generally involves the issuer or attorney sending a collection letter, sometimes including a settlement offer, before initiating the legal process.").

the law firm's name. Relying on non-attorney support staff, some law firms do not require collection attorneys to review account information before these additional dunning letters are mailed or calls are made.[389] Such practices may mislead consumers about the extent of attorney involvement in these collection efforts.[390]

If the law firm does not reach a payment agreement with the consumer as a result of these initial contacts, the next step is typically filing a collection lawsuit. A large portion of debt collection lawsuits end in default judgments[391] or in settlements[392] with unrepresented consumers[393] at the court on the day of their hearing. As a result, a typical collection action is unlikely to be closely scrutinized in many jurisdictions.

A 2021 survey of large credit card issuers reported that many paused legal collection efforts in response to various pandemic-related state restrictions and court closures, though many issuers reported the resumption of filing lawsuits in the second half of 2020.[394] In addition, "[s]ome issuers reported expanding proactive settlement offer campaigns, along with lowering the settlement threshold by five to ten percent, in order to accommodate pandemic-impacted consumers."[395]

Potential violations of the FDCPA by collection attorneys related to their unique role in filing and litigating collection lawsuits include:

- Filing a collection lawsuit in the wrong venue;[396]
- Failing to provide mandatory disclosures where the initial communication was a formal pleading in a civil action;[397]
- Suing on a time-barred debt;[398]
- Misrepresenting the consumer's liability, the amount due, or the fees or charges that are due;[399]
- Misrepresenting the source of the collection letter or the attorney's involvement (for example, by allowing a collection agency to send out a demand letter over the name of an attorney);[400]
- Misleading representations as to the effect of litigation; and[401]
- Deceptive practices in state debt collection suits against consumers.[402]

In addition to violating state or federal consumer protection laws, the actions of collection attorneys may also violate ethical rules governing attorney conduct.[403]

1.4.9 Collection Lawsuits in State Court

1.4.9.1 Number of Debt Collection Lawsuits

In the CFPB's survey of consumer experiences with debt collection, fifteen percent of survey respondents who reported being contacted about a debt said that they had been sued by a creditor or debt collector in the previous year.[404] Since the CFPB estimated that more than seventy million Americans were contacted by a creditor or debt collector about a debt in collection in the prior year,[405] this would mean that more than ten million Americans were sued on a debt during that one-year period.[406]

The National Center for State Courts (NCSC) conducted a study "of all non-domestic civil cases disposed between July 1, 2012 and June 30, 2013 in 152 courts with civil jurisdiction in 10 urban counties"[407] This study found that 64% of all civil filings were contract cases, which consisted primarily of debt collection (37%), landlord/tenant (29%), and foreclosure (17%).[408] Moreover, an additional 16% of civil cases were small claims cases for $12,000 or less, many of which were "lower-value debt collection cases."[409] Summarizing its findings, the NCSC wrote that:

> "The vast majority of civil cases that remain in state courts are debt collection, landlord/tenant, foreclosure, and small claims cases. State courts are the preferred forum for plaintiffs in these cases for the simple reason that in most jurisdictions state courts hold a monopoly on procedures to enforce judgments. Securing a judgment from a court of competent jurisdiction is the mandatory first step to being able to initiate garnishment or asset seizure proceedings."[410]

Subsequent reports by the NCSC estimated that there were 15.4 million civil cases filed in state courts in 2015, of which 51% were contract cases and 16% were small claims cases.[411]

Studies in jurisdictions around the country have also found that state courts are inundated with high volumes of collection

389 See CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 3575882, at *4 (N.D. Ohio July 25, 2018) (lawyers reviewed template but not individual accounts before demand letters are sent; firm mailed 4.2 million demand letters from July 21, 2011 to Oct. 31, 2017); CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg, & Reis Co., L.P.A., Complaint, 17-cv-817, ¶¶ 23–24 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 17, 2017); Commonwealth v. Lustig, Glaser & Wilson, P.C., Complaint ¶ 26 (Mass. Super. Ct. Dec. 21, 2015).

390 See § 7.2.3, infra.

391 See § 1.4.9.4, infra.

392 See § 1.4.9.6, infra.

393 See § 1.4.9.5, infra.

394 CFPB, The Consumer Credit Card Market 156 (Sept. 2021).

395 Id.

396 See § 10.3, infra.

397 See § 9.4, infra.

398 See § 7.4.9, infra.

399 See § 7.2.2, infra.

400 See §§ 7.2.3, 10.4, infra.

401 See § 7.2.4, infra.

402 See § 7.4.10, infra.

403 See § 16.5.3, infra.

404 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt 27 (Jan. 2017).

405 CFPB, CFPB Survey Finds Over One-In-Four Consumers Contacted By Debt Collectors Feel Threatened (Jan. 12, 2017).

406 70 * 0.15 * 100 = 10.5.

407 Paula Hannaford-Agor, et al., The Landscape of Civil Litigation in State Courts, at iii (Nat'l Center for State Courts, 2015) ("The 925,344 cases comprise approximately five percent (5%) of state civil caseloads nationally.").

408 Id. at 17, 19.

409 Id. at 17.

410 Id at v.

411 Nat'l Center for State Courts, Examining the Work of State Courts: An Overview of 2015 State Court Caseloads (2016).

lawsuits.[412] In 2021, The Debt Collection Lab began reporting debt collection lawsuit filings in multiple jurisdictions.[413]

Nationally, debt collection lawsuits also represent an increasing portion of the civil docket with the number of consumer debt lawsuits doubling from 12% to 24% of all civil cases from 1993 to 2013.[414] More recent evidence from specific states also shows that debt collection cases continue to represent a growing portion of the docket.[415]

412 See, e.g., Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (424,336 debt collection cases filed in Texas courts in fiscal year 2019); Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending Oct. 2020) at Fig. 2 (287,710 collection lawsuits were filed in the five largest counties in California from 2012 to 2017); Utah Foundation, The Justice Gap: Addressing the Unmet Legal Needs of Lower-Income Utahns (Apr. 2020) (in 2019, 62,436 debt collection lawsuits were filed in Utah—62% of all civil cases), available at https://www.utahfoundation.org; New York City Bar, Report on Legislation by the Consumer Affairs Committee and Civil Court Committee RE: A.6909-B and S.4827-B (June 2019) (100,186 consumer credit lawsuits filed in New York City Civil Courts in 2018); Mary Spector and Ann Baddour, Collection Texas-Style: An Analysis of Consumer Collection Practices in and out of the Courts, 67 Hastings L.J. 1427, 1446 (2016), citing Tex. Office of Court Admin., Annual Statistical Report for the Texas Judiciary: Fiscal Year 2015, 44 (2015) (in fiscal year 2015, 170,409 lawsuits were filed statewide in Texas to collect a debt); Paul Kiel, For Nebraska's Poor, Get Sick and Get Sued, ProPublica, Apr. 28, 2016 (in Nebraska, approximately 79,000 debt collection lawsuits were filed in 2013, and in New Mexico, 30,000 suits were filed); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (during a five year period there were 116,289 judgments in debt collection lawsuits in St. Louis City and County, Missouri; 278,566 in Cook County, Illinois; and 128,918 in Essex County, New Jersey), available at https://static.propublica.org; Jessica Mendoza, et al., Collection Claims Abuses Move Up to Higher Courts, Boston Globe, Mar. 28, 2015 (from 2004 to 2013, at least 1.2 million cases were filed in Massachusetts small claims and district court sessions by professional debt collectors), available at https://www.bostonglobe.com; Peter A. Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4,400 Lawsuits Filed By Debt Buyers, 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179 (2014) (reporting that debt buyers filed 40,796 lawsuits in 2009; 43,581 in 2010; 37,202 in 2011; 22,566 in 2012; and 24,317 in 2013), available at http://digitalcommons.law.umaryland.edu; Susan Shin and Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York (New Economy Project, June 2013) (reporting that debt collectors filed 195,105 lawsuits against New Yorkers in 2011), available at www.neweconomynyc.org; Claudia Wilner and Nasoan Sheftel-Gomes, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Low Income New Yorkers (Neighborhood Economic Development Advocacy Project, 2010) ("In New York City, debt collectors filed approximately 300,000 lawsuits per year between 2006 and 2008."), available at www.neweconomynyc.org.

413 Debt Collection Lab, Debt Collection Tracker (last visited May 26, 2021) (reporting that "in the 5 states and 216 counties we track, debt collectors filed 337,627 lawsuits from January 2020 to March 2021."), available at https://debtcollectionlab.org.

414 Erika Rickard, et al., How Debt Collectors Are Transforming the Business of State Courts: Lawsuit Trends Highlight Need to Modernize Civil Legal System 8 (The Pew Charitable Trusts, May 2020).

415 Id. at 9 (citing doubling of debt collection lawsuits in Texas from 2014 to 2018 and 48 percent increase in claims in Alaska from 2013 to 2018). See also Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (reporting that debt collection lawsuits increased 162% in Texas from 2014 to 2019).

1.4.9.2 Top Filers of Collection Lawsuits Against Consumers

While top filers vary depending on the jurisdiction, reports have highlighted types of plaintiffs as top filers of collection lawsuits against consumers in specific jurisdictions:

- Debt buyers;[416]

416 See, e.g., Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (debt buyers filed at least 46% of debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020); Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (between January 2016 and April 2020 four debt buyers filed 56% of debt collection lawsuits in Philadelphia), available at https://clsphila.org; Julia Barnard, et al, Suing-to-Intimidate: New Evidence Confirms that Oportun Abuses and Intimidates Families in Court to Collect Small-Dollar Loan Debts in California Courts (Center for Responsible Lending, Mar. 2021) at Appx. A (showing five debt buyers among the top filers of debt collection lawsuits in Los Angeles County Superior Courts from 2018–2020); Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending, Oct. 2020) at Fig. 2 (45.7% of collection lawsuits filed in the five largest counties in California from 2012 to 2017 were filed by debt buyers); Lisa Stifler, et al., Undue Burden: The Impact of Abusive Debt Collection Practices in Oregon (Center for Responsible Lending, Apr. 2018) (between 2012 and 2016 debt buyers filed 24.6% of all civil cases in Oregon circuit courts), available at https://www.responsiblelending.org; Testimony of April Kuehnhoff, National Consumer Law Center, Before the Massachusetts Joint Financial Services Committee In support of S.120/H.2811, An act relative to fairness in debt collection (Sept. 25, 2017) (in 2015 in Massachusetts, lawsuits by nine debt buyers made up 43 percent of civil, small claims, and supplementary process filings); Lisa Stifler, Debt in the Courts: The Scourge of Abusive Debt Collection Litigation and Possible Policy Solutions, Harvard Law and Policy Review Vol. 11-1, at 98 (2017) (analysis of 10-K filings by Encore Capital Group, Portfolio Recover Associates, and Square Two Financial concluded that "together [they] collected over one billion dollars annually in revenues from litigation" in 2013, 2014, and 2015); Paul Kiel, So Sue Them: What We've Learned About the Debt Collection Lawsuit Machine, ProPublica, May 5, 2016 (in three counties in Missouri in 2013, debt buyer filings accounted for 42% of lawsuits in 2013); Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 15 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) (in New York state, debt buyers were four of the top ten filers in 2014); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about debt buyer judgments in three jurisdictions), available at https://static.propublica.org; In re Encore Capital Group, No. 2015-CFPB-0022 (C.F.P.B. Sept. 9, 2015) (consent order) ("Encore has filed hundreds of thousands of lawsuits to collect Consumer Debt."), available at www.consumerfinance.gov; In re Portfolio Recovery Assoc., No. 2015-CFPB-0023 (C.F.P.B. Sept. 9, 2015) (consent order) ("In 2012 alone, PRA's internal and external counsel filed over 160,000 Debt Collection Lawsuits in state and local courts."), available at www.consumerfinance.gov; Susan Shin and Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York 3 (New Economy Project, June 2013) (in 2011 in New York, debt buyers filed more than half of the 195,105 collection lawsuits), available at www.neweconomynyc.org; Portfolio Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Feltman, 909 N.E.2d 876 (Ill. App. Ct. 2009) (brief of amici curiae Legal Assistance Found. of Metro. Chicago, Nat'l Ass'n of Consumer Advocates, and

- Banks and credit card companies;[417]
- Hospitals and other medical providers;[418]
- Utilities;[419]
- Small dollar and high-cost lenders; and[420]
- Auto lenders.[421]

1.4.9.3 Costs of Litigation

According to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's survey of third-party debt collectors, it cost between $35 and $499 to file a collection lawsuit, court service fees cost $10 to $50, the additional cost if the case went to trial was between $500 and $2000, and a garnishment cost the collector $30 per transaction.[422] In a study of Utah attorneys using a methodology developed by the National Center for State Courts, "the median cost per side to litigate a debt collection case through trial was $2698."[423]

ProPublica has argued that the lower cost of filing collection lawsuits in some locations is one of the factors contributing

Am. Ass'n of Retired Persons in support of defendant-appellee) (analysis of over 150,000 collection actions filed in Cook County, Illinois, in one year found that more than half were filed by debt buyers).

417 See, e.g., Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (Capital One filed 9% of debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020); Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (between January 2016 and April 2020 five credit card companies filed 24% of debt collection lawsuits in Philadelphia), available at https://clsphila.org; Julia Barnard, et al, Suing-to-Intimidate: New Evidence Confirms that Oportun Abuses and Intimidates Families in Court to Collect Small-Dollar Loan Debts in California Courts (Center for Responsible Lending, Mar. 2021) at Appx. A (showing five credit card companies among the top filers of debt collection lawsuits in Los Angeles County Superior Courts from 2018 -2020); Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 15 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) (in New York state, credit card companies were two of the top ten filers in 2014); Paul Kiel, At Capital One, Easy Credit and Abundant Lawsuits, ProPublica, Dec. 28, 2015 (highlighting large numbers of collection lawsuits filed by Capitol One and other credit card companies). See also Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about bank judgments in three jurisdictions), available at https://static.propublica.org.

418 See, e.g., Amanda Dunker and Elisabeth Ryden Benjamin, Discharged into Debt: A Pandemic Update (Community Service Society Jan. 2021) (from March to November 2020, 55 non-profit hospitals in New York filed 4,000 lawsuits to collect medical debts); Wendie C Thomas, et al., This Doctors Group is Owned by a Private Equity Firm and Repeatedly Sued the Poor Until We Called Them, ProPublica, Nov. 27, 2019 (reporting 4800 lawsuits filed by Southeastern Emergency Physicians in Shelby County, TN since 2017), Jay Hancock and Elizabeth Lucas, 'UVA Has Ruined Us': Health System Sues Thousands of Patients, Seizing Paychecks And Claiming Homes, Kaiser Health News, Sept. 10, 2019 (reporting that the University of Virginia Health System filed more than 36,000 debt collection lawsuits against consumers from 2012 to 2018); Wendi C. Thomas, The Nonprofit Hospital That Makes Millions, Owns a Collection Agency and Relentlessly Sues the Poor, ProPublica, June 27, 2019 (Methodist Le Bonheur Healthcare brought 8,300 lawsuits in Memphis for unpaid medical debt over a period of five years); William E. Bruhn, et al, Prevalence and Characteristics of Virginia Hospitals Suing Patients and Garnishing Wages for Unpaid Medical Bills, Journal of American Medicine (June 25, 2019) (identifying 20,054 collection lawsuits and 9,232 garnishment cases by Virginia hospitals in 2017), available at https://jamanetwork.com; Meredith Cohn and Lorraine Mirabella, Johns Hopkins Hospital sues patients, many low income, for medical debt, The Washington Post, May 20, 2019 (Johns Hopkins Hospital filed more than 2,400 lawsuits in Maryland courts since 2009 against consumers with unpaid medical bills); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about medical judgments in three jurisdictions), available at https://static.propublica.org; Paul Kiel, From the E.R. to the Courtroom: How Nonprofit Hospitals Are Seizing Patients' Wages, ProPublica, Dec. 19, 2014 (reporting about more than 11,000 lawsuits and 6,000 garnishments filed on behalf of Mosaic Life Care in St. Joseph, Missouri from 2009 to 2013).

419 See, e.g., Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 15 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) (in New York state, utility companies were two of the top ten filers in 2014); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about utility judgments in St. Louis County), available at https://static.propublica.org.

420 See, e.g., Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (Oportun filed 12% of debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020); Julia Barnard, et al, Suing-to-Intimidate: New Evidence Confirms that Oportun Abuses and Intimidates Families in Court to Collect Small-Dollar Loan Debts in California Courts (Center for Responsible Lending, Mar. 2021) at Appx. A (showing lender Oportun, Inc. as top filer of debt collection lawsuits in Los Angeles County Superior Courts from 2018–2020); Kiah Collier, et al., The Loan Company That Sued Thousands of Low-Income Latinos During the Pandemic, Pro Publica, Aug. 31, 2020 (Oportun, Inc. filed more than 47,000 lawsuits in Texas from May 2016 to July 2020); Raheem Hosseini, Exclusive: the litigious debt collectors targeting Latinos during a pandemic, The Guardian, Aug. 2, 2020 (Oportun, Inc. filed 30,000 collection lawsuits in 2019 and 14,000 in the first half of 2020 in 20 California counties); Christopher L. Peterson & David McNeill, Unwarranted: Small-Claims Court Arrest Warrants in Payday Loan Debt Collection (Feb. 2020) ("High-cost lenders dominated small-claims court dockets, accounting for over 68 percent of all small-claims court hearings."); Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about high-cost lender judgments in two jurisdictions), available at https://static.propublica.org.

421 See, e.g., Ryan Felton and Ishaan Jhaveri, How a Subprime Auto Lender Consumed Detroit With Debt and Turned Its Courthouse Into a Collection Agency, Jalopnik, Oct. 15, 2018 (reporting that subprime auto lender Credit Acceptance filed 12.18% of publicly available civil lawsuits in Detroit in 2017, up from 1.45% in 2007), available at https://jalopnik.com; Annie Waldman & Paul Kiel, Racial Disparity in Debt Collection Lawsuits: A Study of Three Metro Areas, ProPublica, Oct. 8, 2015 (reporting about auto lenders in three jurisdictions), available at https://static.propublica.org.

422 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 34 (July 2016).

423 Paula Hannaford-Agor, et al., The Landscape of Civil Litigation in State Courts 25 (National Center for State Courts, 2015), citing Paula Hannaford-Agor and Cynthia Lee, Utah: Impact of the Revisions to Rule 26 on Discovery Practice in the Utah District Courts 46–48 (Apr. 2015).

to the high number of lawsuits[424] or judgments[425] in those locations.

1.4.9.4 Default Judgments

When consumers do not appear in court for their collection lawsuits, the creditors that filed the lawsuits may be able to obtain default judgments—often without presenting any evidence and despite the fact that consumers may have legitimate defenses.

In the Consumer Financial Protection Bureaus' nationally representative survey of consumer experiences with debt collection, 74% of respondents who had been sued on a debt reported that they did not attended the court hearing.[426] In the CFPB's study of third-party debt buyers, respondents reported obtaining default judgments in sixty to ninety percent of their filed suits.[427]

Research by other groups confirms that a very high percentage of consumers do not respond to collection lawsuits[428] and that a high percentage of these collection lawsuits end in default judgments.[429] One study found that the rate of default judgments was higher for collection lawsuits brought by debt buyers than it was for other collection lawsuits.[430]

A scathing report by Human Rights Watch highlighted the role of the courts in issuing such a high volume of default judgments:

> Many courts routinely award default judgments to debt buyers . . . without scrutinizing the claims at issue. One Arizona justice of the peace aptly described this to Human Rights Watch as a "greased rail" process. Many individual courts issue thousands or even tens of thousands of no questions asked default judgments in favor of debt buyers every year.[431]

High default rates contribute to fast disposition times, enabling the court to churn through the high volume of collection lawsuits.[432] The National Center for State Courts found that 91% of debt collection contract cases were disposed of within 180 days.[433]

Consumer default does not mean that the consumer owes the debt. The consumer may never have received actual notice of the hearing[434] —potentially only learning of the collection

---

424 Paul Kiel, For Nebraska's Poor, Get Sick and Get Sued, ProPublica, Apr. 28, 2016 (noting that Nebraska, with its $45 filing fee, had 79,000 lawsuits in 2013, compared to 30,000 in New Mexico where filing fees started at $77—despite similar populations).

425 Paul Kiel, So Sue Them: What We've Learned About the Debt Collection Lawsuit Machine, ProPublica, May 5, 2016 (illustrating a significantly higher rate of judgments in Essex County, New Jersey than in Cook County, Illinois; noting that it was three times more expensive to file a collection lawsuit in Cook County).

426 CFPB, Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt 27 (Jan. 2017).

427 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations, 18 (July 2016) (not including jurisdictions where the defendant's appearance in court is necessary before the court will enter a default judgment).

428 Peter Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers, 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179, 226 (2014) (comparing the results of seven prior studies between 1967 and 2010 and finding that between 70% and 94% of consumers "failed to respond" to collection lawsuits). See also FTC, Repairing a Broken System 7 (July 2010) ("panelists from throughout the country estimated that sixty percent to ninety-five percent of consumer debt collection lawsuits result in defaults, with most panelists indicating that the rate in their jurisdictions was close to ninety percent"; collecting studies).

429 See, e.g., Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (65% of all debt collection judgments in 2020 in Texas were default judgments); Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (65% of debt collection lawsuits filed between January 2016 and April 2020 ended with default judgments for the plaintiff), available at https://clsphila.org; Paula Hannaford-Agor & Brittany Kauffman, Preventing Whack-a-Mole Management of Consumer Debt Cases at 6, n.18 (National Center for State Courts, Feb. 2020) (citing default judgment statistics in Black Hawk County, IA small claims: 63.6%; Collin County, Tx justice of the peace court: 19.7%; and West Valley City, UT small claims: 44%), available at https://iaals.du.edu; Tom Feltner, et al., Debt by Default: Debt Collection Practices in Washington 2012–2016 (Center for Responsible Lending, Mar. 2019) ("Over 80% of all debt buyer cases reviewed resulted in default judgments in favor of the plaintiff."); Lisa Stifler, et al., Undue Burden: The Impact of Abusive Debt Collection Practices in Oregon (Center for Responsible Lending, Apr. 2018) (in random sample of 300 debt collection lawsuits filed by debt buyers in Oregon between 2014 and 2016, 43.7% of cases ended in default judgments), available at https://www.responsiblelending.org; Ellen Harnick, Lisa Stifler, and Safa Sjadi, Debt Buyers Hound Coloradans in Court for Debts They May Not Owe (Center for Responsible Lending, Dec. 2016) ("A review of 375 randomly selected cases filed by four debt buyers in the county courts in five Colorado counties from 2013 through 2015 revealed that 71 percent of the cases resulted in default judgments against the individuals sued."); Mary Spector and Ann Baddour, Collection Texas-Style: An Analysis of Consumer Collection Practices in and out of the Courts, 67 Hastings Law Journal 1427, 1449 (2016) (in analysis of data for 40 Texas counties for fiscal year 2015, 31.6% of cases ended with default judgment); Susan Shin and Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York, 3 (New Economy Project, June 2013) (42% of debt collection lawsuits in New York state resulted in default judgments); Mary Spector, Debts, Defaults, and Details: Exploring the Impact of Debt Collection Litigation on Consumers and Courts, 6 Va. L. & Bus. Rev. 257, 296 (2011) (39.46% of served cases in Dallas County ended with a default judgment for the plaintiff); Claudia Wilner & Nasoan Sheftel-Gomes, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Low Income New Yorkers 6 (Neighborhood Economic Development Advocacy Project, 2010) (study of 336 cases filed by debt buyers in New York City found that 81% resulted in default judgments).

430 Susan Shin and Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York 3 (New Economy Project, June 2013) ("Overall, 42% of debt collection lawsuits resulted in default judgments—but debt buyers obtained default judgments in an estimated 62% of their cases.").

431 Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016).

432 See § 1.4.9.1, supra.

433 Paula Hannaford-Agor, et al., The Landscape of Civil Litigation in State Courts 30 (Nat'l Center for State Courts, 2015).

434 See, e.g., Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (between January 2016 and April 2020 26% of debt collection lawsuits ended with a determination of "no service"), available at https://clsphila.org; Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending, Oct. 2020) at Fig. 13 (non-service was the most frequent reason for dismissal). See also National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 12.3.11.1.2 (5th action when wages or bank account are garnished to pay the default judgment—or may not have understood the notice that they received. They may not understand how to respond to the summons, feel intimidated by the legal process, fear deportation if they appear in court, be unable to access legal advice/representation, or think that appearing in court will not make any difference. Consumers who are elderly, ill, lack child care, have no transportation, or are unable to take time off of work also face barriers to appearing at the courthouse.

Researchers studying the types of communications with consumers that will decrease the rate of default judgments have had some success increasing both the answer rate and rate of consumers who appeared in court at the first hearing.[435]

1.4.9.5 Representation by Attorneys

Studies show that the overwhelming majority of consumers are unrepresented by an attorney when they are sued on a debt.[436] However, being represented by counsel in debt collection lawsuits dramatically improves outcomes for consumers,[437] including increasing the likelihood that the case

ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing fraudulent claims of service by the process server, also known as "sewer service").

435 Access to Justice Lab, Problem of Default, available at https://a2jlab.org.

436 See Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (92% of defendants had no lawyer in debt collection lawsuits in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020); Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) (94% of defendants were not represented at any point in the collection lawsuit), available at https://clsphila.org; Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending Oct. 2020) at Fig. 14 (98.3% of consumers were not represented by an attorney); Utah Foundation, The Justice Gap: Addressing the Unmet Legal Needs of Lower-Income Utahns (Apr. 2020) (in 2019, 2% of defendants in debt collection lawsuits were represented by an attorney), available at https://www.utahfoundation.org; Kiah Collier, et al, The Loan Company That Sued Thousands of Low-Income Latinos During the Pandemic, ProPublica, Aug. 31, 2020 (in 2019 in one county in Texas 105 defendants sued by Oportun obtained lawyers out of 7,600 cases, about 1.3%), available at https://www.propublica.org; New York City Bar, Report on Legislation by the Consumer Affairs Committee and Civil Court Committee RE: A.6909-B and S.4827-B (June 2019) (96% of defendants in consumer credit actions are not represented by counsel); Tom Feltner, et al., Debt by Default: Debt Collection Practices in Washington 2012–2016 (Center for Responsible Lending, Mar. 2019) (only 1.2% of defendants were represented by an attorney); Lisa Stifler, et al., Undue Burden: The Impact of Abusive Debt Collection Practices in Oregon (Center for Responsible Lending, Apr. 2018) (in a random sample of 300 debt collection lawsuits filed by debt buyers in Oregon between 2014 and 2016, only one consumer was represented by an attorney), available at https://www.responsiblelending.org; Testimony of April Kuehnhoff, National Consumer Law Center, Before the Massachusetts Joint Financial Services Committee In support of S.120/H.2811, An act relative to fairness in debt collection (Sept. 25, 2017), citing data collected by Erika Rickard, Associate Director of Field Research at Harvard Law School's Access to Justice Lab, in September 2017 using the Massachusetts Trial Court Electronic Case Access at http://www.masscourts.org (in four Massachusetts district court small claims sessions, the percentage of consumers sued to collect consumer debts who were represented by attorneys ranged from 0.3% to 1.4% in 2016); Paul Kiel, So Sue Them: What We've Learned About the Debt Collection Lawsuit Machine, ProPublica, May 5, 2016 (99% of defendants sued by New Jersey collection law firm Pressler & Pressler did not have attorneys; 97% of defendants in debt collection cases filed in New Jersey's lower level court in 2013 did not have attorneys; 91% of defendants in Missouri debt collection cases in 2013 did not have attorneys); Samantha Liss, When a nonprofit health system outsources its ER, debt collectors follow, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Apr. 17, 2016 (reporting that in 1078 lawsuits filed by CP Medical in St. Louis, St. Louis County, and St. Charles County between December 2, 2014 and March 10, 2016, only 17 defendants had an attorney); Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) (consumers had legal representation in 3 out of 247 cases in a randomized sample of lawsuits filed in New York by debt buyers in 2013 that resulted in judgments); Utah State Courts, Supreme Court Task Force to Examine Limited Legal Licensing (Nov. 18, 2015) (98% of respondents were self represented in debt collection cases), available at http://www.utcourts.gov; Peter Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers, 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179 (2014) (consumers were represented by an attorney in only 2% of debt collection lawsuits in Maryland); Susan Shin & Claudia Wilner, The Debt Collection Racket in New York (New Economy Project, June 2013) (attorneys represented consumers in only 2% of debt collection cases filed in New York City); Mary Spector, Debts, Defaults, and Details: Exploring the Impact of Debt Collection Litigation on Consumers and Courts, 6 Va. L. & Bus. Rev. 257, 289 (2011) (fewer than 10% of defendants served in debt collection lawsuits were represented by an attorney in Dallas County, Texas); Claudia Wilner & Nasoan Sheftel-Gomes, Debt Deception: How Debt Buyers Abuse the Legal System to Prey on Low Income New Yorkers 1 (Neighborhood Economic Development Advocacy Project, 2010) (only 1% of people sued by debt buyers in New York City are represented by counsel). See also Paula Hannaford-Agor, et al., The Landscape of Civil Litigation in State Courts 32 (National Center for State Courts, 2015) (noting that defendants were represented in 13% of small collection cases but not distinguishing between debt collection and other small claims cases).

437 See Reinvestment Fund, Debt Collection in Philadelphia (Mar. 2021) ("31% of cases where the defendant had representation ended in a judgment for the defendant (by plaintiff default or on the merits), compared with only 1% of cases where the defendant did not have representation"), available at https://clsphila.org; Mary Spector and Ann Baddour, Collection Texas-Style: An Analysis of Consumer Collection Practices in and out of the Courts, 67 Hastings Law Journal 1427, 1463 (2016) (in cases where defendant was represented by an attorney, defendant won 25.92% of the time and plaintiff won 15.38% of the time; in cases where defendant was unrepresented, defendant won 12.73% of the time and plaintiff won 52.73% of the time); Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) ("Legal aid and consumer rights attorneys across several states told Human Rights Watch that they win the overwhelming majority of the cases they defend against debt buyers."); Peter Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers, 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179, 2011 (2014) ("Of the 13% of defendants who proceeded pro se . . . debt buyers obtained judgment by affidavit, consent, default, or trial 47% of the time, and recovered 62% of the amount sought in the complaints . . . Of the 2% of defendants who had a lawyer enter an appearance in the case, debt buyers obtained an affidavit, consent, or default judgment only 15% of the time, and recovered only 21% of the principal amount sought in the complaints."); Mary Spector, Debts, Defaults, and Details: Exploring the Impact of Debt Collection Litigation on Consumers and Courts, 6 Va. L. & Bus. Rev. 257, 297 (2011) (11% of cases ended with affirmative recovery for defendant, default judgment, or agreed judgment when will simply be dismissed.[438] Having access to legal advice can also play a critical role in alerting clients to their rights prior to the filing of debt collection actions. Moreover, consumers without access to affordable legal services may turn to predatory debt relief scams for assistance,[439] often with disastrous financial results.

Unrepresented consumers have to navigate a variety of challenges that may include: filing a response to the complaint, answering discovery, and arguing their case before a judge or magistrate. Some defenses may be hard to identify without any legal training. Moreover, once identified, unrepresented consumers may find it hard to explain their defenses to a court. Judges may be reluctant to probe the plaintiffs' cases too much for fear of violating judicial neutrality or simply because they are so overwhelmed by the number of cases in their docket that they do not want to waste too much time responding to any single case.[440]

In contrast, plaintiffs in collection actions are almost always represented by counsel. Indeed, some states require that a corporation only appear in court through counsel and not through a non-attorney employee.[441] In a 2015 study of civil filings in ten urban areas, the National Center for State Courts found that "[s]mall claims dockets had an unexpectedly high proportion (76%) of plaintiffs who were represented by attorneys, which suggests that small claims courts, which were originally developed as a forum for self-represented litigants to obtain access to courts through simplified procedures, have become the forum of choice for attorney-represented plaintiffs in lower-value debt collection cases."[442]

1.4.9.6 Hallway Conferences and Judgeless Courtrooms

When consumers do appear in court for their collection lawsuit, collection attorneys typically try to convince them to settle rather than appearing before the judge or magistrate. Court officials often direct consumers to speak to these attorneys.[443] Consumers may feel pressured to settle instead of disputing the debt in court.[444] Moreover, unrepresented consumers who are appearing in court for the first time are at a significant disadvantage against collection attorneys who have frequently represented creditors in hundreds or thousands of cases, often in the very same courtroom.[445] Consumers may not understand that these attorneys are not officers of the court or that the "advice" of these attorneys to settle is not necessarily in the consumer's best interest.[446]

Human Rights Watch has also reported on the existence of "judgeless" courtrooms in at least four states.[447] In one such courtroom in Philadelphia, consumers were summoned to a courtroom, where collection attorneys ran the proceedings, escorting consumers one at a time into a private meeting room at the back of the court to pressure them into entering repayment agreements.[448] Although an employee of the court was present, he never addressed the defendants or explained that they had a right to a hearing before a judge.[449] The trial the consumer was represented by counsel as compared to 40% of cases that ended with affirmative recovery for defendant, default judgment, or agreed judgment when the consumer appeared pro se).

438 Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending Oct. 2020) at Fig. 14 (100% of cases where the consumer was represented ended in dismissal); Kiah Collier, et al, The Loan Company That Sued Thousands of Low-Income Latinos During the Pandemic, ProPublica, Aug. 31, 2020 (reporting that represented consumers had their cases "dropped 96% of the time before a ruling"), available at https://www.propublica.org; Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016) ("Some attorneys reported that if they advanced a vigorous defense, debt buyers often simply dropped the case."); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342, 1350 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (noting that "consumers who retained attorneys were almost four times more likely to have their cases dismissed" by defendant); Mary Spector, Debts, Defaults, and Details: Exploring the Impact of Debt Collection Litigation on Consumers and Courts, 6 Va. L. & Bus. Rev. 257, 297 (2011) (82% of cases were dismissed when the consumer was represented by counsel as compared to 53% of cases that were dismissed when the consumer appeared pro se).

439 See § 1.3.9, supra.

440 See Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 61–62 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016).

441 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.3.8 (5th ed. 2020) (discussing state requirements that a collector retain an attorney to bring suit), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

442 Paula Hannaford-Agor, et al., The Landscape of Civil Litigation in State Courts, p. iv–v (National Center for State Courts, 2015). See also Texas Appleseed, Debt, Access to Justice and Racial Equity: An Analysis of Consumer Debt Collection Lawsuits in Texas and Recommended Reforms (Apr. 2021) (81% of plaintiffs suing to collect a debt had a lawyer in Harris County, Texas justice courts from January 1, 2018 to June 30, 2020); Testimony of April Kuehnhoff, National Consumer Law Center, Before the Massachusetts Joint Financial Services Committee In support of S.120/H.2811, An act relative to fairness in debt collection (September 25, 2017), citing data collected by Erika Rickard, Associate Director of Field Research at Harvard Law School's Access to Justice Lab, in September 2017 using the Massachusetts Trial Court Electronic Case Access at http://www.masscourts.org (a study of four Massachusetts district court small claims sessions found that, in cases filed to collect consumer debts, between 85.7% and 94.9% of plaintiffs were represented by an attorney in 2016).

443 See, e.g., Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 54–57 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016).

444 See, id.; Patrick Lunsford, Arm Data Exchange Standards Focus of FTC/CFPB Collection Roundtable (insideARM, June 7, 2013) (Maryland Assistant Attorney General accused collection industry of using conversations with consumers to "coerce" settlements).

445 See Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 53 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016).

446 See id. at 56.

447 Id. at 57.

448 Id. at 58.

449 Id.

commissioner reported that defendants agreed to pay in eighty percent of cases.[450]

One study in Maryland found that the majority of consent judgments were for the full amount of the complaint.[451] Indeed, consumers may believe that their only option was agreeing to pay the full amount that they allegedly owe.[452]

1.4.10 Using Arbitration to Collect Consumer Debts

In the early 2000s, hundreds of thousands of debt collection suits were initiated in perfunctory arbitration proceedings before the National Arbitration Forum (NAF) where the NAF would receive a bare-bones complaint and issue default rulings without any hearing or additional evidence being submitted.[453] A state enforcement action[454] put a stop to National Arbitration Forum (NAF)'s use of arbitration proceedings in collection suits. The American Arbitration Association (AAA) has refused to conduct any arbitration seeking to collect a consumer debt.[455]

As discussed in NCLC's Collection Actions § 3.2.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, creditors could still seek to utilize other arbitration forums to collect consumer debts. NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 12 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, discusses strategies for representing consumers.

Alternatively, as discussed in Collection Actions § 3.2.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, consumers may seek to invoke arbitration agreements after being sued in court.

Arbitration can also come up in the context of an FDCPA lawsuit and is discussed at § 11.3, infra.

1.4.11 Collection on the Judgment

Once a court judgment issues against the consumer, the judgment creditor is able to use a variety of powerful postjudgment remedies to collect from the judgment debtor. Specific remedies vary from state to state but may include garnishment of wages[456] or bank accounts,[457] liens on property,[458] or the ability to levy on personal property.[459] These collection tools are subject to state and federal limits that exempt certain income and property from collection.[460]

ADP, the nation's largest payroll company, analyzed payroll data for thirteen million employees, finding that 3% of all employees had wages taken for a consumer debt in 2013[461]—an estimated four million American workers.[462] A subsequent national study by ADP using 2016 payroll data found that a nearly identical 2.9% of all employees had wages garnished for consumer debts and student loans, and highlighted some states with much higher rates of wage garnishment.[463]

Another significant issue that consumers face postjudgment is the addition of fees and interests to the principal of the judgment.[464] According to the National Center for State Courts,

450 Id. at 59.

451 Peter Holland, Junk Justice: A Statistical Analysis of 4400 Lawsuits Filed by Debt Buyers, 26 Loy. Consumer L. Rev. 179, 213–214 (2014) (for unrepresented consumers who did not file notice of intention to defend, 79% of consent judgments were for amount demanded in complaint; for self-represented consumers who did file notice of intention to defend, 69% of consent judgments were for full amount).

452 Chris Albin-Lackey, Rubber Stamp Justice: US Courts, Debt Buying Corporations, and the Poor 55 (Human Rights Watch, Jan. 2016).

453 These abusive practices are discussed in more detail at National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 11.2 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

454 State v. Nat'l Arbitration Forum (Minn. Dist. Ct. Hennepin Cty. July 17, 2009) (consent judgment).

455 See, e.g., Am. Arbitration Ass'n, Notice on Consumer Debt Collection Arbitrations, available at www.adr.org (describing AAA moratorium on consumer debt collection actions). But see CFPB, Arbitration Study § 5.6.4 (Mar. 2015) (identifying 24 filings during the relevant study period that likely conflicted with AAA's moratorium).

456 See, e.g., Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection Act (Center for Responsible Lending, Oct. 2020) at Fig. 16 (study about debt buyer lawsuits in California found that 27.3% of cases ended in wage garnishment); Robyn Dorsey and Marceline White, No Exit: How Maryland's Debt Collection Practices Deepen Poverty & Widen the Racial Wealth Gap (Maryland Consumer Rights Coalition, June 2018) (48,868 Marylanders faced wage garnishment in 2016); Ellen Harnick, Lisa Stifler, and Safa Sjadi, Debt Buyers Hound Coloradans in Court for Debts They May Not Owe (Center for Responsible Lending, Dec. 2016) (38% of collection lawsuits in a sample of 375 cases filed by debt buyers resulted in wage garnishment).

457 See, e.g., Robyn Dorsey and Marceline White, No Exit: How Maryland's Debt Collection Practices Deepen Poverty & Widen the Racial Wealth Gap (Maryland Consumer Rights Coalition, June 2018) (27,744 Marylanders faced bank account seizures in 2016); Paul Kiel, So Sue Them: What We've Learned About the Debt Collection Lawsuit Machine, ProPublica, May 5, 2016 ("From 2009 through 2013, plaintiffs in Missouri took at least $48 million from debtors' bank accounts — about 14 percent of the $339 million garnished during those years, mostly through debtors' wages.").

458 See, e.g., Lisa Stifler, et al., Undue Burden: The Impact of Abusive Debt Collection Practices in Oregon (Center for Responsible Lending, Apr. 2018) (in random sample of 300 debt collection lawsuits filed by debt buyers in Oregon between 2014 and 2016, liens were placed on property in 47.7% of cases), available at https://www.responsiblelending.org.

459 See, e.g., Robyn Dorsey and Marceline White, No Exit: How Maryland's Debt Collection Practices Deepen Poverty & Widen the Racial Wealth Gap (Maryland Consumer Rights Coalition, June 2018) (27,744 Marylanders faced property garnishment in 2016).

460 See generally Carolyn Carter, No Fresh Start in 2020: Will States Let Debt Collectors Push Families Into Poverty In The Wake of a Pandemic? (National Consumer Law Center, Oct. 2020); National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 13 to 15 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

461 ADP Research Institute, Garnishment The Untold Story 8 (2014). See also ADP Research Institute, The U.S. Wage Garnishment Landscape: Through the Lens of the Employer 7 (2017) (study of wage garnishment with 2016 payroll data found that the rate of garnishment for consumer debt remained the same), available at https://www.adp.com.

462 Paul Kiel, Unseen Toll: Wages of Millions Seized to Pay Past Debts, ProPublica, Sept. 15, 2014.

463 ADP Research Institute, The U.S. Wage Garnishment Landscape: Through the Lens of the Employer (2017) (Indiana: 5.6%, Wisconsin: 4.3%, Michigan: 5%), available at https://www.adp.com.

464 See, e.g., Julia Barnard, et al., Court System Overload: The State of Debt Collection in California after the Fair Debt Buyer Protection

"[t]he average (mean) postjudgment interest rate is 7.63%, but rates ranged considerably from 3.5% in New Jersey (1.5% for small claims cases) to 12% in Kentucky, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Vermont."[465] Additionally, some states apply compound rather than simple interest postjudgment, exacerbating the impact of postjudgment interest.[466]

In order to make use of these postjudgment remedies, states generally make postjudgment discovery proceedings available to creditors to force judgment debtors to answer questions about their assets. The creditor may have the right to issue interrogatories to the debtor, summon the debtor to a debtor's examination to answer questions in person, and issue a subpoena duces tecum requiring the debtor to produce assets or records.[467]

The ACLU reports that, "[i]n 44 states, judges—including district court civil judges, small-claims court judges, clerk-magistrates, and justices of the peace—are allowed to issue [civil] arrest warrants for failure to appear at postjudgment proceedings or for failure to provide information about finances."[468] As a result, judgment debtors may make payments—including using exempt income—to avoid arrest.

1.5 Use of Technology in Debt Collection

1.5.1 Collection Management System

Many collectors use sophisticated software to "maintain [ ] account-level information about debts in collection, make [ ] the information available to individual collectors, and track [ ] account activity such as calls made, the outcome of discussions with consumers, and payments made."[469] In a 2020 TransUnion survey of debt collection agencies, 73% reported using collection management software and 35% reported using compliance software.[470]

Debt collectors may enter coded comments in their database to summarize interactions with consumers. A list of common debt collector codes is found at Appendix G, infra.

In an effort to motivate individual debt collectors and maximize their productivity, collection agencies may adopt techniques from video games such as allowing agents to monitor their performance and set targets, "level-up" based on amount collected, see their rank within the collection agency, obtain badges that reward achievement, or engage in competitions between agents, teams, or offices.[471] Some agencies are also using gamification tactics as part of their compliance training.[472]

1.5.2 Websites and Portals

Many collectors maintain their own websites, which may need to be copied or downloaded (using software created for that purpose) in order to preserve the information for evidentiary purposes, since web pages change frequently at some sites. Older versions of a web page are often available on www.archive.org.

A 2020 TransUnion survey of collection agencies reported that 66% or respondents used online payment portals.[473] An earlier CFPB study of fifty-eight third-party collection agencies reported that 86% accepted payments online.[474]

Beyond accepting online payments, some collectors are using their websites to facilitate communication with consumers.[475] One survey of collectors reported that forty percent of respondents maintain a website that allows consumers to dispute debts electronically.[476] Respondents to a 2018 survey about the use of technology by collection agencies indicated that 9.3% of respondents used virtual negotiation technology.[477]

Collectors may also provide "live help" options that allow consumers to chat with collection agencies online rather than talking to someone over the phone. A 2020 survey of collection agencies reported that 11% were using chatbot, digital assistant, or other communication using AI.[478]

Act (Center for Responsible Lending, Oct. 2020) at Fig. 17 (Study in California found that interest on judgments ranged from $0 to $9012, attorney fees ranged from $0 to $2048, and court fees ranged from $0 to $949).

465 Paula Hannaford-Agor & Brittany Kauffman, Preventing Whack-a-Mole Management of Consumer Debt Cases at 9–10 (National Center for State Courts, Feb. 2020) (based on allowable postjudgment interest rate for each state effective May 23, 2019), available at https://iaals.du.edu.

466 Dalié Jiménez, Ending Perpetual Debts, Houston L. Rev. Vol. 55, No. 3, 617 (2018).

467 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 16.2.1 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

468 Jennifer Turner, American Civil Liberties Union, A Pound of Flesh: The Criminalization of Private Debt 6 (2018). See also National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 16.2.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; Am. Civil Liberties Union & Brennan Ctr. for Justice, Comment to CFPB Regarding Debt Collection Rulemaking, No. CFPB-2013-0033 (Feb. 28, 2014) (citing statistics about use of civil contempt), available at https://www.aclu.org.

469 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 24 (July 2016).

470 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

471 FidoTrack, Gamification: Supercharge Agent Production, available at www.fidotrack.com; Noble Systems, Noble Gamification Software Improves Productivity, available at www.noblesys.com.

472 Anne Resse May, "Achievement Unlocked: Compliance training gets an upgrade thanks to new tech tools" Collector, 10–11 (July 2018), available at online.collector.com.

473 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

474 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 33 (July 2016) (50/58 *100 = 86.2%).

475 See, e.g., Aite, Beyond the Call Center: Emerging Strategies for Collecting Consumer Debt (Mar. 2019) (prepared for FICO) (discussing online self-service portals).

476 Josh Adams, Business Practices and Capabilities within the Debt Collection Industry (ACA International Nov. 2016).

477 BillingTree, Collection Agency Operations and Technology Survey (2018).

478 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

1.5.3 Telephone Technologies

In the CFPB's survey of fifty-eight third-party collection agencies, all respondents with more than thirteen collection agents reported providing a toll free number.[479]

Collection agencies may make audio recording of collection telephone calls.[480] Eighty-three percent of respondents to the CFPB's survey of third-party collection agencies reported that they recorded all calls with the majority keeping the recordings for two years or more.[481] Supervisors at some collection agencies purport to monitor some telephone calls directly while other use software to analyze calls.[482]

Collectors frequently use automatic telephone dialing systems ("autodialers") to dial thousands of numbers in a short period of time without human intervention.[483] Autodialer technology permits debt collectors to greatly increase their number of outgoing calls per day. Collectors using autodialer technology or prerecorded messages, must also comply with the Telephone Consumer Protection Act.[484] A survey of collection agencies in 2020 reported that 39% of respondents used an auto dialer.[485]

Interactive Voice Response or ("IVR") allows computers to recognize voice responses or numbers pressed on a landline phone or cellphone. A 2020 TransUnion survey of collectors reported that 28% of respondents use Interactive Voice Response technology.[486] This technology can be used by collectors for both outbound calls (e.g., identifying when a call connects with a consumer and routing it to a live agent) and inbound calls (e.g., accepting credit card payments from consumers over the phone).[487]

Some collectors are using virtual collection agents to answer calls with the hope that such technology can provide better natural language recognition and be trained to handle a greater variety of interactions with consumers.[488]

Some collectors are using mobile phones for bill payment. For example, one survey of collectors found that 18.7% were using "mobile device bill presentment and payment" and 13.3% were using QR code payment.[489]

As the name implies, "ringless voicemail" delivers prerecorded voicemail messages to voicemail boxes without causing phones to ring.[490] The phones then notify consumers that there is a voicemail message (based on the settings for the individual phone) and consumers can access the message. A 2020 survey of collection agencies found that 10% of respondents used ringless voicemail.[491] For more about ringless voicemail technology and possible violations of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), see Federal Deception Law § 6.3.2 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Telephone systems are able to transmit to the recipient a fake caller identification or capturing caller identification from consumers. Both of these issues are discussed at § 14.3.3, infra.

1.5.4 Email, Text, and Social Media

A 2020 survey of collection agencies reports that 59% of collectors communicate with consumers by email, 22% via text, and 2% via social media, compared to 93% by letter and 87% by manually dialed telephone calls.[492]

Email, text, and social media communications are all addressed in the CFPB's debt collection regulations, effective November 30, 2021.[493] A summary of those provisions, found at § 1.1.1.7, supra, indicates the various sections of this treatise where those provisions are examined in more detail.

Previously, in 2016, the FTC warned about compliance issues related to the use of text messages and social media communications by debt collectors,[494] and the CFPB is a member of an interagency group that issued social media guidance in 2013.[495] New York state has also adopted regulations regarding debt collection emails.[496]

479 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 33 (July 2016).

480 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020) (59% of collection agencies reported recording calls), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

481 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 24 (July 2016) (48/58 * 100 = 82.8%).

482 See discussion of speech analytics in § 1.5.5, infra.

483 For a discussion of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act's definition of autodialers, see § 14.3.2.3, infra, and National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

484 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

485 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

486 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

487 Phil Britt, ARM Firms Leverage IVR Technology to Lower Costs (InsideArm, Sept. 14, 2009), available at https://www.insidearm.com.

488 Chris Repholz, The Rise of the Collector Bot (insideARM, June 12, 2020) ("Today, many types of calls [to MRS Associates] such as disputes, fraud, bankruptcy, and deceased notifications no longer are handled by a live agent"), available at insidearm.com. See also Interactions, Interactions Brings Coversational AI to Collections; Spurs Industry Transformation Amid Record Call Volume (July 22, 2020), available at http://interactions.com.

489 BillingTree, Collection Agency Operations and Technology Survey (2018).

490 See Silbaugh v. Censtar Energy Corp., 2018 WL 4558409 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 21, 2018) (describing ringless voicemail).

491 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

492 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

493 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2021).

494 Colin Hector, Debt collectors: You may 'like' social media and texts, but are you complying with the law? (FTC, Mar. 28, 2016).

495 Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council, Social Media: Consumer Compliance Risk Management Guidance (Dec. 11, 2013), available at https://library.nclc org. See Appx. B.4, infra.

496 N.Y. Comp. Codes R & Regs. tit. 23, § 1.6.

Collectors using text messages must also comply with the Telephone Consumer Protection Act.[497] Electronic communications that replace writings must also comply with the federal E-Sign Act.[498]

1.5.5 Collection Analytics

Debt buyers and debt collectors regularly gather data about consumers and also about their own internal collection practices. Increasingly, they use analytics software to evaluate this data and make decisions based on their evaluation.

Services exist to help debt buyers make decisions regarding which debt portfolios to purchase[499] and provide real time portfolio monitoring that notifies collectors when specific information changes.[500] Portfolio analytics may also be used to score particular accounts so that debt collectors can target their collection efforts to the accounts that they believe are most likely to pay[501] or select specific criteria for particular collection techniques.[502] For consumer advocates, the use of analytics raise questions about privacy, disparate treatment based on demographic data like race or gender, and the potential for unauthorized use of credit report data.

Companies provide products that will "scrub" portfolios for certain types of accounts including: "bankruptcy, deceased, possible military indicator, cell phone, fraud, [and] litigious debtor."[503] Identified accounts may be marked for special treatment or excluded from collection.

Analytics can be used to personalize the content or tone of a collection communication, the mode of communication (phone call, letter, email, etc.), or even the specific debt collector assigned to contact that consumer.[504] Systems can also learn from engagement with prior communications (e.g., did the consumer click on the link in that email or sign up for a payment plan with a particular collector) in order to tailor future messages.[505]

Collectors can also use analytic software to record and evaluate collection calls. Speech analysis may either be conducted while the call is ongoing or performed on a recording after the fact.[506] Here is one company's description of its real-time speech analytics product:

> EurekaLive: CallMiner's real-time solution, using the same analytical technology to provide QA and alerts in real-time to supervisors and agents, monitoring in-progress calls for the presence or absence of specific language or acoustic characteristics such as escalation attempts, churn language, profanity, compliance scripts, or high emotion. EurekaLive Agent Assistant monitors every live call in real time (within 3–10 seconds), offering script compliance monitoring, emotion detection, next-best-action guidance, event alerting, and automated context-driven workflow initiation directly to agents.[507]

Debt collectors using speech analytics may have the ability to issue reports about individual agents that contain data such as the frequency with which they failed to provide required information, deviated from the script, or used prohibited

497 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.7 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

498 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c). See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 11.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

499 See, e.g., Experian, Debt Portfolio Evaluator: Perceptive new analysis tool for debt buyers and debt sellers (Dec. 2008) (listing sample output data to be used in bidding on portfolios), available at www.experian.com; TransUnion, Identify portfolio risk and take action sooner (advertising "up-to-date estimations of portfolio value" for up to 300,000 records in less than 48 hours), available at www.transunion.com. See also Shane Shifflett and Justin Scheck, Most Big Debt Collectors Backed Off During the Pandemic. One Pressed Ahead., Wall St. J., Apr. 7, 2021 (mentioning Sherman Financial's use of computer analytics to estimate portfolio profitability).

500 See, e.g., Aite, Beyond the Call Center: Emerging Strategies for Collecting Consumer Debt (Mar. 2019) (prepared for FICO) ("another important data point executives track is changes to individual borrowers' financial health, typically measured by changes either in credit risk scores or individual attributes contained within credit files"); Equifax, Collection Insights (2012) (providing a list of "triggers" that can be set up to monitor portfolios on a daily basis), available at www.equifax.com; Experian, Daily Monitoring of Collection Accounts (daily monitoring of selected "triggers"), available at www.experian.com; TransUnion, Account Prioritization, available at www.transunion.com.

501 See, e.g., Aite, Beyond the Call Center: Emerging Strategies for Collecting Consumer Debt (Mar. 2019) (prepared for FICO) ("Some collectors have developed specialized scorecards for accounts deemed particularly high-risk, which include recommendations on the best recovery strategy."); TransUnion, CreditVision Recovery Scores ("Data elements not found in traditional models, such as balances, credit limits, past due summaries and 30 months of account history, provide a 360-degree view into how a consumer's behavior has trended over time. This insight enables you to identify and prioritize those most willing and able to pay—saving you time and money."), available at www.transunion.com.

502 See, e.g., Aite, Beyond the Call Center: Emerging Strategies for Collecting Consumer Debt (Mar. 2019) (prepared for FICO) ("several debt collection executives note the importance of using analytics to determine which accounts should be placed with third-party collectors (and the optimal terms of such a placement) or sold"); ScoreData, Debt Management and Collection Analytics (Customer Segmentation) (Aug. 1, 2016) ("Our predictive solutions segment the customers using their demographics, collection data based on their risk profile but also do analysis to find the most suitable treatment for each segment."), available at www.scoredata.com.

503 See, e.g., Experian, Identify Bankrupt, Possible Military, Deceased and Other High Risk Accounts Before It's Too Late (discussing FirstSweep), available at https://www.experian.com; TransUnion, Inventory Segmentation: Scrub your inventory to mitigate risk and enhance recoveries, available at https://www.transunion.com; CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 3575882, at *4 (N.D. Ohio July 25, 2018) (describing law firm "scrubbing").

504 Robert J. Szczerba, Which Industry Is Next For A.I. Disruption? The Answer Might Surprise You, Forbes, Apr. 26, 2017.

505 Ryan Lawler, Collectly is moving debt collection online (TechCrunch, Mar. 28, 2017).

506 Compare Castel, Upload, Transcribe and EXPLORE Call Audio Recordings Easily, available at www.castel.com, with Castel, Castel DetectTM LIVE Speech Analytics, available at www.castel.com.

507 CallMiner, The Inner Circle Guide to Customer Contact Analytics (Aug. 2014), available at http://callminer.com.

terms.[508] Speech analytics software that transcribes recordings may be searchable for particular keywords.[509]

In the CFPB's survey of third-party collection agencies, seventeen out of fifty-eight respondents used speech analytics.[510] The smallest collection agency that reported using speech analytics had eighty-three employees.[511] In a 2020 survey of collection agencies, 18% reported using speech analytics.[512]

508 See, e.g., FICO, FICO Engagement Analyzer ("Engagement Analyzer detects and reports compliance and policy violations in real time, with alerts for immediate corrective action. Managers use analytics to identify collectors who require additional compliance training."), available at www.fico.com; Nexidia, Remain compliant and avoid risk with Nexidia Interaction Analytics ("Analyze each and every interaction to quickly identify all occurrences or absences of mandatory disclosures or use of inappropriate language or behavior and track to an individual level."), available at www.nexidia.com.

509 See, e.g., Castel, Upload, Transcribe and EXPLORE Call Audio Recordings Easily (calls are transcribed and may be searched for keywords), available at www.castel.com; Voci, Speech Analytics (product "automatically transcribes audio into searchable text"), available at https://vocitec.com.

510 CFPB, Study of third-party debt collection operations 34 (July 2016).

511 Id.

512 TransUnion, A Year of Pivots, Challenges and Opportunities: The Collections Industry in 2020 (2020), available at https://solutions.transunion.com.

Chapter 2 Overview of Initial Steps in Bringing an FDCPA Case

2.1 Introduction

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA), 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692 to 1692p, and its implementing rules under Regulation F, 12 C.F.R. Part 1006 (effective November 30, 2021), provide powerful tools for consumers who have been harassed, abused, or treated unfairly by debt collectors. Bringing a claim under the FDCPA involves many different, complex steps. This chapter provides a brief overview of some of the initial steps an attorney must consider when bringing an FDCPA claim. Each section will provide citations to other chapters in this treatise that provide more detailed information about each topic.

2.2 Initial Interview

2.2.1 Strategy for Initial Interview

An initial interview with a prospective client who has been subjected to debt collection harassment may be lengthy. After debt collection contacts are identified as a core legal problem, all available documents must be gathered, the validity of the debt should be examined, damages ascertained, and the availability of witnesses explored. Only then is the lawyer in a position to assess the case properly, chart future action, and counsel the client. As a result, an initial interview may last an hour or longer. If the case is accepted, the interview should conclude with an explanation of the attorney's retainer and fees,[1] a cautious description of the consumer's claims, and a discussion of the debtor's responsibility on the underlying debt. The retainer, or another document, should include written settlement authority, including issues related to damages, costs, and attorney fees.

An attorney new to this area of practice should spend some time prior to the interview learning about abusive debt collection techniques to help clarify debt collection incidents that may have been confusing to the potential client. Reading Chapter 1, supra, is a good start. Reading 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692c to 1692i and Chapters 5 to 10 infra, would also be helpful. This treatise's digital version contains interview checklists that may be helpful as well. See Appendix F, infra, for instructions about how to access Practice Tools in online companion materials.

It is advisable to let the client control the interview's early stages. This allows the client to tell their story, builds the client's trust and confidence in the interviewer, and avoids repeated interruption of their narrative. After the client finishes, the lawyer should clarify the facts and start to determine the client's legal objectives. The client's goals and desires are paramount in determining the course of action. In formulating the direction to pursue, counsel must advise of the various remedies available.[2]

If an action for debtor harassment is consistent with the facts and the client's general objectives, questioning should begin to focus on the number, sequence, quality, and content of the collection contacts. If the client is uncertain of the dates of the contacts, it may be worthwhile to ask them to reconstruct the sequence of events beginning at the time the debt was incurred, then moving to payment difficulties, and then to collection contacts. Such reconstruction may be most easily accomplished by referring to the documents at hand, that is, collection letters. If any collection letters are missing, their availability and content should be determined. Asking the client to recall significant events such as birthdays, holidays, and anniversaries may help them further develop this chronology.

When dealing with a debt collection agency or collection attorney, the most promising remedies usually are provided by the FDCPA[3], state statutes[4], and in egregious cases, tort law.[5]

2.2.2 Questions to Uncover Damages

Once a sequence of events has been developed, the client should be instructed to describe fully the events during and after each harassing contact.[6] Probing questions should be asked to identify corroborating witnesses to the contacts and damages and to determine the availability of documentary evidence, such as dunning letters and their envelopes, and telephone, pharmacy, and doctor's bills. When the client describes a harassing collection contact, the interviewer should ask general questions about how the consumer felt immediately afterward, for example, "How did you feel when you put the receiver down after the phone call?" More detailed, probing questions are likely to provoke additional recollection, for example, "So you felt upset after you were called a liar on the telephone?"

Consumers abused by a debt collector may be very upset recalling the abuse. Lawyers untrained in dealing with clients' feelings directly may shy away from questions that may evoke strong emotions. However, such questions are essential to 1 For sample retainer agreements, see Appendix F, infra, for instructions about how to access the Practice Tools through online companion materials.

2 See §§ 11.1, 11.8, 11.9, 11.10, infra.

3 See Ch. 3 to 13, infra.

4 See §§ 16.2, 16.3, infra.

5 See Ch. 15, infra.

6 A sample series of questions useful in preparing client interviews is available online as companion material to this treatise. It should not be used as a questionnaire—clients will become more relaxed and express themselves better and more helpfully in the personal atmosphere of an extemporaneous initial interview than in an interview that appears to follow a highly structured format—but it may be helpful as a checklist.

determine the degree of emotional distress and injury suffered by a client.[7] If the client recalls intense emotional distress, they should be asked whether they cried, took medication, discussed the problem with a physician, friend, or anyone else, lost sleep, experienced nausea or vomiting, etc.[8] The names and phone numbers of potential witnesses who observed the distress should be obtained as they may be more convincing witnesses. All these questions are necessary to determine the existence and extent of compensable damages, which may be a prerequisite to some state causes of action.[9] Direct, probing questions should be asked after each collection contact is described. Section 1.3.1.3, supra, discusses the mental health effects of debt on consumers.

Clearly courts will award damages for emotional stress resulting from collection harassment.[10] However, many practitioners seem to neglect to make even a routine inquiry about the stress suffered by harassed debtors. Moreover, many harassed consumers will not volunteer information about such suffering, not realizing its legal relevance, not believing the lawyer will want to listen to such private suffering, not wanting to remind themselves of this painful experience, not willing to expose their vulnerability to harassment or what they may believe is emotional weakness, or because of their shame of being financially distressed.

Many practitioners seem to fear opening the floodgates of the discussion of such emotional issues due to time pressures or uncertainty about their ability to control an interview delving into intense emotions. And for many types of claims with which attorneys deal, stress damages are infrequent. However, delving into the client's suffering is central to the legal assessment of debtor harassment cases.

It is important to explore the full extent of emotional distress resulting from collection harassment while it is still fairly fresh in the client's mind. Most people will "bury" such unpleasant memories if counsel waits until just before trial to discuss them with the client. Questions should be framed about the stress surrounding each collection contact—its intensity, how it manifested itself, its duration, any witnesses of the stress, its treatment, including over-the-counter medications, and any other independent causes of the stress. Full and early inquiry about stress-related suffering will improve counsel's preparation of a debt collection harassment case, and will markedly increase damage settlements and awards.

Section 1.3.1.1, supra, discusses the extent of consumer debt in the U.S., including the amounts in default and the types of debt most consumer incur. Section 1.3.1.3, supra, examines the mental health consequences of consumer debt. For a detailed list of injuries and symptoms courts have found that are related to stress, see § 11.8.2.5, infra.

2.2.3 Examining the Validity of the Debt

After developing a chronology of collection contacts, details of each contact, and names, addresses, and telephone numbers of witnesses, the interviewer should examine the validity of the debt and possible defenses to its collection in appropriate cases.[11] This inquiry may uncover a defense to the client's liability, and also serves to assess the strength of the collection harassment claim. A dispute over the validity of a debt generally, and the collector's ability to collect the debt from the consumer, increases the judge's and jury's sympathy for the plaintiff in an action for debt collection harassment.[12]

In some cases, when the consumer's actual damages are too small to pursue or difficult to prove, analysis of the validity of the debt may not be cost effective. For example, the consumer may have an FDCPA claim for statutory damages. If that claim is filed in federal court[13], the validity of the debt would not be relevant. The time and cost of determining the legal validity of the debt may be more than the amount the consumer owes and therefore, it may not be worthwhile for the consumer to hire counsel to conduct such an inquiry. On the other hand, that inquiry may reveal additional legal claims that are valuable to both the consumer and their attorney.

Proof of the falsity of an allegation of indebtedness is a necessary element in one species of action for invasion of privacy (holding up to false light),[14] and may also be an issue in a defamation action[15] or the basis for a claim of deception.[16] A consumer's liability for a debt may be determinable from Truth in Lending disclosures, contracts, security agreements, payment books, receipts, ledger or journal entries, and similar materials.[17] These documents should be obtained from the client or creditor as soon as possible.[18] However, the inquiry into the validity of the purported debt should not cease here. The client must be asked to explain any defenses to the alleged 7 If the client is reticent and does not describe emotions in any detail, "reflecting" or "restating" responses often elicits greater detail. These responses simply restate the client's statement, for example, "So you felt angry (or embarrassed, or guilty, or sad) when you hung up?" Pause after the question until there is a response. This gives the client permission to discuss further these feelings. Reflecting can be carried a step further by characterizing the emotional response at a deeper level, for example, "You must have felt very angry (or very embarrassed, or guilty, or depressed) when you hung up." A client who is reticent in an interview is also likely to be reticent on the witness stand, thereby decreasing the chances for a substantial award of damages.

8 See § 2.6.2.2, infra (checklist of common injuries and losses).

9 See § 15.2, infra.

Under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, proof of actual damages is not a prerequisite to recover statutory damages. See § 11.9.2, infra.

In addition to out-of-pocket expenses and compensation for distress, an award of statutory damages may be made. See § 11.9, infra.

10 §§ 2.6, 11.8.2, 15.2, 16.2, 16.3, infra.

11 See National Consumer Law Center, Collections Actions Ch. 4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

12 See § 11.4.2, infra.

13 Keep in mind that an allegation of concrete harm, not just a claim for statutory damages, is necessary for Article III standing in federal court. See § 11.15, infra.

14 See § 15.3.3, infra.

15 See § 15.5, infra.

16 See Ch. 7, § 16.3, infra.

17 See e.g., National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

18 See § 11.5.4, infra.

obligation, such as the creditor's failure to perform, breach of warranty, mistaken identity, wrong amount, expiration of the statute of limitations, etc.

2.2.4 Clarifying the Client's Legal Objectives

After the initial discussion of liability, damages, and proof, the interviewer should be prepared to counsel the client. The purpose of this stage of counseling is to clarify the client's present objectives and shape their expectations for any case to be filed:

- Does the client only want to prevent future collection contacts?
- Does the client desire assistance in resolving the alleged debt?
- How important to the client and feasible is the rehabilitation of their credit rating?
- Is the client willing to sue, or are they willing to forego a recovery for the damages suffered?
- Is the client anxious about being a witness or involving their witnesses in court?
- Is the client willing to assert their consumer rights (requesting cessation of contacts, verification of the debt, recording or taking notes of debt collector's calls)?[19]
- If a class action were appropriate, would the client want to pursue a claim for the class if it might mean postponing their own recovery?
- If the case involves an important principle of law, is the client interested in pursuing that principle, or are they mainly interested in monetary relief?

These issues, with all their implications and ramifications, should be explored with the client as part of the counseling process. It may be important that some cases of debtor harassment be treated as test cases in order to promote favorable constructions of broad statutory or common law standards or to increase the accustomed level of monetary settlements. When defending a debt, the client's property may be protected by exemption laws, and the client may be judgment proof.[20] These considerations must be discussed with the client.

The FDCPA provides several important rights to consumers. These include:

- The right to terminate many future collection contacts;[21]
- The right to stop contacts at work if the employer prohibits them, for example, no personal calls during office hours or while on duty;[22]
- The right to stop contacts at work or elsewhere if they are inconvenient;[23]
- The right to obtain verification of a disputed or unfamiliar debt;[24] and
- The right to stop contacts by obtaining legal counsel.[25]

The assertion of these rights by the client should be discussed with the client.

The consumer should also be counseled on potential tax liability in the case.[26] When the money loaned is not paid back—that is, a debt is forgiven, cancelled, discharged, etc.—the borrowed money becomes income subject to federal income tax.[27] Most representation of consumers in debt collection harassment cases is under the FDCPA, state consumer protection laws, or tort law. Some lawyers have also been able to provide representation to consumers who are defendants in state debt collection suits on a contingent fee basis using state fee shifting statutes or similar statutes that make attorney fees clauses in the underlying contract reciprocal, available to the consumer's attorney if successful in the case.[28] Some other attorneys have found it viable to take such cases on a lump-sum fee basis with a subsequent consumer claim sometimes providing additional fees.

It is important to shape the consumers' expectations for their case at this point. Cases involving a great amount of abusive debt collection causing weeks of emotional distress may result in potential jury verdicts in five figures.[29] In egregious cases that number may rise to six figures. Potential clients may be aware of these potential damages from information on the Internet. It is important that the consumer expectations regarding damages not be unrealistically high at this point in the case.

The potential for increased damages in a case of debt collection abuse rises if the collectors are allowed to continue on their course while the consumer and their lawyer systematically develop information on the different debt collectors involved and their collection techniques. Some clients will not be able to endure continued collection and that decision will influence the nature of the case that may be brought. Other consumers will feel empowered by organizing the information, keeping telephone logs, notes, and recordings in states that allow recording.[30]

2.2.5 Careful Case Selection

Lawyers considering handling a fair debt collection case should proceed carefully after interviewing potential consumer

19 See §§ 2.4.1, 5.8, Ch. 9, infra.
20 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
21 See § 5.8, infra.
22 See § 5.6, infra.
23 See § 5.4, infra.
24 See Ch. 9, infra.
25 See § 5.5, infra.
26 See § 11.14, infra.
27 Id.
28 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 17.1.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; Cal. Civ. Code § 1717 (West); Conn. Gen. Stat. § 42-150bb; Fla. Stat. § 57.105(7); Haw. Rev. Stat. § 607-14; Mont. Code Ann. § 28-3-704; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 361-C:2; N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-327 (McKinney); Or. Rev. Stat. § 20.096; Utah Code Ann. § 78B-5-826 (West); Wash. Rev. Code § 4.84.330.
29 See § 11.8.2, infra.
30 See § 11.5.2, infra.

clients. Many debt collectors and judges will closely examine the consumer's background and conduct, and the consumer's lawyer should not be surprised in that regard. Are there sufficient incontrovertible facts, or is further investigation required to assess the strength of the case being considered? What blemishes exist in the consumer's records or history—a bankruptcy, outstanding suits or judgments, aliases, other outstanding fair debt claims, arrest, or criminal convictions? Such matters do not disqualify the consumer from the protections of the FDCPA, but they are better addressed in candid interviews with the consumer's lawyer rather than first coming to light in a deposition, a motion, or a trial. Copies of the consumer's credit reports, which can be obtained free each year by the consumer, may be informative. Lawyers new to representing consumers in this area should look for clear violations that are well supported by the case law in their circuit and seek co-counsel experienced in the FDCPA practice at least for their initial cases.[31]

Care should be taken to probe the client's story to avoid embarrassment, and potential sanctions, if the client fabricated some part of the FDCPA claim or concealed their own misbehavior in dealing with the creditor or debt collector. While the FDCPA focuses on misconduct by debt collectors, not the consumer's conduct, some judges and juries will react negatively to consumers who appear to be unlawfully gaming the financial and legal systems.[32]

2.2.6 Developing a Plaintiffs' Fair Debt Collection Practice

There are a number of ways to develop a plaintiffs' fair debt collection law practice. Touch base with the members of the National Association of Consumer Advocates (NACA)[33] in the area to talk about the pros and cons of that practice locally. They are likely to be a source of referrals or co-counseling. Explore client referral relationships with consumer bankruptcy attorneys when they send you their bankruptcy client's fair debt collection claims.[34] Join legal services and bar referral panels. Establish a website. Create a profile in LinkedIn.com. Join NACA, attend their webinars, and participate in the FDCPA and other listservs. Come to the annual conferences sponsored by NCLC and NACA on these topics. Once you have developed some expertise, become a CLE speaker.

2.3 Bankruptcy and Fair Debt Collection Practices Claims

Special attention needs to be given to the bankruptcy implications of an FDCPA claim that arose before or during a consumer's bankruptcy. Dismissal of the FDCPA claims and possibly sanctions may threaten the unwary consumer attorney in this situation. The steps that need to be taken are discussed at § 13.3, infra.

2.4 Stopping Debt Harassment Without Litigation or Bankruptcy

2.4.1 Overview

Consumer attorneys can help solve their clients' distress from debt collection abuses without committing the full legal resources required for a lawsuit or bankruptcy. Whether strategies short of suit are appropriate in any given situation depends upon the client's objectives, the nature of the abuse (for example, whether the harassment is aberrant or routine for that collector), the damages suffered, and issues of efficiency (for example, litigation provides greater deterrence). This section details five strategies to combat collection harassment short of pursuing a lawsuit or declaring bankruptcy and includes a framework for evaluating these strategies. Of special note are model letters accompanying three of these strategies. Some excellent tips for vetting a debt collector and avoiding a scam when the consumer does not recognize the debt are on the Federal Trade Commission's website[35] and the website of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB).[36]

2.4.2 Directing the Collector to Stop Dunning Contacts

The simplest strategy to try to stop debt collection harassment is for the consumer to notify the debt collector in writing[37] that the consumer refuses to pay the debt or that the consumer wishes the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer. In addition, under Regulation F § 1006.14(h) (effective November 30, 2021), a consumer can stop certain types of contact and states "a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a person through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person."[38]

The FDCPA requires collection agencies and attorneys to stop dunning consumers after a written request asking the collector to cease collection contacts or stating the debt is not owed.[39] Creditors collecting their own debts, unlike collection agencies, debt buyers, and collection attorneys, generally are 31 A directory of consumer lawyers is available at www.consumeradvocates.org and is searchable by areas of practice and state.

32 See § 12.7.4, infra.

33 See www.consumeradvocates.org.

34 A directory of consumer bankruptcy attorneys is available at www.nacba.org.

35 Dan Dwyer, "Don't recognize that debt? Here's what to do" (Dec. 8, 2015), available at https://www.consumer.ftc.gov.

36 Courtney-Rose Dantus, "How to tell the difference between a legitimate debt collector and scammers" (Nov. 20, 2019), available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

37 See § 5.8, infra. This can also be done electronically if the debt collector accepts that method of communications from consumers. See Reg. F § 1006.6 (c)(1) (effective Nov. 30, 2021).

38 Reg. F § 1006.14(h); § 6.9, infra.

39 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c); § 5.8, infra.

not covered by the FDCPA,[40] and thus do not have to honor such written requests. Nevertheless, creditors often do comply with such requests.

The consumer should keep a copy of the written request. Immediately following is an example of such a letter. The CFPB website also contains five recommended templates for consumers with debt collection grievances.

Example of Consumer's Letter Requesting Collector to Stop Dunning Contacts

Sam Consumer
10 Cherry Lane
Flint, MI 10886

[Date]

ABC Collection Agency
1 Main Street
Flint, MI 10887[41]

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing to request that you stop communications to me about account number (000723) with Amy's Department Store. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c), requires that you honor my request.

[Consider adding the following or a similar description of the consumer's situation:]

This is not my debt.

or

I paid this debt in full on [date].

or

I am living on $____/month which comes from [name of government benefit(s)]. I believe that all my income is exempt from collection and creditors may not garnish this pay.

You should be aware that your employees have engaged in illegal collection practices. For example, I received a phone call at 6:30 a.m. from one of them last week. Later that day, I was called by the same person at my training program which does not permit personal phone calls except for emergencies. My family and I were very upset by these tactics.

Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Very truly yours,
Sam Consumer

While the FDCPA does not require debtors to give any reason for requesting that collectors cease their contacts, it may be to the consumer's benefit to inform the collector of the consumer's financial situation. This may cause the collector to focus collection efforts on consumers with greater ability to pay, and this information may forestall a lawsuit or a negative report to a credit reporting agency. Information about previous abusive contacts provides a foundation for increasing a damage award should suit by the consumer become necessary; this information may also result in the collector reviewing and improving its compliance with the FDCPA.

If this, or another letter of the consumer, acknowledges the debt, the applicable state statute of limitations may begin to run anew.[42] This is usually against the consumer's interest. Statutes of limitations limit the number of years within which a debt may be collected. They generally run from the time of default, the last payment, or the last acknowledgment of the debt. Thus, an acknowledgment or partial payment may start the statute of limitations running all over again depending on the relevant state law. If much of this period has expired, the debt should not be casually acknowledged, and that part of the above letter should be rewritten. Statutes of limitations vary widely from state to state, from a few years, to four or five years, to ten or more years, and may involve complicated layers of choice-of-law rules.[43]

The advantages of sending a copy of this letter, or a letter notifying the creditor about the misconduct by its collector, to the creditor probably outweigh the disadvantages in most cases. The creditor may not support abusive collection tactics and may require the collector to improve its collection methods. This letter may later establish that the creditor was aware of the collector's misbehavior, enhancing the creditor's liability in a future case.

Collection agencies and collection attorneys sometimes take the position that it is unlawful and unethical for the consumer's attorney to contact the collector's client, the creditor. They argue that it is unlawful interference with the collector's contractual relationship with the creditor.[44] This argument ignores that the consumer already has a preexisting contractual relationship with the creditor and that the collector's abuse is probably outside of the collector's contractual relationship with the creditor. While the collector's arguments are generally without merit, responding to the collector's claims requires time, and that may outweigh the benefit to a particular consumer of copying the creditor.

2.4.3 Notifying the Collector That Bank Account Is Exempt from Seizure

Some types of income, such as Social Security and public assistance benefits, are exempt from creditors' postjudgment remedies and that exemption follows those funds into bank accounts in most circumstances.[45] However, it is not unusual for a creditor to have those funds frozen until the debtor establishes the exemption in court. Freezing the account of a low-income household can be devastating even for a short time as there are usually no reserves for medications, rent, food, heat, etc.

40 See § 4.7, infra.

41 Consumers sending a letter by mail can use certified mail, return receipt requested, and add the certified mail receipt number to the letter. This will provide the date the collector received the letter.

42 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

43 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

44 See generally § 15.4, infra.

45 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 14 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

NCLC's Collection Actions Ch. 14 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, examines laws that protect debtors' income from creditors and provides an analysis of the protections afforded exempt sources of income when they are deposited into bank accounts.

2.4.4 Proposing a Workout Agreement

Probably the most common consumer strategy (but not necessarily the best) is to work out payments with those collectors who have most effectively harassed them. Many collection agencies and some creditors will take an initial position that they must receive payment of the balance in full. They will urge the consumer to borrow from a loan company or relatives to pay off the debt. But if the debt is not secured with collateral and has a low interest rate or no interest (for example, a medical bill), it is to the consumer's financial advantage to stretch out the payments on this debt so that secured debts and debts with higher interest or late charges may be paid first.[46] Usually the collector will eventually agree to an installment plan that is realistic for the consumer.

Creditor leniency is likely to be greatest when local employment is good and interest rates are low. This is because creditors price their credit with an expectation of a certain level of delinquencies. Creditors usually expect that repayment problems will be unavoidable for one to three percent of their customers even in good times. When local unemployment increases, a creditor's delinquencies will usually rise above the expected level, and the creditor will become stricter because its profits are squeezed. Creditors are also stricter in their handling of delinquent borrowers when the cost of money that the creditor borrows is high or is rising. The primary leverage for the consumer in obtaining a realistic payment plan is the consumer's financial distress. "You can't get blood from a turnip," is a common collector's saying.

Consumers should avoid the trap of giving a collector a postdated check as part of a workout agreement. Writing a check without sufficient funds to cover it is a crime in some states.[47] Giving a collector a postdated check with the possibility that the check will not be covered provides the collector the even greater leverage of threatening or pursuing criminal prosecution.[48] The check also identifies the bank account which the debt collector may attach or garnish. Unscrupulous debt collectors sometimes use the account and routing numbers to make unauthorized electronic withdrawals from consumer's accounts.[49]

Borrowing money (for example, a small loan, consolidation loan, credit card advance, or second mortgage) to make payments to an abusive collector is another frequent trap for consumers. Such borrowing often results in the consumer paying higher finance charges, being faced with installments which are no more realistic, and being required to put up new collateral. Borrowing at low interest rates to stretch out payments well beyond the original debt may provide relief to consumers. However, many financially distressed consumers do not successfully arrange low-cost loans that may be offered by a local bank or credit union, but refinance at worse terms than the original loan through a national bank, credit card issuer, or other high-cost lender.

Most troubling, a consumer who enters into a workout agreement, may forego defenses and offsetting legal claims related to the original debt. For example, if a debt is for a $500 car repair bill and the consumer has good reason to believe only $200 worth of work was done, the consumer should use this dispute to reduce the total claim before agreeing to installments. While it takes a trained lawyer to recognize most legal defenses and claims, consumers should be able to decide whether the seller performed as promised and whether the product or services provided the benefits reasonably expected. If not, that dissatisfaction should be used in the negotiation of the workout plan. In most consumer transactions, claims and defenses related to underlying sales transactions may be raised against the financier and the collector.[50]

2.4.5 Complaining to Consumer Protection Agencies

Another strategy to stop collection harassment is for the consumer (or lawyer) to write an e-mail or letters to state and federal agencies responsible for enforcing the laws against debt collection abuse. While the government agency is not likely to investigate unless it has other complaints against the same collector (which probably cannot be known beforehand), sending the collector a copy of the complaint letter may produce good results.

A complaint should be submitted to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau online via www.consumerfinance.gov. The CFPB will forward the complaint to the company and then convey the responses to the consumer.

Whether copies to state regulatory agencies (for example, state banking department, collection agency licensor, attorney general's office) are also effective should be evaluated on a local basis. If your state reports debt collection licensing information to the National Multi-State Licensing System (NMLS), you may be able to use consumer access portal (https://www.nmlsconsumeraccess.org) to look up the name of the debt collector and then follow the links for your state to file a complaint with the licensing entity.

46 See National Consumer Law Center, NCLC Guide to Surviving Debt Ch. 1 (2021).

47 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

48 Criminal bad check laws often do not apply to postdated checks and checks written for preexisting debts. National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

49 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law Ch. 5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

50 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices Ch. 5 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

2.4.6 Complaining About Billing Errors

If collection letters ask for more than is due or some other possible mistake is on the bill (for example, wrong account, wrong person, insurance paid the bill), the consumer should write to the collector and request that the mistake be corrected. The FDCPA requires debt collection agencies and lawyers (but generally not creditors)[51] to stop collection efforts until they provide verification of the debt, as long as the consumer's written request was mailed within thirty days of the consumer receiving notice of the right to dispute the debt.[52] If the debt collector has inaccurately reported the debt to a credit reporting agency, both the debt collector and the reporting agency should be requested in writing to make a correction.[53]

If the dispute involves a revolving account, a credit card account, or an electronic transfer of money, federal regulations specify that if a consumer, within sixty days of receiving an erroneous bill, sends a letter to the creditor indicating the billing error, the creditor must reexamine the bill.[54] Even when federal and state law do not require the collector to investigate the error, some collectors will probably still pause their collection efforts to investigate.

2.4.7 Lawyer Letter Requesting the Collector to Stop Contacts

A more intensive strategy to stop collection harassment is for the consumer's lawyer to write the collector requesting the collector to stop contacting the consumer. As described at § 2.5.7.6, infra, demand letters should not be sent to debt collectors unless the debt collector's SLAPP suit practice or policy is known.

Many consumers suffering temporary financial distress go to lawyers for a bankruptcy when all they actually need is relief from a few abusive bill collectors collecting unsecured debts. When that is the case, letters written by the consumer like that reproduced at § 2.4.2, supra, may dispose of the problem without the costs of legal assistance. When those letters do not stop the abuse, a letter from a lawyer often will. In a case of debt collector harassment, the consumer may be best off waiting to document the abuse before the attorney's letter is sent.

The FDCPA requires collection agencies and lawyers to stop contacting a consumer known to be represented by a lawyer as long as the lawyer responds to the collection agency's inquiries.[55] Creditors, although not covered by the FDCPA, will also usually honor such requests from a debtor's lawyer.[56] In addition, lawyers representing the creditor are generally bound by legal ethics not to contact a person represented by another lawyer. Below are two examples of attorney's letters requesting that a collector stop collection contacts.

Examples of Lawyer's Letters Requesting Collector to Stop Contacts

[Date]

ABC Collection Agency
1 Main St.
Flint, MI 10887
VIA FACSIMILE: 771-345-6789

RE: Sam Consumer
Account No.: 00723
Amount alleged due: $ Alleged creditor:
File No.: 523

Dear Sir or Madam:

Please be advised that I represent the above-named individual, who has recently received a debt collection communication from your company, on the above referenced and all other claims of indebtedness.[57]

Pursuant to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq., you are hereby directed to:

1. Cease all further communication with my client pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c), and
2. Provide the undersigned with verification of the purported debt.
3. Provide the undersigned with the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor.

Until advised otherwise, you should mark this matter as "disputed." I anticipate your cooperation herein.

Sincerely,
Bob Lawyer
Attorney at Law

BL/dp
cc: Sam Consumer

A letter laying the foundation for increased tort and punitive damages follows.

[Date]

ABC Collection Agency
1 Main Street
Flint, MI 10887

RE: Account of [Sam Consumer]; Account No. 00723

Dear Sir or Madam:

Please be advised that I represent [Sam Consumer] with regard to the above and all other existing claims and

51 See § 4.7, infra.
52 15 U.S.C. § 1692g, discussed at Ch. 9, infra.
53 See § 14.6, infra.
54 12 C.F.R. §§ 1005, 1026.13 [§§ 205, 226.13], discussed in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.9 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
55 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(2), discussed at § 5.5.3, infra.
56 Creditor may be subject to a state prohibition against contacting a represented consumer. See generally § 16.2.4.3.3, infra.
57 Indication that the consumer is represented by legal counsel on all debts will provide greater protection than limiting representation to a specific obligation. See § 5.5, infra.

indebtedness.[58] You are advised to direct any future contacts regarding this or other accounts of my client to me. You should cease all contacts with my client immediately pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c).

This is to advise you that [Sam Consumer] was injured in December and is temporarily unable to work. Because of this, they will not be able to address any claims you may have until they recover—probably sometime after February. In the meantime, you are requested to forbear from taking any steps to collect this claim without contacting me.

You should also be advised that I have been informed that your employees have been engaged in abusive collection tactics. These include: (1) _____; (2) _____; (3) _____. As a result, my client and their family have suffered severe emotional distress. Any future contacts will surely aggravate that distress.

You should also be advised that my client does not believe your claim is justified. [State dispute of debt if any.]

Because of my client's condition, it is unnecessary for you to make routine collection calls to me.

Thank you for your cooperation in forbearing on this matter during this period of financial stress for my client.

Very truly yours,
Bob Lawyer

cc: Consumer Financial Protection Bureau
P.O. Box 4503
Iowa City, Iowa 52244

Note that the letter is sent by date-stamped facsimile, as it is the quicker and usually most reliable method. As noted in § 2.4.2, supra, it can also be sent electronically in some cases. It could also be sent certified mail, return receipt requested. The signed and dated return receipt card will pinpoint the date upon which the collector learned of the consumer's legal representation. This return receipt card will prevent the debt collector from denying knowledge of the attorney's involvement. Should the collector contact the consumer after the attorney's letter has been received, as evidenced by the signed and dated return receipt card, a violation of the FDCPA has occurred.[59] This attorney's letter also requests the collector to provide verification of the debt. The debt collector must cease further collection efforts until it obtains verification and mails that information to the consumer.[60]

2.4.8 Evaluating Strategies for Harassed Debtors

Whether a harassed debtor should use one or more of the five strategies discussed above, or whether that debtor instead should document the collection misconduct and institute suit or file bankruptcy will depend upon a number of considerations. For example:

Client's objectives

- Is the client legally responsible for the debt?
- Is the client's financial distress temporary (for example, temporary layoff), permanent (for example, physical disability), or of unknown duration (for example, permanent layoff, recently divorced)?
- Is the client collection proof?
- Do the debt collector's communications with the client violate the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and/or state law?
- Has the client and the family suffered significant emotional distress or out-of-pocket expense?
- Is the client aware of the possible value of actual and statutory damages?
- Would the client be willing to pursue these damages and/or declaratory or injunctive relief, for example, would the client be willing to appear at depositions and trial?

Collector's behavior

- Is this the aberrant behavior of a collection employee which will be stopped when brought to a supervisor's attention?
- Is this abuse the result of the collector's mistake, for example, erroneously identifying client as able to pay the bill?
- Is this abuse a result of the collector's routine collection strategy?
- Does the debt collector have a valid bona fide error defense to violations of the Fair Debt Collections Practices Act?[61]

Efficiency

- Does the collector's behavior indicate that it will not alter its behavior in response to letters?
- Will the collector honor the individual client's letter but continue the practice against other debtors, generating additional debtor complaints and suffering?
- Does the collector have insurance or sufficient assets to satisfy a damage award?[62]
- If a claim is available under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act or state statute, is the case one that an attorney will pursue for a contingent fee?
- Is bankruptcy an appropriate approach for the client?[63]

2.5 Preparation of a Suit for Damages

2.5.1 Client's Recording of Phone Calls

When legal, evidence of collection abuse and of the client's credibility might be obtained by the consumer recording a collection telephone call. This option is only available in certain states, because in other states recording a phone call without

58 Id.
59 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(2), discussed at § 5.5.3, infra.
60 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b), discussed at § 9.10, infra.
61 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c), discussed at § 12.2, infra.
62 Fellow NACA members may have helpful information on this point. See www.consumeradvocates.org for more information about how to join.
63 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

consent is a criminal offense. There are also legal ethical considerations if an attorney advises the client to record a telephone call. These issues are explored at § 11.5.2, infra.

Of course, the client can ask the collector's permission to record the call. Another option is for the client to take notes of any conversation with a collector. A reliable third person can call the collector and ask for the collector's explanation of the calls, and this may confirm the client's version of their content. A former collection employee of the agency may be able to confirm the company's telephone practices.

Moreover, larger debt collectors record many of their debt collection calls and are increasingly able to retrieve many of those calls when sued. Under Regulation F § 1006.100(b) (effective November 30, 2021), a debt collector that records calls must retain the recordings for three years after the date of each telephone call.[64] The difficulty of obtaining such recordings through discovery may depend on the individual collector. Note that a recording kept by the collector may in fact be used to exonerate the collector.

Clients should also save any collector messages left on the consumer's voicemail. As examined at § 11.5.2, infra, such message may be introduced at trial. In addition, the client should be advised to save all of a collector's emails, texts, and letters.

2.5.2 Client's Written Statement

Because it may be a long time between the initial interview and trial, it is a good idea to obtain a statement of the client's story, signed by the client. The statement may be used at trial to refresh the client's memory.[65] The effect of this statement on the client-attorney privilege and the work product rule is beyond the scope of this subsection but should be considered by counsel.[66]

2.5.3 Some Fee-Generating Debt Collection Cases Must Be Referred to Private Lawyers by Legal Services Corporation Grantees

Debt collection harassment cases that are truly "fee-generating" may have to be referred to private attorneys pursuant to the Legal Services Act[67] and implementing regulations.[68] Increasing numbers of private attorneys have been accepting clients on a contingent-fee basis in debt collection abuse cases,[69] although there are generally far more cases than there are attorneys willing to take them. This requirement is intended to expand the availability of legal counsel to the poor when their cases are truly fee-generating. The regulations contain detailed provisions describing which cases are not fee-generating; these provisions may be supplemented by letters from the General Counsel of the Legal Services Corporation.

Legal Services attorneys interviewing clients with debt collection harassment claims should carefully review Legal Services Corporation regulations. The Corporation requires a legal services attorney to enter into a written retainer agreement with the client.[70]

2.5.4 Developing the Case Chronology of Events

An important first step in developing a case for debtor harassment is preparing a chronology of the events involved in the harassment. Events seemingly insignificant to the claim may prove significant later, may aid a witness's memory, or may indicate discrepancies in evidence. There are usually a substantial number of documents connected with a consumer transaction; these are particularly useful for pinpointing significant dates in a chronology.

2.5.5 The Collector's Documents and Other Sources of Evidence

Information about the dates and amounts of payments should be obtained from the creditor, collection agency, or attorney. These records, telephone logs, e-mails between collector and creditor, and recordings of telephone conversations may be central to the issue of liability on the purported debt. How to obtain this information, how to interpret collector codes and other short-hand, and how to use this information in a trial are discussed at § 11.5.3, infra.

The debt collector may provide the court with its records, such as call logs or collector's notes, to show that a contact alleged by the consumer did not occur.[71] The consumer's call log or notes or detailed memory could create a triable issue in such a situation. The consumer lawyer could also depose the debt collector to find out if it maintains multiple call logs and the instances in which their calls with consumers are not captured in their call logs.

The next step is to get statements from sympathetic witnesses while events (and a sense of outrage) are still fresh in their minds. Family members, friends, fellow employees (or the client's employer) and the client's physician should be interviewed if they witnessed collection contacts or injuries

64 See §§ 11.5.2, 11.5.4.3, infra.
65 See Fed. R. Evid. 612, 803(5).
66 See Fed. R. Evid. 501.
67 42 U.S.C. § 2996f(b)(1).
68 45 C.F.R. § 1609.
69 See www.consumeradvocates.org for lists of attorneys willing to take such cases.
70 See 45 C.F.R. § 1611.8(a).
71 As of November 30, 2021, debt collectors must retain evidence of both compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and Regulation F starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt. For phone recordings, the debt collector must retain the recordings for three years after the dates of the telephone calls. However, a debt collector is not required to create or maintain additional records to evidence compliance or record calls, but only must retain applicable records, including call recordings, that are already created in the ordinary course of its business. Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-2. See § 11.5.4.3, infra.

suffered—for example, emotional distress—by the client. If the case involves abusive telephone calls, a complaint could be sent to the local telephone company requesting an investigation and retention of the records of the collector's telephone calls to and from the consumer and the third parties involved during the relevant period of time.[72]

2.5.6 Pattern or Practice Evidence

Other victims who have suffered similar abuses from a debt collector may be appropriate witnesses. As described in more detail at § 11.6.5, infra, other victims' testimony may be introduced: to show a pattern or practice of abusive conduct; to show the debt collector's knowledge or intent; to show the malice required for punitive damages; to support a maximum statutory damage award; or to establish circumstantial evidence to authenticate an anonymous phone call. Even if the testimony of other victims is not admitted in the trial, the other victims' information can be useful in understanding the collector's practices, allowing the attorney to be more effective in seeking discovery and cross-examining collector witnesses.

2.5.7 Pleadings

2.5.7.1 Importance of State Claims

State claims may offer punitive,[73] multiple, or statutory damages in addition to the relief offered by the FDCPA. Even when the FDCPA applies to a case, local law may supplement it or be more favorable to the consumer.[74] For example, a collector may violate a state law for which the FDCPA does not provide a parallel prohibition.

Since the FDCPA provides very limited preemption of state law and encourages state regulation of debt collectors,[75] actions under the FDCPA and under state law may usually be joined and pursued simultaneously. The online companion material to this treatise provides sample complaints as well as complaints from filed cases alleging FDCPA and supplemental state claims. Those sample complaints are supplemented by sample discovery, depositions, memoranda of law, motions, jury instructions, briefs, etc.

While this treatise surveys a very wide range of potential legal remedies for debt collection abuse, it cannot fully address variations in local law, which must be independently researched.

2.5.7.2 Choice of Federal or State Court

The choice of filing in federal or state court is dominated by local considerations. In some locales, there is little reason to prefer federal judges over state judges, either for judicial ability or for sympathy in actions against debt collectors. State discovery and procedural rules are often so similar to federal rules as to eliminate this as a consideration. The relative backlog of cases on federal and state dockets varies greatly from locale to locale. Choice of forum will affect the rules and practice for drafting pleadings.[76]

2.5.7.3 Specificity of Pleading

In pleading an FDCPA claim, the consumer attorney should consider two separate requirements. One is to establish concrete harm or injury in fact sufficient to meet the Article III federal court standing requirement. This requirement is discussed in detail at § 11.15, infra. In addition, the consumer's pleading must be sufficiently specific as to the nature of the FDCPA violation. The specificity requirement is examined at § 11.6.1, infra.

2.5.7.4 Avoiding Dismissal

Failure to state a cause of action will result in the dismissal of the complaint and, when the court deems the claim entirely frivolous, sanctions.[77] Failure to join an indispensable party may also result in the dismissal of the litigation.[78] Section 11.6.1, infra, provides an analysis of the specificity of pleadings necessary to survive dismissal.

2.5.7.5 Structuring the Case

2.5.7.5.1 Requesting a jury trial and joining additional parties

Generally, debtors should request jury trials in debt collection harassment cases.[79] Differences among courts as to the makeup, procedures, and delay in obtaining a jury may dictate the debtor's choice of forum. The potential for and advantages of joining additional plaintiffs or defendants should be thoroughly considered at this juncture.[80]

2.5.7.5.2 FDCPA as a counterclaim

Consumers may decide that the better strategy is to raise their fair debt collection claim defensively as a counterclaim to a suit on the debt filed by the creditor or its collector.[81] One advantage of this approach is that it may create more leverage in negotiating a reduced amount of the debt. Disadvantages may include that the FDCPA claims will not apply to the creditor and a state court judge may not be familiar with the FDCPA.

72 See § 14.3, infra.
73 See § 11.9, infra.
74 See Ch. 16, infra.
75 See § 11.16, infra.
76 Also keep in mind, as discussed in detail in § 11.15, infra, that the consumer must have suffered a concrete harm as a result of the violation to have Article III standing in federal court.
77 See § 12.10, infra.
78 Fed. R. Civ. P. 19. See also § 11.2.5, infra.
79 See § 11.4.5, infra.
80 See §§ 11.2.4, 11.2.5, 11.4.1 to 11.4.4, infra.
81 See § 11.2.1, infra.

2.5.7.5.3 The burden of persuasion of exceptions to FDCPA violations falls on the defendant

While the FDCPA prohibits many forms of collector misrepresentations and abusive conduct, it makes certain exceptions to those prohibitions, allowing the collector to engage in those practices. In general, as described at § 11.6.6, infra, the collector has the burden of proof to show that an exception applies.

2.5.7.5.4 Filing an FDCPA class action

The decision to file a complaint as a class action is often faced most squarely after the initial investigation and research are completed.[82] If a class action is consistent with the client's objectives and the program's or firm's priorities, additional inquiry should be made to determine if adequate legal and financial resources are available for the particular case. A lawyer without the necessary resources may need to bring in another firm to meet that need. An attorney with little class experience must bring in co-counsel with class experience.[83]

2.5.7.6 Do Not Send Demand Letters to Unknown Debt Collectors

Many experienced consumer attorneys do not send demand letters before filing an FDCPA suit. This is the result of some debt collectors responding to FDCPA demand letters with a Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation ("SLAPP" suit) against the consumer in the state where the debt collector received the demand letter.[84] Those debt collectors believe that the consumer's demand letter supports long-arm jurisdiction in the recipient's state.[85] Joining NACA will give the consumer attorney a network to help determine whether a SLAPP suit strategy is used by a particular debt collector.

With other debt collectors, demand letters may lead to quicker settlements or clarification of the facts. For example, when it is not clear whether the collector meets the threshold test of regularly collecting debt to be covered by the FDCPA,[86] a demand letter may lead to a conversation which may inform the consumer's attorney on the issue. The failure of the collector to respond makes it harder for the debt collector to later complain about it being sued when it was not covered by the FDCPA.

2.5.7.7 Sample Complaints

The online companion material to this treatise contains sample complaints and examples of other FDCPA complaints filed by practitioners.

2.5.7.8 Proper Service

Attention should be paid to obtaining proper service of process on an attorney collector. Service on the attorney at the address on the attorney's collection letter may not be valid if the attorney does not maintain offices at that address.[87] The attorney's address can be checked through the state bar association as well as lawyer directories and other sources.

There are a number of additional approaches to determining the collector's address for service of a summons and complaint. State debt collector regulators frequently post contact information about debt collectors on their website. Some regulators post much more. For example, the Minnesota regulator posts debt collection employee names.

Many states license debt collection agencies and the licensing authority should have information about an agency's address, sometimes on a website. The names of a registered agent and officers of the company is usually available from the Secretary of State in the state in which the collection agency was incorporated, which may or may not be the same as the state where it receives mail. Because collection employees often use fake names while collecting a debt, it may be necessary to sue them as "John Doe a.k.a. Robert Smith," and discovery may be needed to obtain the information necessary to serve them.[88] If the consumer misidentifies the defendant and the intended defendant is aware of the mistake, an amended complaint will relate back to the date of the original complaint.[89]

If the collector's address is a post office address, the post office will provide a Freedom of Information Action (FOIA) form to obtain the name and address of the post office box renter.

2.5.7.9 Debt Collectors' Defensive Strategies

Defensive strategies of debt collectors are the focus of many other sections of this treatise.[90] In addition, defendants' using a kitchen sink approach to pleading inapplicable defenses may result in the defenses being struck at a preliminary stage.[91]

2.5.8 Mandatory Arbitration of Consumers' Claims

Creditors, debt buyers, or those collecting on behalf of creditors or debt buyers often seek to enforce a mandatory arbitration clause found in the credit agreement between the original creditor and the consumer. These clauses require debtors to 82 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Ch. 1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; § 11.11, infra.

83 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Ch. 1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; § 11.11.2.2.5, infra.

84 See § 15.1.3.3, infra.

85 See § 11.2.2, infra.

86 See § 4.7.3, infra.

87 See Gunkel v. Secure One, Inc., 2007 WL 1319286 (E.D. Tenn. May 4, 2007) (service of defendant's managing agent, as well as additional addresses linked to Secure One, Inc. listed in the parties' filings, was authorized by the Fed. R. Civ. P. and appropriate).

88 See § 11.4.4.1, infra.

89 See Krupski v. Costa Crociere S. p. A., 560 U.S. 538, 130 S. Ct. 2485, 177 L. Ed. 2d 48 (2010).

90 See § 11.3 (mandatory arbitration), § 11.7.1 (offers of judgment); Ch. 12 (defense strategies in FDCPA cases), infra.

91 See Appx E.3.6.2, infra.

bring legal claims in private arbitration as opposed to litigation in court.

Section 11.3, infra, surveys the arguments consumers can make to defeat a motion to compel arbitration of an FDCPA cause of action or state law collection abuse claim.

Far more detail on all these subjects than is presented at § 11.3, infra, is found in NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, which also contains sample briefs and other key documents.

An essential first step in resisting an arbitration agreement, though, is demanding that the defendant produce the arbitration agreement. A collection agency or attorney or debt buyer will have to obtain that agreement from the original creditor, show that the consumer bringing the action had consented to that specific agreement, and that the defendant has the right to enforce that agreement.

2.5.9 Discovery

Interrogatories, admissions, and a request for production of documents should be filed with the complaint or soon thereafter to maintain the momentum of the case and to obtain critical evidence while it is still fresh and available. Sample discovery requests and depositions are included with this treatises' digital version, under "Pleadings and Discovery." Section 11.5.4, infra, examines what information to seek, what discovery is permissible, what limits there are on discovery from the collector, the applicability of protective orders, and tactics to compel the collector to respond.

2.5.10 Prepare for Trial at the Beginning of the Case

Most debtor harassment cases are settled by negotiations prior to trial. A lawyer who has not successfully tried a case of this type should know what can be accomplished at trial before negotiating a settlement.[92] It is essential to know the probable range of damages that may be awarded in a case of this type before entering into negotiations. Section 11.8, infra, details common injuries and awards for debt collection abuses.[93] An attorney who has completed the steps discussed up to this point should be in a good position for negotiation.

2.5.11 FDCPA Claims Are Frequently Determined by Summary Judgment

In FDCPA suits and in actions under state debt collection statutes, the legal proscription may be so clear and narrow, particularly when liability may be established by a debt collection letter or other document, that factual issues can be determined early in a case. In such cases, liability issues may be decided by partial summary judgment, and only the issue of the damages may need to be tried or negotiated.[94] A sample motion and supporting memoranda on summary judgment are available online as companion material to this treatise. The online companion material to this treatise also contains documents from filed cases related to summary judgment.

2.5.12 Jury Trials Advised

As described in § 11.4.5, infra, there are benefits to seeking a jury trial in an FDCPA or other debt collection harassment case. Section 11.4.5, infra, also discusses the consumer's right to a jury, issues the jury can decide, and preparing for a jury trial.

2.5.13 Offers of Judgment or Settlement in Individual Actions

Section 11.7, infra, examines some of the complex issues that arise where a debt collector makes an offer of judgment or settlement.

A number of issues relate to use of offers of judgment. Section 11.11.4.2, infra, discusses the use of Rule 68 in class actions to settle the claim of the named FDCPA plaintiff and provide the foundation for the defendant to argue that the settlement moots the class action.[95]

2.4.14 Pitfalls with Using Surveys and Experts on Deception

One of the biggest impediments to using survey evidence in FDCPA cases is the high cost of an expert designing and conducting the survey. See the discussion at § 11.6.3, infra.

In addition to the hurdle created by the high cost of a survey, there is a risk that the expensive survey once presented will not be accepted into evidence. See § 11.6.3, infra, for examples of when courts have and have not allowed surveys into evidence, and for a discussion of problems with the survey methodology and sample sizes.

An alternative to survey evidence may be testimony from an expert who may base testimony on an analysis of representations and practices short of conducting a full survey. Examples of the type of analysis an expert might conduct and limits on expert testimony are considered at § 11.6.4, infra.

2.6 Proving the Nature, Cause, and Value of Actual Damages

2.6.1 Maximizing Damage Awards

A working knowledge of the law and practice of proving damages is crucial in both the negotiation and the trial stage of 92 See §§ 11.8, 11.9, 11.10, infra (discussion of damages).

93 See also Appx. E.3.1, infra.

94 See § 11.8.6.1, infra. Some care needs to be exercised to avoid a court misconstruing a motion for partial summary judgment to be a record of no damages suffered by the consumer.

95 See also Appx. E.3.6.3, infra.

a debt collection abuse case. An attorney who has not developed the evidence of damages in a case has little idea of where to start and terminate negotiations. A discussion of damages is found at §§ 11.8, 11.9, and 11.10, infra.

Successful negotiation or trial of the damages issues in a debtor harassment case has important repercussions beyond the individual case: it sets a standard for future settlements in similar cases. Favorable settlements or awards of damages that are publicized also may deter future misconduct by collectors throughout the affected community. Large settlements or awards increase the legal resources available to low-income consumers by increasing the financial incentive for more private lawyers to become involved in debtor harassment cases. A consumer attorney obtaining large awards will be sought by consumers seeking representation and by attorneys seeking co-counsel.

2.6.2 Actual Damages in Collection Abuse Cases

2.6.2.1 General Principles

A common and costly mistake made by an attorney in a debt collection abuse case is to pay insufficient attention to the nature and extent of the client's actual damages. Ask about the stress the consumer suffered and how long the distress continued. When the abuse is egregious and the resulting distress, lasted many days the damages may be valued in five figures. In the extreme case the value may go to six figures or more.[96] Conversely, if stress is the only actual damage and is not significant, a consumer may not have standing to bring a claim in federal court, as explained in detail in § 11.15, infra.

2.6.2.2 Common Types of Compensable Injuries Resulting from Debt Collector Misconduct

2.6.2.2.1 Introduction

Types of injuries for which consumers have obtained damages in typical abusive debt collection situations are listed below. More detail with case citations is found at § 11.8, infra. Whether these injuries are legally compensable in a particular case may depend upon the type of legal claim.[97]

2.6.2.2.2 Emotional distress injuries arising from debt collector misconduct

As discussed in § 11.8.2, infra, injuries and symptoms related to stress include shock, crying, loss of sleep, insomnia, nightmares, night sweats, anxiety, nervousness, fear, worry, loss of happiness, severe distress, hypertension, loss of concentration, instability, hysteria, trembling, irritability, humiliation, embarrassment, intimidation, loss of the tranquility of old age, indignation, future anxiety, pain, suffering, emotional or mental distress, paranoia, difficulty relating to others, anger, severe headaches, increased temper, adrenaline, and conflict with a spouse. Case citations where damages were awarded for these injuries are set out at § 11.8.2, infra.

2.6.2.2.3 Medical conditions arising from debt collection abuses

Medical conditions are also related to debt collection abuses, such as loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting, sensitive stomach, loss of weight, tooth pain where debt collector took funds saved for dental work, ulcers, diabetic flare-ups, miscarriage, heart attack, heart palpitations, angina, chest constrictions, becoming bedridden, pain and suffering, shortness of breath, headaches, dizziness, fainting, blacking out, skin eruptions and great pain from shingles, aggravated existing illness, and extended illness. See § 11.8.3, infra, for further discussion and case citations where damages were awarded for each of those medical conditions.

2.6.2.2.4 Out-of-pocket losses

Section 11.8.4, infra, sets out a discussion and court decisions regarding various types of out-of-pocket losses caused by debt collection violations, including loss of job, income, work time or leave from a job; impairment of job advancement; medical or counseling expenses; medication or special diet; telephone charges; payments on an invalid claim or a debt barred by a statute of limitations; transportation expenses; conversion of consumer's property; and the amount of a tax refund intercepted to pay a student loan that had been discharged in bankruptcy and accountant fees for filing for the return of the intercepted funds. Other out of pocket losses with case citation support at § 11.8.4, infra, relate to bank overdraft charges and other fees; reduced credit rating; attorney fees incurred defending a prior suit; bank fees; a filing fee to answer a time-barred debt collection complaint and the costs for mailing that answer to the debt collector by certified mail, and a consumer's payment to a debt collector made as a result of harassment, false threat of jail, or other FDCPA violation.

2.6.2.2.5 Injuries to personal relations

Section 11.8.5, infra, sets out various case decisions awarding damages for injury to the following type of relations: injury to reputation; harm to credit rating, loss of access to credit and to employment; loss of privacy; loss of consortium; strain to marriage; strain with family; demotion by employer; and humiliation.

2.6.2.3 Using FDCPA Damages to Settle a Debt

A claim for damages may be used to leverage a reduction of the collector's claim. Issues concerning whether to use an FDCPA claim in negotiations to reduce the amount due on a debt are considered at § 11.8.1.2, infra. In some situations, there are reasons not to do so. Where the FDCPA claims are used to reduce the amount owed, that subsection also considers suggested aspects of a resulting settlement.

96 See § 11.8.2.5, infra.

97 See § 11.8, Chs. 15, 16, infra.

2.6.3 Evidence Establishing an Injury's Existence, Cause and Value

A key question in recovering actual damages is how extensive the evidence of consumer injury must be. There are different standards as to adequate proof that there is an injury and the dollar value of that injury. In fact, evidence of the dollar value of the injury is often unnecessary. The trier of fact may attach dollar amounts to some injuries (nausea, headaches, or anxiety, for example), without any proof of their value. This may be done through witness testimony on the existence, cause, and extent of the injury and the arguments of counsel, the jurors' experience and very general legal standards.

These issues are examined at § 11.8.6, infra.

2.6.4 Compensable Emotional Stress and Other Losses Vary Among States

Types of compensable injuries and losses vary from state to state and among different causes of action. For debt collection violations, a key source of actual damages relates to the consumer's emotional stress. The law in this area both for state law claims and under the FDCPA is examined at § 11.8.2, infra.

2.6.5 Causation Is an Important Element in the Proof of Damages

Issues of causation must be considered in seeking actual damages in debt collection cases. Consumers suffering from abusive debt collection tactics are often in a financially distressed position which is stressful in itself. Injuries may have resulted from another traumatic event, such as illness, marital problems, or loss of employment. Establishing the debt collection violation as a sufficient cause to support an actual damages award is discussed at § 11.8.7, infra.

2.6.6 Preparing for a Jury Trial of an FDCPA Case

Section 11.4.5, infra, examines the best practices in demanding a jury trial, the utility of mock juries, and the requirement for providing the judge with proposed voir dire questions, jury instructions, and a special verdict sheet. Section 11.4.5, infra, explains that the jury does not determine the attorney fee award.

2.6.7 Establishing Deception

The Seventh Circuit has uniquely imposed a burden on consumers of proving deception by expert testimony, preferably supported by consumer survey testimony. Difficulties with conducting surveys are discussed at § 11.6.3, infra. Recent Seventh Circuit decisions have retreated from the survey requirement, and other Circuits have different views. This is discussed at § 7.3.8 and § 11.6.3, infra.

2.7 Punitive Damages

2.7.1 Overview

While punitive damages awards may be unavailable for FDCPA violations, they are available in most states for certain tort claims. Such claims have special applicability to debt collection harassment and are considered at § 11.10.3, infra.

2.7.2 FCRA Punitive Damages Awards Against Debt Collectors

Certain Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) provisions apply to debt collectors, and the FCRA explicitly provides for punitive damages for certain types of violations. As a result, the FCRA can be an important claim in a debt collection case, and the availability of punitive damages in such cases is examined at § 11.10.2, infra.

2.8 Consumer Claims Against Collector's Professional Liability Insurer

It can be difficult to collect a judgment from an undercapitalized debt collector. If the collection agency is insured, that may be one way to collect on the judgment. This is discussed at § 11.4.4.4, infra.

2.9 Creditor's and Debt Collector's Liability for Acts of Their Employees, Collection Agency, or Attorney

Courts reach different conclusions as to whether a creditor is liable for the unlawful collection acts of an employee, the collection agency, repossession company or attorney hired by the creditor. This case law is examined at § 11.4.4, infra. Creditors themselves are generally not covered by the FDCPA, but a creditor may fit within the definition of "debt collector" and be controlled by the Act when it "uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts."[98] State law may provide claims against the creditor.[99]

The FDCPA though generally holds debt collectors, such as collection agencies and debt buyers, responsible for violations of their employees, collection lawyers and any collection agencies they hire.[100]

98 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6), discussed at § 4.7.4, infra. See also § 10.4, infra.
99 See Chs. 15, 16, infra.
100 See § 11.4.4.3, infra.

2.10 Keeping Time Records for Awards of Attorney Fees

The FDCPA and state deceptive practices act and other state laws provide for attorney fees for a prevailing consumer. FDCPA attorney fees, including time record requirements, are examined at § 11.13, infra. As discussed in detail in § 11.14, infra, counsel should be aware of any tax consequences to a consumer when awarded attorney fees in a settlement or judgment. Counsel for a consumer should keep accurate and contemporaneous records of time spent on a debt collection case, indicating the purpose or activity to which the time was devoted.

2.11 Injunctions, Administrative Agency Complaints, and Community Education

There are situations involving debt collection abuse in which an action for damages is not appropriate. This may be because the consumer suffered no actionable damages or because the difficulty of establishing damages makes the probability of recovery slight. It may be that individual actions for damages are not among a program's or lawyer's priorities and successful referral to another lawyer is unlikely. The client may be unwilling to pursue damages. An award of damages may not seem likely to deter what appears to be a pattern of community-wide abuse. The most common reason is that the collector may be judgment proof. For whatever reason, a course of action in addition to or in lieu of a suit for damages may be appropriate. Individual or class actions for injunctive relief from abusive debt collection behavior have been or may be brought under several theories.[101]

A complaint to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau or state administrative agency may result in a response from the debt collector, an investigation, an agency order to cease the abusive practice, or revocation of the abuser's commercial license.[102] Even though many administrative agencies ration their resources by not acting on single complaints, it is worthwhile to file complaints with them so that enough accumulate to convince the agency of the need to act, to dispel complacency within the agency arising from a lack of complaints, and to develop the complaint data on which legislative and administrative decisions may later hinge.

As discussed above, a letter from a lawyer to a collection agency or creditor is usually successful in terminating future contact with a particular client.[103]

For the most part, the significant rights provided by the FDCPA to consumers are not required to be disclosed to them.[104] State statutes may also provide important rights. Unless consumers are made aware of these rights through community education, they may never learn of them and may suffer needlessly. Since these rights may be exercised independently of counsel, they are particularly appropriate for community education. Another theme of importance for community education is the need to retain dunning letters, envelopes, contracts, and other documents and to take complete notes of collection contacts in order to preserve evidence necessary for a suit.

2.12 Careful Evaluation of Appealing Adverse Lower Court FDCPA Decisions

Some circuit court panels have little empathy for consumers who are struggling with debt, debt collectors, and the anxiety and other problems that are often associated with financial struggles. In considering the appeal of an adverse lower court decision, a fundamental consideration is how the consumer's case will present to an appellate panel that does not come to the case with some empathy for a struggling consumer.

If the case was dismissed on the pleadings, was the complaint drafted to be compelling to such an appellate panel, or is it focused on the technical requirements of the FDCPA? Is it likely to strike the appellate panel as significant or as a small-dollar case that takes up their precious time? This analysis is a challenging task for a lawyer who has agreed to take a consumer's FDCPA case and put effort into developing a case, only to have it rejected by the trial court. There is a risk in appealing any case, but the risk of creating bad law for a large number of struggling consumers in the circuit is particularly high in FDCPA appeals.

The best course is to obtain the advice of disinterested, experienced, and successful FDCPA appellate counsel. This is commonly available in the breaks at the National Consumer Law Center's Consumer Rights Litigation Conference in the fall and the Fair Debt Collection Practices Conference in the spring, and by telephone with the National Consumer Law Center's Litigation Project or with members of the National Association of Consumer Advocates who specialize in FDCPA appeals.

2.13 Consumers Representing Themselves in Court

Consumers representing themselves in court must overcome tremendous hurdles. Unless the pro se consumer is legally trained, in addition to learning the FDCPA, they must master the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Federal Rules of Evidence, the local court's rules, and often other state and federal laws that are related to their claim. Unrepresented consumers lack the objectivity that a good lawyer could bring to their case. They cannot speak about the plaintiff in the third person, a serious handicap if there are emotional distress damages involved. They face the prejudice in many courts

101 See §§ 11.12, 15.6.2, 16.2 to 16.5, 16.7, infra.
102 See § 2.4.5, supra.
103 See § 2.4, supra.
104 But see Ch. 9, infra.

expressed by the old adage that a client who has themselves for a lawyer is represented by a fool.

There are increasing numbers of lawyers available to represent consumers with strong fair debt collection cases. What makes a strong case varies from state to state and court to court. Checking with one of the experienced or advanced lawyers in the www.consumeradvocates.org directory of FDCPA lawyers is a great reality check regarding the strength of a claim, and could be the beginning of a good attorney-client relationship. In an unusual ruling, one court granted a pro se consumer's motion for the appointment of counsel to represent her in her FDCPA suit, alleging that the plaintiff in a foreclosure action did not have an assignment of the debt.[105]

Most of pro se cases are dismissed early in the proceeding for failure to adequately plead a legal claim in their complaint or for bringing their case against a company to which the FDCPA does not apply. Very few of these cases seem to achieve the results sought by the plaintiffs.

Penalties may be imposed by the courts on anyone bringing any FDCPA suit that is brought in bad faith and to harass the defendant under 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).[106] Those penalties include the defendant's costs and attorney fees.[107]

105 See Greenfield v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2010 WL 604830 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2010) (appointing counsel, since her complaint alleged "complex" issues).

106 See § 12.8, infra.

107 Id. See Appx. E.3.6.4, infra.

Chapter 3 Overview of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

3.1 Scope, Purpose, and Effective Date

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act[1] (the Act or FDCPA) promotes ethical business practices by debt collectors.[2] The Act was the result of compromises that resulted in its bipartisan support and support by both the major debt collection trade associations involved and consumer organizations.[3] The FDCPA applies to debt collector's activities in forty-nine states; Maine's substantially similar law applies to collection activities in Maine.[4]

The FDCPA's influence is significantly broader. Several states have adopted statutes[5] largely mirroring the Act's broad standards and detailed proscriptions, but that apply to all collectors of debts. The Act also affects the development of case law dealing with torts that may be committed in the course of abusive collection efforts.[6] The Act's detailed provisions and the case law construing those provisions are likely to be used for guidance by state courts in states with debt collection statutes that contain similar standards.[7]

The Act is limited in coverage. The term "debt collector" is defined by several tiers of definition within the FDCPA; it generally includes debt collection agencies, debt buyers whose principal purpose is the collection of debts, collection lawyers, mortgage servicing companies that obtain servicing rights after default, creditors using false names or collecting for other creditors, repossession companies, and suppliers or designers of deceptive forms.[8] The term generally excludes creditors collecting their own debts. The FDCPA establishes general standards of proscribed conduct, defines and restricts abusive collection acts (in detail), and provides specific rights for consumers. General standards of proscribed conduct protect a consumer from invasion of privacy,[9] harassment,[10] abuse,[11] false or deceptive representations,[12] and unfair or unconscionable collection methods.[13]

Specifically prohibited debt collection acts include late night[14] or repetitive phone calls[15] and false threats of legal action.[16] The Act gives a consumer the right to require a collector to stop all collection contacts.[17] It requires a collector to deal with a consumer's attorney when the consumer has one.[18] It gives a consumer the right to require a collector to verify the debt it is attempting to collect.[19] Debt collectors must provide two types of notices to consumers under the FDCPA.[20]

Congress specified the three purposes for the FDCPA: 1) "to eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors," 2) "to insure that those debt collectors who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged," and 3) "to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses."[21] Debt collection regulations enacted by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (the CFPB) in Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) reiterated these statutory statements of purpose and also added additional statements of purpose for the regulations: 1) "to ensure that certain features of debt collection are disclosed fully, accurately, and effectively to consumers in a manner that permits consumers to understand the

1 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692 to 1692*p*.

2 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, available online as companion material to this treatise and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Anne Rosso, "The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act's introduction sparked intense debate across the country" (Collector Magazine June 2014) (discussing ACA's 1977 decision to support FDCPA).

3 See, e.g., The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings Before the Senate Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the Comm. on Banking, Hous. and Urban Affairs, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

4 Maine was granted an exemption from the FDCPA by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) pursuant to the FTC's authority under 15 U.S C. § 1692*o*. 60 Fed. Reg. 66,972 (Dec. 27, 1995) (effective Mar. 26, 1996). See also § 3.4.4.2, infra.

5 E.g., Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1788 to 1788.32 (West); Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 12-14-101 to 12-14-137; Me. Stat. tit. 32, §§ 11,001 to 11,054. See also Massachusetts Attorney General's regulations at 940 Mass. Code Regs. § 7.00; Appx. D, infra.

6 See Ch. 15, infra. See also In re Scheck, 574 N.Y.S.2d 372 (N.Y. App. Div. 1991) (collection employees' violation of FDCPA while acting in lawyer's name was considered in lawyer's one-year suspension for violating N.Y. Code of Professional Responsibility). But see Conboy v. AT&T Corp., 84 F. Supp. 2d 492 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (violation of FDCPA does not automatically state claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress absent conduct so extreme or outrageous as to give rise to tortious liability; calling plaintiffs at unusual hours in attempt to collect their adult daughter-in-law's debt did not rise to that level), aff'd, 241 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2001).

7 See Porter v. Somers, 1993 WL 280118 (Conn. Super. Ct. July 12, 1993) (15 U.S.C. § 1692f(1) prohibition against collecting amount not permitted by law supported claim under state consumer protection act (UDAP) that such conduct was unfair). See also Gamby v. Equifax Info. Serv. L.L.C., 462 Fed. Appx. 552 (6th Cir. 2012) (used similarity of FDCPA to construe Michigan debt collection statute); In re Zenner, 560 S.E.2d 406 (S.C. 2002) (reprimanding attorney for loaning his name to lay collection agency that engaged in unauthorized practice of law and abusive debt collection).

8 See § 10.4, infra.

9 See Ch. 5, infra.

10 See Ch. 6, infra.

11 Id.

12 See Ch. 7, infra.

13 See Ch. 8, infra.

14 See § 5.4.2, infra.

15 See § 6.7, infra.

16 See § 7.2.5, infra.

17 See § 5.8, infra.

18 See § 5.5, infra.

19 See Ch. 9, infra.

20 See § 7.2.11, Ch 9, infra.

21 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e).

costs, benefits, and risks associated with debt collection, in light of the facts and circumstances" and 2) creation of record retention requirements "to enable the Bureau to administer and carry out the purposes of the FDCPA, the Dodd-Frank Act, and this part, as well as to prevent evasions thereof . . . [and] facilitate supervision of debt collectors and the assessment and detection of risks to consumers."[22]

The Act became effective on March 20, 1978.[23] The first substantive amendment to the FDCPA in 1986 repealed an exemption for most attorneys and broadened the Act's coverage to apply to attorneys who regularly collect consumer debts for creditors or collection agencies.[24] The second amendment, passed in 1996, altered the debt collection notice.[25] The third amendment, passed in 2006, altered some of the rules for giving debt verification notices and provided a potential exemption for district attorneys' closely supervised check collection agencies.[26] The fourth amendment in 2010 gave enforcement and rulemaking authority to the newly created federal Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.[27]

3.2 General Principles of Construction of the Act

3.2.1 Act Protects Least Sophisticated Consumers

3.2.1.1 Origin of Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard

After the enactment of the FDCPA, courts had to determine what legal standard to use when deciding whether a debt collector had violated the Act: a "reasonable consumer" standard or a standard focused on protecting "less experienced" consumers as adopted by Federal Trade Commission Act ("FTC Act") cases.[28]

In deciding which standard to apply, the Eleventh Circuit in Jeter v. Credit Bureau, Inc.[29] noted that unfair and deceptive debt practices have been the frequent subject of FTC enforcement action, that Congress found that existing law was inadequate to deal with debt collection abuses, and that under FDCPA § 1692*l*(a) a violation of the FDCPA is a violation of the FTC Act. The court concluded that Congress would not have intended to create two legal standards, but rather intended to build upon the existing protections. Citing the support of the majority of other courts to consider the issue at that time, the Jeter court rejected the "reasonable consumer" standard in favor of the FTC Act standard, which it described as a "least sophisticated consumer" standard.

3.2.1.2 Least Sophisticated Consumer vs. Unsophisticated Consumer

In 1994, the Seventh Circuit modified the label for the standard, adopting an "unsophisticated consumer" label instead of the "least sophisticated consumer":

> Literally, the least sophisticated consumer is not merely "below average," he is the very last rung on the sophistication ladder. Stated another way, he is the single most unsophisticated consumer who exists. Even assuming that he would be willing to do so, such a consumer would likely not be able to read a collection notice with care (or at all), let alone interpret it in a reasonable fashion. Courts which use the "least sophisticated consumer" test, however, routinely blend in the element of reasonableness.[30]

The Eighth[31] and First[32] Circuits have joined the Seventh in using the "unsophisticated consumer" standard. The least sophisticated consumer standard is used in the Second,[33] Third,[34] Fourth,[35] Sixth,[36] Ninth,[37] and Eleventh[38] Circuits. Two unpublished cases in the Tenth Circuit have cited to the least sophisticated consumer standard, although no official standard has been adopted by that circuit.[39] The Fifth Circuit has opted not to choose between the standards.[40]

22 12 C.F.R. § 1006.1(b).
23 See § 3.4.2.1, infra.
24 See § 3.4.2.2, infra.
25 See § 3.4.2.3, infra.
26 See § 3.4.2.4, infra.
27 See § 3.4.2.5, infra.
28 See, e.g., Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Standard Educ. Society, 302 U.S. 112, 116, 58 S. Ct. 113, 115, 82 L. Ed. 141 (1937) (discussing the application of FTC ACT and noting that "[t]he fact that a false statement may be obviously false to those who are trained and experienced does not change its character, nor take away its power to deceive others less experienced. There is no duty resting upon a citizen to suspect the honesty of those with whom he transacts business. Laws are made to protect the trusting as well as the suspicious."); Jeter v. Credit Bureau, Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985) ("The FTC Act was enacted to protect unsophisticated consumers, not only 'reasonable consumers' who could otherwise protect themselves in the market place.").
29 Jeter v. Credit Bureau, Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985).
30 Gammon v. GC Services, 27 F.3d 1254, 1257 (7th Cir. 1994). See also Preston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 948 F.3d 772, 784 (7th Cir. 2020) ("We evaluate § 1692e claims under the unsophisticated consumer standard and ask whether someone of modest education and limited commercial savvy would likely be deceived by the letter.").
31 E.g., Klein v. Affiliated Grp., Inc., 994 F.3d 913, 917 (8th Cir. 2021).
32 See Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 766 F.3d 98, 103 (1st Cir. 2014). See also Rocha v. Zwicker & Assoc., 474 F. Supp. 3d 388, 392 (D. Mass. 2020).
33 E.g., Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154, 165 (2d Cir. 2020).
34 E.g., Hopkins v. Collecto, Inc., 994 F.3d 117, 121 (3d Cir. 2021).
35 E.g., Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227, 234 (4th Cir. 2015).
36 E.g., Cagayat v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 952 F.3d 749, 756 (6th Cir. 2020).
37 E.g., Kaiser v. Cascade Cap., L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1136 (9th Cir. 2021).
38 E.g., Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200, 1209 (11th Cir. 2019).
39 Fouts v. Express Recovery Services, Inc., 602 Fed. Appx. 417 (10th Cir. 2015); Ferree v. Marianos, 129 F.3d 130 (10th Cir. 1997). See also Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949, 954 (10th Cir.1996) (noting that "the [FDCPA] is . . . designed to protect such consumers as may not have the sophistication to appreciate the significance of debt collection communications").
40 Peter v. GC Services, L.P., 310 F.3d 344, 349 n.1 (5th Cir. 2002). See also Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 826 (5th Cir. 2020) (citing both standards in single case without making distinction between them).

Several appellate courts have explained that these two standards are essentially the same.[41] However, the Seventh Circuit has held that "because we have rejected the least sophisticated consumer standard, a letter must be confusing to a significant fraction of the population."[42] For simplicity, this manual refers to the "least sophisticated consumer" standard as encompassing both the "least sophisticated" and "unsophisticated" consumer standard.

3.2.1.3 Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard Applies to Multiple Types of FDCPA Claims

To accomplish the consumer protection purpose of the FDCPA, the courts most often apply a "least sophisticated" or "unsophisticated" consumer standard to analyze many of the protections of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.[43] Specifically, courts have applied this standard to claims made under FDCPA §§ 1692e,[44] 1692f,[45] and 1692g.[46] Some courts have used an analogous "more susceptible consumer" standard for FDCPA § 1692d claims,[47] while other courts have used the least sophisticated consumer standard to evaluate these claims.[48] In the context of the waiver of cease communication rights under FDCPA § 1692c(c), courts have considered whether the least sophisticated consumer would have understood that they were waiving their rights.[49]

3.2.1.4 Applying the Least Sophisticated Consumer Test

Courts have described the least sophisticated consumer standard as objective[50] and have stated that the standard "pays no attention to the circumstances of the particular debtor in question, and asks only whether the hypothetical least sophisticated consumer could reasonably interpret the representation in a way that is inaccurate."[51]

However, in order to recover on an FDCPA claim in federal court, plaintiffs must be able to establish Article III constitutional standing, as discussed in § 11.15, infra. In order to satisfy the injury-in-fact element of standing in federal court,[52] the 41 Hopkins v. Collecto, Inc., 994 F.3d 117, 121 (3d Cir. 2021) (two tests are "functionally equivalent"); Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 766 F.3d 98, 103 n.4 (1st Cir. 2014) (stating that "there appears to be little difference" between the two standards); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1061, n.2 (9th Cir. 2011) ("The Seventh Circuit employs an 'unsophisticated debtor' standard, which appears to differ from the majority test only in semantics."); Peter v. GC Services, L.P., 310 F.3d 344, 349 n.1 (5th Cir.2002) ("Because the difference between the standards is de minimis at most, we again opt not to choose between these standards.").

42 Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 961 F.3d 975, 984 (7th Cir. 2020). But see Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 227 (7th Cir. 1996) ("Gammon does not significantly change the substance of the 'least sophisticated consumer' standard as it had been routinely applied by courts. Instead, Gammon concluded that the term 'unsophisticated consumer' is a simpler and less confusing formulation of a standard designed to protect those of below-average sophistication or intelligence.").

43 See, e.g., Appx. E.2.4.1.1, E.2.6.1, infra (collecting cases applying least sophisticated consumer standard).

44 See, e.g., Cortez v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 999 F.3d 151, 154 (2d Cir. 2021); Smith v. Stewart, Zlimen & Jungers, Ltd., 990 F.3d 640, 644 (8th Cir. 2021); Degroot v. Client Services, Inc., 977 F.3d 656, 660 (7th Cir. 2020); Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 826 (5th Cir. 2020); Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 868 F.3d 771, 775 (9th Cir. 2017); Eades v. Kennedy, P.C. Law Offices, 799 F.3d 161, 173 (2d Cir. 2015); Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413, 418 (3d Cir. 2015); Caceres v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 755 F.3d 1299, 1303 (11th Cir. 2014). Cf. Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 843, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 1602, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625, n.6 (2016) ("Because we conclude that the letters sent by petitioners were truthful, we need not consider the parties' arguments as to whether a false or misleading statement must be material to violate the FDCPA, or whether a potentially false or misleading statement should be viewed from the perspective of 'the least sophisticated consumer,' Brief for Respondent Gillie et al. 57, or '[t]he average consumer who has defaulted on a debt,' Brief for Petitioners 41.") (alteration in original). See also § 7.2.4, infra.

45 See, e.g., Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 826 (5th Cir. 2020); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1269 (11th Cir. 2019); Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1308 (11th Cir. 2015); Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 533 (6th Cir. 2014); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010, 1019 (7th Cir. 2014); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011). See also § 8.1.5, infra.

46 See, e.g., Bryan v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 954 F.3d 576, 581 (2d Cir. 2020); Smith v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 377, 380 (7th Cir. 2019); Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984, 991 (9th Cir. 2017); Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 766 F.3d 98, 104 (1st Cir. 2014); Caprio v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 709 F.3d 142, 149 (3d Cir. 2013), abrogated by Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2020); Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 503 F.3d 504, 509 (6th Cir. 2007); Wilson v. Quadramed Corp., 225 F.3d 350, 354 (3d Cir. 2000), as amended (Sept. 7, 2000). See also Appx. E.2.6.1, infra (collecting § 1692g cases using least sophisticated consumer and other general standards).

47 E.g., Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1305 (11th Cir. 2015). See also § 6.2.4, infra.

48 E.g., Levins v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp. L.L.C., 902 F.3d 274, 283 (3d Cir. 2018); Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926, 934 (9th Cir. 2007); Harvey v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 453 F.3d 324, 330 (6th Cir. 2006)

49 E.g., Scheffler v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 902 F.3d 757, 762 (8th Cir. 2018); Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1171 (9th Cir. 2006). See also § 5.8.3, infra.

50 See, e.g., Cagayat v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 952 F.3d 749, 756 (6th Cir. 2020); Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154, 165 (2d Cir. 2020); Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 905 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2018); Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 85 (2d Cir. 2018); Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 868 F.3d 771, 775 (9th Cir. 2017); Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 763 F.3d 385, 394 (4th Cir. 2014); Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 826 (7th Cir. 2012).

51 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 135 (2d Cir. 2017). See also Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1269 (11th Cir. 2019) ("[A] debt collector violates § 1692e by making a representation in a collection letter that would be deceptive or misleading to the 'least sophisticated' recipient of the letter. Likewise, a collection practice violates § 1692f if it would be unfair or unconscionable as applied to the 'least sophisticated' debtor subjected to the practice.").

52 State court standing requirements vary. See Thomas B. Bennett, The Paradox of Exclusive State-Court Jurisdiction over Federal Claims, 105 Minn. L. Rev. 1211, 1233 (2021) (map showing which states have adopted Article III standing formulation of Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife); Wyatt Sassman, A Survey of Constitutional Standing in State Courts, 8 Ky. J. Equine, Agric. & Nat. Res. L. 349 (2015) (state-by-state plaintiff will need to establish that they were harmed—harm to a hypothetical least sophisticated consumer will not be sufficient.[53] Once standing has been established, courts will evaluate the harm to the consumer using the least sophisticated consumer standard. For example, if the plaintiff was in fact deceived, the fact that the plaintiff fell for something that a more sophisticated consumer would have seen through is not a bar to liability if the act would have deceived the least sophisticated consumer.

Although the least sophisticated consumer standard is more protective than the reasonable consumer standard,[54] the courts have generally inserted a reasonableness requirement for the application of the "least sophisticated consumer" standard.[55] For example, the Second Circuit explained that the "least sophisticated consumer . . . lacks the sophistication of the average consumer and may be naive about the law, but is rational and possesses a rudimentary amount of information about the world."[56]

The least sophisticated consumer test also excludes interpretations of collection communications that are "bizarre or idiosyncratic."[57]

The Seventh Circuit holds that a "significant fraction" of consumers must be confused or deceived by the collection activity at issue,[58] which can be established by extrinsic evidence such as consumer surveys where the language is not obviously false, deceptive, or misleading.[59] To judge comprehension by unsophisticated consumers, the Seventh Circuit has looked to "the average consumer in the lowest quartile (or some other substantial bottom fraction) of consumer competence," but noted in dicta that "if the debt collector has targeted a particularly vulnerable group—say, consumers who he knows have a poor command of English—the benchmark for deciding whether the communication is deceptive would be the competence of the substantial bottom fraction of that group."[60]

The courts have split on whether a communication is deceptive or misleading to the least sophisticated consumer is a matter of law, fact, or mixed law and fact.[61]

For circuits that have adopted materiality,[62] the least sophisticated consumer standard is also connected to the determination of whether a violation of the FDCPA is material.[63] survey). Harm to a hypothetical least sophisticated consumer may still be sufficient when pursuing FDCPA claims in some state courts, but it is critical to carefully to assess state standing requirements.

53 See Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990, 1002 (11th Cir. 2020) ("a statutory violation that poses a risk of concrete harm to consumers in general, but not to the individual plaintiff, cannot fairly be described as causing a particularized injury to the plaintiff"; cited favorably by TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez); Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185, 1190 (D.C. Cir. 2020) ("After Spokeo, a plaintiff must demonstrate a subjective—that is, an actual—personal injury for standing even when his merits argument turns on the perspective of an objective, unsophisticated consumer."); Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 336 n.3 (7th Cir. 2019) ("Casillas insists that the 'unsophisticated consumer' standard, which we have applied elsewhere in our precedent, means that standing exists whenever a debt-collection letter might have misled a naive consumer. But the 'unsophisticated consumer' standard is a rule for interpreting a debt-collection letter to determine whether it is misleading. It is not a rule permitting those who have not been injured to vindicate the rights of those who have."). See also TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2211, ___L. Ed. 2d ___(2021) ("mere risk of future harm, standing alone, cannot qualify as a concrete harm—at least unless the exposure to the risk of future harm itself causes a separate concrete harm"); § 11.15.2.2.6, infra.

54 See, e.g., Wilson v. Quadramed Corp., 225 F.3d 350, 354 (3d Cir. 2000), as amended (Sept. 7, 2000). See also § 3.2.1.1, supra (discussing origin of least sophisticated consumer standard).

55 See, e.g., Smith v. Stewart, Zlimen & Jungers, Ltd., 990 F.3d 640, 644 (8th Cir. 2021); Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154, 165 (2d Cir. 2020); Zablocki v. Merchants Credit Guide Co., 968 F.3d 620, 625 (7th Cir. 2020) (view alleged conduct "through the eyes of an unsophisticated but reasonable consumer"); Levins v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp. L.L.C., 902 F.3d 274, 280 (3d Cir. 2018) (standard "preserves a quotient of reasonableness"); Davis v. Hollins Law, 832 F.3d 962, 964 (9th Cir. 2016) (noting in that courts "have carefully preserved the concept of reasonableness"); Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268, 1275 (11th Cir. 2016) ("preserving a quotient of reasonableness"); Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227, 234 (4th Cir. 2015) ("assuming a quotient of reasonableness"); Buchanan v. Northland Grp., Inc., 776 F.3d 393 (6th Cir. 2015) (FDCPA protects consumers from practices that would mislead the "reasonable unsophisticated consumer").

56 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P. 875 F.3d 128, 135 (2d Cir. 2017). See also Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 961 F.3d 975, 982 (7th Cir. 2020) ("Our hypothetical unsophisticated debtor is uninformed, naive, and trusting, but does possess rudimentary knowledge about the financial world, and is wise enough to read collection notices with added care.").

57 See, e.g., Smith v. Stewart, Zlimen & Jungers, Ltd., 990 F.3d 640, 644 (8th Cir. 2021); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1269 (11th Cir. 2019); Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 880 F.3d 362, 366 (7th Cir. 2018).

58 See, e.g., McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010, 1020 (7th Cir. 2014); Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 822 (7th Cir. 2012).

59 See, e.g., Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 961 F.3d 975 (7th Cir. 2020).

60 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769, 774 (7th Cir. 2007). See also § 14.8, infra (discriminatory collection tactics based on race, other prohibited categories).

61 See § 7.3.6, infra.

62 See §§ 7.3.9, 8.1.5, infra.

63 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 85 (2d Cir. 2018). See also Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 868 F.3d 771, 775 (9th Cir. 2017) (discussing materiality as "corollary" to least sophisticated consumer standard); Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413, 418 (3d Cir. 2015) (same); Gillie v. Law Office of Eric A. Jones, L.L.C., 785 F.3d 1091, 1107 (6th Cir. 2015) ("[M]ateriality in the FDCPA context is no more than a restatement of the above-referenced standard: a false representation or act is material if it has the tendency to confuse the least sophisticated consumer."), rev'd and remanded on other grounds sub nom. Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 843, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 1602, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016); Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227, 234 (4th Cir. 2015) ("a representation must be material, which is to say, it must be 'important in the sense that [it] could objectively affect the least sophisticated consumer's decision making.'"); § 7.3.9 (discussing materiality), Appx. E.2.4.1.2 (collecting cases about materiality), infra.

3.2.1.5 Standard for Communications to Bankruptcy Trustees and Consumer Attorneys

Although the Supreme Court declined to directly address the "least sophisticated consumer" standard,[64] in Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson[65] it used a different standard for the narrow purpose of assessing whether a statement that was made to a bankruptcy trustee and a consumer was "misleading" under FDCPA § 1692e. The majority looked to forty year old case law about whether a law firm's advertisement was misleading, concluding that "to determine whether a statement is misleading normally 'requires consideration of the legal sophistication of its audience.'" The court noted that the audience in the Johnson case included the Chapter 13 bankruptcy trustee:

> [W]ho must examine proofs of claim and, where appropriate, pose an objection, . . . including any timeliness objection . . . And that trustee is likely to understand that, as the Code says, a proof of claim is a statement by the creditor that he or she has a right to payment subject to disallowance (including disallowance based upon, and following, the trustee's objection for untimeliness.) (We do not address the appropriate standard in ordinary civil litigation).[66]

The appellate courts have split on how the FDCPA and this standard is to be applied if the consumer is represented by a lawyer. This is discussed at §§ 7.3.7 and 8.1.5, infra.

3.2.2 Interaction of the FDCPA with State Law

The FDCPA and state law interact in a number of ways. Violation of state laws may be a factor in determining whether there has been a violation of the FDCPA.[67] As discussed in § 11.16.1, infra, the FDCPA directly addresses state law preemption. Finally, § 3.3, infra, discusses constitutional challenges to the FDCPA, including those that have been raised under the Commerce Clause and the Tenth Amendment.

3.2.3 Waiver of FDCPA Protections Disfavored

The Ninth Circuit has stated that consumers generally may not waive their rights under the FDCPA:

> Out of an abundance of caution, we further note what should be obvious: a consumer's consent cannot waive protection from the practices the FDCPA seeks to eliminate, such as false, misleading, harassing or abusive communications. Permitting such a waiver would violate the public policy goals pursued by the FDCPA.[68]

A few lower courts have held that consumers cannot waive their rights under FDCPA §§ 1692e,[69] 1692g(a),[70] and 1692*i*.[71]

Even where waiver is possible under the specific statutory provision, any consent by the consumer to a modification of their FDCPA rights should be narrowly limited to match the intent of the consumer and the context in which consent was given. For example, the Ninth Circuit held that it would enforce "a waiver of the cease communication directive only where the least sophisticated debtor would understand that he or she was waiving his or her rights under [15 U.S.C.] § 1692c(c)."[72]

64 Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 843, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 1602, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625, n.6 (2016) ("Because we conclude that the letters sent by petitioners were truthful, we need not consider the parties' arguments as to whether a false or misleading statement must be material to violate the FDCPA, or whether a potentially false or misleading statement should be viewed from the perspective of 'the least sophisticated consumer,' Brief for Respondent Gillie et al. 57, or '[t]he average consumer who has defaulted on a debt,' Brief for Petitioners 41.").

65 Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017). See also § 13.7.3, infra (discussing proof of claims in bankruptcy and Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson).

66 Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 1413, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

67 See, e.g., §§ 7.4.13, 8.2.1.5, infra.

68 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1171 n.5 (9th Cir. 2006).

69 Malone v. Accounts Receivable Resources, Inc., 408 F. Supp. 3d 1335, 1345 (S.D. Fla. 2019) (consumer didn't waive right to bring claims under § 1692e by failing to dispute debt); Johnson v. Eaton, 873 F. Supp. 1019, 1028 (M.D. La. 1995) (finding "no basis in law or fact" for collector's argument that consumer waived FDCPA rights to protections from false or misleading communications).

70 Spears v. Brennan, 745 N.E.2d 862 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001) (no waiver of verification rights when consumer's attorney agreed to hearing date before 30 days had run and then consumer and attorney defaulted; court noted that § 1692g(a) is "in the nature of a statutory tort which is completed once the debt collector undercuts the thirty-day debt validation period or implies the debtor does not have thirty days from receipt of the debt collection notice to dispute the validity of the debt").

71 Blakemore v. Pekay, 895 F. Supp. 972, 983 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (no waiver even though consumer appeared at wrong venue and entered into consent judgment); Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993) (no waiver where consumer appeared in wrong venue and defended against law; court noted that § 1692*i* is "in the nature of a statutory tort which is completed upon the filing of an action in an improper venue").

72 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1170 -1171 (9th Cir. 2006). See also Curtis v. Caine & Weiner Co., 2016 WL 520987 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 10, 2016) (contrary to collector's assertion, consumer's initiation of telephone call to debt collector is insufficient by itself to demonstrate consumer's consent to collector's subsequent unlawful request to represented consumer for payment plan); Istre v. Miramed Revenue Grp., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1020015 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 9, 2015) (rejecting collection agency's consent defense based upon fact that telephone conversation was initiated by consumer from attorney's office with attorney present, since undisputed material facts established that no consent was given by either consumer or his counsel; clear language of § 1692c(a) indicates that required consent must occur before alleged violation occurred ("prior consent") and be express—not merely implied ("given directly to the debt collector")); West v. Abendroth & Russell Law Firm, 45 F. Supp. 3d 959 (N.D. Iowa 2014) (consumer's executed power of attorney with debt settlement company entitled debt collection law firm to discuss debt

Moreover, the Ninth Circuit "decline[d] to create a rule that by waiving the protection of [FDCPA] section 1692c(c) as to one debt collector, a debtor waives that protection with regard to any other debt collector with which that debt collector may be collaborating to collect the same debt."[73]

Concepts of waiver may also come up in defenses like claim or issue preclusion (res judicata and collateral estoppel). These are discussed at § 12.6.2, infra.

3.2.4 Strict Liability Under the FDCPA

The FDCPA generally is a "strict liability" statute[74] unless an FDCPA provision explicitly requires intent or knowledge, or the debt collector successfully establishes a bona fide error defense.[75] The FDCPA follows the strict liability model of the Truth in Lending Act[76] and the Federal Trade Commission Act.[77]

A debt collector is responsible under most provisions of the FDCPA for a deviation from the FDCPA's requirements without regard to intent or knowledge or the willfulness of the violation.[78] However, liability under certain provisions is expressly conditioned on the debt collector's intent[79] or knowledge.[80]

The Ninth Circuit noted that the fact that "Congress took care to require an element of knowledge or intent in certain portions of the FDCPA where it deemed such a requirement necessary further supports our conclusion that [15 U.S.C.] § 1692k(c) generally makes the FDCPA a strict liability statute."[81]

While intent is not required to establish most FDCPA violations, lack of intent is one element of a bona fide error defense[82] or a defense based on compliance with an advisory opinion.[83] Also, intent may be considered by the court in determining FDCPA statutory damages.[84]

When collectors seek to assert a bona fide error defense to avoid strict liability, a variety of issues may come up, including: reasonable reliance on the creditor's information; whether the mistake was a mistake of fact or law; and whether the collector maintained reasonable procedures. These are all discussed at § 12.2, infra.

with company). Cf. Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 1010 (D. Minn. 2013). But cf. Robinson v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 6462278 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 1, 2016) (granting debt collector summary judgment on other grounds while, in dicta, questioning whether consumer's limited power of attorney with credit counselor permitted debt collector to discuss consumer's debt with counselor).

73 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1171 (9th Cir. 2006).

74 E.g., Kaiser v. Cascade Cap., L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1130 (9th Cir. 2021); Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 134 (2d Cir. 2017); Oliva v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 864 F.3d 492, 502 (7th Cir. 2017), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 1283, 200 L. Ed. 2d 469 (2018); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014); Crawford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 758 F.3d 1254, 1259 n.4 (11th Cir. 2014); Glover v. F.D.I.C., 698 F.3d 139 (3d Cir. 2012); McLean v. Ray, 488 Fed. Appx. 677 (4th Cir. 2012); Picht v. John R. Hawks, Ltd., 236 F.3d 446, 451 (8th Cir. 2001). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1692k ("Except as otherwise provided by this section, any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter with respect to any person is liable"); Appx. E.2.4.1.3, infra (compiling cases on strict liability).

75 E.g., Kaiser v. Cascade Cap., L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1139 (9th Cir. 2021) ("the bona fide error defense is the statute's narrow exception to strict liability"); Crawford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 758 F.3d 1254, 1259 n.4 (11th Cir. 2014) (same); Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438 (6th Cir. 2008) ("An exception to strict liability exists only where a debt collector commits a violation resulting from a 'bona fide error.'"); Picht v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 236 F.3d 446, 451 (8th Cir. 2001) ("The bona fide error defense exists as an exception to the strict liability imposed upon debt collectors by the FDCPA."); Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 33 (2d Cir. 1996). See also § 12.2, infra (discussing bona fide error defense).

76 15 U.S.C. § 1640. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 1.5.2.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

77 15 U.S.C. § 45. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.2.4 to 4.2.20 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

78 See, e.g., Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 134 (2d Cir. 2017) ("plaintiff does not need to show intentional conduct on the part of the debt collector"); Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 868 F.3d 771, 777 n.3 (9th Cir. 2017) ("the FDCPA is a strict liability statute that makes debt collectors liable for violations that are not knowing or intentional"); Wise v. Zwicker & Assoc., 780 F.3d 710 (6th Cir. 2015) ("a plaintiff does not need to prove knowledge or intent to establish liability, nor must he show actual damages"); Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 763 F.3d 385 (4th Cir. 2014) ("A debtor generally is not required to show an intentional or knowing violation on the part of the debt collector to recover damages under the FDCPA."); Wahl v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 556 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2009) ("a collector need not be deliberate, reckless, or even negligent to trigger liability").

79 E.g., 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692d(5), 1692e(4), 1692e(5), 1692e(7).

80 E.g., 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692b(6), 1692c(a)(1), 1692c(a)(2), 1692c(a)(3), 1692e(8).

81 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1176 n.11 (9th Cir. 2006). See also H.R. 5294, 95th Cong. (1977) (as reported Mar. 29, 1977) (draft of FDCPA that considered language requiring willful and knowing violations in order to establish criminal not civil liability—proposed language was not adopted), available online as companion material to this treatise.

82 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). See § 12.2, infra (discussing bona fide error defense).

83 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e). See § 3.4.4.3, infra (discussing advisory opinions). See also Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263, 1271 n.9 (11th Cir. 2011) ("The FDCPA contains another exception to the strict liability rule, providing that debt collectors will not be liable for 'any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any advisory opinion of the . . . Commission.' 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e).").

84 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692k(b)(1), 1692k(b)(2). See §§ 11.9.1, 11.9.2, infra (discussing calculation of statutory damages).

3.2.5 Liberal Interpretation of the FDCPA

The FDCPA is a remedial statute[85] and should be "liberally" or "broadly" construed.[86]

3.2.6 Debtors Deserve Reasonable and Civil Treatment

"A basic tenet of the [FDCPA] is that all consumers, even those who have mismanaged their financial affairs resulting in default on their debt, deserve 'the right to be treated in a reasonable and civil manner.'"[87]

> [T]he legislative history indicates clearly that it is exactly such a person, i.e., one who has contracted for goods or services and is unable to pay for them, that Congress intended to protect. Congress' presumption in enacting the FDCPA was that the vast majority of those who would enjoy the protection of the Act would not be "deadbeats." Congress found that in most cases consumers undertake these obligations fully intending to repay them.[88]

85 See, e.g., Urbina v. Nat'l Bus. Factors Inc., 979 F.3d 758, 763 (9th Cir. 2020); Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 826 (5th Cir. 2020); DiNaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 934 F.3d 275, 281 (3d Cir. 2019); Gillie v. Law Office of Eric A. Jones, L.L.C., 785 F.3d 1091, 1098 (6th Cir. 2015), judgment vacated sub nom. Jones v. Gillie, ___ U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 2446, 195 L. Ed. 2d 260 (2016); Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 763 F.3d 385 (4th Cir. 2014); Gutierrez v. AT&T Broadband, L.L.C., 382 F.3d 725, 741 (7th Cir. 2004); Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002). See also Appx. E.1.7.1, infra (collecting cases addressing purpose and general interpretation of FDCPA).

86 See, e.g., Urbina v. Nat'l Bus. Factors Inc., 979 F.3d 758, 763 (9th Cir. 2020); Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154, 165 (2d Cir. 2020); Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 826 (5th Cir. 2020); DiNaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 934 F.3d 275, 281 (3d Cir. 2019); Agrelo v. Affinity Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 841 F.3d 944, 950 (11th Cir. 2016); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014); McMillan v. Collection Professionals Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 757 (7th Cir. 2006); Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002); Picht v. Hawks, 77 F. Supp. 2d 1041, 1043 (D. Minn. 1999), aff'd, 236 F.3d 446 (8th Cir. 2001). See also Appx. A.3, Appx. E.1.7.1, infra (collecting cases addressing purpose and general interpretation of FDCPA); S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong. 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1698 ("In addition to [the] specific prohibitions, this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed.").

87 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Enf't, 502 F.3d 159, 169 (3d Cir. 2007); McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 762 n.10 (7th Cir. 2006). See also Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 777 (9th Cir. 1982) citing 123 Cong. Rec. 10241 (1977) ("Representative Frank Annunzio, chairman of the subcommittee that reported out the bill, stated during debate '(t)hat every individual, whether or not he owes the debt, has a right to be treated in a reasonable and civil manner.'"); Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168, 1178 (11th Cir. 1985) (quoting same statement by Representative Frank Annunzio).

88 Zimmerman v. HBO Affiliate Grp., 834 F.2d 1163, 1168 (3d Cir. 1987).

3.3 Constitutionality of the FDCPA

The FDCPA's constitutionality has been upheld against claims that it violated the:

- Commerce Clause;[89]
- First Amendment (generally)[90] and (Petition Clause);[91]
- Fifth Amendment (Due Process Clause);[92]
- Tenth Amendment;[93] and

89 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (section 1692e's prohibition on false, deceptive, or misleading statements did not violate the commerce clause; it did not alter state law); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 4962940 (M.D.N.C. Nov. 30, 2010), adopted in relevant part, 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011) (rejecting argument that FDCPA exceeded Congress' Commerce Clause authority); Kelly v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 954 (S.D. Ohio 2005) (rejecting collectors' argument that FDCPA is unconstitutional exercise of congressional powers in violation of Tenth Amendment or the Commerce Clause); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 655 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (same).

90 United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 823 F.2d 880, 881 (5th Cir. 1987) ("Deceptive commercial speech does not merit first amendment protection."); Berg v. Merchants Ass'n Collection Div., Inc., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1336 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (FDCPA's prohibition barring collectors from leaving prerecorded voicemail collection messages that are heard by unauthorized third parties does not violate the First Amendment since the prohibition "is narrowly tailored to serve the significant governmental interest of protecting consumers' privacy" and "[d]ebt collectors have several alternative channels of communication available to them, including live conversation via telephone, in person communication, and postal mail"). See also Barr v. Am. Ass'n of Political Consultants, Inc., ___U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 2335, ___L. Ed. 2d ___(2020) (rejecting argument that finding government-debt exception in TCPA to be unconstitutional content-based restriction on speech would make FDCPA unconstitutional); Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 1624 n.21, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) (declining to address dissent's view that Court's decision "creates serious concerns . . . for First Amendment Rights"; issue was not briefed or properly before Court).

91 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (section 1692e's prohibition on false, deceptive, or misleading statements did not violate Petition Clause of the First Amendment; allegedly false statement made during litigation not immunized by Petition Clause). See also § 12.6.6.2, infra.

92 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (section 1692e's prohibition on false, deceptive, or misleading statements is not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad, because statute provides adequate notice and there is no assertion of arbitrary enforcement); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 823 F.2d 880, 881 (5th Cir. 1987) ("Use of the term 'deceptive' does not make the Act unconstitutionally vague on its face. Central Adjustment has not shown that the Act is impermissibly vague in its applications."); Linehan v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 4765839 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 13, 2016) (section 1692i does not violate due process by its vagueness and ambiguity); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (rejecting defendants' argument that applying meaningful attorney involvement standard for complaints under § 1692e(3) would render FDCPA unconstitutionally vague); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 4962940 (M.D.N.C. Nov. 30, 2010), adopted in relevant part, 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011) (rejecting arguments that FDCPA violates Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause).

93 Linehan v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 4765839 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 13, 2016) (section 1692i does not violate the Tenth Amendment); Kelly v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 954

- Fourteenth Amendment (Equal Protection Clause).[94]

In addition to constitutional challenges of the FDCPA itself, constitutional issues such as plaintiff's Article III constitutional standing,[95] the sovereign immunity of states under the Eleventh Amendment,[96] or First Amendment defenses[97] based on litigation, witness immunity, or the right to petition the government may be raised in FDCPA cases.

3.4 Sources of Law Interpreting the FDCPA

3.4.1 Construing the Language of the Act

The language of the FDCPA is the first point of reference in any action under the Act.[98] Congress spent years crafting the final language and policies of the FDCPA.[99] Ignoring the carefully chosen language of the FDCPA would frustrate congressional will and authority.[100] Moreover, as "a 'comprehensive and reticulated' statutory scheme, involving clear definitions, precise requirements, and particularized remedies," the courts should not impose common law limitations onto the FDCPA.[101]

The text of the FDCPA includes congressional findings and purposes.[102] When interpreting unclear or ambiguous parts of the FDCPA, courts should give effect to these.[103] However, the titles in the FDCPA are not part of the law enacted by Congress, having been added by the Law Revision Counsel after enactment, and thus not entitled to consideration in construing the Act.[104]

Congress also recognized its inability to foresee or define all possible types of collection abuses and drafted portions of the FDCPA broadly to allow judicial proscription of unforeseen types of improper collection conduct.[105] When addressing misconduct not specifically proscribed by the Act, courts should apply the Act's general proscriptions,[106] recognize its remedial purposes,[107] and carry out the findings and purposes specified in FDCPA § 1692.

In some cases, courts need to look beyond the plain language of the FDCPA[108] and may consider legislative history.[109] The next section contains brief discussions of the legislative history of the FDCPA and its subsequent amendments. Legislative history materials are available online as companion materials to this treatise.

(S.D. Ohio 2005) (rejecting collectors' argument that FDCPA is unconstitutional exercise of congressional powers in violation of Tenth Amendment or Commerce Clause); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 655 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (same).

94 United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 823 F.2d 880, 880 881 (5th Cir. 1987) (FDCPA "does not violate the equal protection clause by limiting its coverage to independent debt collectors. Because the purpose of the Act is to prevent abusive debt-collection practices and Congress identified independent debt collectors as the 'prime source of egregious collection practices,' there is clearly a rational relationship between the Act's distinction among debt collectors and the underlying state interest").

95 See § 11.15, infra.

96 See § 12.6.5, infra.

97 See § 12.6.6, infra.

98 Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 360, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019) (beginning with analysis of statutory language); Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 1721, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017) ("[W]e begin, as we must, with a careful examination of the statutory text").

99 See § 3.4.2, infra.

100 See Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 360, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019) ("We must presume that Congress says in a statute what it means and means in a statute what it says there."); Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1031, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019) ("the Court must enforce the statute that Congress enacted"); Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016) ("we must construe [a] statute to give effect, if possible, to every word and clause"); Frey v. Gangwish, 970 F.2d 1516 (6th Cir. 1992) (FDCPA is "an extraordinarily broad statute" and must be enforced "as Congress has written it").

101 Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 233 (4th Cir. 2007) ("It is clear that Congress meant not to incorporate common law immunities in this area, such as they may be, but to overwrite them, defining the scope of liability and immunity entirely by statute."). See also Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1068 (9th Cir. 2011) ("we cannot reject the statutory text in order to imply common law limitations").

102 15 U.S.C. § 1692.

103 See Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich LPA, 559 U.S. 573, 618–619, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 1632, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) (Breyer concurring; "When construing a federal statute, courts should be mindful of the effect of the interpretation on congressional purposes explicit in the statutory text.").

104 See Mangum v. Action Collection Serv., Inc., 575 F.3d 935 (9th Cir. 2009) abrogated on other grounds, Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019).

105 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed").

106 See § 6.2, infra (discussing § 1692d's general prohibition on harassing, oppressive, and abusive conduct), § 7.3, infra (discussing § 1692e's general prohibition on false, deceptive, or misleading representations), § 8.2, infra (discussing § 1692f's general prohibition on unfair or unconscionable collection practices).

107 See § 3.2.5, supra.

108 See, e.g., Hernandez v. Williams, Zinman & Parham P.C., 829 F.3d 1068, 1072–1073 (9th Cir. 2016) (laying out steps court took in construing meaning of statutory provision under FDCPA).

109 See, e.g., Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1037, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019) (noting that legislative history supports court's interpretation); Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 1418 n.4, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017) (considering legislative history when interpreting § 1692f). But cf. Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich LPA, 559 U.S. 573, 596, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 1620, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) (declining "to give controlling weight" to "isolated passage" in Senate Report); Scott v. Jones, 964 F.2d 314 (4th Cir. 1992) (sparse legislative history has relatively little persuasive weight in comparison to plain meaning of statute).

3.4.2 Legislative History

3.4.2.1 1977 Act

The FDCPA was signed at a White House ceremony on September 20, 1977, and became law on March 20, 1978. Because the bill that became the FDCPA was drafted by the Senate, the most useful piece of legislative history is Senate Report 382,[110] which describes the provisions of the bill and the intentions of its drafters. This report was written by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs (the Senate Banking Committee) to accompany the bill adopted by the Senate in August 1977, and by the House shortly thereafter. House legislative activity is also important because much of the language and most of the structure of the Act were shaped in the House during three years of frequent rewriting and debate. In fact, the Senate and its committees acted only after the House had passed its own version of the FDCPA.

Two House reports accompanied two earlier bills that were separately voted upon by the House before the final bill was formulated in the Senate. One House bill was defeated under unusual circumstances in July 1976. A description of this bill, together with the bill's text, is contained in House Report 1202.[111] The other document, House Report 131,[112] was written to describe the bill eventually reported to the Senate after adoption with amendments in March 1977. The two House reports must be used with care, because many alterations were made prior to passage of the final version of the Act.

The legislative history of specific portions of the FDCPA may sometimes be gleaned only by carefully reading the many staff and committee drafts and revisions of this legislation. The success of litigation occasionally hinges on the particular wording or meaning of a small passage of the Act. To aid this research, a detailed chronology of the legislative history of the FDCPA is set forth below. Substantive changes in the legislation are discussed at Chapters 4 to 12, infra, in connection with the discussion of the relevant provision of the Act.

Congressman Frank Annunzio (D-Ill.) was primarily responsible for passage of the FDCPA. On October 10, 1975, he introduced the first debt collection bill, H.R. 10191, on behalf of a bipartisan group of members of the Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs of the House Committee on Banking, Currency, and Housing (the House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee).[113] As chairman of this subcommittee, Congressman Annunzio shepherded the original bill and its successors through several redrafts and through years of debate and negotiation. This bill contained features and proscriptions which are now law. The bill, however, did not survive the first session of the 94th Congress, which adjourned without public consideration of H.R. 10191.

On February 19, 1976, Congressman Annunzio introduced H.R. 11969,[114] a modification of H.R. 10191. Many of the basic approaches of H.R. 11969 were similar to the present Act, although many details were undecided. Hearings were conducted by the House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee on March 30 and 31 and April 6 and 7, 1976.[115]

A new bill, H.R. 13720, cosponsored by Congressman Annunzio and five other members of the subcommittee, was introduced on May 12, 1976.[116] The full House Committee on Banking, Currency, and Housing (the House Banking Committee) met in executive session on May 25, 1976 and, by a 21 to 3 vote, passed H.R. 13720 with amendments.[117]

H.R. 13720 came to the floor of the House on July 19, 1976, under a special rule requiring a two-thirds vote for passage. After debate, the bill failed by fifty votes to muster the necessary margin.[118] The bill was again brought to the floor of the House. It passed, 239 to 162, after a technical amendment and an amendment (not carried forward in Senate bills)[119] excluding intrastate debt collectors. The bill was reported to the Senate the next day and referred to the Senate Banking Committee.

On September 21, 1976, Senator Joseph Biden (D-Del.), Chairman of the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs (the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee), introduced S. 3838, which paralleled most H.R. 13720 provisions, but differed in many details. Senator Biden, noting passage of the House bill, remarked that his bill would have to be considered early in the next Congress, because too little time remained in the 94th Congress.[120]

In the 95th Congress, bills introduced in both Houses worked their way through committee and floor votes. H.R. 29, a redraft of H.R. 13720 was introduced by Congressman

110 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, available online as companion material to this treatise and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

111 H. Rep. No. 1202, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. (1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

112 H. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

113 H.R. 10191, 94th Cong. (1975), available online as companion material to this treatise.

114 H.R. 11969, 95th Cong. (1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

115 The Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings on H.R. 11969 Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the House Comm. on Banking, Currency and Hous., 94th Cong., 2d Sess. (1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

116 This version of H.R. 13720 is contained in H.R. Rep. No. 1202, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. (1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

117 H.R. Rep. No. 1202, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. (1976), available online as companion material to this treatise. This report must be cited with care because it does not include many subsequent amendments that led to final passage of the Act.

118 The actual vote was 201 in favor, 175 opposed. 122 Cong. Rec. H7,304 to H7,318 (daily ed. July 19, 1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

119 122 Cong. Rec. H7,787 to H7,798 (daily ed. July 27, 1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

120 122 Cong. Rec. S16,273 (daily ed. Sept. 21, 1976), available online as companion material to this treatise.

Annunzio on January 4, 1977.[121] The House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee held hearings on H.R. 29 on March 8, 9, and 10, 1977.[122] On March 22, 1977, the subcommittee met, amended the bill, and unanimously recommended it (as amended) to the full House Banking Committee.

The amended bill was renumbered H.R. 5294 and was considered by the full House Banking Committee on March 29, 1977. It was amended and reported to the full House by a 35 to 8 committee vote. The committee amendments were largely technical; the few substantive amendments were not contained in the Senate bills.[123] On April 4, 1977, the full House debated and passed the bill by a 199 to 198 vote.[124] The House reported the bill to the Senate on April 6, 1977.

Meanwhile, three bills were introduced in the Senate. Senator Biden introduced S. 656.[125] S. 918 was introduced by Senator Donald Riegle (D-Mich.), who had replaced Senator Biden as chairman of the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee.[126] S. 918 was drafted using S. 656, as the starting point, and was very similar in language to the Act. Senator Jake Garn (R-Utah) introduced S. 1130, a more industry-oriented bill.[127] Few of the provisions unique to the Garn bill were included in the Act. The Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee held hearings on the three Senate bills and the House bill on May 12 and 13, 1977,[128] and Robert Hobbs, a staff attorney at the National Consumer Law Center, presented testimony on behalf of NCLC's low-income clients.

The Senate Banking Committee approved an amended version of H.R. 5294,[129] sending it back to the House of Representatives on August 2, 1977, together with a report about the legislation.[130] The most dramatic change made by the Committee was the deletion of a mandatory minimum $100 civil liability for violations of the Act[131] The full Senate passed this version by a voice vote without debate or additional amendments.[132]

The House passed the Senate version of H.R. 5294 without change and with very little debate.[133] The bill was signed by President Carter on September 20, 1977,[134] and became effective six months later, on March 20, 1978.

3.4.2.2 1986 Amendment

The coverage of attorneys by the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act was expanded by Congress in 1986.[135] An attorney who regularly collects consumer debts is now subject to all provisions of the FDCPA.[136] The 1986 amendment deleted the language which had exempted attorneys acting "as an attorney on behalf of and in the name of a client."[137] Proposals to limit this FDCPA amendment were defeated in the House.[138]

3.4.2.3 1996 Amendment

The 1996 amendment reduced the number of times a collector had to provide a debt collection warning from requiring it in all communications to requiring it only in the first one or two communications.[139] The 1996 amendment also added the requirement that each communication to the consumer disclose that it is from a debt collector.[140]

The 1996 amendment was tacked onto a much larger bill late in the legislative process.[141] There were no hearings or reports regarding the 1996 amendment. Bills proposing additional amendments were introduced in each year since, but did not garner the support necessary for passage until 2006.

3.4.2.4 2006 Amendments

On October 13, 2006, President George W. Bush signed into law four amendments to the FDCPA as part of The Financial Services Regulatory Relief Act of 2006.[142] These amendments passed with bipartisan support, despite opposition from consumer groups.

121 H.R. 29, 95th Cong. (1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

122 The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings on H.R. 29 Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the House Comm. on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, 95th Cong. (1st Sess. 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

123 H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

124 123 Cong. Rec. H2,919 (daily ed. Apr. 4, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

125 123 Cong. Rec. S2,380 (daily ed. Feb. 7, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

126 123 Cong. Rec. S3,484 (daily ed. Mar. 4, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

127 123 Cong. Rec. S4,884 (daily ed. Mar. 25, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

128 The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings Before the Senate Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the Comm. on Banking, Hous. and Urban Affairs, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

129 H.R. 5294, 95th Cong. (1977) (as reported Aug. 2, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

130 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, available online as companion material to this treatise and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

131 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 1, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, available online as companion material to this treatise and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

132 123 Cong. Rec. S13,851 (daily ed. Aug. 5, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

133 123 Cong. Rec. H8,993 (daily ed. Sept. 8, 1977), available online as companion material to this treatise.

134 Remarks of the President of the United States at the bill signing ceremony, available online as a companion material to this treatise.

135 Pub. L. No. 99-361, 100 Stat. 768 (effective July 9, 1986).

136 See § 4.7.3.3, infra.

137 See § 4.8.6, infra.

138 See H.R. Rep. No. 405, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 11 (Nov. 26, 1985), reprinted in 1986 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1752.

139 See § 7.2.11, infra.

140 Id.

141 See Pub. L. No. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009-[1243], the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997 § 2305.

142 Pub. L. No. 109-351, 120 Stat. 1966 (Oct. 13, 2006).

One amendment potentially exempts check collection agencies from the FDCPA, in narrow circumstances when they are operating under the close supervision of a district attorney under an agreement to collect consumers' dishonored checks owed to retail merchants.[143] This amendment was supported by the National Association of District Attorneys and opposed by the ACA International as well as consumer groups.

The three other amendments affect consumers' debt verification rights, the informal dispute resolution device provided by FDCPA § 1692g.[144] Two amendments narrow the situations in which debt verification rights may be available to consumers. The first change amends the FDCPA to provide that the filing of a formal pleading in a civil suit is not an initial communication triggering debt verification rights.[145] The second change narrowing verification rights provides that certain legally required notices debt collectors send to consumers are not initial communications triggering consumers' debt verification rights.[146]

The final 2006 FDCPA amendment codified the extensive case law that some collection activities may continue during the thirty-day period that the consumer has the right to request debt verification, as long as the collection activities are not inconsistent with the consumer's right to debt verification or overshadow the right.[147]

The amendments were passed by the Senate after the Senate considerably tightened up a bill passed by the House.[148]

3.4.2.5 2010 Amendment

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act) creating a new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) was signed into law on July 21, 2010.[149] Title X of the Dodd-Frank Act, the Consumer Financial Protection Act, contains the CFPB's authority.

Effective July 21, 2011,[150] the Dodd-Frank Act amended section 1692*l* of the FDCPA to grant the CFPB authority to prescribe rules "with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors, as defined in this subchapter."[151] Before rulemaking authority was vested in the CFPB, the FDCPA had prohibited the FTC or any other agency from issuing rules under the Act.[152]

The 2010 amendment also transferred authority to issue advisory opinions under FDCPA § 1692k(e) from the FTC[153] to the CFPB.[154]

3.4.3 Case Developments

Thousands of judicial decisions citing the FDCPA are available using services such as Westlaw[155] and LexisNexis. Many of those decisions are summarized in the online FDCPA Case Connector,[156] reproduced in Appendix E, infra, and are cited throughout the chapters of this book. Some of these cases are available through free online websites such as Google Scholar.

Lawyers obtaining favorable decisions under the Act should recommend publication to the court's clerk. Alternatively, attorneys can submit cases directly to LexisNexis and Westlaw for inclusion in their databases by emailing Westlaw at west.attysubmissions@thomson.com and LexisNexis at Source.Acquisition@LexisNexis.com.

3.4.4 Interpretation and Enforcement of the FDCPA by Federal Agencies

3.4.4.1 Overview

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) has been interpreting and enforcing the FDCPA since it was established by the Dodd-Frank Act,[157] and the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has been interpreting and enforcing the FDCPA since the law was enacted in 1977.

This section briefly discusses the ways that the two agencies have used their authority to interpret the statute. Each section will begin with a discussion of the CFPB and conclude with any relevant information about the FTC. Court deference to various agency interpretations is discussed in § 3.4.4.4, infra.

For more details about each agency's FDCPA-related work, the CFPB issues an annual report[158] and the FTC sends an annual letter to the CFPB summarizing its activity.[159]

---

143 See § 4.8.11, infra.

144 See generally Ch. 9, infra.

145 See § 9.2.2, infra.

146 Id.

147 See § 9.8.1, infra.

148 Cf. H.R. 3505, 109th Cong. 2d Sess. §§ 901, 902 (2006), available at www.congress.gov.

149 Pub. L. No. 111-203, 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010).

150 The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act of 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-203, § 1089(4) (July 21, 2010), amending 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d) (hereinafter the "Dodd-Frank Act"). The Dodd-Frank Act section 1100G specifies an effective date for this and other Title X provisions as of the "designated transfer date." 75 Fed. Reg. 57,252 (Sept. 20, 2010) sets the designated transfer date as July 21, 2011.

151 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d).

152 As enacted by Pub. L. No. 95-109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977), 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d) read "[n]either the Commission nor any other agency referred to in subsection (b) of this section may promulgate trade regulation rules or other regulations with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors as defined in this subchapter." But see § 3.4.4.2, infra (discussing regulations issued under § 1692o, which created exception to previous prohibition on agency rulemaking).

153 Pub. L. No. 95-109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977); 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e).

154 Pub. L. No. 111-203, tit. X, § 1089(1), 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010); 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e).

155 On Westlaw, NCLC builds FDCPA searches using the basic search: 15 +2 (u.s.c. u.s.c.a. u.s.c.s.) +2 1692! & da(aft 01/01/2021). The exclamation mark in "1692!" might be replaced with a particular subsection to narrow a search, or a keyword may be added as a search term.

156 For more information about how to access the FDCPA Case Connector, see § 1.1.1.4, supra.

157 Pub. L. No. 111-203, 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010).

158 See, e.g., CFPB, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: CFPB Annual Report 2021 (Mar. 2021), available at www.consumerfinance.gov. See also 15 U.S.C. § 1692m(a) (requiring CFPB to make annual reports to Congress about its activities under FDCPA).

159 See, e.g., Letter from April J. Tabor, Secretary, Fed. Trade Comm'n, to David Uejio, Acting Director, CFPB (Feb. 19, 2021), available at www.ftc.gov. See also 15 U.S.C. § 1692m(b) (authorizing CFPB to request

3.4.4.2 Regulations

As discussed in § 3.4.2.5, supra, effective July 21, 2011,[160] the Dodd-Frank Act amended the FDCPA to grant the CFPB broad authority to prescribe rules "with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors, as defined in this subchapter,"[161] an authority denied to the FTC by Congress.[162]In 2013 the CFPB announced its Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking regarding Debt Collection.[163] In July 2016, the CFPB released an outline of ideas under consideration for the debt collection rulemaking.[164] Proposed regulations were issued in May 2019[165] and supplemental proposed regulations were published in March 2020.[166] Materials related to the drafting of the debt collection regulations, Regulation F, are collected in the companion materials for this manual.

On November 30, 2020, the CFPB published part one of the final debt collection rules focused on debt collection communications.[167] The most significant provisions:

- Set out a presumption that a certain number of calls per week is or is not an FDCPA violation (with factors that can rebut those presumptions);
- Permit certain use of electronic communications to provide disclosures required under the FDCPA or to collect a debt;
- Give consumers the right to ask a collector orally to stop calling;
- Require notice of the right to opt out of electronic communications in every message;
- Provide a safe harbor from FDCPA liability for third-party disclosures when communicating with a consumer by email or text message where the email address or phone number were obtained using specified methods; and
- Define certain limited debt collector voice mail messages left for consumers as outside the FDCPA's scope.

On January 19, 2021, the CFPB published part two of the final debt collection rules focused on debt collection disclosures.[168]

This part of the rules, among other things:

- Sets out information that a debt collector must provide to a consumer at the outset of debt collection communications and provides a model notice containing such information;
- Prohibits debt collectors from bringing or threatening to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt; and
- Requires debt collectors to take certain actions before furnishing information about a consumer's alleged debt to a consumer reporting agency.

Collectively, these two parts comprise Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) and are based on the CFPB's authority under the FDCPA, the Dodd-Frank Act, and the E-SIGN Act.[169] In addition to the text of the regulations themselves, the Bureau also published official interpretations to Regulation F under the same authority.[170] The Bureau also publishes unofficial materials related to Regulation F, such as its Small Entity Compliance Guide, on its webpage for Compliance Resources.[171]

Debt collection regulations issued under FDCPA § 1692o[172] were originally codified at 12 C.F.R. §§ 1006.1 to 1006.8. Under Regulation F, they have been amended and relocated to 12 C.F.R. § 1006.108 and Appendix A to Part 1006 (effective November 30, 2021). These regulations set out procedures for state application for exemptions from the FDCPA's substantive provisions, but do not allow exemption from the FDCPA's

"the views of any other Federal agency which exercises enforcement functions under section 1692*l* of this title").

160 Pub. L. No. 111-203 § 1089(4) (July 21, 2010), amending 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d). The Dodd-Frank Act's § 1100G specifies an effective date for this and other Title X provisions as of the "designated transfer date." 75 Fed. Reg. 57,252 (Sept. 20, 2010) sets the designated transfer date as July 21, 2011.

161 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d).

162 As enacted in 1977 by Pub. L. No. 95-109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977), 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(d) read: "[n]either the Commission nor any other agency referred to in subsection (b) of this section may promulgate trade regulation rules or other regulations with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors as defined in this subchapter." But see 15 U.S.C. § 1692o, which called for the creation of regulations under this section of the statute before the authorization of broad rulemaking authority. These regulations are discussed above in this section.

163 68 Fed. Reg. 67,848 (Nov. 12, 2013), available online as companion material to this treatise.

164 CFPB, Small Business Review Panel for Debt Collector and Debt Buyer Rulemaking: Outline of Proposals Under Consideration and Alternatives Considered (July 28, 2016), available online as companion material to this treatise.

165 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274 (May 19, 2019), available online as companion material to this treatise.

166 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 85 Fed. Reg. 12,672 (Mar. 3, 2020), available online as companion material to this treatise.

167 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020), available online as companion material to this treatise.

168 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021), available online as companion material to this treatise.

169 12 C.F.R. § 1006.1(a) (specifying legal authority for Regulation F as "sections 814(d) and 817 of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA or Act), 15 U.S.C. 1692*l*(d), 1692o; title X of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act), 12 U.S.C. 5481 et seq.; and paragraph (b)(1) of section 104 of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN Act), 15 U.S.C. 7004.").

170 Supplement I to Part 1006, comment I-1.

171 Available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

172 The 2010 amendment to the FDCPA transferred authority over these regulations from the FTC to the CFPB.

As enacted by Pub. L. No. 95-109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977), 15 U.S.C. § 1692o read: "the [Federal Trade] Commission shall by regulation exempt from the requirements of this title any class of debt collection practices within any State if the Commission determines that under the law of that State that class of debt collection practices is subject to requirements substantially similar to those imposed by this title, and that there is adequate provision for enforcement."

Currently, 15 U.S.C. § 1692o says, "The [Consumer Financial Protection] Bureau shall by regulation exempt from the requirements of this subchapter any class of debt collection practices within any State if the Bureau determines that under the law of that State that class of debt collection practices is subject to requirements substantially similar to those imposed by this subchapter, and that there is adequate provision for enforcement."

private or federal enforcement provisions.[173] Only the state of Maine has been granted an FDCPA exemption from the FDCPA's substantive requirements.[174] Thus, collectors in Maine must comply with the state's substantive provisions, but private litigants still can enforce violations of the Maine law in federal court using FDCPA remedies.[175]

On April 22, 2021, the CFPB also issued Interim Final Rules on Debt Collection Practices in Connection With the Global COVID–19 Pandemic (Regulation F).[176] The interim final rules prohibit debt collectors from filing an eviction for non-payment of rent without providing information about the eviction moratorium issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in response to the global COVID-19 pandemic, which was in effect through July 31, 2021.[177] The rule also prohibits misrepresentations about consumers' eligibility for protection under such moratorium. The rule took effect on May 3, 2021, and is codified at 12 C.F.R. § 1006.9.

The CFPB maintains a website with debt collection regulations and commentary at https://www.consumerfinance.gov. This website shows current, historical, and future (if there are regulations that have not yet taken effect) views of Regulation F.

3.4.4.3 Advisory Opinions

The FDCPA states that debt collectors may rely upon a formal advisory opinion as a complete defense in a private suit.[178] As discussed in § 3.4.2.5, supra, the 2010 amendment transferred authority to issue advisory opinions under FDCPA § 1692k(e) from the FTC[179] to the CFPB.[180]

Appendix C to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) lists advisory opinions issued by the CFPB. At the time of publication, only one advisory opinion was listed.[181] This advisory opinion is summarized at Appx. B.2.2, infra.

The CFPB has not adopted the FTC's prior advisory opinions. As a result, the FTC's advisory opinions no longer provide a safe harbor under FDCPA § 1692k(e), which now specifically references "any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any advisory opinion of the Bureau."[182] Advisory opinions issued by the FTC will likely still have persuasive authority.[183] The FTC's four FDCPA advisory opinions are reproduced at Appx. C.1, infra.

3.4.4.4 Guidance, Staff Commentary, and Informal Letters

The CFPB occasionally issues guidance bulletins interpreting the FDCPA on topics that are identified during the CFPB's supervisory work. The CFPB was one of the agencies that joined the Interagency Statement Clarifying the Role of Supervisory Guidance, which explained that "supervisory guidance does not have the force and effect of law . . . [it] articulates the agencies' general views regarding appropriate practices for a given subject area."[184] CFPB guidance on the FDCPA are discussed in Appendix B, infra. The full text of CFPB guidance are available as companion materials to the online version of this treatise.

Prior to the passage of the Dodd-Frank Act,[185] which created the CFPB and gave it broad authority to issue regulations under the FDCPA, the FTC issued a variety of sub-regulatory guidance materials. In 1988, the FTC issued its Staff Commentary on the FDCPA, which is reproduced at Appendix C.2, infra.[186] Although it is still cited sometimes by courts, the FTC appears to have removed the Staff Commentary from its website. The Commentary was not voted on by the FTC Commissioners 173 Version in effect through November 29, 2021: 12 C.F.R. § 1006.6(d) ("No exemption shall extend to the civil liability provisions of section 813 of the Act. After an exemption is granted, the requirements of the applicable state law shall constitute the requirements of sections 803 through 812 of the Act, except to the extent such state law imposes requirements not imposed by the Act or this part.").

Version of the regulations scheduled to take effect on November 30, 2021: 12 C.F.R. § 1006.108 (a) ("Any State may apply to the Bureau for a determination that, under the laws of that State, any class of debt collection practices within that State is subject to requirements that are substantially similar to those imposed under sections 803 through 812 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692a through 1692j) and the corresponding provisions of this part, and that there is adequate provision for State enforcement of such requirements."). See also 12 C.F.R. § 1006, Appx. A(1)(b)(3).

174 60 Fed. Reg. 66,972 (Dec. 27, 1995). See Shock v. CDI Affiliated Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 672148 (D. Idaho Feb. 20, 2010) (Idaho has not been granted exemption).

175 Shapiro v. Haenn, 176 F. Supp. 2d 42 (D. Me. 2002) (Maine's exemption did not eliminate a consumer's private right of action or federal court jurisdiction). See also Maxwell v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2004 WL 719278 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004) (a class composed of only Maine residents may be maintained for violation of the Maine version of the FDCPA). Cf. Marcoux v. Szwed, 2015 WL 7705790 (D. Me. Nov. 27, 2015), adopted, 2016 WL 74407 (D. Me. Jan. 6, 2016) (rejecting motion to dismiss alleged violations of substantive FDCPA provisions despite state exemption).

176 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163 (Apr. 22, 2021). See also April Kuehnhoff, Effective May 3 New Federal Debt Collection Rule on Eviction Practices (National Consumer Law Center Digital Library, Apr. 28, 2021), available at https://library.nclc.org.

177 Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Dep't of Health & Human Services, Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID-19 (June 24, 2021), available at https://www.cdc.gov.

178 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e), discussed at § 12.4, infra.

179 Pub. L. No. 95-109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977); 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e).

180 Pub. L. No. 111-203, tit. X, § 1089(1), 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010); 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e).

181 Safe Harbors from Liability under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act for Certain Actions Taken in Compliance with Mortgage Servicing Rules under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (Regulation X) and the Truth in Lending Act (Regulation Z), 81 Fed. Reg. 71,977 (Oct. 19, 2016).

182 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e) (emphasis added).

183 See § 3.4.4.8, infra (discussing deference to federal agency interpretations of FDCPA).

184 Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, et al., Interagency Statement Clarifying the Role of Supervisory Guidance (Sept. 11, 2018).

185 See § 3.4.2.5, supra.

186 53 Fed. Reg. 50,097 (Dec. 13, 1988), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

and is explicitly not binding on the FTC, the public, or the courts.[187] It is "based primarily on issues discussed in informal staff letters responding to public requests for interpretations and on the Commission's enforcement program, subsequent to the FDCPA's enactment."[188]

From 1977 until 2002, the FTC staff also advised debt collectors, attorneys, and consumers of its policies and interpretations of the Act through hundreds of informal staff letters.[189] These letters were not approved by the FTC Commissioners.[190] Although the Staff Commentary superseded the staff's views in prior informal staff letters,[191] the FTC continued to cite prior staff letters after the Commentary was published.[192] Additionally, some positions in staff letters are antagonistic with positions in other letters,[193] or even with the clear language of the FDCPA. Like the staff commentary, the FTC appears to have removed the informal staff letters from its website.

The FTC, on July 27, 2011, also issued guidelines for conduct that the FTC will sanction regarding collecting debts from decedent's estates.[194]

Unlike advisory opinions discussed at § 3.4.4.3, supra, debt collectors cannot rely on the different types of CFPB and FTC guidance discussed in this section as a defense pursuant to FDCPA § 1692k(e).[195]

3.4.4.5 Supervision and Enforcement

The CFPB has supervisory authority over larger participants in the consumer debt collection market. "A nonbank covered person is a larger participant of the consumer debt collection market if the nonbank covered person's annual receipts resulting from consumer debt collection are more than $10 million."[196] The CFPB regularly publishes "Supervisory Highlights" that summarize the types of violations identified in recent examinations.[197] These publications are useful tools for understanding how the CFPB interprets the FDCPA in otherwise private collection industry supervision.

The CFPB and the FTC have joint authority to enforce compliance with the FDCPA.[198] The Dodd-Frank Act requires the two agencies to negotiate coordination and cooperation with each other.[199] Consent orders, complaints, and court orders from previous enforcement actions are available at the CFPB and FTC websites.[200] Additionally, the FTC maintains an online list of companies and individuals who have been banned from debt collection.[201]

The CFPB also has enforcement authority over unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices (UDAAPs) in the collection of consumer debts.[202] "Original creditors and other covered persons and service providers under the Dodd-Frank Act involved in collecting debt related to any consumer financial product or service are subject to the prohibition against UDAAPs in the Dodd-Frank Act."[203]

The FTC may treat an FDCPA violation as a violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.[204] This enables the FTC to issue an administrative cease and desist order or to obtain a consent decree for a violation of the FDCPA.[205]

The FTC may also treat an FDCPA violation as a violation of an FTC trade regulation rule.[206]

Various federal agencies are also responsible for enforcing the FDCPA in regard to the financial institutions or other 187 53 Fed. Reg. 50,097, 50,101 (Dec. 13, 1988), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra. See also Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) (FTC's Staff Commentary not binding on Commission or public and not entitled to deference when it conflicts with FDCPA's plain language).

188 53 Fed. Reg. 50,097, 50,101 (Dec. 13, 1988), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

189 More recent letters are reproduced in chronological order at Appendix C.3, infra. All of the letters are indexed in Appendix C.3, infra, and the full text is available online under Primary Sources in the NCLC Digital Library. At least some of these letters are also available through Westlaw under Federal Materials, Federal Administrative Decisions & Guidance, Federal Trade Commission, Opinions, by searching for the individual letter.

190 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e); § 3.4.4.1, supra, § 12.4.2, infra.

191 53 Fed. Reg. 50,097, 50,097 (Dec. 13, 1988), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

192 See, e.g., Brown, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 14, 1989); Shibley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 14, 1988).

193 Compare Schorr, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 27, 1981) (interpreting 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(1) to require contracts to specify amount or manner of calculating collection fees before they were collectible in conformance with FDCPA), with Carter, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 8, 1982) (stating that contractual provision for "reasonable collection fee" did not violate FDCPA, as long as it did not violate state law).

94 See § 5.2.9.2, infra.

95 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e); § 12.4, infra.

196 12 C.F.R. § 1090.105(b).

197 See, e.g., CFPB, Supervisory Highlights, Issue 24, Summer 2021 (June 2021), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

198 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*. See also 12 U.S.C. §§ 5563, 5565; 15 U.S.C. § 53(b).

199 Pub. L. No. 111-203 § 1024(c)(3) (July 21, 2010).

200 www.consumerfinance.gov; www.ftc.gov.

201 See Fed. Trade Comm'n, Banned Debt Collectors, available at www.ftc.gov.

202 CFPB, Bulletin 2013-7: Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts (July 10, 2013).

203 Id. (citing Pub. L. No. 111-203, §§ 1002, 1031, 1036(a) (July 21, 2010), codified at 12 U.S.C. §§ 5481, 5531 & 5536(a): "It is also prohibited for any person, even if not a covered person or service provider, to knowingly or recklessly provide substantial assistance to a covered person or service provider in violating section 1031 of the Dodd-Frank Act. See Dodd-Frank Act, § 1036(a)(3), 12 U.S.C. § 5536(a)(3)").

204 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(a) ("For purpose of the exercise by the Federal Trade Commission of its functions and powers under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.), a violation of this subchapter shall be deemed an unfair or deceptive act or practice in violation of that Act.").

205 See Fed. Trade Comm'n, A Brief Overview of the Federal Trade Commission's Investigative and Law Enforcement Authority (July 2008), available at www.ftc.gov.

206 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(a) ("All of the functions and powers of the Federal Trade Commission under the Federal Trade Commission Act are available to the Federal Trade Commission to enforce compliance by any person with this subchapter . . . including the power to enforce the provisions of this subchapter, in the same manner as if the violation had been a violation of a Federal Trade Commission trade regulation rule.").

entities they regulate.[207] These agencies are empowered by FDCPA § 1692*l*(c) to enforce the Act using their powers under other statutes under which they operate. Such statutory powers might allow periodic audits and examinations, license reviews, or charter reviews of the financial institutions.[208]

3.4.4.6 Amicus Briefs

The CFPB and the FTC provide interpretations of the FDCPA through amicus briefs, sometimes jointly and sometimes separately. Copies of CFPB and FTC amicus briefs are available as companion materials to the online version of this treatise.

3.4.4.7 Reports and Consumer Education Materials

The CFPB and the FTC also interpret the FDCPA through research and publications, such as consumer education materials available on their websites.[209]

CFPB reports about debt collection include:

- Debt and Delinquency After Military Service (Nov. 2020);
- The Consumer Credit Card Market (Aug. 2019) (see section 7 on credit card debt collection);
- Market Snapshot: Third-Party Debt Collections Tradeline Reporting (July 2019);
- Quarterly Consumer Credit Trends: Collection of Telecommunication Debt (Aug. 2018);
- The Effect of Debt Collection Laws on Access to Credit (Jan. 2018);
- The Consumer Credit Card Market (Dec. 2017) (see section 8 on credit card debt collection);
- Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt by State: New Data on the Burden of Student Loan Debt on Older Consumers (Aug. 2017);
- Consumer Experiences with Debt Collection: Findings from the CFPB's Survey of Consumer Views on Debt (Jan. 2017);
- Market Snapshot: Online Debt Sales (Jan. 2017);
- Snapshot of Older Consumers and Student Loan Debt (Jan. 2017);
- Study of Third-Party Debt Collection Operations (July 2016);
- The Consumer Credit Card Market (Dec. 2015) (see section 8 on credit card debt collection);
- Consumer Credit Reports: A Study of Medical and Non-Medical Collections (Dec. 2014);
- A Snapshot of Debt Collection Complaints Submitted by Older Consumers (Nov. 2014); and
- Data Point: Medical Debt and Credit Scores (May 2014).

FTC reports about debt collection include:

- The Structure and Practices of the Debt Buying Industry (Jan. 2013);
- Repairing a Broken System: Protecting Consumers in Debt Collection Litigation and Arbitration (July 2010); and
- Collecting Consumer Debts: The Challenges of Change, a Workshop Report (Feb. 2009).[210]

3.4.4.8 Deference to Federal Agency Interpretations of the FDCPA

Final FDCPA regulations (effective November 30, 2021) are entitled to Chevron deference,[211] and the agency's interpretation of its own regulations will be entitled to Auer deference[212] when the language of the regulation is ambiguous.[213]

Other CFPB and FTC interpretations of the FDCPA are "entitled to respect" to the extent that they have the "power to persuade."[214] The Supreme Court has stated that "considerable respect is due the interpretation given [a] statute by the officers or agency charged with its administration."[215]

Courts have found different types of sub-regulatory agency interpretations of the FDCPA persuasive. Below are some

---

207 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*(b).

The following lists the financial institutions and the corresponding federal regulatory agencies: banks (Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Federal Reserve Board, and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation); federally chartered credit unions (National Credit Union Administration); interstate shippers, movers, and airline companies (Secretary of Transportation); certain agricultural creditors (United States Department of Agriculture).

208 E.g., 12 U.S.C. § 1756 (federal credit unions must report to and are subject to examination by the National Credit Union Administration).

209 www.consumerfinance.gov; www.ftc.gov.

210 This report made proposals to strengthen the FDCPA, including: increasing maximum statutory damages; disclosing to consumers that consumer's written dispute of debt during dispute period will require debt collector to suspend collecting debt until it investigates and responds to dispute; disclosing to consumers that collector must cease contacting consumer if requested in writing; and requiring debt collectors to obtain "express verifiable consumer authorization" before taking payments electronically from consumer's deposit accounts.

211 Gonzales v. Oregon, 546 U.S. 243, 255–256, 126 S. Ct. 904, 914–915, 163 L. Ed. 2d 748 (2006) ("Deference in accordance with [Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Res. Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 104 S. Ct. 2778, 81 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1984)] . . . is warranted only when it appears that Congress delegated authority to the agency generally to make rules carrying the force of law, and that the agency interpretation claiming deference was promulgated in the exercise of that authority.").

212 Chase Bank v. McCoy, 562 U.S. 195, 208, 131 S. Ct. 871, 880, 178 L. Ed. 2d 716 (2011) ("Under Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452, 117 S. Ct. 905, 137 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1997), we defer to an agency's interpretation of its own regulation, advanced in a legal brief, unless that interpretation is "plainly erroneous or inconsistent with the regulation.").

213 See, e.g., Christensen v. Harris Cty., 529 U.S. 576, 588, 120 S. Ct. 1655, 1663, 146 L. Ed. 2d 621 (2000) ("Auer deference is warranted only when the language of the regulation is ambiguous.").

214 Gonzales v. Oregon, 546 U.S. 243, 255–256, 126 S. Ct. 904, 914–915, 163 L. Ed. 2d 748 (2006), quoting Skidmore v. Swift & Co., 323 U.S. 134, 140, 65 S. Ct. 161, 89 L. Ed. 124 (1944). See also Carter v. First Nat. Collection Bur., Inc., 135 F. Supp. 3d 565, 573 (S.D. Tex. 2015) ("Although the Court is not compelled to defer to the agencies' view, the FTC's and CFPB's judgment is to be given great weight by reviewing courts, as these agencies are often in a better position than are courts to determine when a practice is deceptive within the meaning of the [FDCPA].").

215 See, e.g., Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Milhollin, 444 U.S. 555, 566, 100 S. Ct. 790, 63 L. Ed. 2d 22 (1980).

examples of court decisions addressing whether particular agency actions are persuasive:

- Debt collection regulations prior to the effective date;[216]
- Proposed debt collection regulations;[217]
- Outline of proposals under consideration for the debt collection rulemaking;[218]
- FTC's Staff Commentary;[219]
- FTC staff letters;[220]
- Enforcement efforts and consent decrees;[221]
- Amicus briefs; and[222]
- Reports.[223]

Moreover, courts may permit findings from government consent orders to be cited in pleadings. As one court explained:

> When facts concerning a defendant's scheme activity are peculiarly within that defendant's knowledge, a plaintiff victimized by that scheme may plead upon information and belief facts drawn from a government agency's investigative findings concerning the scheme.[224]

216 Hopkins v. Collecto, Inc., 994 F.3d 117, 122 n.5 (3d Cir. 2021) (citing without reference to their level of deference);Kaiser v. Cascade Cap., L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1136 (9th Cir. 2021) (noting that collector's argument was "inconsistent with the CFPB's final rule").

217 Manuel v. Merchants & Pro. Bur., Inc., 956 F.3d 822, 829 n. 36 (5th Cir. 2020) (noting proposed time-barred debt disclosure).

218 Gunther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4621764, at *8 n.8 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2018); White v. First Step Grp. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4181121 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2017). But see Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 723278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2018).

219 Levins v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp. L.L.C., 902 F.3d 274, 281 (3d Cir. 2018) (noting that FTC's discussion of an issue was a "sound interpretation" which the court adopted as its own); Ray v. McCullough Payne & Haan, L.L.C., 838 F.3d 1107, 1112 (11th Cir. 2016) (noting that the FTC's reading in its Commentary supported the court's reasoning); Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015) ("[N]onbinding commentary of the Federal Trade Commission lends further support"); Gulley v. Markoff & Krasny, 664 F.3d 1073, 1075 (7th Cir. 2011) (staff commentary entitled to "respectful consideration," but not Chevron deference); Hawthorne v. Mac Adjustments, Inc., 140 F.3d 1367 (11th Cir. 1998) (FTC Staff Commentary was "accorded considerable weight"); Jordan v. Kent Recovery Serv., Inc., 731 F. Supp. 652, 658 (D. Del. 1990) ("Although its 'precedential value' is 'limited by the restrictive interpretative power given to [the FTC] under the FDCPA', the Commentary lends 'some weight.'"). But see Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) (FTC's Staff Commentary is not entitled to deference where it conflicts with FDCPA's plain language); Schweizer v. Trans Union Corp., 136 F.3d 233, 238 (2d Cir. 1998) (noting that passage from FTC's Staff Commentary cited by district court was not sound guidance); Scott v. Jones, 964 F.2d 314 (4th Cir. 1992) (declining to adopt FTC's position where its Staff Commentary and staff letter conflict with plain language of FDCPA).

220 See, e.g., Carter v. AMC, L.L.C., 645 F.3d 840, 844 (7th Cir. 2011) (FTC staff letters are "entitled to respectful consideration"); Pressley v. Capitol Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 760 F.2d 922 (9th Cir. 1985) (citing FTC staff letter to Congress as support court's position, while recognizing limited precedential value of such letters); Ewers v. Rainmaker Recovery 3, Inc., 393 F. Supp. 3d 614, 621 (E.D. Mich. 2019) (FTC letter entitled to respect to extent it has power to persuade). But see Carroll v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 961 F.2d 459 (4th Cir. 1992) (informal advisory opinions of FTC that debt collection warning of § 1692e(11) need not be repeated in subsequent letters were unpersuasive and need not be followed when in conflict with unambiguous command of statute); Scott v. Jones, 964 F.2d 314 (4th Cir. 1992) (declining to adopt the FTC's position where its Staff Commentary and staff letter conflict with plain language of FDCPA); Hulshizer v. Global Credit Serv., Inc., 728 F.2d 1037 (8th Cir. 1984) (collector's reliance on FTC staff letter was not a defense to the violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11)); Staub v. Harris, 626 F.2d 275 (3d Cir. 1980) (rejecting reasoning of informal FTC staff letter).

21 Genova v. Total Card, Inc., 193 F. Supp. 3d 360 (D.N.J. 2016) (taking judicial notice of and deferring to language in consent decrees filed by the CFPB and FTC); Delgado v. Capital Mgmt. Serv. L.P., 2013 WL 1194708 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2013) (FTC reports and enforcement efforts persuasive), aff'd sub nom. McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014); Kinkade v. Estate Info. Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 4511397 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2012) (FTC's Statement of Policy on collection of decedent debts not binding, but considering it to extent it is persuasive). See also Goodman v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 428 F. Supp. 3d 526, 533 (D. Colo. 2019) (citing time-barred debt disclosure language consented to by CFPB and FTC in enforcement actions as support for decision); Valle v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 1332, 1341 (S.D. Fla. 2017) (same). But see Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 723278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2018) (collecting Northern District of Illinois cases concluding that FTC and CFPB consent decrees are entitled to no deference); White v. First Step Grp. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4181121 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2017) (consent decree entitled to limited weight because it represents compromise position, especially where it conflicts with other agency statements).

222 McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014) (finding CFPB and FTC amicus brief persuasive and adopted their arguments on consumers' lack of understanding of details of statutes of limitations); Carter v. First Nat'l. Collection Bur., Inc., 135 F. Supp. 3d 565, 573 (S.D. Tex. 2015) (same). Cf. Hernandez v. Williams, Zinman & Parham P.C., 829 F.3d 1068, 1080 (9th Cir. 2016) (no need to determine whether to defer to agency amicus or amount of deference, because court independently arrived at same conclusion as CFPB and FTC). But see Vien-Phuong Thi Ho v. ReconTrust Co., NA, 858 F.3d 568, 576 n.10 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 138 S. Ct. 504, 199 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2017) (majority was not persuaded by CFPB's interpretation of FDCPA in its amicus brief and did not defer to it); Bourgeois v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2016 WL 245526 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2016) (amicus brief filed by CFPB not entitled to Chevron deference, persuasive value not considered); Masson v. Selene Fin. L.P., 2013 WL 271256 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2013) (distinguishing CFPB amicus position as being based on different facts); Aguiar v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 5915124 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 26, 2012) (same and noting that amicus briefs are not entitled to Auer deference).

223 Gunther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4621764, at *8 n.8 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2018) (citing FTC and CFPB reports as supporting court's holding); White v. First Step Grp. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4181121 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2017) (FTC reports persuasive); Carter v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 135 F. Supp. 3d 565, 573 (S.D. Tex. 2015) (FTC reports persuasive); Delgado v. Capital Mgmt. Serv. L.P., 2013 WL 1194708 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2013) (FTC reports and enforcement efforts persuasive), aff'd sub nom. McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014); McRill v. Nationwide Credit, Inc. 2012 WL 6727974 (C.D. Ill. Dec. 6, 2012) (same). But see Harris v. Total Card, Inc., 2013 WL 5221631 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (no deference due to FTC report where plaintiff did not explain whether the Commission adopted the views stated in the report).

224 Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2271548, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. May 12, 2017) (allowing plaintiff's pleadings to rely on a CFPB consent order).

Chapter 4 Coverage and Definitions, FDCPA § 1692a

4.1 Introduction

This chapter examines ten key terms that typically determine the FDCPA's coverage: attempt to communicate, communication, connection with collection of a debt, consumer, creditor, debt, debt collector, limited-content message, person, and state. All but "connection with collection of a debt" are defined in FDCPA § 1692a or Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021)[1].

One must carefully parse many of these definitions, because they rarely follow common usage. For example, "consumer" is not limited to someone who takes out a debt for consumer purposes; instead, a consumer is any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated on a debt. "Creditor" includes not just the original creditor, but, in most instances, a debt buyer. Only certain communications are "communications." A "debt" excludes certain debts one would assume are debts. The "debt collector" definition is complex, depending on four different conditions and then subject to ten exclusions. The definition of some of these defined terms in turn depends on other defined terms, particularly depending on the term "debt."

4.2 Communication, FDCPA § 1692a(2); Attempt to Communicate, Reg. F § 1006.2(b)

4.2.1 Overview

> The term "communication" means the conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium.[2]

The term "communication" is defined broadly in 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2) as conveying information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium. The term is frequently used throughout the FDCPA, in sections 1692b, 1692c, 1692e, 1692f, and 1692g. Because these FDCPA provisions refer to communication by a debt collector, the term "communication" has no application in the FDCPA to communications by others, such as by a court.[3]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) introduces a new definition for "attempt to communicate":

> Attempt to communicate means any act to initiate a communication or other contact about a debt with any person through any medium, including by soliciting a response from such person. An attempt to communicate includes leaving a limited-content message, as defined in paragraph (j) of this section.[4]

Attempt to communicate includes the use of any medium, so this term applies not only to telephone calls, but also to texts, emails, social media direct messages, and other electronic communications.[5] It includes attempts that simply ask the consumer to respond.

The new definition of "attempt to communicate" allows the CFPB to clarify that certain regulations[6] and official interpretations[7] apply even when there is no communication.[8]

Attempt to communicate is also an important definition as it relates to limited-content messages. As described at § 4.9, infra, a limited-content message is a voicemail message that complies with Reg. F § 1002.2(j). The CFPB finds such a voicemail message does not convey information regarding a debt and is, therefore, not a "communication" for purposes of Regulation F,[9] but still finds it to be an "attempt to

1 12 C.F.R. Part 1006.

2 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2). See also Reg. F § 1006.2(d). Compare S. 656, 95th Cong. 1st Sess. § 802(i), 123 Cong. Rec. 52,380 (daily ed. Feb. 7, 1977) ("[t]he term 'communication' means conveying information directly or indirectly to any person through any medium, except with respect to section 804(a)(3) [limiting contact to twice in seven days], the term 'communication' means actual contact with the consumer which includes a brief statement in any manner of the present intentions of the consumer with respect to the repayment of the debt"), with S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 803(i), 123 Cong. Rec. 53,484 (daily ed. Mar. 4, 1977) ("[t]he term 'communication' means conveying information directly or indirectly to any person through any medium"), and Senate Comm. Print No. 1 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 803(2) (1977) (same as present language).

3 Hardin v. Finkelstein, Kern, Steinberg & Cunningham, P.C., 707 Fed. Appx. 855 (6th Cir. 2017).

4 Reg F § 1006.2(b).

5 See § 4.2.4, infra.

6 See, e.g., Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1), discussed at § 5.4, infra; Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2), discussed at § 5.5, infra; Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(3), discussed at § 5.6, infra; Reg. F § 1006.6(c), discussed at § 5.8, infra; Reg. F § 1006.6(e), discussed at § 5.9, infra; Reg. F § 1006.14(h), discussed at § 6.9, infra; Reg. F § 1006.18(f), discussed at § 7.2.14.3, infra; Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3), discussed at § 8.10, infra; Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4), discussed at § 8.11, infra.

7 See, e.g., Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-2, discussed at § 4.9, infra; Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1, discussed at § 5.9, infra; Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2, discussed at § 6.2, infra; Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1.i (and numerous other official interpretations of Reg. F § 1006.14(b)), discussed at § 6.7.2, infra; Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(1)-1, discussed at § 7.2.11.1, infra; Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-1, discussed at § 11.5.4.2, infra.

8 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,743 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("The Bureau finds that certain messages or activity discussed by commenters, such as telephone calls that do not result in a voicemail message or conversation with a consumer, should be considered attempts to communicate. These messages or activity may raise consumer protection concerns that provisions of the final rule regulating attempts to communicate are designed to address. For example, a debt collector might call a consumer to discuss the consumer's debt at a time that the consumer has designated as inconvenient but fail to reach the consumer because the consumer declines to answer the telephone.").

9 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.

communicate" and thus covered by a number of Regulation F provisions.[10]

4.2.2 Conveying Information Regarding a Debt Directly or Indirectly

To be considered a "communication" under the FDCPA and Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), information regarding a debt must be conveyed directly or indirectly to any person.[11]

A number of courts have found that information regarding a debt is not conveyed directly or indirectly to any person where a communication is never received by a person.[12] Courts have found the same for unanswered phone calls where no message is left.[13] However, some courts have found that an unanswered phone call that displayed the debt collector's name and phone number was a communication, if the consumer had communicated previously with the collector.[14]

Under Reg. F § 1006.2(b), unanswered or unreceived communications may qualify as an attempt to communicate. Regulation F has clarified that numerous provisions in the regulations also apply to attempts to communicate.[15]

The Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Circuits have expressed the idea that, at a minimum, the collector must imply that a debt exists in order to qualify as a communication.[16] Subsequent cases have cited and employed this principle to find a communication in regard to a debt.[17]

Where an email includes the sender's name (that does not imply a debt collector), the sender's email address, and that there is a secure message attached, this has been found not to be regarding a debt because there is no implication that the email is regarding a debt.[18] The secure attachment, if opened, could be seen to be a communication, but not the email itself.[19] Another court found that a voicemail was not regarding a debt where it was merely a series of beeps, a series of numbers that might be a phone number, and a "thank you."[20]

The Tenth Circuit construed "communication" as not including a debt collector's fax to a debtor's employer requesting verification of the consumer's employment, where the fax did not indicate or imply it was from a debt collector or indicate it was in regards to a debt.[21] The same can be the case with requests of third parties for the debtor's location information, where the request does not reveal its purpose or that that requester is a debt collector.[22]

4.2.3 Conveying Information Not Required for Attempt to Communicate

In Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), conveying information regarding a debt is not an element of the definition of "attempt to communicate," which instead requires "any act to initiate a communication or other contact."[23] An attempt to communicate must also be "about a debt," which is discussed in more detail at § 4.2.5, infra.

10 Reg. F § 1006.2(b).

11 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2); Reg. F § 1006.2(d).

12 Davis v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 687 Fed. Appx. 140 (3d Cir. 2017); Seaworth v. Messerli, 2010 WL 3613821 (D. Minn. Sept. 7, 2010), aff'd, 414 Fed. Appx. 882 (8th Cir. 2011).

13 See Chapin v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 2020 WL 1898340 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 11, 2020) (calls that went unanswered and where no message was left were not communications); McClintock v. Credit Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 2197745, at *3 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2018) (consumer failed to allege "what information regarding a debt was conveyed by the unanswered telephone calls"); Messick v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 1180169 (D. Minn. Mar. 25, 2016) (unanswered call by collector seeking to determine contact information of consumer's attorney did not qualify as "communication"); Wilfong v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2678925 (D. Or. June 2, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2601559 (D. Or. June 30, 2011) (receipt of an unanswered telephone call did not constitute a "communication").

14 See Litt v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 146 F. Supp. 3d 857 (E.D. Mich. 2015); Cerrato v. Solomon & Solomon, 909 F. Supp. 2d 139 (D. Conn. 2012); Makreas v. Moore Law Grp., A.P.C., 2011 WL 4803005 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 11, 2011).

15 See § 4.2.1, supra (listing sections of Regulation F that apply to attempts to communicate).

16 See Fontana v. HOVG L.L.C., 989 F.3d 338, 342 (5th Cir. 2021) ("to indirectly convey information regarding a debt, a conversation or message would need to, at the very least, imply that a debt existed"); Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049, 1055 (7th Cir. 2019) ("to constitute a communication under the Act, a message must at least imply the existence of a debt"); Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015) ("To convey information regarding a debt, a communication must at a minimum imply the existence of a debt."). See also Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174, 1177 (10th Cir. 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013) (fax message could not "reasonably be construed to imply a debt").

17 See James v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6336760, at *11 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 12, 2017) (phone calls "unquestionably implied the existence of a debt" in light of the relationship between the parties prior to such calls), adopted, 2018 WL 1173035 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 6, 2018); Mahjub v. Rent Recover of Better NOI, L.L.C., 2017 WL 951366, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 8, 2017) (faxed form was "plausibly a communication because the form could be reasonably construed as implying the existence of a debt").

18 Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049 (7th Cir. 2019).

19 Id.

20 Lynch v. Fin. Recovery Serv. of Minn., Inc., 2013 WL 11971263, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 30, 2013). See also § 4.9, infra (discussing limited-content messages).

21 Marx v. General Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013).

22 Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702 (10th Cir. 2016); Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015) (message for payroll department); Thompson v. Nationwide Debt Mgmt. Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4574566 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 13, 2017); Gearman v. Heldenbrand, 2015 WL 5255335 (D. Minn. Sept. 9, 2015) (voicemail left with landlord); Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 979 F. Supp. 2d 535 (M.D. Pa. 2013); Hanson v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4504290 (D. Minn. Aug. 23, 2013) (brother); Sedillos v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 13081649, at *10 (D.N.M. Mar. 20, 2012) (collector's giving message to consumer's father asking consumer to call collection agency was not "communication" under FDCPA, because it conveyed no information regarding son's debt, directly or indirectly).

23 Reg. F § 1006.2(b).

The Official Interpretations of Regulation F explain that, "[a]n act to initiate a communication or other contact about a debt is an attempt to communicate regardless of whether the attempt, if successful, would be a communication that conveys information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person."[24]

One example is where a collector places a telephone call to a person about a debt. Regardless of whether the debt collector reaches the person, the debt collector has attempted to communicate with the person.[25] The other example is where the same collector leaves a voicemail message. Regardless of whether the voicemail message consists solely of a limited-content message or includes content that conveys, directly or indirectly, information about a debt, the debt collector has attempted to communicate with the person.[26]

Since the attempt to communicate need not convey information regarding a debt, it is a broad concept applying to voicemail messages, unanswered calls, unopened emails, unread text messages, and unseen direct messages via social media.[27] However, there are still types of contact that would not be considered an attempt to communicate. The supplemental information for Regulation F states that "general marketing and advertising directed to groups of consumers or the general public, or personal communications, should not be considered attempts to communicate."[28]

4.2.4 "Any Person Through Any Medium"

A communication or an attempt to communicate can be one sent to "any person."[29] There is no requirement that the communication be conveyed to a person owing the debt or even to a natural person.[30]

A communication sent to the consumer's attorney is sent to "any person,"[31] and that communication also can be viewed as sent to the consumer indirectly.[32] Cases limiting FDCPA coverage as to representations sent to the consumer's attorneys do not find the representation not to be a communication, but instead that a cease communication letter does not apply to communications to the consumer's attorney,[33] that the FDCPA does not apply to misrepresentations to an attorney,[34] or that the least sophisticated consumer standard does not apply to communications to an attorney.[35] Courts recognize explicitly or implicitly that the communications with the attorney are still communications.[36]

As noted, a "communication" need not be directed to the consumer or the consumer's attorney.[37] Postjudgment communications with the consumer's bank are communications.[38] Issues may arise as to whether a collector's furnishing of information to a consumer reporting agency is a communication in connection with collection of a debt,[39] or is an initial communication to a consumer,[40] but there should be no question that it is a "communication." Moreover, communications directed to someone other than the consumer can be seen as indirect communications to the consumer.[41]

24 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(b)-1.

25 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(b)-1(i).

26 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(b)-1(ii).

27 See § 4.2.1, supra (listing relevant provisions in Regulation F that reference "attempt to communicate").

28 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,743 (Nov. 30, 2020).

29 15 U.S.C. § 1692(a)(2); Reg. F § 1006.2(b), (d).

30 See § 4.10, infra, (discussing the definition of "person").

31 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A. 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015); Simon v. FIA Card Services, 732 F.3d 259, 262–263, 265 266 (3d Cir. 2013); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. Jan. 12, 2011); Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 232–233 (4th Cir. 2007); Richmond v. Higgins, 435 F.3d 825, 828 (8th Cir. 2006); Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949, 954 (10th Cir. 1996); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah 2019); Setton v. Cohen Hurkin Ehrenfeld Pomerantz & Tenenbum, L.L.P., 2014 WL 4724704 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 22, 2014). See also Ogbin v. Fein, Such, Kahn & Shepard, P.C., 414 Fed. Appx. 456, 458 (3d Cir. 2011); White v. Fein, Such and Crane, L.L.P., 2015 WL 6455142 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 2015).

32 Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. Jan. 12, 2011); Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 232–233 (4th Cir. 2007); Lemire v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 256 F.R D. 321, 326 (D. Conn. 2009) (granting class certification and observing "the legal convention that communications with a represented party's attorney are tantamount to communications with the party herself"). See also Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah 2019) (not clear whether medical debt collector's "Attorney Representation Form" letter sent to consumer's attorney was communication with consumer in connection with collection of debt, or just communication with consumer's attorney; jury could find either way).

33 Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. Aug. 23, 2007).

34 Kropelnicki v. Siegel, 290 F.3d 118 (2d Cir. 2002); Wright v. Phelan, Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2010 WL 786536 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 8, 2010); Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sec. Sys., 2009 WL 6093372 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 24, 2009), adopted, 2010 WL 1133452 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 22, 2010); Abraham v. Trauner, Cohen & Thomas, L.L.P., 2009 WL 10712043 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 23, 2009); Massa v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2316470 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 10, 2007) (letters from debt collector to consumer's attorney are not actionable under FDCPA).

35 See § 7.3.6, infra. See also Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007).

36 Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007); Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007); Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sec. Sys., 2009 WL 6093372 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 24, 2009), adopted, 2010 WL 1133452 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 22, 2010).

37 See Chung v. Lamb, 2016 WL 1028320 (D. Colo. Mar. 15, 2016).

38 Barrows v. Petrie & Stocking, S.C., 2008 WL 3540405 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 13, 2008).

39 See § 4.3.1, infra.

40 Sinclair v. United Collection Bu., Inc., 2013 WL 12131263 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 26, 2013); Ekhlas v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 6190660 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 25, 2013); Toth v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2013 WL 5658168 (D. Nev. Oct. 16, 2013); Edeh v. Aargon Collection Agency, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2963855 (D. Minn. June 20, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2910750 (D. Minn. July 20, 2011). See also § 1006.30(a), discussed at § 8.12, infra (discussing required actions prior to furnishing information).

41 See Rivera v. IC Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 1466405 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 26, 2018) (conversations with wife indirectly included her husband); Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 4365745 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 10, 2007) (communication to consumer's mediation service was communication to consumer).

With respect to the "any medium" element of the definition, the Official Interpretations to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) clarify that:

> "Any medium" includes any oral, written, electronic, or other medium. For example, a communication may occur in person or by telephone, audio recording, paper document, mail, email, text message, social media, or other electronic media.[42]

While this clarification specifically applies to the definition of communication, the term "any medium" in the "attempt to communicate" definition should also be interpreted broadly.

4.2.5 "Regarding a Debt" and "About a Debt"

The FDCPA definition of communication requires that it convey "information regarding a debt." Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines "attempt to communicate" as any act to initiate a communication or other contact "about a debt."[43] This section looks at the two standards used in these related definitions and also compares them to a third standard, "in connection with collection of a debt," which is a key term as to the FDCPA's coverage in numerous sections of the Act.[44]

The Official Interpretations of Regulation F provides guidance to interpret "information regarding a debt," stating that a limited-content message complying with the requirements discussed at § 4.9, infra, does not convey information regarding a debt, and that a debt collector who provides marketing or advertising to a person owing or allegedly owing a debt is not communicating regarding a debt as long as the communication does not contain information about a specific debt or debts.[45]

In contrast, the definition of "attempt to communicate" specifically includes limited-content messages.[46] As with the interpretation of communication, supplemental information for Regulation F discussing the definition of "attempt to communicate" states that "general marketing and advertising directed to groups of consumers or the general public, or personal communications, should not be considered attempts to communicate."[47] In contrast to the definition of communication, which requires "information regarding a debt," the definition of attempt to communicate does not require conveying such information as discussed in § 4.2.3, supra.

"Regarding a debt" is a broader phrase than "in connection with the collection of a debt." "Regarding a debt" need not be regarding collection of the debt, just regarding the debt. Because the statute's "in connection with collection of a debt" is the narrower phrase, court decisions typically focus on this requirement for coverage for FDCPA provisions requiring a communication be both "in connection with collection of a debt" and "regarding a debt."

If it is "in connection with collection of a debt," then the statement is certainly "regarding a debt" or "about a debt."

An express request for payment is a communication even if the collector has a second purpose in the communication not related to the debt.[48] The communication need not even reference a debt, if the purpose is to eventually collect a debt.[49] The past communications between the parties can also provide an indication that a communication is regarding a debt.[50]

The definition of communication does not require that that the information be regarding a defaulted debt, but only regarding a debt. A monthly billing statement is a communication regarding a debt.[51] A communication is regarding a debt when it is regarding a security interest and no demand is made for payment, since the security interest is securing a debt.[52] Enforcement of the security interest is to recover payment on a debt;[53] regarding a security interest is indirectly regarding a debt.

A statement that the suit for rent and eviction would be dismissed if the tenant vacated the premises is regarding a debt.[54] A collector's communication to the consumer is still regarding a debt even if in response to a consumer inquiry regarding the 42 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-1.

43 Reg. F § 1006.2(b).
44 See § 4.3, infra.
45 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.
46 Reg. F § 1006.2(b).
47 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,743 (Nov. 30, 2020).
48 See, e.g., Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211, 1218 (11th Cir. 2012).
49 Prendergast v. First Choice Assets, L.L.C., 317 F. Supp. 3d 1018 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (no reference to debt, but call was to confirm consumer's address to later send debt collection letter); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (message left on consumer's door to call number was communication if motivation behind message was debt collection); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (same); Russell v. SN Servicing Corp., 2017 WL 1449211 (N.D. W. Va. Apr. 21, 2017). See also § 4.3, infra.
50 See James v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6336760 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 12, 2017), adopted, 2018 WL 1173035 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 6, 2018).
51 See Tran v. SN Servicing Corp., 2018 WL 1141355 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 2, 2018) (monthly mortgage statements); Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2016); Leahy-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (monthly billing statements were attempts to collect bankruptcy-discharged debt and bankruptcy disclosure did not shield loan servicer); Langley v. Statebridge Co., 2014 WL 7336787, at *2 (D.N.J. Dec. 22, 2014) (monthly mortgage statements covered).
52 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1040, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019) (nonjudicial foreclosure is in connection with collection of a debt); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin. L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453 (6th Cir. 2013) (judicial foreclosure is in connection with collection of a debt). See generally § 4.3.4, infra.
53 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1040, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin. L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453, 463 (6th Cir. 2013).
54 See Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016).

debt.[55] The collector's response may not always be in connection with collection of a debt,[56] but it is still regarding a debt.

A statement to a third party referencing "an important personal matter" has been found not to be "about a debt", even where the debt collector's name was stated, since providing that name does not indirectly convey any information regarding a debt, and does not necessarily imply that a debt exists.[57]

A collector's communication in response to the consumer's claim of a FDCPA violation has been held to be not regarding a debt, since it is in regard to whether federal law has been violated.[58]

4.2.6 Voicemail and Messages for Third Parties

For purposes of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), a debt collector does not convey information regarding a debt if the debt collector leaves the consumer a voicemail message that is a limited-content message,[59] as defined in Reg. F § 1006.2(j).[60]

However, "[i]f a voicemail message includes content other than the specific items described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2), and such other content directly or indirectly conveys any information about a debt, the message is a communication."[61] Thus, pre-Regulation F case law on voicemails may still be valid precedent when the message is not a limited-content message.[62]

If a message is knowingly left for a third party, it is not a limited-content message.[63] Such messages may be deemed communications if they convey information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person.[64] A message left with a third party may also violate other provisions of the FDCPA, such as section 1692c(b), discussed at § 5.7, infra.

Prior to Regulation F, courts generally did not require that a voicemail message intended for the debtor directly or indirectly convey information in regard to a debt as long as the unstated purpose of a call is regarding a debt.[65]

Some courts, though, do not find that a message is a communication if it does not explicitly or implicitly indicate it is in regard to a debt.[66]

For additional discussion of voicemail messages, see § 4.9, infra (limited-content messages), § 5.7.8, infra (voicemails and the prohibition on third-party disclosures under § 1692c(b)), § 6.8, infra (voicemails and meaningful disclosure of caller's identity under § 1692d(6)), and § 7.2.11.2, infra (whether voicemail is a communication for § 1692e(11) disclosures).

4.3 Connection with Collection of a Debt

4.3.1 Overview; No Payment Need Be Demanded

"In connection with collection of a debt" is a key term as to the FDCPA's coverage. FDCPA §§ 1692c, 1692d, 1692e and 1692g apply only to actions "in connection with collection of a debt." Section 1692f prohibits certain "means to collect or attempt to collect any debt." The Act does not define "in

55 See Caddle v. Manley Deas Klochalski, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3752877 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 8, 2018); Mannarino v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1526558 (D.N.J. Mar. 28, 2018); Chlubicki v. Pennymac Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1251986, at *3 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2018); Trunzo v. Citi Mortg., 876 F. Supp. 2d 521 (W.D. Pa. 2012). See also Edwards v. BC Serv., Inc. 2019 WL 6726232, at *8 (D. Colo. Dec. 10, 2019); Mansoorian v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 6413484 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2018); Price-Richardson v. DCN Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 902167 (D. Md. Feb. 15, 2018). But see Boyd v. J.E. Robert Co., 2010 WL 5772892, at *13 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2010), adopted, 2011 WL 477547 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 2, 2011).

56 Stuart v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 25 F. Supp. 3d 504 (M.D. Pa. 2014); Cano v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2013 WL 3930087 (E.D. La. July 29, 2013); Gorham-Dimaggio v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2005 WL 2098068, at *2 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 30, 2005).

57 Fontana v. HOVG L.L.C., 989 F.3d 338, 342 (5th Cir. 2021) (stating that "the average consumer likely would not know that Bay Area Credit Service is a debt collection agency, and even though the company's name includes the word 'Credit,' . . . that word 'refers to a category of financial activities far broader than debt collection' and would not necessarily imply the existence of a debt").

58 Geiger v. Creditors Interchange, Inc., 2003 WL 1465404 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 2003). See also Jackson-Spells v. Francis, 45 F. Supp. 2d 496 (D. Md. 1999), aff'd, 198 F.3d 236 (4th Cir. Oct. 6, 1999) (communications concerning consumer's replevin action).

59 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.

60 See § 4.9, infra.

61 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-1. See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)(2)-1 ("a reference to an agent with the 'credit card receivables group' is not a limited-content message").

62 See, e.g., Hart v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 871 F.3d 1255 (11th Cir. 2017) (voicemail message that stated it was a call from a debt collector was a communication); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (answering machine message stating that "very important information to discuss with you in reference to a file that has been forwarded to my office that involves you personally" was a communication). See also Leyse v. Corporate Collection Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 2708451 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 18, 2006) (prerecorded message about "very important matter" was a communication).

63 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 2(j)-1. See § 4.9, infra.

64 See, e.g., Scaccia v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2018 WL 1701953 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 22, 2018) (message left with co-worker that identifies name of caller's organization that clearly indicates it is debt collector was communication).

65 Hultman v. Prof'l Choice Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 2963869 (D. Neb. June 9, 2017); Pisarz v. GC Serv. L.P., 2017 WL 1102636 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2017); Rhodes v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 6472112 (D. Colo. Oct. 31, 2016); Zarichny v. Complete Payment Recovery Serv., Inc., 80 F. Supp. 3d 610 (E.D. Pa. 2015); Inman v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 3415281 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 21, 2009); Mark v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2009 WL 2407700 (D. Minn. Aug. 4, 2009); Belin v. Litton Loan Serv., L.P., 2006 WL 1992410 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2006); Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006). See also Marisco v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 946 F. Supp. 2d 287 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Whatley v. Creditwatch Serv., Ltd., 2012 WL 2885640 (E.D. Tex. July 13, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 3151261 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 2, 2012); Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2007).

66 See Brody v. Genpact Serv., L.L.C., 980 F. Supp. 2d 817 (E.D. Mich. 2013).

connection with collection" or "collection of a debt," but does define "debt."[67]

For many FDCPA provisions to apply, the person must be both a debt collector and the specific action must be in connection with collection of a debt. "Debt collector" depends in most cases on the person's general activities—whether the collector regularly collects consumer debts, or in the alternative its principal purpose is debt collection. "In connection with collection of a debt" relates to the collector's conduct or representations involved in that collector's relationship to a specific consumer.

Several circuits hold that "for a communication to be in connection with the collection of a debt, an animating purpose of the communication must be to induce payment by the debtor."[68] However, a number of courts have held that a request for payment is not the only factor determining the FDCPA's application to a communication.[69]

In a decision that was subsequently vacated for an en banc hearing to address the plaintiff's standing,[70] the Eleventh Circuit held that "the phrase 'in connection with the collection of any debt' in § 1692c(b) must mean something more than a mere demand for payment."[71] The court distinguished between cases involving FDCPA §§ 1692c(b) and 1692e. Noting that these sections operate differently and contain different language, the court chided the lower court for having been "led astray by its reliance on decisions interpreting section 1692e,"[72] and it also noted that imposing a blanket "demand for payment" requirement would "render superfluous" the exceptions contained in section 1692c(b), which allows for certain communications to be made with specified third parties.[73]

Other courts agree that a communication can be in connection with collection of a debt even though no payment is demanded.[74] For example, a debt collector communication indicating the amount due and how to obtain payoff amounts or to make payments is in connection with collection of a debt even though no demand is made for payment.[75] A communication may imply a demand for payment when it includes certain elements, such as the amount of the debt, the method by which the debt may be paid, contact information for sending payment, and an express statement that the communication is for the purpose of collecting a debt.[76]

Communications that do not immediately seek to collect a debt, but instead whose purpose is to further the collector's ability to collect the debt can be in connection with collection of a debt.[77] If the collector would not have sent a document if it were not collecting a debt, then the document being sent is in connection with collection of a debt.[78] A person's actions can be in connection with collection even though that person does not engage in the actual collection, as long as that person is assisting in collection of a debt.[79]

An offer of settlement or restructuring a loan is in connection with collection of a debt.[80] Communications dealing with

67 See § 4.6, infra.

68 See, e.g., McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909, 914 (8th Cir. 2014); Simon v. FIA Card Services, 732 F.3d 259, 266–267 (3d Cir. 2013); Grden v. Leikin Ingber & Winters P.C., 643 F.3d 169, 173 (6th Cir. 2011).

69 See, e.g., Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 385 (7th Cir. 2010) ("absence of a demand for payment was just one of several factors" in determining whether communication was made in connection with collection of debt); Wright v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5532687 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 7, 2013). See also Beeks v. ALS Lien Services, 2014 WL 7785745 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014) (request to call about balance was violation). Cf. Roth v. CitiMortgage Inc., 2013 WL 5205775 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2013) (defendant's correspondence responded to plaintiff's complaint to state agency did not seek payment or mention status of loan and was not "in connection with the collection of any debt"); Lucero v. Cenlar, 2015 WL 519911, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 9, 2015) (communications related to a potential loan workout are not "in connection with the collection of any debt" for purposes of § 1692c(a)).

70 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021), vacating 17 F.4th 1016 (11th Cir. 2021). See § 11.15, infra (discussing standing).

71 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1036 (11th Cir. 2021), vacating & superseding upon reh'g 994 F.3d 1341 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated on other grounds pending en banc resolution (seeking briefing only on standing), 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021).

72 Id.

73 Id. ("Communications with four of the six excepted parties—a consumer reporting agency, the creditor, the attorney of the creditor, and the attorney of the debt collector—would never include a demand for payment.").

74 Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 226–227 (2d Cir. 2015); McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010).

75 McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014). See also Simon v. FIA Card Serv., 732 F.3d 259 (3d Cir. 2013) (settlement offer to avoid adversary proceeding in bankruptcy was "in connection with collection of a debt"); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 2010) (letter requesting financial information to initiate discussion of foreclosure alternatives is "in connection with collection of a debt"); Mansoorian v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 6413484 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2018); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017). But see Bailey v. Sec. Nat'l Servicing Corp., 154 F.3d 384, 389 (7th Cir. 1998) (after finding that a servicer is not a debt collector when acquiring servicing rights when an account was not in default, court went a seemingly unnecessary and questionable step further, finding that the servicer's notice of future payments due was not in connection with collection of a debt).

76 See Pinson v. Albertelli Law Partners L.L.C., 618 Fed. Appx. 551, 554 (11th Cir. 2015); Ponder v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4550934 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 23, 2020), adopted, 2021 WL 5027495 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 4, 2021).

77 McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010).

78 Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009).

79 Siwulec v. J.M. Adjustment Services, L.L.C., 465 Fed. Appx. 200 (3d Cir. 2012) (collector went to consumer's home and held phone for consumer to speak to creditor); Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998) (skip-tracing ruse).

80 George v. Wright, Lerch & Litow, L.L.P., 2016 WL 6963990 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 29, 2016); Gregory v. Home Retention Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 6676008 (D.N.J. Nov. 24, 2014).

loan modifications are in connection with a debt.[81] Information exploring the consumer's payment options can be in connection with collection of a debt.[82] A collector's offer of refinancing is in connection with collection of a debt.[83] While it does not seek to collect the debt, the purpose of the refinancing is to provide funds so that the debt can be collected. Filing a proof of claim in a bankruptcy proceeding is in connection with collection of a debt.[84]

The connection with collection of a debt can be found based on the parties' relationship and the purpose and context of the communication.[85] Even if the collector does not view a communication as being in connection with collection, the determination can be made from the perspective of the consumer, and not from the collector's point of view.[86]

For example, while a servicer might be complying with federal law requiring notice of a change in servicer, a consumer could look at the references to debt collection in the correspondence and view it as in connection with collection of a debt.[87] Depending on how viewed by the consumer, a communication can be in connection with collection of a debt even though the communication expressly states it is not collecting on a debt,[88] where the communication indicates the debt is being waived,[89] or the demand indicates it does not apply if the consumer has filed a bankruptcy.[90] A communication stating that it is from a debt collector who is attempting to collect a debt can be seen as in connection with collection of debt whatever the collector's motive in the communication.[91] But mere reference to a creditor or information relating to a consumer's account does not establish that the communication is in connection with a debt.[92]

Of course, a determination can also be made that the collector views a communication as an attempt to collect a debt, and then it is in connection with collection, without a finding as to how the consumer views the communication.[93] A communication can be in connection with collection of a debt even if the consumer does not realize that is the case, as long at the communication is in furtherance of the collection attempt.[94]

Contacts can also be in connection with collection of a debt even though the contact is with a person who is not obligated on the debt.[95] There need not even be a communication with a consumer as long as the action is in furtherance of collection of a debt. Filing an assignment of judgment that misrepresented the amount owed was conduct taken in connection with the collection of any debt.[96] Reporting a debt to a consumer reporting agency can be in connection with collection of a debt.[97] On the other hand, courts have found that responding to a consumer reporting agency's request to reinvestigate a debt is not in connection with collection.[98]

A ministerial response to a consumer's inquiry might not be in connection with collection of a debt—where the consumer initiates the inquiry and the collector has no intent to use its response to collect the debt.[99] The same may be the case

81 Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010). See also Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at 9 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018). But see Farquharson v. Citibank, 664 Fed. Appx. 793 (11th Cir. 2016) (notification of eligibility for loan modification with no demand for payment).

82 Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010). But see Santoro v. CTC Foreclosure Serv., 12 Fed. Appx. 476, 480 (9th Cir. 2001) ("A letter suggesting loan workout options is not seeking to collect the debt.").

83 Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007).

84 Crawford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C.,758 F.3d 1254, 1262 (11th Cir. 2014).

85 Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 at 385 (7th Cir. 2010). See also Hamilton v. LoanCare, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3973132 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2019) (waiver of deficiency could be in connection with collection of a debt); Price v. Seterus, Inc., 2016 WL 1392331 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 8, 2016); Malik v. Kim, 2016 WL 4709076 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2016); O'Quin v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 13019163 (D. Ariz. Sept. 10, 2012).

86 Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 225 (2d Cir. 2015); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 385 (7th Cir. 2010).

87 Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 225 (2d Cir. 2015); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380. 385 (7th Cir. 2010). See also Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016). But see Muller v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2412361 (S.D. Fla. May 20, 2015); Mabbitt v. Midwestern Audit Serv., Inc., 2008 WL 723507 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 17, 2008) (letter only informed consumer that balance was transferred from one account to another).

88 Price v. Seterus, Inc., 2016 WL 1392331 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 8, 2016).

89 Hamilton v. LoanCare, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3973132 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2019) (waiving deficiency already extinguished through bankruptcy).

90 Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016) (other factors outweighed the bankruptcy disclaimer); Harrer v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6995559 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2016).

91 Logan v. Greenspoon Marder, P.A., 2013 WL 2473038 (S.D. Fla. June 10, 2013). But see Heinz v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 3 F.4th 1107, 1114 (8th Cir. 2021) (letter's boilerplate debt collection language by itself did not establish letter was in connection with collection of debt).

92 Collazo v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 443 F. Supp. 3d 398, 404 (W.D.N.Y. 2020).

93 Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003).

94 Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009).

95 See Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Mich. 2012); Sparks v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 641 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (S.D. Ala. 2008) (contacts with deceased debtor's relatives). See also McClanahan v. Medicredit, Inc., 2020 WL 6204419 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 22, 2020) (genuine issue of material fact as to whether collection agency's response to CFPB to defend against consumer's complaint was "in connection with the collection of any debt"). But see Volden v. Innovative Fin. Sys., Inc., 440 F.3d 947 (8th Cir. 2006) (though collector made false representation, that representation was made to third party, not to consumer, so not in connection with collection of debt).

96 Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2014).

97 McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909, 915 (8th Cir. 2014) (voluntary reporting of disputed debt recognized as in connection with collection of debt); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2020 WL 5411574, at *5 (D. Conn. Sept. 9, 2020) (even consumer who believed his account was fully settled could reasonably interpret communications with CRAs as attempt to collect debt).

98 McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909, 915 (8th Cir. 2014) (noting that such a response is required for collector to comply with dispute procedure in FCRA).

99 Grden v. Leiken, Ingber & Winters, P.C., 643 F.3d 169 (6th Cir. 2011); Bryant v Hope Credit Union, 2020 WL 3103974, at *3 (S.D. Miss.

when the collector is merely responding to legitimate inquiries from third parties with no intent to use its response to collect a debt.[100] On the other hand, the fact that the collector is responding to the consumer's inquiry does not prevent a communication from being in furtherance of collection of a debt—it depends on the nature of the collector's response.[101]

The Seventh Circuit found a letter not in connection with collection of a debt where it was responding to a tenant's demand for return of the security deposit. The letter in response said it was not collecting a debt, told the tenant not to send money, and only explained why the security deposit was not returned.[102] Although informing a student that the collector is withholding a transcript until a debt is paid can be in connection with collection of a debt, a court found this not to be the case where the collector never communicated this to the student until after the student inquired as to the transcript.[103]

Some collector communications are not in furtherance of debt collection and would not be viewed as such by the consumer. The collector's communications concerning the consumer's FDCPA lawsuit against the collector are not seeking to collect a debt, but to defend a litigation brought by the consumer.[104] A court has found a letter warning of the consequences of lack of legal representation not to be in connection with collection of a debt.[105]

Informing the consumer that insurance is placed on the collateral is just notice that the collateral is being protected, as long as no attempt is made to seek payment during that communication.[106] When a debt is in dispute, sending the consumer's attorney the underlying documents in the matter without a demand for payment was found not to be in connection with collection.[107] Where a letter advising the consumer that their dispute has been received invites them to call with any questions, but does not demand payment, it is not in connection with collection of a debt.[108]

After a debt is settled and paid to the creditor, sending the IRS a Form 1099-C may be regarding a debt, but many courts have found this not in connection with collection of a debt, since the collector is no longer seeking to collect a debt.[109] Similarly, after a debt is paid, it is not in connection with

June 11, 2020) (responding to debtor's inquiries about payment options was not in connection with collection of debt); Woody v. Aurora Commercial Corp., 2018 WL 1884826 (W.D. Tenn. Apr. 19, 2019) (servicers' responses to borrower's debt validation requests without further demands for payment were not debt collection activities), aff'd, 779 Fed. Appx. 348 (6th Cir. 2019); McElveen v. Westport Recovery Corp., 310 F. Supp. 3d 1374 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 13, 2018) (statement sent in response to consumer's request for amount owed where not part of strategy to make payment more likely); Abernathy v. Cont'l Serv. Grp., Inc., 2018 WL 3370524 (D. Nev. July 9, 2018) (contents of letters sent in response to consumer's dispute showed that they were not attempting to collect debt); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017) (merely acknowledging consumer's inquiry); Genid v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 4150455 (D.N.J. Aug. 2, 2016) (where former homeowners sought repurchase information and servicer indicated that information was under review, animating purpose of servicer's communication was not to collect debt); Harris v. Stellar Recovery, 2015 WL 4041719 (D. Utah July 1, 2015); Araujo v. PennyMac Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 5664259 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 2015) (sending requested document). See also Pinson v. Albertelli Law Partners L.L.C., 618 Fed. Appx. 551, 554 (11th Cir. 2015) (first letter merely asked for additional information regarding consumer's request); Mathieson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 524 F. Supp. 3d 1246 (M.D. Fla. 2021); McGee v. Piper Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5548779 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2020) (letter sent in response to request for verification of debt gave several qualifying and clarifying comments about debt, did not expressly demand payment, did not include any terms of payment or deadlines, did not threaten adverse consequences if consumer did not pay, and did not instruct how to pay), adopted, 2020 WL 5551022 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 7, 2020); Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2016) (servicer responded to consumer's request by granting a permanent modification).

100 Cooper v. F.A. Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 4326800 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 7, 2007) (responding to inquiry from bar examiner).

101 Pinson v. Albertelli Law Partners L.L.C., 618 Fed. Appx. 551, 554 (11th Cir. 2015) (response indicated amount due and how to pay so contained implicit demand for payment); Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., ___F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1215057, at *5 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2021) (debtor initiated general communication, but collection attorney steered discussion to collection); Odneal v. Midwest Recovery Sys., L.L.C., 2020 WL 1974375 (N.D. Ind. Apr. 24, 2020) (in response to debtors' disputing credit reports, debt collector directed debtors to web portal that facilitated payment of stale debts); Mansoorian v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 6413484 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2018); Malik v. Kim, 2016 WL 4709076 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2016); O'Quin v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 13019163 (D. Ariz. Sept. 10, 2012); Pettway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005). See also Solis v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 2523047 (E.D.N.Y. May 15, 2020) (even assuming that consumer requested information from collection agency, letter could have been sent for more than one reason and be subject to FDCPA if one of those purposes was in connection with collection of debt); Tinsley v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2020 WL 1558105, at *5 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 2020) (payment portal is communication in connection with collection of debt).

102 McCready v. Jacobsen, 2007 WL 1224616 (7th Cir. Apr. 25, 2007).

103 Mesa v. Boston Portfolio Advisors, Inc., 2015 WL 4380759 (S.D. Fla. July 16, 2015).

104 Ray v. Nelson & Frankenberger, P.C., 2014 WL 4385128 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 3, 2014). See also Geiger v. Creditors Interchange, Inc., 2003 WL 1465404 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 2003).

105 Brand v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2018 WL 4898572 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 9, 2018).

106 McNamee v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2021 WL 201189 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 20, 2021) (mortgage servicer's communication about force-placed insurance not in furtherance of debt collection); Mohr v. Newrez, L.L.C., 448 F. Supp. 3d 956 (N.D. Ind. 2020) (notice of potential force-placed insurance required by RESPA); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017); Burns v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 104735, at *3 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 11, 2017); Dyer v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 108 F. Supp. 3d 1278, 1282 (M.D. Fla. 2015).

107 Humphreys v. Budget Rent-a-Car Sys. Inc., 2017 WL 6497285 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 19, 2017) (letter itemizing damages to a totaled rental vehicle sent to the consumer's attorney).

108 Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 3d 1271, 1282 (D. Colo. 2020) ("Not even a wholly unsophisticated consumer could believe she was being asked to pay a debt when the letter is read in whole and in context, especially not when that consumer already had contested the validity of that debt and invited the debt collector to contact her in writing regarding its efforts to resolve the dispute.").

109 Posso v. Asta Funding Inc., 2007 WL 3374400 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 9, 2007). See also Shaffer v. Servis One, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 3d 1039, 1047 (M.D. Fla. 2018); Altenburg v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 2733803 (D. Md. June 26, 2017); Dues v. Capital One, 2011 WL 3799762 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 8, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 3799712 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 29, 2011).

collection of a debt to respond to the consumer's inquiry by informing the consumer that the debt is paid.[110] To respond to the consumer's demand to release a lien is not in connection with collection of a debt where the collector states it has already released the lien and that no lien is justified.[111]

The interplay of the FDCPA and the Bankruptcy Code has led the Seventh Circuit to find that not every inquiry to a debtor as to whether a bankruptcy has been filed is in connection with collection of a debt. While such an inquiry could be in such a connection, depending on the facts, the inquiry could be a legitimate attempt to avoid violation of the Bankruptcy Code's automatic stay.[112] Likewise, postbankruptcy communications stating that they were contacting the debtor about their monetary obligations would be viewed by the least sophisticated consumer as a demand for payment even though they included disclaimers and the debt was no longer owed, and thus were still in connection with collection of a debt.[113]

4.3.2 Is a Required Notice in Connection with Collection?

Whether a notice required by state or federal law is in connection with collection of a debt will depend on the nature of the notice and how closely it is linked to debt collection efforts.[114] The fact that a notice is required by law does not prevent the notice from being in connection with collection of a debt, if the substance of the notice relates to collection of a debt.

A state law-required notice is in connection with collection of a debt if it warns the consumer that if a default is not cured, then the home will be foreclosed upon.[115] A written notice can be in connection with collection of a debt, even if the notice in isolation might not appear to be in connection with a collection, where the notice is sent in the same envelope or almost the same day as a letter seeking collection of a debt.[116]

Prior to the Supreme Court's 2019 ruling in Obduskey that foreclosure is in a form of debt collection,[117] courts came to differing conclusions whether a state-required foreclosure notice was in connection with collection of a debt where the notice did not demand payment or explain how payment could be made, and only disclosed the risk or specifics of a pending foreclosure.[118] After Obduskey, such a notice should be seen as in connection with collection of a debt. For example, a court had no trouble finding that a state-mandated notice to a patient of a hospital lien was in connection with collection of a debt, even though no demand was made for payment.[119]

While a privacy notice on its own might not be sent in connection with collection of a debt,[120] it can be in connection with collection where it threatens third-party contacts if the debt is not paid.[121] A court has also found that a statement on a state-required notice that "this is an attempt to collect a debt" indicates that the notice is in connection with collection of a debt.[122]

RESPA and TILA regulations require that mortgage servicers provide notices and statements to borrowers under specific circumstances. For example, RESPA requires notices upon transfer of mortgage servicing rights.[123] Under TILA regulations, servicers must send borrowers periodic (generally monthly) statements of their account status.[124] The Second Circuit has ruled that a notice of a change in mortgage servicer as required by RESPA is in connection with collection of a 110 Henderson v. N.A.R., Inc., 2011 WL 2312170 (D. Utah June 10, 2011). See also Johnson v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2013 WL 6058199 (E.D.N.C. Nov. 15, 2013) (defendant erroneously replied to consumer inquiry that she did not owe the debt).

111 Atwood v. Cohen & Slamowitz L.L.P., 716 Fed. Appx. 50 (2d Cir. 2017).

112 Buckley v. Bass & Assoc., 249 F.3d 678 (7th Cir. 2001). See also § 13.2.4, infra.

113 Harrer v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6995559 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2016).

114 Cf. Braunstein v. Marsh Landing Cmty. Ass'n at Estero, Inc., 2020 WL 2329941 (M.D. Fla. May 11, 2020) (trier of fact could conclude that least sophisticated consumer would find letters that informed consumer of violations of homeowners' association regulations, of its intent to record lien for non-payment of delinquent account, and of its recording of lien were either communications in "an effort to collect a debt" or, instead, were statutory notices providing information required by state law).

115 See Goodrow v. Friedman & MacFadyen, P.A., 788 F. Supp. 2d 464 (E.D. Va. 2011).

116 Ruth v. Triumph P'ship, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009). See also Snyder v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1910989 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 27, 2015) (where notice that mortgage was transferred was mailed the same day as § 1692g notice that was clearly sent in connection with debt, context would suggest that transfer letter was also sent in connection with debt); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007).

117 See § 4.3.4, infra.

118 Compare Saint Vil v. Perimeter Mortg. Funding Corp., 630 Fed. Appx. 928 (11th Cir. 2015) (no demand for payment, and thus not in connection to collection), and Moore v. Commonwealth Trs., L.L.C., 2010 WL 4272984 (E.D. Va. Oct. 25, 2010) (notice of time and place of foreclosure), with Ademiluyi v. PennyMac Mortg. Inv. Tr. Holdings I, L.L.C., 929 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2013) (while notice did not seek to collect debt, it was in connection with such collection).

119 Garner v. ClaimAssist, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1093276, at *14 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2017).

120 Carlvin v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 753, 761 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Olson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 578 Fed. Appx. 248 (4th Cir. 2014); Carlvin v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 635151 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2017); Venechanos v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4356326 (M.D. Pa. July 14, 2015) (where consumer did not allege that privacy rights notice was sent in same envelope as collection letter, it was implausible that animating purpose of privacy rights notice was to induce payment).

121 Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 695451 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 14, 2006). See also Stricklin v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2011 WL 5325735 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 3, 2011) (cannot decide on pleadings because privacy notice includes information suggestive of debt collection).

122 Cohn v. New Century Fin. Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4016993 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2016) (notice mandated by state law prior to entry of default judgment covered by FDCPA). But see Maximiliano v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 6388918 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 7, 2017).

123 12 U.S.C. § 2605(b); 12 C.F.R. § 1024.33. See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 3.4 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

124 15 U.S.C. § 1638(f); 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41. See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 4.2.5 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

debt,[125] but most other courts find the notice to be purely informational where there is no request for payment.[126] But even where a simple notice of change in servicers is found not in connection with collection, the notice becomes in connection with collection if the notice contains misleading information about amounts due and explicitly or implicitly demands payment.[127]

Monthly mortgage account statements, even when required to comply with TILA, are in connection with collection of a debt.[128] When periodic statements are a vehicle for false or misleading content or demand payment, they can violate the FDCPA.[129] Mortgage servicers are especially prone to include inaccurate and misleading content in periodic statements sent to former bankruptcy debtors. FDCPA claims involving post-bankruptcy periodic statements are discussed at § 13.7.2.8, infra. Mortgage servicers have argued that periodic account statements sent to comply with TILA were informational and not in connection with collection of a debt. Certain courts have accepted this argument, particularly when the statements omitted demands for payment.[130] Several decisions relied on a 125 Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 226 (2d Cir. 2015).

126 Vilinsky v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 640 Fed. Appx. 139 (3d Cir. 2016); Goodson v. Bank of Am., 600 Fed. Appx. 422 (6th Cir. 2015); Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2017); Wood v. Citibank, 2015 WL 3561494 (M.D. Fla. June 5, 2015); Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015); Allison v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4809411 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 26, 2014); Clark v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 69 F. Supp. 3d 1203 (D. Colo. 2014); Goodson v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 940492 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 10, 2014), aff'd, 600 Fed. Appx. 422 (6th Cir. 2015); Parker v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 874 F. Supp. 2d 1353 (M.D. Fla. 2012); Sowl v. OneWest Bank, 2011 WL 13244561 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 3, 2011) (notice regarding transfer of servicing rights as result of merger was not communication).

127 Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017) (having to comply with both RESPA and FDCPA did not excuse servicer's actions in creating confusion in describing payments in FDCPA validation letter and RESPA servicing transfer letter sent a few days apart); Baptiste v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2861670 (E.D.N.Y. July 5, 2017) (RESPA servicing transfer notice violates § 1692e(10) through misleading disclosure of payment amount). See also Weber v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 1519163 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018) (servicer's response to RESPA Notice of Error considered action in connection with collection of debt where stated amount due and advised about paying delinquency).

128 Tabb v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 798 Fed. Appx. 726 (3d Cir. 2020) (given obscure placement of disclaimers, least sophisticated consumer could find periodic statements were demands for payment); Culver v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 2021 WL 2659796, at *4 (M.D. Fla. June 28, 2021) (statements listed total amount due, referred to late fees, and identified sender as debt collector); McNamee v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2021 WL 201189 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 20, 2021) (payment information overshadowed debt collection disclaimers); Pagan v. Rushmore Loan Mortg. Services L.L.C., 2020 WL 7398788, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 17, 2020) (only basis for relationship between servicer and borrower was loan in default and monthly statement identified debt collection purpose); Evans v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2020 WL 5848619, at *9 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) (emphasizing debt collector warning language added to notice); Izmirligil v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2020 WL 1941319, at *11 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 22, 2020) (statements included address for remitting funds, payment due date, and identified document as for debt collection purpose); Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790, at *13 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) ("Although the account statements do not 'demand' payment per se, they look and feel like bills"); Lilly v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4410040 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 4, 2017) (debt collection was animating purpose of servicer's statements; statements listed amount due and demanded payment); Sellers v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1683613, at *6 (M.D. Fla. May 3, 2017) (court must review monthly statements in context, label as not for debt collection purposes not determinative). See also Leahy-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L. L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294, 1303–1304 (M.D. Fla. 2016); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197, 1206 n.10 (M.D. Fla. 2015); Patton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2011 WL 1706889, at *5 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2011).

129 Rivera v. Bayview Loan Servicing, 2020 WL 1508328 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2020) (refusing to dismiss FDCPA claims alleging monthly account statements demanded payment of inflated sums); Roche v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1452346 at *8–9 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 25, 2020) (periodic statements listed fees that became due if scheduled payments not made and identified servicer as debt collector); Miller v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2871141 (D. Mass. July 3, 2019) (content of periodic statements, including accompanying payment coupons with due dates, made them communication for collection of debt); Mohamad v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2019 WL 2425194, at *6 (M.D. Fla. May 16, 2019) ("However, when the mortgage statement includes debt collection language in addition to that which is required by TILA, those statements may constitute debt collection activity that is subject to the FDCPA."), adopted, 2019 WL 2423638 (M.D. Fla. June 10, 2019); Muhammad v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1259353 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2019) (servicer added content to model forms that included directions for payments and designation that statement was for debt collection purposes); Lear v. Select Portfolio, Inc., 309 F. Supp. 3d 1237 (S.D. Fla. 2018) (monthly statements included additional information not required by model form, demanded payments, and gave instructions for payment); France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018) (merely stating amount due by certain date on monthly statement would not violate FDCPA, but representing late fee as due when loan had been accelerated was not authorized by loan documents); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (monthly statements included information beyond model form, including payment coupons, due dates and notice about reinstatement); Jackson v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4347382 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 29, 2017) (inclusion of payment coupons). See also Grant v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 367648 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 30, 2019) (approving class settlement with maximum FDCPA statutory damages for claims involving TILA monthly statements).

130 Graham v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2021 WL 2557502, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 9, 2021) (finding disavowal of payment purpose on face of statements persuasive); Jones v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2020 WL 8771252 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2020), adopted, 2021 WL 405888 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 5, 2021) (use of model TILA periodic statement form with no additional demand language); Lamirand v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6134356 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2020) (periodic statements substantially mimicked the model TILA form); Czaban v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5690633, at *2 (N.D. Fla. Nov. 1, 2019) (periodic statements did not include "strong demands" for payment); Shaffer v. Servis One, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 3d 1039, 1046 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (monthly statement tracking Regulation Z model form and including payment coupon not communication in connection with collection of debt); Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 1349 (M.D. Fla. 2017) (periodic statement was not debt collection communication, servicer did not add demands for payment beyond what form called for); Antoine v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3404389 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2017) (monthly statement sent under TILA did not violate FDCPA); Brown v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 1157253 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 24, 2017) (no violation with use of CFPB model form); Hill v. DLJ Mortg. Capital, Inc., 2016 WL 5818540, at misinterpretation of a CFPB Guidance that created a narrow exception to the periodic statement obligation in order to avoid conflicts with the FDCPA.[131]

Sending the annual escrow statement required by federal law had been held not in connection with collection of a debt.[132] Disclosing a servicemember's rights to legal protections and relief under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act has been found not to be in connection with collection of a debt.[133]

4.3.3 Collection Litigation

The Supreme Court has ruled that collection litigation is debt collection,[134] so that conduct in connection with collection litigation is also in connection with collection of a debt. Consequently, pleadings, affidavits, and other filings and actions in connection with litigation in a collection action are in connection with debt collection.[135]

FDCPA § 1692e(11) exempts legal pleadings from a specific disclosure requirement,[136] providing additional evidence that the FDCPA's other provisions apply to legal pleadings.

At least in the Seventh Circuit, it may be important to allege that the conduct or statement in the collection litigation misled or otherwise violated the rights of the consumer.[137]

*8 9 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 5, 2016), aff'd 689 Fed. Appx. 97(2d Cir. 2017) (no demand for payment in statements). See also Alhassid v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 771 Fed. Appx. 965 (11th Cir. 2019) (monthly statements related to reverse mortgage did not demand payment).

131 A CFPB Guidance created a compliance exception only for periodic statements that would potentially violate the "cease communication" duties of FDCPA § 1692c(c). CFPB Bulletin 2013-12, Implementation Guidance for Certain Mortgage Servicing Rules, 2013 WL 9001249 (C.F.P.B. Oct. 15, 2013). Courts have applied the Guidance well beyond this limited scope. Estate of Morgan v. BWW Law Group, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2880984, at *5 (D. Md. July 3, 2019) (sending statement to counsel rather than debtor fell within CFPB guidance to FDCPA liability; "the CFPB opinion provides reasonable guidance, and Plaintiffs have failed to adequately allege debt collection activity beyond the federal notice requirement"); Daniels v. Select Portfolio Services, Inc., 2018 WL 6618463 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 18, 2018) (referencing CFPB guidance, monthly mortgage statements in compliance with TILA not debt collection); Zavala v. Select Portfolio Servicing Inc., 2018 WL 6198685, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 28, 2018); Mills v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2018 WL 5113001 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2018) (referring to Guidance to hold that if statement contains content that complies with TILA, statement does not violate FDCPA); Jones v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2018 WL 2316636, at *3 (S.D. Fla. May 2, 2018) ("Courts in this circuit have followed the CFPB guidance in the context of monthly mortgage statements by holding that if the monthly mortgage statements were sent pursuant to TILA, they are not 'communication in connection with the collection of a debt' under the FDCPA."). But compare Pagan v. Rushmore Loan Mortg. Services L.L.C., 2020 WL 7398788, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 17, 2020) (content of monthly statement made it in connection with collection of debt, CFPB Guidance irrelevant to determination); Lear v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 309 F. Supp. 3d 1237, 1239–1240 (S.D. Fla. 2018) (mortgage servicers can comply with both TILA and FDCPA, no preemption of FDCPA by TILA); France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405, at *6 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018) (distinguishing CFPB Guidance, including in properly formulated periodic statement claim for late fees that were not contractually allowed can trigger FDCPA liability); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354, at *6 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (rejecting contention that CFPB Guidance shielded servicer from FDCPA liability for including debt collection language not required by TILA); Mackiewicz v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2015 WL 13814879, at *5 (M.D. Fla. June 25, 2015).

132 Gagnon v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 563 B.R. 835 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (mortgage servicer's annual escrow account disclosure not attempt to collect debt); Sajdak v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 281 F. Supp. 3d 740 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (RESPA annual escrow account disclosure statement containing projections of shortage not sent in connection with collection of debt; identified amounts due in future, but does not ask for payment).

133 Krechner v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2015 WL 9260055 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 18, 2015).

134 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 294, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995).

135 Marquez v. Weinstein, Pinson & Riley, P.S., 836 F.3d 808, 811 (7th Cir. 2016) (legal pleadings); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 177 (3d Cir. 2015) (foreclosure complaint); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567, 573–574 (8th Cir. 2015); Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015) (attorney's sworn statement in garnishment proceeding); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443, 449–450 (6th Cir. 2014), as amended (Dec. 11, 2014); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 951 (9th Cir. 2011) (discovery); Donohue v. Quick Collect, Inc., 592 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 2010) (state court debt collection complaint is communication subject to FDCPA); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 231 (4th Cir. 2007); Goldman v. Cohen, 445 F.3d 152, 155–156 (2d Cir. 2006); Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 434 F.3d 432, 434 (6th Cir. 2006) (affidavit in proceeding involving bank account garnishment); Merrill v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 8474736, at *8 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 1, 2020), adopted, 2021 WL 210715 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 21, 2021) (allowing claim against mortgage subservicer based on false statements in affidavits prepared by subservicer's counsel for debt collection litigation); Viernes v. DNF Assoc., 475 F. Supp. 3d 1119, 1121 (D. Haw. 2020); Lizarraga-Davis v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 8263436 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2019); Heyer v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 75739 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2017) (notice of foreclosure sale); Butler v. J.r.S-I, Inc., 2016 WL 1298780 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 4, 2016); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Anderson v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 361 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (debt collector's argument that lawsuit to collect debt was not "collection activity" was patently frivolous); Mezines, FTC Formal Advisory Opinion (Mar. 31, 2000), reproduced at Appx. C, infra.

136 See § 7.2.11.4, infra.

137 O'Rourke v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 635 F.3d 938 (7th 2011) (FDCPA does not extend to collector's communications with state court judge). See also Ciesniewski v. Aries Capital Partners, Inc., 2020 WL 1493019 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 27, 2020), reconsideration denied, 2020 WL 7319070 (S.D. Inc. Dec. 11, 2020); Markette v. HSBC Bank, 2018 WL 1695368 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 2018); Webb v. Law Office of Ira T. Nevel, L.L.C., 2016 WL 946962 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 14, 2016) (representations made to state court judge are not actionable under FDCPA in Seventh Circuit). But see Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 618 (6th Cir. 2009) (reversing grant of summary judgment to debt collector, finding genuine issue of material fact as to whether calling an Exhibit to the state court Complain an "account" would have misled the least sophisticated consumer); Schendzielos v. Borenstein, 2016 WL 614473 (D. Colo. Feb. 16, 2016) (FDCPA applies to false pleading, motions, and representations made to a state court judge that would be material to unsophisticated consumer sued by debt collector); Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 348 F. Supp. 2d 903 (S.D.

4.3.4 Foreclosures and Repossessions

In 2019, the Supreme Court clearly stated that enforcement of a security interest through even a nonjudicial foreclosure (even where no deficiency is sought) is in connection with collection of a debt: "foreclosure is a means of collecting a debt. And a business pursuing nonjudicial foreclosures would, under the capacious language of the Act's primary definition, be one that 'regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts.' "[138] While an enforcement of a security interest results in payment to the creditor from sale of the property and not as a payment from the consumer, the Supreme Court stated:

> But nothing in the primary definition requires that payment on a debt come "from a debtor." The statute speaks simply of the "collection of any debts . . . owed or due." § 1692a(6). Moreover, the provision sweeps in both "direc[t]" and "indirec[t]" debt collection. Ibid. So, even if nonjudicial foreclosure were not a direct attempt to collect a debt, because it aims to collect on a consumer's obligation by way of enforcing a security interest, it would be an indirect attempt to collect a debt."[139]

Clearly, an indirect collection of a debt is "in connection with collection of a debt."[140]

The same logic applies to repossessions of vehicles and other personal property. The Obduskey Court stated: "The same may well be true of repo activity, a form of security interest enforcement, as the point of repossessing property that secures a debt is to collect some or all of the value of the defaulted debt . . . We are also unmoved by Obduskey's argument that repossession would not fall under the primary definition [of regularly collecting a debt] . . ."[141]

Communications about loss mitigation and loan modifications, particularly when a borrower is in default or facing foreclosure, are in connection with collection of a debt.[142] However, certain courts have ignored this context and found that loss mitigation communications without express demands

Ohio 2004) (misrepresentation to state court in filing was misrepresentation to debtor who would be served with filing), aff'd, 434 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2006).

138 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029 at 1036, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019). See also McCray v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 839 F.3d 354 (4th Cir. 2016).

139 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029 at 1036, 1037, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

140 See also In re Holyfield, 740 Fed. Appx. 695, 697 (11th Cir. 2018) (letter giving notice of nonjudicial foreclosure sale was a communication "in connection with the collection of [a] debt"); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin. L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453 (6th Cir. 2013); Maynard v. Cannon, 401 Fed. Appx. 389 (10th Cir. 2010); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019) (foreclosure law firm's § 1692g validation letter was communication in connection with collection of debt); Ellison v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 347 F. Supp. 3d 370, 376–377 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (foreclosure firm's notice was demand for payment even though labeled as "In Rem Notice and Demand for Possession"); Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *10 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018) (personal liability on debt not required for communication to be in connection with collection of debt); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) (animating purpose of notice commencing nonjudicial foreclosure to induce payment); Heyer v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 75739 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2017).

141 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029 at 1037, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

142 Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010); Graham v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2021 WL 2557502 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 9, 2021) (loss mitigation application with references to debtor's past due mortgage payments was in connection with debt collection); Carbone v. Gross Polowy L.L.C., 2019 WL 1114899, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2019) (foreclosure attorney's letter was in connection with collection of debt; "[l]etter implicitly demands repayment of the debt, albeit under revised terms, and threatens Plaintiffs with foreclosure, or continuation of a foreclosure action, should they fail to comply"); Lucas v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 404033, at *6 (D. Mass. Jan. 31, 2019) (servicer's activities in connection with loss mitigation could be debt collection); Santo v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Assoc., 2018 WL 4680090, at *5–6 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 28, 2018) (communications between borrower and servicer over loan modification); Gritters v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1784134 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 13, 2018) (law firm's solicitation for loss mitigation was sent in connection with collection of debt, construed as invitation to settle debt and avoid foreclosure); France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018) (borrower's general allegations that servicer's loss mitigation letters were sent in attempt to induce payment of debt sufficient to defeat motion to dismiss); Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018) (communications about loan modification to avoid foreclosure may be in connection with collection of debt, even though borrower no longer personally liable for mortgage debt due to bankruptcy discharge); Petraglia v. U.S. Bank, 2017 WL 6514601 (D.N.J. Dec. 20, 2017) (reinstatement agreement was well within parameters of debt collection activity); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (servicer's loss mitigation letters referred to modifications and forbearance as attempts to "find a solution" to default); Pearson v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3167648 (E.D. Tenn. July 24, 2017) (communications about loan modification application can have debt collection as their animating purpose); Whalen v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 155 F. Supp. 3d 905 (W.D. Wis. 2016) (servicer's loss mitigation letter was in connection with collection of debt, despite contention sent to comply with RESPA servicing rules); Caprel v. Specialized Loan Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 4678313 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 7, 2016) (servicer's solicitation for loan modification was action to collect money); Matmanivong v. National Creditors Connection, Inc., 79 F. Supp. 3d 864 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (loss mitigation contractor's activities were in collection with collection of debts); Paulsen v. Blommer Peterman, S.C., 2015 WL 1486546 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 31, 2015) (letter threatening foreclosure, while also offering to discuss foreclosure alternatives, qualified as communication related to debt collection); Gregory v. Home Retention Services, Inc., 2014 WL 6676008 (D.N.J. Nov. 24, 2014); Riley v. Home Retention Services, Inc., 2014 WL 11906643 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2014) (servicer's implementation of loan modification which required borrower to make trial plan payments and capitalized accrued fees constituted demands for payment); Crespo v. Butler & Hosch, P.A., 2014 WL 11531360 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 21, 2014) (law firm's loss mitigation solicitation letter sent while foreclosure pending and describing itself as action to collect debt qualified as in connection with collection of debt); Magness v. Walled Lake Credit Bur., L.L.C., 2014 WL 12610219 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 18, 2014) (loss mitigation solicitations can constitute debt collection); Wright v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5532687 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 7, 2013); Simpson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2013 WL 2642143 (N.D. Ill. June 12, 2013); Crespo v. Brachfeld Law Grp., 2011 WL 4527804 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 28, 2011).

for payment were not in connection with debt collection.[143] Payoff statements are in connection with debt collection, because they facilitate payments.[144] Communications from law firms and mortgage servicers that respond to FDCPA validation letters [45] and set out terms of repayment are similarly in connection with collection of a debt.[146]

4.3.5 Property Preservation Contractors

Servicers hire property preservation contactors to visit homes in foreclosure to confirm that the property is occupied, leave door hangers or other notices instructing the homeowner to contact the servicer, and enter the home and perform work to secure the property. When that is all a contractor does, courts may find that the contractor is only engaged in property preservation or serve merely as "messengers," and their practices are not in "connection with collection of a debt."[147] To 143 Heinz v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 3 F.4th 1107 (8th Cir. 2021) (series of letters from servicer about status of loss mitigation application not in connection with collection of debt; no demands for payment or statements of amount due); Tabb v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 798 Fed. Appx. 726, 728 (3d Cir. 2020) (servicer responding to borrower's inquiry about loss mitigation not in connection with collection of debt); Farquharson v. Citibank, 664 Fed. Appx. 793 (11th Cir. 2016) (servicer's communications about loss mitigation not related to collection of debt); Mathieson v. Wells Fargo Bank, __F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 877698 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 9, 2021) (filing of motion to cancel nonjudicial foreclosure sale and continuing of loss mitigation review not in connection with collection of debt); Helman v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 85 F. Supp. 3d 1319 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (letter sent by mortgage servicer suggesting alternative to foreclosure that would pay off mortgage did not involve debt collection activity); Kennedy v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 4526085 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2011) (contact by lender or loan servicer for purpose of restructuring payments on debt is not "collection of a debt" when lender or servicer did not demand payment); Kevelighan v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 2011 WL 2111977, at *4 (E.D. Mich. May 26, 2011) ("[r]esponding to a borrower's request for information concerning reinstatement does not constitute 'debt collection' under the FDCPA"), aff'd, 498 Fed. Appx. 469 (6th Cir. 2012). See also Weiner v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 424 F. Supp. 3d 163 (D. Mass. 2019) (whether servicer's loss mitigation communications were in connection with collection of debt involved disputed facts and could not be determined on summary judgment).

144 Dawoudi v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 448 F. Supp. 3d 918, 926 (N.D. Ill. 2020) (servicer's payoff statement was sent in connection with collection of debt; letter threatened foreclosure and referred to servicer as debt collector); Izmirligil v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2020 WL 1941319, at *11 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 22, 2020) (in connection with collection of debt found where payoff statement identified servicer as debt collector, provided address for how debtor could "remit funds," and included payment due date; FDCPA claim dismissed on other grounds).

145 Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019) (foreclosure law firm's § 1692g validation letter to borrower was communication in connection with collection of debt); Sciortino Bankruptcy Estate v. Shapiro Pendergast & Hasty, L.L.P., 2019 WL 7496253 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 27, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 7493533 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 17, 2019) (foreclosure firm's § 1692g letter could be construed as sent in connection with collection of debt). But see Woody v. Aurora Commercial Corp., 2018 WL 1884826 (W.D. Tenn. Apr. 19, 2018) (servicers' responses to borrower's debt validation requests without further demands for payment were not debt collection activities).

146 Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012) (law firm's letters describing account status asked for payment); Birster v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 481 Fed. Appx. 579 (11th Cir. 2012) (servicer communicated with homeowner about payments as well as conducted foreclosure); Parente v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1182714, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 12, 2020) (servicer's letters can be in connection with collection of debt despite post-bankruptcy collection disclaimers); Roche v. Rushmore Loan Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1452346 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 25, 2020) (notice of amount due); In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2020) (servicer's notice of assessment of charge in chapter 13 case pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3002.1 was act in connection with collection of debt); Ellison v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 347 F. Supp. 3d 370, 376–377 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (foreclosure firm's notice was demand for payment, even though labeled as "In Rem Notice and Demand for Possession"); James v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6336760 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 12, 2017) (unanswered phone calls from servicer can be construed as in connection with collection of debt when viewed in context of entire collection history); Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300, 1309 (M.D. Fla. 2017) (servicer's letter contained demand for payment and highlighted repercussion from non-payment, i.e., acceleration, so qualified as in connection with collection of debt); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (servicer's voicemails were in connection with collection of debt); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) ("animating purpose of the communication" from foreclosure law firm was to induce payment); Paulsen v. Blommer Peterman, S.C., 2015 WL 1486546 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 31, 2015); Randall v. Paul, 897 N.W.2d 842 (Minn. Ct. App. 2017) (lien enforcement notice indicated amount due and listed creditor address, under objective "animating purpose" standard fact finder could decide notice made payment of debt more likely). See also Corona v. PNC Fin. Services Group, Inc., 2021 WL 1218258, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 16, 2021) (applying California Rosenthal Act, convenience fee charge notice was in connection with debt collection, because directed at payment of outstanding mortgage debt); Parks v. RoundPoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2019 WL 1519303 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 8, 2019) (applying West Virginia debt collection statute, mortgage servicer's phone calls to borrower, even when not answered, were in connection with collection of debt). But see Shaffer v. Servis One, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 3d 1039, 1047 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (servicer's sending borrower an IRS Form 1099-C was not debt collection).

147 Thompson v. Five Bros. Mortg. Co. Services & Securing, Inc., 800 Fed. Appx. 369 (6th Cir. 2020) (post-foreclosure sale redemption period had expired, so no debt collection acts involved); Schlaf v. Safeguard Prop., L.L.C., 899 F.3d 459, 470 (7th Cir. 2018) ("Safeguard does not deliver any communications that contain information about the debt or past due payments, does not collect homeowners' contact information, and does not 'urge alleged debtors, in person, to call the creditor while they watched.'"); Kinlock v. Wells Fargo Bank, 636 Fed. Appx. 785 (11th Cir. 2016) (where mortgage had been foreclosed, acts were to regain possession of property and not collect debt); Auld v. New Penn Fin. L.L.C., 2020 WL 3577618 (D. Minn. July 1, 2020) (inspectors did not communicate about debts and inspectors' contract with servicer prohibited them from such communication); Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2020 WL 2767578 (N.D. Ill. May 28, 2020) (activities of Safeguard and its contractor limited to property preservation); Hochroth v. Ally Bank, 461 F. Supp. 3d 986, 1009 (D. Haw. 2020) (Five Brothers did not engage in any acts involving collection of money); Cohen v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 342 F. Supp. 3d 460, 467 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (not engaged in debt collection activities in leaving doorhangers with message to contact servicer), later op. at 342 F. Supp. 3d 460 (S.D.N.Y. 2018); Kraft v. Wells Fargo, 2017 WL 3229066 (D.N.J. July 31, 2017) (actions of servicer's contractor, who locked debtor out, damaged property, and posted notices on property, were carried out in contractor's role in asset management and not as debt collector); Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Tr. Co., 2015 WL 7272224 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 17, 2015); Gordon v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 964 F. Supp. 2d 937, 948–949 (N.D. Ind.

counter this, FDCPA plaintiffs have claimed that this activity instead meets the limited-purpose definition of a debt collector as one whose principal purpose is enforcement of security interests, so at to be liable under FDCPA § 1692f(6),[148] but such arguments have generally been unsuccessful.[149]

Nevertheless, property preservation contractors often have a larger role that more clearly involves debt collection.[150] They may enter into direct discussions with borrowers about loan repayment, direct borrowers to servicer staff responsible for payment arrangement, or discuss terms for surrendering possession of the property. The test for whether property preservation contractor's actions were in connection with the collection of a debt looks at the specific facts of each communication as well as the context.[151]

4.3.6 Evictions

Persons hired before rent is past due on a residential rental property to manage the property are excluded from the definition of debt collector, even when later collecting rent or pursuing evictions.[152] On the other hand, others hired after rent is overdue to collect on the rent and evict the tenant if necessary can be FDCPA debt collectors,[153] and their actions seeking either eviction or collection of past due rent can be in connection with collection of a debt.[154] Often the very purpose of an eviction action is to use the threat of eviction to recover back rent.[155] Sending notice that an eviction action is imminent if payment is not made is also in connection with debt collection.[156]

On the other hand, courts may find conduct not to be in connection with collection of a debt where a collector does not seek back rent or other charges, and merely seeks to force the consumer to vacate the property.[157] This can occur where a homeowner is still in residence after a foreclosure, where a tenant has discharged the back-rent obligation in bankruptcy, or where the tenant has overstayed in the property. While the 2013) (debtors failed to allege that contractor's actions in securing and winterizing home were debt collection actions).

148 See § 4.7.5, infra.

149 Hunte v. Safeguard Prop. Mgmt., L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 722 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Alqaq v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 1689685 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 29, 2014) (principal purpose was to secure and winterize the property); Nielson v. Safeguard Prop., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5196011 (Mich. Ct. App. Nov. 9, 2017) (unpublished). But see Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2020 WL 2767578 (N.D. Ill. May 28, 2020) (servicer that hired property preservation contractors who breached peace by self-help eviction potentially liable under § 1692f(6)); Bywater v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 1256103 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 24, 2014) (home preservation company's misconduct was within § 1692f(6)).

150 Siwulec v. J.M. Adjustment Services, L.L.C., 465 Fed. Appx. 200 (3d Cir. 2012) (contractors provided investigation servicers to mortgage servicers to further a debt collection); Griffin v. Safeguard Props. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 3252217, at *2 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 2019); Foster v. Green Tree Serving, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (door hanger left at residence telling borrower to contact servicer and giving toll free number were for debt collection purposes); Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4264967 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 11, 2016) (door hangers with message to call servicer's regular debt collection department, not property inspection and maintenance unit; inspectors visited more frequently than was necessary for property preservation and conducted visits in deliberately conspicuous manner that debtors alleged was done in order to harass and embarrass them); Fielding v. FCC Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 12532741 (M.D. Tenn. Jan. 22, 2015) (visits were indirect attempt to collect debt), adopted, 2015 WL 3892058 (W.D. Tenn. June 24, 2015); Simpson v. Safeguard Prop., L.L.C., 2013 WL 2642143 (N.D. Ill. June 12, 2013) (entities that contact consumers attempting to facilitate communication with creditors can be debt collectors), later decision, Simpson v Safeguard Prop., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4310674 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 28, 2017) (factual issue whether servicers directed contractors primarily to delinquent borrowers to encourage payment).

151 Griffin v. Safeguard Props. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 6118572, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 16, 2020) (factual disputes about agency relationships among various subcontractors precluded summary judgment for defendants); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (disputed fact issue going to servicer's "animating purpose" in leaving door hanger notices instructing homeowner to contact servicer).

152 See § 4.8.9, infra.

153 See § 4.7.3.5, infra.

154 See Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016); Riley v. Giguiere, 2008 WL 436943 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 14, 2008) (eviction actions including demand for payment). See also Martinez v. Dennis P. Block & Assoc., 2020 WL 8483771 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2020) (letter warning that eviction would affect consumer's credit and future ability to rent and failing to clearly state that past due rent was deferred went beyond seeking mere possession and plausibly constituted attempt to collect debt).

155 See, e.g., Hodges v. Sasil Corp., 915 A.2d 1 (N.J. 2007).

156 See Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998).

157 Morgan v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 719 Fed. Appx. 735 (10th Cir. 2017) (post-foreclosure eviction proceedings, including cash for keys offer and service of writ of possession, did not involve actions to collect a debt); Todaro v. Reimer, Arnovitz, Chernek, & Jeffrey Co., 704 Fed. Appx. 440, 443 (6th Cir. 2017) ("Where the debt has been extinguished in a foreclosure sale . . . there no longer exists a debt to enforce and any post-foreclosure activity cannot be considered debt collection covered by the FDCPA."); Adams v. Schneider, 2020 WL 5411378, at *3 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 9, 2020) (granting summary judgment for attorney who filed underlying state court unlawful detainer action, because plaintiff "was living at the residence rent free and without a lease" and thus "there was no 'transaction' establishing a debt"); Lucore v. Zeff, 2018 WL 1101099 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 2018) (lawyer's post-foreclosure sale demands that borrower vacate property without any request for payment were not actions to collect the mortgage debt); Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C. v. Dye, 2016 WL 4766484, at *3 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 12, 2016); Bonfiglio v. Citifinancial Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5612194 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2015); Hutsler v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2452977 (E.D. Mo. June 2, 2014) (eviction post-foreclosure); Conlin v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 2014 WL 1746155 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 30, 2014) (eviction after foreclosure); Keys v. Pearson Affiliated, Inc., 2013 WL 12205581 (C.D. Cal. May 14, 2013) (unlawful detainer actions against tenants are not debt collection activities because they seek to recover property, not money); Bond v. U.S. Bank, 2010 WL 1265852 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 29, 2010) (personal liability for mortgage debt discharged in bankruptcy); Baer v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2009 WL 102698 (D. Mass. Jan. 14, 2009) (no request for money while seeking to end tenancy). Cf. Amin v. Del Plata Inv. Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3256862, at *4 (S.D. Fla. June. 15, 2020) (denying motion to dismiss, because FDCPA applies to attempt to collect back rent and evict tenant undertaken by attorney following state law procedures; "A factfinder can determine the intent behind Law Firm's actions—that is, whether it was only for eviction of Tenants, or whether it sought to collect back rent, first.").

FDCPA includes a special-purpose definition of debt collector that covers a person whose principal purpose is enforcement of a security interest, there is no similar provision for a person who solely seeks to end a tenancy.

4.4 Consumer, FDCPA § 1692a(3)

> The term "consumer" means any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt.[158]

The definition of "consumer" in FDCPA § 1692a(3) applies to any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated on a debt. A "consumer" need not incur a debt for consumer purposes—that limit is found in the definition of "debt."[159] A consumer is just one who allegedly owes a debt.

A person not liable on a debt is still a consumer if the debt collector alleges the consumer is liable on the debt. A person can be a consumer even though denying owing the debt,[160] such as where the consumer claims the collector is dunning the wrong person,[161] or that the consumer is an identity theft victim.[162]

Unlike the definition of consumer found in section 1692a(3), FDCPA § 1692c(d) defines consumer more broadly to include certain persons related to the person allegedly owing the debt, but this definition is only for purposes of section 1692(c).[163] For FDCPA § 1692(c) only, "consumer" is expanded to include the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), guardian, executor, or administrator.[164] For other FDCPA provisions, use of the term "consumer" is limited just to individuals allegedly owing on a debt.

"Consumer" is a person allegedly obligated on a debt, while "person" includes not just the alleged debtor but also those not allegedly obligated on a debt, including relatives,[165] roommates,[166] a car passenger during the car's contested repossession,[167] neighbors,[168] and anyone else.[169] A consumer must be a natural person, so that other legal entities that owe debts, such as corporations, cannot be a consumer.[170]

The FDCPA distinguishes between a "consumer" and a "person."[171] "Person" is not defined in the FDCPA, but it is defined in Regulation F.[172] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) tracks the U.S. Code definition of "person" as including "corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies, as well as individuals."[173] Thus, "persons" as used in the FDCPA need not be natural persons. A debt collector violating an FDCPA provision applying to a "person" can be liable to these other legal entities,[174] as long as the collection activity involves a debt, as defined by the FDCPA.[175]

One question is whether a person continues to be a consumer after dying. A deceased's estate should be a "person" and a deceased's family member is a "consumer" if the collector alleges that the family member owes the deceased's debts. But is a deceased person a "consumer"—that is, a natural person to whom a debt is allegedly owed? The FDCPA explicitly provides at section 1692c(d) that, only for purposes of section 1692(c), "consumer" includes the consumer's executor or administrator.[176] In that case, the plaintiff should not claim to be a "consumer" in an individual capacity, only as an executor or administrator of the estate.[177]

Prior to Regulation F, courts noted that FDCPA § 1692c(d) did not answer the question for purposes of other FDCPA provisions that refer to "consumer," where the collector's conduct takes place after the consumer has died.[178] Regulation F clarifies that consumer "means any natural person, whether living 158 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3). See also Reg. F § 1006.2(e).

159 See § 4.6, infra.

160 See, e.g., Loja v. Main St. Acquisition Corp., 906 F.3d 680, 683 (7th Cir. 2018); Dunham v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 663 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. 2011); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018); Gonzalez v. Law Firm of Sam Chandra, APC, 2013 WL 4758944 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 4, 2013).

161 Dunham v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 663 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. 2011); Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 715359 (D. Nev. Feb. 5, 2018); Hedayati v. The Perry Law Firm, 2017 WL 4864491 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 27, 2017) (debtor's brother with same first and last names); Koval v. Harris & Harris, Ltd., 2017 WL 1321152 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 5, 2017) (close family member); Davis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 41 F. Supp. 3d 919 (E.D. Cal. 2014).

162 See, e.g., Beltran v. Confidential Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 10672193 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 23, 2009).

163 The expanded definition is found at FDCPA § 1692c(d) and is not mentioned in the general definition of consumer at FDCPA § 1692a(3). Regulation F, for clarity, references in its general definition of consumer the fact that a broader definition applies for FDCPA § 1692c. See Reg. F § 1006.2(e).

164 See the discussion of this expanded definition at § 5.10, infra.

165 See, e.g., Rawlinson v. Law Office of William M. Rudow, L.L.C., 460 Fed. Appx. 254 (4th Cir. 2012); Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (son of debtor); Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693 (6th Cir. 2003) (son of debtor).

166 See Horowitz v. GC Serv. L.P., 2016 WL 7188238 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016).

167 See Aviles v. Wayside Auto Body, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 3d 216 (D. Conn. 2014).

168 See Todd v. Collecto, Inc., 731 F.3d 734, 737 (7th Cir. 2013).

169 See, e.g., § 5.2, infra (discussing § 1692b, which applies to communications to "any person").

170 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(3)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

171 See Valhalla Inv. Props, L.L.C. v. 502, L.L.C., 456 F. Supp. 3d 939, 946 (M.D. Tenn. 2020), aff'd, 832 Fed. Appx. 413 (6th Cir. 2020) (distinguishing FDCPA's treatment of "consumer" and "person").

172 Reg. F § 1006.2(k). See also § 4.10, infra.

173 1 U.S.C. § 1.

174 See Anarion Invs. L.L.C. v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 794 F.3d 568 (6th Cir. 2015).

175 See § 4.6, infra.

176 See § 5.10, infra. (discussing FDCPA § 1692c(d), the parallel provision at Reg. F § 1006.6(a), and the expanded definitions of these terms created by the relevant Official Interpretations).

177 See Hall v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 625 (E.D. Pa. 2015); Barasch v. Estate Info. Serv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2900261 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 3, 2009).

178 See Wright v. Fin. Serv. of Norwalk, Inc., 22 F.3d 647, 650 (6th Cir. 1997) (majority assumes that estate is a consumer, while dissent finds estate is not a natural person); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 23, 1989) (appears to view the executrix as a consumer); Riveria v. MAB Collections, Inc., 682 F. Supp. 174 (W.D.N.Y. 1988) (same).

or deceased."[179] The Regulation F supplemental information states:

> [I]nterpreting the term consumer in § 1006.2(e) to include deceased natural persons is supported by more than concern for a decedent's privacy; it also clarifies debt collector's obligations to a consumer and, in turn, to those authorized to act on the consumer's behalf, if the consumer has died.[180]

There are no further restrictions on the definition of a consumer—just that a natural person allegedly owes a debt, as debt is defined by the FDCPA. A person is still a consumer if the person has no defense to liability on the debt,[181] the debt was incurred through the consumer's fraud,[182] or the individual is sophisticated.[183] A lawyer can be a "consumer."[184]

4.5 Creditor, FDCPA § 1692a(4)

> The term "creditor" means any person who offers or extends credit creating a debt or to whom a debt is owed, but such term does not include any person to the extent that he receives an assignment or transfer of a debt in default solely for the purpose of facilitating collection of such debt for another.[185]

In other words, a creditor is someone who "offers or extends credit creating a debt" or "to whom a debt is owed." The definition excludes those who obtain a debt by assignment or transfer after default to facilitate collection "for another."

As discussed later in this chapter, the term "creditor" appears in relations to the definition of debt collector in four ways:

- A debt collector "includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts";[186]
- Debt collector excludes any officer or employee of a creditor while, in the name of the creditor, collecting debts for such creditor;[187]
- Debt collector excludes a nonprofit organization that "performs bona fide consumer credit counseling . . . by receiving payments from such consumers and distributing such amounts to creditors;"[188] and
- Debt collector excludes "any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent such activity . . . (iv) concerns a debt obtained by such person as a secured party in a commercial credit transaction involving the creditor."[189]

The term "creditor" also appears in a variety of other sections of the FDCPA discussed in subsequent chapters.[190]

4.6 Debt, FDCPA § 1692a(5)

4.6.1 Overview

> The term "debt" means any obligation or alleged obligation of a consumer to pay money arising out of a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services which are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, whether or not such obligation has been reduced to judgment.[191]

The FDCPA definition of "debt" is critical to the Act's coverage.[192] The same person collecting on a variety of obligations need comply with the FDCPA only with respect to those obligations that fit within the FDCPA definition of "debt."

The FDCPA's definition of debt has five parts. First, a debt is an obligation or alleged obligation of a "consumer." "Consumer" is a defined term, as a natural person who is obligated or allegedly obligated to pay a debt.[193] A debt thus involves an obligation of a natural person and not that of a corporation or other legal entity.[194] On the other hand, unlike in other consumer statutes, the term "consumer" has no additional meaning, so that it does not require, for example, that the person purchase goods or services for personal use. That limitation is found elsewhere in the definition of "debt."

Second, a debt is either an obligation or an "alleged obligation," so that the term applies if the consumer does not, in fact, owe the debt or if the debt collector alleges there is a debt

179 Reg. F § 1006.2(e).

180 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5773 (Jan. 19, 2021).

181 See Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589, 594 (7th Cir. 1998) ("the FDCPA is designed to protect consumers from unscrupulous antics of debt collectors, irrespective of whether a valid debt actually exists"); McCartney v. First City Bank, 970 F.2d 45, 46 (5th Cir. 1992); Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 777 (9th Cir. 1982).

182 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Inv'rs, Inc., 502 F.3d 159, 171 (3d Cir. 2007) ("it is clear that Congress realized that some people who write 'bad checks' do so knowingly and willfully and that their conduct is fraudulent. It is just as clear that Congress enacted a definition of 'consumer' that did not exclude such persons from the protections they would otherwise be afforded under the FDCPA."). Accord Bass v. Stolper, Koritzinsky, Brewster & Neider, 111 F.3d 1322 (7th Cir. 1997).

183 Benzemann v. Citibank, 806 F.3d 98, 100 (2d Cir. 2015).

184 See Cole v. Charleston, 2009 WL 123472 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 15, 2009) (simply because plaintiff happens to be lawyer does not mean that he or she should be precluded from protection by FDCPA).

185 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(4). Reg. F § 1006.2(g) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

186 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6). See § 4.7.4, infra.

187 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(A). See § 4.8.1, infra.

188 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(E). See § 4.8.5, infra.

189 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(iv). See § 4.8.10, infra.

190 See § 1692c, discussed at Chapter 5, infra; § 1692e, discussed at Chapter 7, infra; § 1692g, discussed at Chapter 9, infra; and § 1692j, discussed at Chapter 10, infra.

191 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(5). Reg. F § 1006.2(h) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

192 While FDCPA § 1692b does not state it is in connection with a debt, it is in connection with the acquisition of location information about a "consumer," and "consumer" is defined as one obligated or allegedly obligated to pay a debt. See 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3).

193 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3). See § 4.4, supra.

194 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(h)-1.

and the consumer denies it.[195] Examples of such alleged debts within the Act's definition include fees and costs that the consumer disputes as owed,[196] where the debt is void,[197] where no amount is due,[198] where the collector contacts the wrong person,[199] where the debt was settled or paid in full,[200] and where the debt was discharged in bankruptcy.[201]

Third, a debt is an obligation to pay money. A debt is not one that is discharged by a consumer's performance of an action, instead of payment of money.[202]

Fourth, a debt is an obligation or an alleged obligation arising out of a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services which are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. This requirement is often a key issue in FDCPA litigation, and is examined in detail at §§ 4.6.2 to 4.6.5, infra.

Fifth, a debt includes both one reduced to a court judgment and one that has not been reduced to judgment. While a covered debt is still covered if reduced to judgment, a debt that does not fall within the FDCPA definition of "debt" does not become covered just because it has been reduced to judgment.[203]

As long as a debt meets these five conditions, it is a debt for purposes of the FDCPA. There are no other restrictions on an obligation being a debt. For example, an obligation is a covered debt even if incurred through a consumer's misrepresentation or fraud.[204]

4.6.2 Arising Out of a Transaction Involving Money, Property, Insurance, or Services

To fall under the FDCPA definition of debt, an obligation must arise "out of a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services which are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." This definition is similar to the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) definition of "consumer": "the money, property, or services which are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes."[205] Of course, the TILA definition applies to "consumer" and the FDCPA definition applies to "debt." The FDCPA definition also adds insurance.

Under the FDCPA, a debt need not be directly for personal, family, or household purposes, as long as it arises relating to a transaction involving credit, personal or real property, insurance or services, where those items are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. If a home was purchased as a residence, the mortgage debt is covered even if the consumer instead changes the home's use to a commercial rental[206] or the consumer no longer lives there because of a marital separation.[207] If a debt involves condominium or homeowner association fees for a residence rented out for commercial purposes, the debt is still covered if the residence was initially purchased for personal purposes.[208]

195 See Loja v. Main St. Acquisition Corp., 906 F.3d 680, 684 (7th Cir. 2018) (interpreting the same language found in § 1692a(3)).

196 Shula v. Lawent, 359 F.3d 489, 491 (7th Cir. 2004).

197 McCartney v. First City Bank, 970 F.2d 45 (5th Cir. 1992).

198 Schlosser v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 323 F.3d 534 (7th Cir. 2003).

199 Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2018 WL 3546193 (D.N.J. July 23, 2018); Gonzalez v. Law Firm of Sam Chandra, APC, 2013 WL 4758944 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 4, 2013); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013); Bodur v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 829 F. Supp. 2d 246 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

200 Diaz v. G. Reynold Sims & Assoc., 2011 WL 17620 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 4, 2011); Fetters v. Paragon Way, Inc., 2010 WL 5174989 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 15, 2010; Fausto v. Credigy Serv. Corp., 598 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (N.D. Cal. 2009).

201 Fedotov v. Peter T. Roach & Assoc., 354 F. Supp. 2d 471 (S.D.N.Y. 2005); Degrosiellier v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2001 WL 1217181 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2001); Peeples v. Blatt, 2001 WL 921731 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 15, 2001).

202 See Barnett v. Homeowner Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 8186604 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 9, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 8186598 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 9, 2017) (purpose of contact was for homeowner to comply with association rules and install fencing); Rael v. Davis, 2006 WL 2346396 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 11, 2006) (obligation to remove a swimming pool is not a debt). See also Ohuche v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 12100763 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 25, 2013) (potential short sale is not an obligation by consumer to pay money); Thomas v. Ernest Barrientos, P.C., 2006 WL 1096764 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 26, 2006) (demanding return of RTO furniture not collecting on a debt); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra (requirement to keep insurance on collateral).

203 See Beal v. Himmel & Bernstein, L.L.P., 615 F. Supp. 2d 214 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (judgment to pay legal fees incurred in post-divorce litigation was not "debt"); Cook v. Hamrick, 278 F. Supp. 2d 1202 (D. Colo. 2003) (attorney fee claim was not based on lease but eviction); Goist v. United States Bur. of Prisons, 2002 WL 32079467 (D.S.C. July 31, 2002) (criminal restitution debt not consumer transaction), aff'd, 54 Fed. Appx. 159 (4th Cir. 2003); McCarthy v. Rosenthal, 1996 WL 249991 (D. Md. Jan. 5, 1996).

204 See Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007); Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998) (no exception where consumer entered intending to defraud other party); Bass v. Stolper, Koritzinsky, Brewster & Neider, S.C., 111 F.3d 1322, 1330 (7th Cir. 1997) ("Absent an explicit showing that Congress intended a fraud exception to the Act, the wrong occasioned by debtor fraud is more appropriately redressed under the statutory and common law remedies already in place, not by a judicially created exception that selectively gives a green light to the very abuses proscribed by the Act.").

205 15 U.S.C. § 1602(h). See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 2.2.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

206 See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, and Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. 2000) (owner purchased house to live in but rented it when he relocated); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017). But cf. Zwicky v. Carlson & Assoc., Ltd., 2011 WL 6203058 (D. Minn. Dec. 13, 2011) (no FDCPA debt where transaction did not relate to initial personal purchase of a condominium but to repairs ordered after use had become commercial).

207 Wong v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 2015 WL 3938605 (D.N.J. June 25, 2015).

208 Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, P.L.L.C., 698 F.3d 290 (6th Cir. 2012) (condominium purchased initially for personal use and later leased to others; assessment when leased to others is still a covered debt); Beeks v. ALS Lien Serv., 2014 WL 7785745 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014); Vasilakos v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2013 WL 4047634 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2013); Sunga v. Broome, 2010 WL 3198925 (E.D. Va. Aug. 12, 2010).

A deficiency debt after a home foreclosure or car repossession is a covered debt as long as the home mortgage or car loan arose out of transaction for personal purposes.[209] Even if the original debt merges into a judgment, the debt does not lose its status for purposes of the FDCPA.[210] A covered debt does not lose its status as arising from a covered transaction where its settlement changes the timing or amount of the debt's payment obligation.[211]

If the debt arises from renting a vehicle, subsequent obligations for damaging the vehicle arise out of the rental and are a covered debt, even if damaging someone's property might not on its own fall within the FDCPA definition of debt.[212] If there is an insurance transaction, then the insurer's claim for subrogation against the insured's child who was an accident victim arose from the insurance transaction.[213] Where a consumer enters into an education loan for personal purposes, a cosigner's obligation is also a covered debt, even if the cosigner's purpose could be viewed as not personal.[214]

Covered debts include any that arose out of real property transactions for personal use, including debts for home mortgages,[215] rent,[216] condominium and homeowner association fees,[217] or a vacation time share.[218] Debts are covered if they arose out of transactions for personal property transactions for personal use, such as motor vehicle purchases or leases.[219] Debts are covered if they arose from transactions for services for personal purposes, such as medical,[220] educational[221] or personal moving[222] services. Utility bills based on usage involve either a good or a service.[223] Debts related to insurance transactions are explicitly covered.[224] This includes a bail bond.[225]

For a debt to arise from a transaction, the transaction need not involve a credit obligation—only an obligation.[226] This is 209 Brunner v. Clearspring Loan Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 7268146 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 2, 2018); Huthsing v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 2015 WL 6777466 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2015); Kabir v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg L.L.C., 2015 WL 4730053 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 10, 2015); Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015); Rojas v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 142 F. Supp. 3d 1206 (M.D. Fla. 2015); Baggett v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 2015 WL 1707479 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 15, 2015).

210 Huthsing v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 2015 WL 6777466 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2015); Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015); Rojas v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 142 F. Supp. 3d 1206 (M.D. Fla. 2015); Baggett v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 2015 WL 1707479 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 15, 2015).

211 See Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016) (settlement agreement on consumer debt does not transform nature of debt into non-consumer debt).

212 See Brown v. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 119 F.3d 922, 924 (11th Cir. 1997). See also DeNicolo v. Hertz Corp., 2020 WL 5816365 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2020) (denying summary judgment for collection agency that attempted to recover costs of repair to rental car that consumer used on business trip and for personal purpose as well, creating triable factual question).

213 Hamilton v. United Healthcare, Inc., 310 F.3d 385 (5th Cir. 2002), aff'd, 104 Fed. Appx. 942 (5th Cir. 2004). Cf. Calogero v. Shows, Cali & Walsh, L.L.P., 970 F.3d 576, 584 (5th Cir. 2020) (grant-giving organization's subrogation claim for reimbursement of alleged grant overpayment arose out of homeowner-grantee's direct voluntary acceptance of program's terms, especially given that there was "no unrelated, separate contract at issue").

214 Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. 2019).

215 See § 4.6.4, infra.

216 E.g., Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998); Martinez v. Dennis P. Block & Assoc., 2020 WL 8483771 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2020); Livingstone v. Haddon Point Manager, L.L.C., 2020 WL 902218 (D.N.J. Feb. 25, 2020); Sexton v. Poulsen and Skousen P.C., 372 F. Supp. 3d 1307 (D. Utah 2019); Lipscomb v. The Raddatz Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 109 F. Supp. 3d 251 (D.D.C. 2015); Smith v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 2003025 (N.D. Ga. May 15, 2014).

217 See McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 893 F.3d 680, 683 (9th Cir. 2018); Mahmoud v. De Moss Owners Ass'n, Inc., 865 F.3d 322 (5th Cir. 2017); Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984 (9th Cir. 2017) (overdue HOA assessment fee was a debt); Agrelo v. Affinity Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., 841 F.3d 944 (11th Cir. 2016) (contractual obligation to pay assessment to homeowner's association is a debt under Florida state version of FDCPA; although assessment stems from a fine, debt is covered because it arose from consumer contract and not solely by operation of law or as a result of tort damages); Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, P.L.L.C., 698 F.3d 290 (6th Cir. 2012); Ladick v. Van Gemert, 146 F.3d 1205 (10th Cir. 1998); Newman v. Boehm, Pearlstein & Bright, Ltd., 119 F.3d 477 (7th Cir. 1997).

218 Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994).

219 See Brown v. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 119 F.3d 922, 924 (11th Cir. 1997) (truck rental); Yelin v. Swartz, 790 F. Supp. 2d 331 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (rental car leased for personal purposes); Deplae v. Reg'l Acceptance Corp., 2010 WL 2270785 (E.D. Tenn. June 3, 2010).

220 E.g., Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171(D. Utah 2019); Encarnacion v. Fin. Corp. of Am., 2018 WL 6250944 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 14, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 6249679 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2018); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

221 See Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. 2019); Urquiaga v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 6877735 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 22, 2016); Cutler ex rel. Jay v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2014 WL 7745878 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2014); Smith v. Progressive Fin. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 3995004 (D. Or. Aug. 1, 2013); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

222 See McDaniel v. Cent. Oregon & Pac. R.R., Inc., 2019 WL 6050266, at *1 (M.D. Tenn. Nov. 15, 2019) (loan for personal job relocation expenses may not be business loan).

223 Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 396 F.3d 227 (3d Cir. 2005) (debts for municipal water and sewer were covered debts for services); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (municipal water and sewer bills); Evans v. Bull City Fin. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 3468390 (N.D. Ga. June 26, 2018) (gas and electric service), adopted, 2018 WL 3458559 (N.D. Ga. July 18, 2018); Garrett v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2017 WL 3193759 (M.D. Fla. July 27, 2017) (home internet, phone, and cable services); Harney v. Kramer & Frank, P.C., 2017 WL 1477145 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 24, 2017) (sewer fees); Gulisano v. J.A. Cambece Law Office, 2016 WL 7536097 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2016) (telephone services).

224 Hamilton v. United Healthcare, Inc., 310 F.3d 385 (5th Cir. 2002) (subrogation claim from an insurer for reimbursement for medical payments to its insured was "debt" under FDCPA), aff'd, 104 Fed. Appx. 942 (5th Cir. 2004); Correa v. Rowley, 1997 WL 714858 (E.D. La. Nov. 14, 1997) (car insurance).

225 Barlow v. Safety Nat'l Cas. Corp., 856 F. Supp. 2d 828 (M.D. La. 2012).

226 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000); Duffy v. Landberg, 133 F.3d 1120 (8th Cir. 1998); Snow v. Jesse L. Riddle, P.C., 143 F.3d 1350 (10th Cir. 1998); Romea v. Heiberger & consistent with the FDCPA's legislative history.[227] Thus when a consumer enters into a covered transaction and pays using a dishonored check,[228] the debt based on the check's insufficient funds is a covered FDCPA debt, even though there is no credit transaction.[229] When a consumer rents property with cash, and damages the property, there is still a transaction and a debt arising from the transaction.[230] When rent is due in advance, and no credit is extended, a rental is still a transaction and a debt arises out of such a transaction.[231] Fees that a mortgage servicer assesses in connection with "convenience" payments made by phone are incidental to payment of the main mortgage debt and are therefore covered debts.[232]

4.6.3 Debts Not Involving Transactions

The FDCPA definition of debt applies to obligations arising out of a transaction involving money, property, insurance, or services. Consequently, an obligation is not a FDCPA covered debt if the debt does not arise out of such a transaction.

Courts generally find that tax debts are not obligations arising out of a transaction involving money, property, insurance, or services, so the FDCPA does not apply.[233] But a separate federal statute provides that the FDCPA does apply to debts owed to the IRS when private collectors (as opposed to IRS employees) collect on federal tax debts.[234]

Questions arise as to whether certain municipal charges are taxes or charges for services. In general, if the charge, such as a municipal utility charge, is based on usage, it is a covered debt.[235] But if the size of a water or sewer charge or a trash collection fee is not based on usage, but based on ownership of a particular type of property, this is more akin to a tax, and courts may find that it does not involve a covered transaction.[236]

A transaction typically is found not to be involved in the imposition of a fine for violation of a government requirement,

---

Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998); Charles v. Lundgren & Assoc., P.C., 119 1120 (8th Cir. 1998); Snow v. Jesse L. Riddle, P.C., 143 F.3d 1350 (10th Cir. 1998); Bass v. Stolper, Koritzinsky, Brewster & Neider, S.C., 111 F.3d 1322 (7th Cir. 1997); Charles v. Lundgren & Assoc., P.C., 119 F.3d 739 (9th Cir. 1997); Newman v. Boehm, Pearlstein & Bright, Ltd., 119 F.3d 477 (7th Cir. 1997); Lipscomb v. The Raddatz Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 109 F. Supp. 3d 251 (D.D.C. 2015) (majority of circuits hold that extension of credit is not required for obligation to constitute "debt" under FDCPA; rent, including overdue fees for water service, was consumer debt).

227 See Bass v. Stolper, Koritzinsky, Brewster & Neider, S.C., 111 F.3d 1322 (7th Cir. 1997) (describing legislative history in this regard).

228 Of course, for a debt relating to a dishonored check to be covered, the consumer must allege that the check was related to a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services that are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. See Arnold v. Truemper, 833 F. Supp. 678 (N.D. Ill. 1993).

229 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007); Duffy v. Landberg, 133 F.3d 1120 (8th Cir. 1998); Snow v. Jesse L. Riddle, P.C., 143 F.3d 1350 (10th Cir. 1998); Bass v. Stolper, Koritzinsky, Brewster & Neider, S.C., 111 F.3d 1322 (7th Cir. 1997); Charles v. Lundgren & Assoc., P.C., 119 F.3d 739 (9th Cir. 1997); Brown v. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 119 F.3d 922, 924 (11th Cir. 1997) (obligation for damage to rental property did not involve credit; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

230 See Brown v. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 119 F.3d 922, 924 (11th Cir. 1997) (obligation for damage to rental property did not involve credit); Yelin v. Swartz, 790 F. Supp. 2d 331 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (amount that consumer allegedly owed arising from an automobile accident involving a rental car leased for personal purposes was a "debt" because obligation was not a matter of tort liability, but imposed by rental agreement, a contract). See also Newman v. Boehm, Pearlstein & Bright, Ltd., 119 F.3d 477 (7th Cir. 1997) (condominium assessments).

231 Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998); Lipscomb v. The Raddatz Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 109 F. Supp. 3d 251 (D.D.C. 2015).

232 Langston v. Gateway Mortg. Group, L.L.C., 2021 WL 234358, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 15, 2021); Elbert v. Roundpoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2020 WL 6940941 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 25, 2020) (mortgage obligation is debt and convenience fee is charge incidental to collection of that debt); Lembeck v. Arvest Cent. Mortg. Co., 498 F. Supp. 3d 1134, 1137 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (borrower's purpose in incurring fee is to make mortgage payment); Fusco v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2519978, at *2 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 2, 2020) (analogizing convenience fee to dishonored check charge). But see Lish v. Amerihome Mortg. Co., L.L.C., 2020 WL 6688597, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 10, 2020) (applying Florida debt collection laws, convenience fees not debt being collected by debt collector); Bardak v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5104523 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 12, 2020); Estate of Campbell v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 467 F. Supp. 3d 1262, 1262 (S.D. Fla. 2020) ("Here, it is not contested that Defendant is a debt collector when recouping Plaintiff's defaulted mortgage payments. But that is the debt that exists in this case—the defaulted mortgage payments. Plaintiff's argument that the convenience fees are part of the debt too, or at a minimum, incidental to the debt, is unpersuasive."); Turner v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 467 F. Supp. 3d 1244 (M.D. Fla. 2020) (mortgage servicer's convenience fee not debt, because not owed to another and mortgage not in default when payment made; court confuses definitions of "debt" and "debt collector").

233 Dressler v. Equifax, Inc., 805 Fed. Appx. 968, 973 (11th Cir. 2020) ("Because tax obligations do not arise from business dealings or other consumer transactions they are not 'debts' under the FDCPA."); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (property tax does not arise from purchase of property, but from ownership of property); Beggs v. Rossi, 145 F.3d 511 (2d Cir. 1998) (per curiam); Staub v. Harris, 626 F.2d 275, 278 (3d Cir. 1980); Carley v. Tomball Indep. School Dist., 2018 WL 6172529 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 26, 2018) (property tax debt not covered); Bunting v. Phillips Lytle L.L.P., 2011 WL 2516933 (N.D.N.Y. June 23, 2011) (property tax liens); Andrews v. Director, IRS, Ogden Utah, 2010 WL 2510578 (D. Colo. Apr. 20, 2010); Israel v. Everson, 2005 WL 3277981 (S.D. Iowa Oct. 14, 2005) (back taxes not "debt"), aff'd, 210 Fed. Appx. 549 (8th Cir. 2006); Mathis v. United States ex rel. C.I.R., 2003 WL 1950071 (D.S.D. Mar. 19, 2003); Mortland v. I.R.S., 2003 WL 21791249 (W.D. Tex. June 24, 2003). FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

234 See 26 U.S.C. § 6306(e), discussed at § 14.10, infra. ("The provisions of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (15 U.S.C. 1692 et seq.) shall apply to any qualified tax collection contract, except to the extent superseded by section 6304, section 7602(c), or by any other provision of this title").

235 Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 396 F.3d 227 (3d Cir. 2005); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000).

236 Boyd v. J.E. Robert Co., 765 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2014). See also Singh v. NYCTL 2009-A Tr., 2016 WL 3962009 (S.D.N.Y. July 20, 2016) (liens for mandatory water and sewer service were not debts); Reilly v. Northeast Revenue Serv., L.L.C., 2013 WL 3974181, at *5 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2013) (city's mandatory refuse disposal fee imposed by ordinance is not "debt" because it "is more akin to a tax").

such as a motor vehicle moving violation fine.[237] The same is the case with court-ordered restitution[238] and contempt sanctions.[239] Municipal fines for failure to comply with vehicle parking requirements are generally considered not to involve a covered transaction.[240] Courts may also find no transaction where a government entity imposes involuntary fees, that is, where the consumer does not request a service, such as where a fee is assessed when the police respond to an accident.[241]

But a debt involving a government fee can be a covered transaction where it arises from a service requested by the consumer. For example, paying for a driver's license can be a transaction primarily for personal use, so that collection on an insufficient funds check for payment of that fee involves an FDCPA debt.[242]

Whether non-payment of highway tolls involves a debt may depend on a number of factors, such as whether the consumer has a contractual relationship with a government entity to use a transponder and also the stated purpose of the highway tolls. A number of courts find that highway tolls involve transactions,[243] but not transactions for services for personal, family, or household purposes, because the tolls are to maintain the roads or serve other governmental purposes.[244] Other courts find that tolls are transactions for a service for personal purposes—transport on a particular stretch of highway.[245]

Some questionable court decisions find no transaction where private entities assess their own fines or fees without the consumer's agreement.[246] But such fine or fees may very well arise out of a covered transaction, and thus should be covered debts. For example, homeowner association fees should be covered debts because they arise out of the purchase of a home and a transaction to join the homeowner association.[247]

A debt arising from a consumer entering into a transaction with a private lot for parking services is a covered debt.[248] On the other hand, if someone uses a parking lot without agreeing to pay for the service, there may be no transaction and no FDCPA debt.

A tort obligation arising out of a covered transaction is a covered FDCPA debt.[249] But if the tort claim does not arise under a covered transaction, the obligation is not a FDCPA debt.[250] Obligations arising out of the theft of goods or services

237 See Gulley v. Markoff & Krasny, 664 F.3d 1073 (7th Cir. 2011) (non-consensual municipal fines); United States v. Phillips, 110 Fed. Appx. 431 (5th Cir. Oct. 21, 2004) (criminal fines and assessments); Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 3796123 (S.D. Cal. June 18, 2015) (traffic fines); Worley v. Mun. Collections of Am., Inc., 2015 WL 890878 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 27, 2015) (municipal fines); Stubbs v. City of Ctr. Point, Ala., 988 F. Supp. 2d 1270 (N.D. Ala. 2013) (traffic ticket); Bell v. Providence Cmty. Corrections, Inc., 2011 WL 2218600 (M.D. Tenn. June 7, 2011) (fees and charges were part of commitment and probation order); Reid v. Am. Traffic Solutions, Inc., 2010 WL 5289108 (S.D. Ill. Dec. 20, 2010) (traffic violations); Mills v. City of Springfield, Mo., 2010 WL 3526208 (W.D. Mo. Sept. 3, 2010) (traffic ticket); Williams v. Redflex Traffic Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 782540 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 20, 2008) (traffic ticket), aff'd on other grounds, 582 F.3d 617 (6th Cir. 2009); Harper v. Collection Bur., Inc., 2007 WL 4287293 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 4, 2007) (court fine resulting from arrest); Betts v. Equifax Credit Info. Serv., Inc., 245 F. Supp. 2d 1130 (W.D. Wash. 2003) (impounding of abandoned car at direction of police); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

238 Ewing v. Carter, 2014 WL 1516332 (N.D. W. Va. Apr. 17, 2014) (court-ordered restitution), aff'd, 583 Fed. Appx. 278 (4th Cir. 2014); Skeberdis v. Kinnally, 2018 WL 3068379 (N.D. Ill. June 21, 2018); Geiger v. Fed. Bur. of Prisons, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1155 (C.D. Cal. 2007); In re Pohlman, 2018 WL 3854137 (Bankr. D. Idaho Aug. 10, 2018) (restitution obligation to state to pay for his hospital bill while incarcerated by state was not "debt").

239 Barela v. Reed, 210 F.3d 381 (9th Cir. 2000).

240 Grumet v. Prof'l Account Mgmt., L.L.C., 2013 WL 12382693 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 18, 2013); Gibson v. Prof'l Account Mgmt., 2011 WL 6019958 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 1, 2011); Waters v. Howard Sommers Towing, Inc., 2011 WL 1375292 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2011). See also Berger v. Philadelphia Parking Auth., 2019 WL 4466997, at *7 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 18, 2019) (charges relating to vehicle impoundment for unpaid parking fines).

241 Moore v. Cost Recovery Corp. L.L.C., 2008 WL 11347988 (E.D. Tex. June 10, 2008)

242 Dibb v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 8970778 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 16, 2015).

243 But see Yazo v. Law Enf't Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 4852965, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 7, 2008) (use of toll road without paying is not transaction, but theft).

244 See St. Pierre v. Retrieval-Masters Credit Bur., Inc., 898 F.3d 351, 363 (3d Cir. 2018); Johnson v. Linebarger, Goggan, Blair & Sampson L.L.P., 2019 WL 5887452, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 12, 2019); Lowenbien v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 3081095, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2019).

245 See Yunker v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 13239460 (S.D. Fla. July 19, 2011). See also Brown v. Transurban USA, Inc., 144 F. Supp. 3d 809 (E.D. Va. 2015).

246 See Mlnarik v. Smith, Gardner, Slusky, Lazer, Pohren & Rogers, L.L.P., 2014 WL 6657747 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 21, 2014); Berg v. Ayesh, 2014 WL 2603890 (D. Kan. June 11, 2014); Durso v. Summer Brook Preserve Homeowners Ass'n, 641 F. Supp. 2d 1256 (M.D. Fla. 2008).

247 Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984, 989 (9th Cir. 2017) (obligation to pay the assessment fee was a covered debt because it "relates to her household and arises from her membership in the HOA"); McDaniels v. Equityexperts.com, L.L.C., 2020 WL 7408761, at *7 (N.D. Ga. June 24, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 7408764 (N.D. Ga. July 13, 2020) (finding HOA assessments were debts arising from condominium association declaration, but dismissing complaint on other grounds). But see Spiegel v. Kim, 952 F.3d 844 (7th Cir. 2020) (fees that arose due to unit owner's conduct as board member of condo association are not debt under FDCPA).

248 Franklin v. Parking Revenue Recovery Services, Inc., 832 F.3d 741, 744 (7th Cir. 2016).

249 See Cutler ex rel. Jay v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2014 WL 7745878 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2014) (student's fraud in student loan obligation); Heritage Pac. Fin., L.L.C. v. Monroy, 156 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013). But see Rodolakis v. Safety Ins. Co., 327 F. Supp. 3d 274 (D. Mass. Aug. 17, 2018) (insurance company's subrogation claim against own insured not a FDCPA debt).

250 Parham v. Seattle Serv. Bur., Inc., 656 Fed. Appx. 474 (11th Cir. 2016) (tort obligation arising from an auto accident); Hawthorne v. Mac Adjustment, Inc., 140 F.3d 1367, 1371 (11th Cir. 1998) (tort claim arising from an accident); Lynch v. Hommell, 2018 WL 2717289 (N.D. Ohio. June 5, 2018) (claims arising from automobile accident); Schaefer v. Seattle Serv. Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 9031511 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2015) (tort claim involving car crash); Kazmi v. CCS Commercial, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4392836 (D.N.J. July 15, 2015) (automobile accident); Foster v. Amarnek, 2014 WL 1961245 (M.D. Tenn. May 14, 2014) (automobile accident); Horowitz v. Meyer v. Credit Collection Serv., 2013 WL 84929 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 7, 2013) (automobile accident); Luna v. Summit Collection Serv., 2011 WL 5190525 (D. Nev. Oct. 27, 2011) are not covered debts because stealing is not entering into a transaction with the victim.[251]

State- or court-ordered child support obligations are not obligations pursuant to a transaction, so they are not FDCPA debts.[252] The same is the case for debts arising from a court order that one spouse pay the other as part of a divorce.[253] On the other hand, where an individual voluntarily agrees to be liable for the nursing home obligations of a spouse, that obligation does arise from a transaction involving services for personal, family, or household purposes.[254]

4.6.4 Transactions Primarily for Personal, Family, or Household Purposes

In bringing a FDCPA claim, a prudent consumer attorney alleges with some specificity the evidence that there is a debt that arises from a transaction entered into primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.[255] The consumer must eventually prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the FDCPA violation pertains to a covered debt.[256]

The consumer need not provide such proof if the collector alleges that the debt involves a transaction for those purposes. The definition at FDCPA § 1692a(5) includes an "alleged obligation arising out of transaction . . . primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." If the debt collector alleges that an obligation arises out of a transaction for those purposes, then it is a covered debt, even if the debt does not arise from such a transaction.[257]

A critical distinction is whether a transaction is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, or whether the debt is not covered because it arises out of a transaction for business[258] or agricultural purposes. The transaction need not be exclusively for personal, family, or household purposes, only "primarily" for such purposes.

A motor vehicle used only 5% of the time for business purposes involves a covered transaction because the vehicle is primarily for personal use.[259] A home mortgage can be for personal purposes even where the home is rented out for part of the year,[260] or where the intent is to eventually live in the home, even though it is first rented for a period of years.[261] A credit card debt can be primarily for personal, family and household purposes even though taken out as a business use card, if the vast majority of card charges were for consumer purposes.[262] A loan can be primarily for personal, family or household purposes where only a small percentage of the loan proceeds (court judgment based on tort claim); Williams v. Allocated Bus. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2010 WL 2330371 (N.D. Ill. June 8, 2010) (auto accident damages); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 22, 2008) (damages for unlawfully downloading copyrighted music); Ledbetter v. Comcast Cable Commc'ns, Inc., 2005 WL 2030799 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 22, 2005) (demand for money for copyright infringement); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(5)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

251 Zimmerman v. HBO Affiliate Grp., 834 F.2d 1163 (3d Cir. 1987) (theft of television signals); Beauvoir v. Israel, 2014 WL 3882212 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 2014) (theft by evading gas meter); Black v. Goodwill Industries of Orange Cty., 2014 WL 12596425 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2014) (private agreement to pay amount after accused of shoplifting). See also Fleming v. Pickard, 581 F.3d 922 (9th Cir. 2009) (sale of retailer's stolen merchandise); Hadnot v. Ackerman, 2020 WL 3491055 (N.D. Tex. June. 25, 2020) (misappropriation of another's inheritance).

252 Mabe v. G.C. Serv. L.P., 32 F.3d 86 (4th Cir. 1994). Accord Okoro v. Garner, 21 Fed. Appx. 486 (7th Cir. 2001); Zamanzada v. Clayton, 2013 WL 5566133 (D. Utah Oct. 2013) (obligation to pay attorney fees in a child support case not FDCPA debts); Adymy v. Erie County Child Support Enf't Unit, 2006 WL 1174322 (W.D.N.Y. May 2, 2006); Reno v. SupportKids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004); Raffaele v. Marrama, 164 F. Supp. 2d 224 (D. Mass. 2001); Campbell v. Baldwin, 90 F. Supp. 2d 754 (E.D. Tex. 2000); Brown v. Child Support Advocates, 878 F. Supp. 1451, 1454 (D. Utah 1994); Battye v. Child Support Serv., Inc., 873 F. Supp. 103 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

253 Beal v. Himmel & Bernstein, L.L.P., 615 F. Supp. 2d 214 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (legal fees incurred in post-divorce litigation not "debt"); Hicken v. Arnold, Anderson & Dove, 137 F. Supp. 2d 1141 (D. Minn. 2001). See also Victor v. Petrousky, 2019 WL 11502528 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 26, 2019) (claim for reimbursement of child's tutoring expenses under divorce agreement not consumer transaction).

254 Eades v. Kennedy, PC Law Offices, 799 F.3d 161, 170 (2d Cir. 2015). But see Benbrooks v. Voigt, Rode & Boxeth, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4601193 (D. Minn. July 30, 2015) (obligation of son for parent's debt not for personal, family or household purposes where son acting as power of attorney pursuant to state law).

255 See Garcia v. Jenkins Babb L.L.P., 569 Fed. Appx. 274 (5th Cir. 2014); Walker v. Lyons, Doughty & Veldhuis, P.C., 2019 WL 1227792 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 15, 2019); Rhein v. Forster, Garbus & Garbus, L.L.P., 2018 WL 4639194 (D.N.J. Sept. 27, 2018); Popa v. Winn Law Grp., 2017 WL 6016567 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 4, 2017); Scally v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5614604 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 21, 2017). Cf. Blair v. Fed. Pacific Credit Co, L.L.C., 2021 WL 236582, at *4 (D.N.J. Jan. 25, 2021) (granting motion to dismiss where only clue to nature of debt was listing of "Verizon" as "original creditor," since court could not speculate as to household nature of such debt consistent with standards of Rule 12(b)(6)); Villalobos v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 2019 WL 3562663 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 5, 2019) (allegations in complaint concerning personal use of credit card found sufficient).

256 Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 796 Fed. Appx. 821 (5th Cir. 2019). See also Schweitzer v. Northland Grp. Inc., 2014 WL 5782991 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 6, 2014); Valek v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2014 WL 1028916 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 17, 2014); Lujan v. Global Credit and Collection Corp., 2011 WL 2890216 (D. Colo. July 19, 2011).

257 Morgovsky v. Creditors' Collection Serv., 12 F.3d 28 (9th Cir. 1993).

258 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("[t]his bill applies only to debts contracted by consumers for personal, family, or household purposes, it has no application to the collection of commercial accounts") See also 123 Cong. Rec. S4888 (daily ed. Mar. 25, 1977) (remarks of Sen. Garn).

259 Altergott v. Modern Collection Techniques, 1994 WL 319229 (N.D. Ill. June 23, 1994).

260 See Dautrich v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2018 WL 3201786, at *8 (D.N.J. June 29, 2018).

261 Sayeed v. Cheatham Farms Master Homeowners' Ass'n, 2019 WL 2949028, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 16, 2019) (purchase of second residence to which they intended to move and rented for years was incurred "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes").

262 Romischer v. Mann Bracken, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11647282 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 27, 2010), adopted, 2010 WL 11647323 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 22, 2010); Moss v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2004 WL 2106523 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 20, 2004) (needed additional fact-finding where business card used for both business and consumer purchases). See also Randolph v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 254 F.R.D. 513 (N.D. Ill. 2008) ($60 business related expense included in $12,602.69 credit card debt).

are applied to business purposes.[263] A signing bonus that is required to be returned to an employer under certain circumstances was a covered debt where the money from the bonus was used for medical expenses and household expenses.[264]

The consumer's actual purpose in the transaction is determinative, not the creditor's intent in extending credit.[265] The stated purpose of the transaction is not always determinative either,[266] nor is a consumer's past payments on a debt using a business account,[267] or the fact that the consumer owns a business somewhat related to the transaction.[268]

The consumer's own sworn statement, deposition, or testimony that a transaction was primarily for personal, family, or household purposes is evidence of that fact.[269] Although the transaction's own description of the nature of the debt is not always determinative, that a credit agreement states that the credit is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes should be determinative unless there is strong countervailing evidence.[270] The nature of a transaction can also be critical evidence of the transaction's purpose.[271]

Where the creditor furnished information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency, and the consumer's credit report listed that trade line as an individual account, the report was sufficient to raise a question of fact as to whether the debt involved a consumer transaction.[272] That a collector seeks to collect from an individual and not a business entity may not be evidence that the transaction was for personal, family or household purposes,[273] but it is such evidence if the credit was issued to a consumer in the consumer's individual status and not as a business entity.[274]

The collector's own admission that it only collects consumer debt and not business debt is also persuasive,[275] but may not be determinative.[276] Also not determinative is that the debt collector has complied with FDCPA disclosure requirements.[277]

263 Graham v. Manley Deas Kochalski L.L.C., 2009 WL 891743 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 31, 2009) (refinancing was primarily for household purposes where only 10% of proceeds were used for investment purposes).

264 Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., 2019 WL 8405215 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 1, 2019), rev'd & remanded on other grounds, 12 F.4th 665 (7th Cir. 2021).

265 Slenk v. Transworld Sys., 236 F.3d 1072 (9th Cir. 2001); Bloom v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 972 F.2d 1067 (9th Cir. 1992); Ellis v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., 2016 WL 3566981, at *3 (N.D. Cal. June 30, 2016); Ordinario v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 852843 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 4, 2016) (purpose unclear where account was opened in business's name, but consumer provided some evidence of personal use); Garcia v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2009 WL 3079962 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2009); Perk v. Worden, 475 F. Supp. 2d 565 (E.D. Va. 2007) (corporate credit card used for personal purchases); Nix v. Welch & White, 2001 WL 826558 (D. Del. July 18, 2001) (borrower's intended use of loan proceeds, not lender's expectations, determined), rev'd on other grounds, 55 Fed. Appx. 71 (3d Cir. 2003).

266 Slenk v. Transworld Sys., 236 F.3d 1072 (9th Cir. 2001); Bloom v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 972 F.2d 1067 (9th Cir. 1992); Ellis v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., 2016 WL 3566981, at *3 (N.D. Cal. June 30, 2016); Davis v. Hollins Law, 968 F. Supp. 2d 1072 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (business credit card could still be used primarily for personal purposes); Moss v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2004 WL 2106523 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 20, 2004) (card used for both business and consumer purchases); In re Reinke, 2011 WL 5079561 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. Oct. 26, 2011) (transaction was an investment although it was described in documents as purchase of a residence). See also Smith v. EVB, 438 Fed. Appx. 176 (4th Cir. 2011) (although first loan was for commercial purposes, second loan's substance showed that it was for personal purposes).

267 Coleman v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 2015 WL 4524599 (E.D. Mo. July 27, 2015).

268 Slenk v. Transworld Sys., 236 F.3d 1072 (9th Cir. 2001); Pape v. Amos Fin. L.L.C., 2014 WL 839273 (D. Conn. Mar. 4, 2014).

269 See Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 796 Fed. Appx. 821 (5th Cir. 2019); Duarte v. Client Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 4572941, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2019); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 723278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2018); Currier v. PDL Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017); Washington v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 211 F. Supp. 3d 1041 (N.D. Ill. 2016); Bowse v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 218 F. Supp. 3d 745 (N.D. Ill. 2016); Hamburger v. Northland Group., Inc., 2015 WL 631066 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 12, 2015); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (consumer attested that all credit card charges were for personal or household goods and services); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994).

270 See Bitah v. Global Collection Serv., Inc., 968 F. Supp. 618 (D.N.M. 1997); Dorsey v. Morgan, 760 F. Supp. 509 (D. Md. 1991). See also Beasley v. Blatt, 1994 WL 362185 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 1994) (court looked at various aspects of written documents to help determine was for personal use).

271 See Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. 2019) (educational loans are for personal use); Encarnacion v. Fin. Corp. of Am., 2018 WL 6250944 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 14, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 6249679 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2018) (medical services incurred by a child can only be for a personal purpose); Williams v. Receivable Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 8316935 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017) (orthodontics services); Aurandt v. Brown, 2017 WL 1215451 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2017) (payday loan likely used for personal, family or household purposes); Cunha v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5737134 (D. Mass. Sept. 30, 2015) (reasonable to infer personal, family, household purposes based upon seller (Best Buy) and small amount of alleged debt). See also Higgens v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 2628404 (S.D. Fla. June 16, 2017) (medical bill); Smith v. Progressive Fin. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 3995004 (D. Or. Aug. 1, 2013) (student loan); Ross v. Northland Grp., Inc., 2011 WL 13233441, at *2 (D. Minn. Feb. 9, 2011) ("This argument borders on the frivolous. Montgomery Ward is a department store selling consumer goods.").

272 See Good v. FFCC Columbus, Inc., 2015 WL 11122105 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 17, 2015).

273 Burton v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 934 F.3d 572, 581 (7th Cir. 2019); Matin v. Fulton, Friedman & Gullace L.L.P., 826 F. Supp. 2d 808 (E.D. Pa. 2011).

274 Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 78 F. Supp. 3d 743 (N.D. Ill. 2015).

275 McBeth v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2015 WL 4429324 (M.D. Fla. July 20, 2015); Laufman v. Phillips & Burns, Inc., 2008 WL 190604 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 22, 2008). Cf. Garcia v. Rauch-Milliken Int'l, Inc., 2020 WL 3579201, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 14, 2020) (evidence in form of yellow page advertisements that defendant was "commercial collection agency representing a variety of credit grantors providing goods and services only in a commercial context" demonstrated that obligation was not "debt" subject to FDCPA), adopted, 2020 WL 3579822 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2020).

276 Pape v. Amos Fin. L.L.C., 2014 WL 839273 (D. Conn. Mar. 4, 2014). See also Burton v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 934 F.3d 572, 581 (7th Cir. 2019) (advertising that collect consumer debts not determinative).

277 See, e.g., Burton v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 934 F.3d 572, 581 (7th Cir. 2019); Bunting v. Phillips Lytle L.L.P., 2011 WL 2516933 (N.D.N.Y. June 23, 2011).

One area of confusion can be where a debt arises from a transaction involving debts for investment services or investments. Many families engage in financial planning for retirement and thus a business investment arguably can be for personal or family purposes. A number of courts[278] have used as guidance standards set out in related precedent under the Truth in Lending Act (TILA).[279] For example, the Ninth Circuit, in a TILA case, used these standards to determine if an investment is for consumer purposes:

- How closely related the consumer's primary occupation is to the nature of the investment;
- Whether the consumer will personally manage the investment;
- Whether the investment returns a large percentage of the consumer's income;
- The amount of the investment;
- The consumer's statement of purpose for the investment.[280]

Other courts may be less likely to view investment transactions as being primarily for a personal purpose.[281]

Generally, residential property purchased solely to rent to others, and where the consumer has no intent ever to live in the property, is a business transaction.[282] Moreover, if the consumer's purpose is commercial and most units are rented, with the consumer residing in only one of multiple units for a limited period of time, the transaction is not primarily for personal purposes.[283] But a court has found that a rental to family members could be a covered debt because the transaction was primarily for family purposes.[284] That a consumer rents a residence for personal purposes is not affected by the fact that the rent includes services the consumer must perform.[285]

A series of transactions can have some transactions with a business purpose and others with a personal purpose, and the transaction most closely related to the debt will determine whether the debt is covered under the FDCPA. The Eleventh Circuit found a personal purpose for a debt owed to PayPal arising from the consumer's setting up a personal PayPal account, even though the debt also arose from the consumer's acting as a commercial seller. The transaction opening a PayPal account was most closely related to the debt owed to PayPal.[286]

Collection calls regarding a business debt are sometimes considered excluded even if placed to the person's home.[287] But the collection of a business debt against the wrong person at that person's home may be protected by the FDCPA.[288] Courts have found that the seeking payment from the employee rather than the employer indicated that the transaction was for personal use.[289]

Not considered a consumer debt are:

- A purchase by a sole proprietor;[290]
- A business startup loan;[291]
- A $10 million real estate development loan;[292]

278 See Thomson v. Prof'l Foreclosure Corp., 2000 WL 34335866 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 25, 2000), aff'd, 86 Fed. Appx. 352 (9th Cir. 2004); Hunter v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2012 WL 715270 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 1, 2012); Kawa v. U.S. Bank, 2009 WL 700593 (D. Neb. Mar. 13, 2009); Allen v. BRT Util. Corp., 1996 WL 776583 (D. Conn. Oct. 24, 1996).

279 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 2.4.2.2.1, 2.4.2.2.2, 2.4.2.2.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

280 See Thorns v. Sundance Props., 726 F.2d 1417, 1419 (9th Cir. 1984).

281 See Gowing v. Royal Bank, 100 F.3d 962 (9th Cir. 1996). See also Sparlin v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2012 WL 527486 (D. Ariz. Feb. 17, 2012).

282 See In re Baroni, 2015 WL 6956664 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Nov. 10, 2015); Johnson v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2007 WL 3226153 (D. Nev. Oct. 29, 2007).

283 Hunter v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2012 WL 715270 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 1, 2012).

284 Allen v. BRT Util. Corp., 1996 WL 776583 (D. Conn. Oct. 24, 1996) (water service debt for residential condominium owned by plaintiffs, who did not live in condominium but rented it to family members).

285 Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017).

286 Oppenheim v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 627 F.3d 833 (11th Cir. 2010).

287 See Berry v. Sugarman, 2010 WL 1032643 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 17, 2010); Elwood v. Cobra Collection Agency, 2007 WL 4270806 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 3, 2007) (proprietor who personally guaranteed business debt was not consumer); Calo-Rivera v. Banco Popular, 2006 WL 1514377 (D. P.R. May 31, 2006) (debt incurred for business purpose was exempt from FDCPA; personal guarantor not protected by FDCPA); Dean v. Gillette, 2005 WL 1631093, at *3 (D. Kan. July 11, 2005) ("the mere fact that [lawyer] sought to recover the debt from plaintiff personally has no bearing on the [business] nature of the transaction underlying the debt").

288 See Alston v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2013 WL 665036 (D. Md. Feb. 22, 2013) (pro se consumer's allegations that credit card was in his personal name and reported to his personal credit report did not create plausible inference that subject of debt was for personal, family, or household purposes). But see Dixon v. Golden-Masano-Bradley, Law Firm, 2007 WL 933757 (3d Cir. Mar. 28, 2007) (promissory note stated that proceeds of note "WILL NOT be used for personal, family or household purposes" and thus obligation was not FDCPA consumer debt); Schram v. Federated Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 1238863 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 27, 2007) (FDCPA does not apply to credit card used for business purposes)

289 See Fagan v. Lawrence Nathan Assoc., Inc., 957 F. Supp. 2d 784 (E.D. La. 2013) (collector sought payment from member of law firm for business car rental that was used primarily for personal purposes); Brown v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2532909 (S.D. Ind. June 24, 2011) (where letter attached to plaintiff's complaint was addressed to him in personal capacity, rather than in corporate or business capacity, this was enough to give plausibility to his allegation that debt was consumer debt). Cf. Booth v. Mee, Mee & Hoge, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 988473 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 15, 2010) (equipment leased for, but not used in, business not covered by FDCPA).

290 Hobbs v. Duggins, 318 Fed. Appx. 375 (6th Cir. 2009) (legal fees owed as result of cabling company's debt); Absolute Power Sys., Inc. v. Cummins, Inc., 2016 WL 6897782 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2016) (dismissing FDCPA claims arising from commercial contract dispute because primary purpose of debt was to pay judgment arising from commercial activity); Peters v. Coface Collections, Inc., 2014 WL 1259778 (D. Ariz. Mar. 27, 2014) (individual held himself out as business and where collection agency collected only commercial accounts); Hammerman v. GB Collects, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5816499 (D. Md. Oct. 28, 2013) (nonpayment of employee group insurance).

291 See Lingo v. Dep't of Cmty. & Econ. Dev., 195 Fed. Appx. 891 (11th Cir. Sept. 11, 2006). See also Conboy v. United States Small Bus. Admin., 992 F.3d 153 (3d Cir. 2021) (affirming summary judgment for collector where debt was commercial loan from US Small Business Administration that did not qualify as consumer debt under § 1692a(5)).

292 See First Gibraltar Bank v. Smith, 62 F.3d 133 (5th Cir. 1995). See also Hua v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2017 WL 5624878 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 22, 2017) (investment property that was rented out to others); Hua v. Lehman

- A venture capital investment;[293]
- A business equipment lease[294] or purchase;[295]
- A business credit card debt;[296]
- Rent paid for a residential property lease;[297]
- A bill from a court reporter to a lawyer;[298]
- The mortgage on a condominium used for rental income, not as residence;[299]
- The purchase of unemployment insurance for a nanny;[300]
- A debt arising out of an individual's employment contract;[301]
- A personal obligation on a business guaranty;[302]
- An overpayment of wages;[303] and
- Employment compensation claims.[304]

4.6.5 Where Consumer Has No Knowledge of Nature of Alleged Debt

A consumer's proof that a transaction was primarily for personal, family, or household purposes is complicated where the collector is collecting from someone who was never involved with the debt— where the collector has mixed up the obligor's identity or the consumer is an identity theft victim. The consumer has no knowledge of the debt, and so cannot testify from personal knowledge as to the purpose of the underlying transaction.

Some courts still place the burden on the consumer to show the purpose of the underlying transaction,[305] particularly where evidence is weak that someone else owes the debt and the debt appears to be commercial in nature.[306] But courts may rule otherwise, if the consumer first presents evidence that the debt does not belong to the consumer.[307] In that case, courts may take the circumstances into consideration in reviewing the consumer's evidence of the debt's nature,[308] or, where nothing points to a debt not involving a personal transaction, place the burden on the collector to prove the debt is not covered.[309] The collector has more information on the debt than the consumer and placing the burden on the collector is most consistent with the FDCPA's purposes.

Whatever approach a court takes, a prudent consumer attorney, despite the difficulty, should present as much evidence as possible both as to the likely consumer nature of the debt and that the collector is seeking payment from the wrong consumer. Courts should be generous in allowing extensive discovery to help prove this case, and not grant a motion to dismiss prematurely.[310] On the other hand, a consumer making no

XS Tr. Mortg. Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2007-7N, 2017 WL 4240911 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 25, 2017) (commercial loan); Zirk v. Nationstar Mortg., 2017 WL 3402970 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 8, 2017) (debt securing rental property).

293 See Henderson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 73 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 636 (W.D.N.C. 2009) (mortgage loans on commercial property); Dunn v. Meridian Mortg., 2009 WL 1165396 (W.D. Va. May 1, 2009) (loan to improve investment business properties), aff'd per curiam, 334 Fed. Appx. 566 (4th Cir. 2009); Kattula v. Jade, 2008 WL 495298 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 20, 2008) (commercial loan to purchase truck stop); Fleet Nat'l Bank v. Baker, 2003 WL 21088516 (D. Mass. May 7, 2003) (parties had referred to transaction as commercial real estate loan).

294 See Hardy v. Joseph I. Sussman, P.C., 953 F. Supp. 2d 102 (D.D.C. 2013); Booth v. Mee, Mee & Hoge, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 988473 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 15, 2010) (equipment leased for, even if not used in, business).

295 See Scarola Malone & Zubatov L.L.P. v. McCarthy, Burgess & Wolff, 638 Fed. Appx. 100 (2d Cir. 2016) (business telephone account); Saylor v. Pinnacle Credit Serv., L.L.C., 667 Fed. Appx. 829 (4th Cir. 2016), affirming 118 F. Supp. 3d 881 (E.D. Va. 2015) (purchase of carpenter's supplies).

296 See Hattaway v. Homeland Cmty. Bank, 2013 WL 12237375 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 27, 2013) (farm loan was not consumer debt); Olsen v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2008 WL 11355505 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 11, 2008) (business credit card used primarily for commercial purposes). See also JH Kaspar Oil Co. v. Newton & Assoc., L.L.C., 2008 WL 819094 (E.D. La. Mar. 25, 2008) (debts owed by commercial customers).

297 See Drew v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5637569 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 17, 2015); Loschiavo v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 3742491 (N.D. Ohio June 15, 2015).

298 See Cronin v. Oakes, 2014 WL 7398949 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 30, 2014). See also Graham v. Tasa Grp., Inc., 2015 WL 875228 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 2, 2015) (expert witness services for law practice).

299 See Connelly v. Ekimoto & Morris, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4016429 (D. Haw. Aug. 22, 2018).

300 See Berman v. G.C. Serv. L.P., 146 F.3d 482 (7th Cir. 1998).

301 See Derbin v. Keith M. Nathanson, P.L.L.C., 2013 WL 5490176 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 30, 2013).

302 See Lyon v. Am. Recovery Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4680130 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 6, 2016) (collector's view of personal nature of debt did not affect that determination). See also Paushok v. Ganbold, 2021 WL 1063206 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 18, 2021); Downing v. IOU Cent., Inc., 2019 WL 3502915 (N.D. Ga. May 29, 2019) (magistrate judge recommended dismissal of FDCPA claims because underlying debt out of commercial loan transaction and res judicata applied to state judgment where plaintiff unsuccessfully alleged his signature was forgery), adopted, 2020 WL 7409660 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 25, 2020).

303 Orenbuch v. Leopold, Gross & Sommers, 586 F. Supp. 2d 105 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

304 See Surber v. McCarthy, Burgess & Wolff, Inc., 634 Fed. Appx. 292 (11th Cir. 2015) (chargeback for unearned commissions on sales of insurance did not arise from consumer transaction); 1077 Madison Street, L.L.C. v. Smith, 2015 WL 5793427 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2015); Shkreli v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 1408840 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2015).

305 See Burton v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 934 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2019); Strauss v. CBE Grp., Inc., 173 F. Supp. 3d 1302 (S.D. Fla. 2016); Anderson v. AFNI, Inc., 2011 WL 1808779 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2011); Garcia v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2009 WL 3079962 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2009).

306 See Horton v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1055776 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 10, 2015).

307 See Bodur v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 829 F. Supp. 2d 246 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

308 Martin v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 192 F. Supp. 3d 1296 (S.D. Fla. 2016); Belcher v. Cent. Credit Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 13229640 (N.D. Ala. June 22, 2011). See also Gendelberg v. Warfield, 2021 WL 1224831, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2021) (debt that debtor denied owing was for residential air conditioner, and therefore consumer debt even though shipped to business address); Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2018 WL 3546193 (D.N.J. July 23, 2018).

309 See Kilpakis v. JPMorgan Chase Fin. Co., L.L.C., 229 F. Supp. 3d 133, 145 (E.D.N.Y. 2017); Davis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 41 F. Supp. 3d 919 (E.D. Cal. 2014); Collins v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 9805805 (E.D. Tenn. June 7, 2013); Gonzalez v. L. Firm of Sam Chandra, APC, 2013 WL 4758944 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 4, 2013); Bodur v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 829 F. Supp. 2d 246 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

310 See Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2016 WL 4249491 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2016) (allowing discovery despite risk might unlawfully disclose third party's personal information); Corson v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., attempt to prove the underlying transaction was for personal purposes may find the case dismissed.[311]

Debt collectors may object to the consumer's discovery seeking information on the individual who does in fact owe the debt, citing the FDCPA's limits on communicating about a debt to third parties. This in itself could be viewed as an admission that the debt is covered by the FDCPA.[312] That the collector does not cooperate in discovery and could not locate the correct consumer also weighs in the consumer's favor in limiting the extent of the evidence the consumer need submit to at least get to trial.[313]

4.7 Debt Collector, FDCPA § 1692a(6)

4.7.1 Overview

> The term "debt collector" means any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of any debts, or who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another. Notwithstanding the exclusion provided by clause (F) of the last sentence of this paragraph, the term includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts. For the purpose of section 1692f(6) of this title, such term also includes any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests. The term does not include . . .[314]

The FDCPA's substantive provisions place obligations or restrictions only on "debt collectors," as defined in the Act. Only one provision applies more broadly—section 1692j applies to any person who designs, compiles, or furnishes "any form knowing that such form would be used to create the false belief in a consumer that a person other than the creditor of such consumer is participating in the collection of or in an attempt to collect a debt . . ."[315]

The definition of debt collector has four major components. The first is what is sometimes called the general definition, that a debt collector is either a person who regularly collects debts owed to another or a person whose principal purpose is to collect debts.[316] Second, a creditor collecting its own debts is still a debt collector, even if its principal purpose is not to collect debts, if it uses a name other than its own.[317] Third, an entity whose principal purpose is the enforcement of security interests qualifies for coverage as a debt collector for purposes of FDCPA § 1692f(6).[318]

Finally, even if the entity qualifies as a debt collector under the general definition above, there are ten statutory exclusions from the definition of debt collector:

- Officers or employees of the person who owns the debt;[319]
- An entity collecting for a commonly owned or affiliated entity;[320]
- Government officers or employees collecting debts in their official duties;[321]
- A person serving legal process;[322]
- Nonprofit consumer credit counselors;[323]
- Those collecting based on a fiduciary or escrow relationship;[324]
- The creditor originator collecting for another;[325]
- When a debt was obtained for servicing purposes, before it is in default;[326]
- Secured parties involving commercial credit;[327] and
- Private bad check diversion programs meeting certain criteria.[328]

In addition, Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) excludes from the coverage of Regulation F (but not from coverage of the FDCPA) those debt collectors outside the CFPB's authority.[329]

It is prudent not to plead a simple conclusory statement that an FDCPA defendant is a debt collector, but to plead with more specificity the elements making it a collector.[330]

2013 WL 4047577 (D.N.J. Aug. 9, 2013); Browne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2013 WL 871966 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 7, 2013).

311 Toroussian v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5524831 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 4, 2013); Garcia v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2009 WL 3079962 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2009). See also Lutman v. Harvard Collection Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 4664296 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 6, 2015).

312 Estes v. Love, Beal & Nixon, P.C., 2015 WL 4508601, at *5 (N.D. Okla. July 24, 2015).

313 Estes v. Love, Beal & Nixon, P.C., 2015 WL 4508601, at *5 (N.D. Okla. July 24, 2015).

314 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6) (exceptions not reproduced here, but discussed in § 4.8, infra). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(1) essentially tracks this language with minor, non-substantive changes for clarity.

315 Section 1692j is examined at § 10.4, infra.

316 See §§ 4.7.2, 4.7.3, infra.

317 See § 4.7.4, infra.

318 See § 4.7.5, infra.

319 See § 4.8.1, infra.

320 See § 4.8.2, infra.

321 See § 4.8.3, infra.

322 See § 4.8.4, infra.

323 See § 4.8.5, infra.

324 See § 4.8.7, infra.

325 See § 4.8.8, infra.

326 See § 4.8.9, infra.

327 See § 4.8.10, infra.

328 See § 4.8.11, infra.

329 See § 4.8.12, infra.

330 See Bates v. Green Farms Condo. Ass'n, 958 F.3d 470, 480–481 (6th Cir. 2020) (granting motion to dismiss where complaint did not aver facts about the nature of the law firm's and condominium management company's business); Husain v. Bank of Am., 2020 WL 777293, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 18, 2020) (dismissing FDCPA claims that described servicer in conclusory manner under "principal purpose" debt collector definition and did not allege servicer regularly collected debts for others); Shallenburg v. PNC Bank, 2020 WL 555447, at *7 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 4, 2020) (dismissing FDCPA claim against foreclosure firm because complaint only paraphrased statutory debt collector definition). See also Zuniga v. Jacobs, 2020 WL 168106, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 13, 2020) (denying borrower's summary judgment motion where, despite reference to defendant law firm's activity through court docket

4.7.2 Principal Purpose Being Debt Collection

4.7.2.1 Generally

> The term "debt collector" means any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of any debts . . .[331]

As discussed at § 4.7.1, supra, under the FDCPA's general definition of debt collector an entity can be a debt collector either by being in a business the principal purpose of which is the collecting or debts or regularly collecting debts owed to another.[332] The person does not have to meet both requirements since the statute uses the word "or" between the two prongs.

Almost always, when debts are owed to another, it is easier to show that the collector regularly collects debt than to show that its principal business is debt collection. "Regularly" is a looser standard than "principal purpose," and the evidence to prove it may be easier to obtain. However, the Supreme Court held that the "regularly collects" prong is not applicable when an entity is collecting its own debts, because the "regularly collects" prong requires that the person regularly collect "debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another."[333]

Thus, for entities like debt buyers that own the debt they are collecting, the "principal purpose" prong of the debt collection definition is critical.[334] The Official Interpretations of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) put it this way:

> A person who collects or attempts to collect defaulted debts that the person has purchased, but who does not collect or attempt to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due, or asserted to be owed or due, to another, and who does not have a business the principal purpose of which is the collection of debts, is not a debt collector as defined in § 1006.2(i).[335]

The "principal purpose" definition looks to whether debt collection is the principal purpose of the business, not a principal purpose.[336] For example, banks for which debt collection is just one of many parts of the business do not have debt collection as the principal purpose of their business.[337] Even where a creditor's only business involves extending credit, the principal purpose of such a creditor is likely not to be the collection of debts, but the earning of interest and fees from the money loaned.

An entity acquiring credit accounts by merger or acquisition of a major part of another creditor's business is also unlikely to have debt collection as a principal purpose.[338] The entity more likely (but not necessarily) will have as its principal purpose extending credit or even conducting some other line of business.

Where a credit-seller immediately assigns its credit accounts to a financer, the assignor's principal purpose will be to sell goods or services. The financer's principal purpose will be to extend credit or perhaps to make profits off its purchase of the debt from the credit-seller.[339] entries and firm's website, disputed issues of fact remained as to extent and make-up of firm's debt collection activities). But see In re Vazquez, 2020 WL 557320, at *4 (Bankr. D. P.R. Feb. 3, 2020) (denying dismissal of FDCPA claims against foreclosure firm at pleading stage; complaint did not allege that foreclosure firm had been hired exclusively to carry out nonjudicial foreclosure).

---

331 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6).

Almost every draft version of the FDCPA, as well as the final Act, included the "principal business" phrase in its definition of "debt collector." See Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the House Comm. on Banking, Currency and Hous., 94th Cong., 2d Sess., Subcomm. Print No. 1 (Feb. 1976); H.R. 11969, 94th Cong. 2d Sess. (Feb. 19, 1976).

332 See, e.g., Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 817 F.3d 131, 136 (4th Cir. 2016), aff'd, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017); Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. Feb. 22, 2019); Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364, 370 (3d Cir. 2018) ("'Any debts' . . . stands in contrast to 'debts owed or due . . . another,' which limits only the 'regularly collects' definition."); James v. Wadas, 724 F.3d 1312, 1317 (10th Cir. 2013); Schlegel v. Wells Fargo Bank, 720 F.3d 1204, 1208 (9th Cir. 2013); Hester v. Graham, Bright & Smith, 289 Fed. Appx. 35, 41 (5th Cir. 2008); Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56, 61 (2d Cir. 2004); Skinner v. LVNV Funding, 2018 WL 319320, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2018) ("the limitation that a debt must be 'owed or due another,' central to the Court's reasoning in Henson, follows the 'or' in the definition and thus applies only to the second regularly collects definition").

333 See Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 817 F.3d 131, 136 (4th Cir. 2016), aff'd, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

334 For more about coverage of debt buyers, see § 4.7.2.2, infra.

335 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(i)-1.

336 See, e.g., Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 2019 WL 2146603, at *2 (W.D. Ark. May 16, 2019) (citing Merriam-Webster's Dictionary (Online 2019); noting the word "principal" is defined as "most important, consequential, or influential"), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 982 F.3d 1119 (8th Cir. 2020).

337 See, e.g., Ahmed v. Wells Fargo Bank, 432 F.3d 556 (E.D. Pa. 2020); Shallenburg v. PNC Bank, 2020 WL 555447, at *8 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 4, 2020); Stone v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 415 F. Supp. 3d 628, 633 (E.D. Pa. 2019).

338 See, e.g., Ashley Gill v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 3579227, at *5 (S.D. Ala. June 28, 2016) (bank that obtained debt through a series of mergers was not a covered debt collector; "An entity that is attempting to collect a debt on its own behalf is not a debt collector unless its business' principal purpose is to collect debts or it regularly collects debt of another. Plaintiffs have failed to show either."); Moore v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 12859897 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 15, 2014) (no showing that defendant was debt collector where there were no facts alleged regarding principal purpose of its business and defendant was successor by merger to plaintiff's former servicer and creditor), adopted, 2014 WL 12859892 (N.D. Ga. May 8, 2014).

339 See, e.g., Johnson v. Santander Consumer USA, 2018 WL 3061920, at *5 (W.D. Tenn. Apr. 6, 2018) ("Johnson bought the Tahoe from CarMax on September 17, 2012, and financed the purchase by executing a Retail Installment Contract, which was immediately assigned to Santander via language in the contract itself. Under the contract, Johnson agreed to make payments to Santander. Thus, until it sold the contract to CFAM, Santander owned the contract and was servicing a debt that it owned and which it had acquired immediately upon execution of the contract and before Johnson's default. Therefore, Santander is not a debt collector and the FDCPA does not apply."); Scott v. Chrome Capital, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7638135 (D.S.C. July 25, 2016) (defendant that was immediately assigned lease agreement that it funded and

On the other hand, as discussed at § 4.7.2.2, infra, courts regularly find that debt buyers are debt collectors under the "principal purpose" prong. Debt collection as a principal purpose can be collection of any type of account that falls within the FDCPA's definition of "debt."[340] But a person is not a debt collector when the principal purpose is collecting obligations the FDCPA does not define as being a "debt."

The principal purpose need not be the collection of debts acquired when in default principal purpose applies to the collection of "any debts." This means all debts, including debts acquired from another, in default or otherwise, or owed to the collecting entity.[341]

To be a principal purpose debt collector, the person must "use[] any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails." Due to the use of the telephone, the mails, or the Internet in their business, this requirement is easily met for most principal purpose debt collectors.[342]

4.7.2.2 Debt Buyer's Principal Purpose

In Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc.,[343] the Supreme Court held that a debt buyer is not one that collects debts "owed or due another," because it owns the debts after purchasing them. The Court left open that a debt buyer can qualify as a debt collector if its principal purpose is the collection of debts, and numerous courts have since found that debt buyers are debt collectors under the principal purpose prong.[344] Thus, for FDCPA coverage of debt buyers, the key question is whether the debt buyer's principal purpose is debt collection.

Courts generally find debt buyers and similar entities to have a principal purpose of debt collection where a high percentage of its business, resources, or expenses is devoted to debt collection,[345] or where a high percentage of business revenue or profit is derived from debt collection.[346] Courts may also look to how the business describes itself on its website,[347] the number of collection lawsuits it files,[348] or that the business financed was not debt collector under FDCPA); Corea v. Riverbank Acceptance, Inc., 2005 WL 8155869 (S.D. Fla. June 15, 2005) (finance company that was immediately assigned installment sales contract was not debt collector under FDCPA where contract disclosed intent to assign). See also Rajapakse v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 2019 WL 8167796 (6th Cir. Aug. 28, 2019) (defendant that was assigned vehicle loan on date of origination could not be considered debt collector under FDCPA because loan was not in default at time of assignment). Cf. James v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 842 F. Supp 1202, 1206 (D. Minn. 1994 ("Automobile finance companies which make loans to automobile purchasers do not have as their principal business purpose the collection of debts and they do not generally collect debts due to others.").

340 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(5); § 4.6, supra.

341 Davidson v. Capital One Bank, 797 F.3d 1309, 1316 n.8 (11th Cir. 2015).

342 See Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364, 370 (3d Cir. 2018) (debt buyer "uses the mails and wires for its business"); Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Swatsworth, 2018 WL 4016312, at *7 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 22, 2018); Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018) (causing a process server to mail a copy of the complaint was use of the mails no requirement that such use be direct by the collector. Alternatively, wiring money to investors and law firm satisfied the requirement); Cohen v. Dave's Towing Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 136679 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 9, 2015) (repossession company). But see Johnson v. Redstone Fed. Credit Union, 2020 WL 3640000 (N.D. Ala. July. 6, 2020) (house flippers who bought judgment lien from credit union did not use interstate commerce or the mail to collect debt, but rather used local sheriff to levy property); Thompson v. Five Bros. Mortg. Co. Serv. & Securing Inc., 2019 WL 2051798 (W.D. Mich. May 9, 2019) (no interstate commerce where Michigan contractor entered home in Michigan, with no mailing and no telephone use), aff'd, 800 Fed. Appx. 369 (6th Cir. 2020).

343 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

344 See, e.g., Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119 (8th Cir. 2020); Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2019); Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2018). See also McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089 (9th Cir. 2020) (complaint sufficiently alleged debt buyer was debt collector). At the end of this section there is a list of decisions by the name of the debt buyer.

345 See Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260, 268 (3d Cir. 2019) ("Crown's only business is the purchasing of debts for the purpose of collecting on those debts, and, as Crown candidly acknowledged at oral argument, without the collection of those debts, Crown would cease to exist."); Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2018) (debt buyer admitted that its "sole business is collecting debts it has purchased"); F.T.C. v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159, 174 (3d Cir. 2007) ("Check Investors acquired the defaulted checks only for collection purposes." (emphasis added)); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379, 404 (3d Cir. 2000) (motion for summary judgment stated that defendant "exists solely for the purpose of holding claims for delinquent taxes and municipal obligations" (emphasis added)); Linder v. Eason, 2018 WL 3816763 (C.D. Cal. June 29, 2018) (trust's sole revenue source and activity were related to collecting on state court judgments against debtors); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018); Skinner v. LVNV Funding, 2018 WL 319320 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2018) (insufficient evidence of percentage of collector's operations that involved debt collection). See also Wheeler v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 1469449 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2020) (where there was no evidence that Midland Funding had any business purpose other than to purchase and collect debts, inference raised that it is debt collector under FDCPA, but this was not conclusive truth). But see Pavone v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 1047 (S.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd, 172 F.3d 876 (9th Cir. 1999) ("principal purpose" test not satisfied where less than one quarter of business expenses were for its debt collection operations).

346 See McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089, 1091 (9th Cir. 2020); Scott v. Jones, 964 F.2d 314, 316 (4th Cir. 1992) (70–80% of lawyer's legal fees related to debt collection); Schafer v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2019 WL 2710272 (W.D. Mich. June 28, 2019) (99% of revenues came from debt collection performed by others on its behalf); Long v. Pendrick Capital Partners II, L.L.C., 374 F. Supp. 3d 515, 536 (D. Md. 2019); Mitchell v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6406594 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 15, 2017).

347 Norman v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 310 F. Supp. 3d 509, 515 (E.D. Pa. 2018) (sufficient pleading where LVNV's website describes it as buyer of consumer debt and fails to list any other form of commercial activity); Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Penn. Dec. 1, 2017) (website stated that it is debt collector).

348 Page v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2019 WL 5696108, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. June 17, 2019); Skinner v. LVNV Funding, 2018 WL 319320 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2018) (list of hundreds of collection lawsuits filed by defendant insufficient to establish principal purpose where no evidence presented about percent of business dedicated to debt collection); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 301 F. Supp. 3d 866, 884 (N.D. Ill. 2018); Mitchell v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6406594, at *6 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 15, 2017) ("LVNV files thousands of collection lawsuits in its name"); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413, 423 is licensed as a debt collector.[349] Perhaps even more instructive is how the business describes itself when filing for a license.[350] A debt buyer might even admit that debt collection is its principal purpose by indicating that its business is purchasing defaulted debts and collecting on them.[351] Of course, that the entity engages in no other business than debt buying is also persuasive,[352] as is the fact that an entity has no employees and where its contracts all relate to debt collection.[353]

Some debt buyers have claimed that they are "passive" collectors because they have no employees and contract out for all services. A debt buyer can have a principal purpose of debt collection even if it does not directly collect its debts, but instead contracts with others to collect debts on its behalf.[354]

The statutory definition does not even refer to "collecting debts" but only to a principal purpose of "debt collection."[355]

The Third Circuit rejected a debt buyer's argument that it could not be a debt collector because it was a creditor, stating that "an entity that satisfies both [the definition of creditor and the definition of principal purpose debt collector] is within the Act's reach."[356]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) excludes from the debt collector definition debts acquired prior to default, but such exemption only applies to the collection of debts owed to another. When an entity is collecting its own debts—as is the case with a debt buyer, the exclusion does not apply. Nowhere else does the FDCPA require that the principal purpose be collecting debts acquired after default.

However, obtaining debts solely after they are in default does not guarantee that the entity's principal purpose is debt collection.[357] On the other hand, entities that purchase debts in default often do have as a principal purpose the collection of those debts.

Since Henson, courts have concluded that each of the following debt buyers is or could be found by a jury to be a debt collector under the "principal purpose" prong:

- Amos Financial, L.L.C.;[358]
- Credit Corp Solutions Inc.;[359]
- Crown Asset Management, L.L.C.;[360]

(S.D.N.Y. 2010) (complaint alleged that defendants "are principally in the business of buying defaulted debts and seeking to collect on them, as they have filed more than 100,000 debt collection actions in state courts"). See also Dorrian v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 94 N.E.3d 370 (Mass. 2018) (noting number of lawsuits filed and reports sent to credit bureau, but not discussing this in principal purpose analysis).

349 Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018) (holds collection agency license); Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Penn. Dec. 1, 2017) (licensed as collection agency). But see Skinner v. LVNV Funding, 2018 WL 319320 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2018) (licensed as debt collector insufficient to establish principal purpose where no evidence about percent of business dedicated to debt collection).

350 Mitchell v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6406594 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 15, 2017).

351 Schweer v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2906504 (M.D. Penn. July 7, 2017). See also Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019); Long v. Pendrick Capital Partners II, L.L.C., 374 F. Supp. 3d 515, 536 (D. Md. 2019); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018).

352 Rivas v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 398 F. Supp. 3d 1294, 1303 (S.D. Fla. 2019), aff'd, 842 Fed. Appx. 483 (11th Cir. 2021); Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018); Norman v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 310 F. Supp. 3d 509, 515 (E.D. Pa. 2018); Mitchell v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6406594 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 15, 2017).

353 See Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119, 1125 (8th Cir. 2020) ("The foreseeable and logical consequence of hiring lawyers and debt collection agencies to collect debts DNF has purchased is itself evidence of purpose."); Bielawski v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2019 WL 4278042, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 2019). See also Thompson v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 1486974, at *24 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 31, 2015) (finding defendant PYOD's principal purpose was collection of debts where "[its] entire raison d'etre is to act as a vessel for the assignment of defaulted debts formally purchased by its parent, Sherman, for the sole purpose of facilitating efforts by Resurgent or other corporate affiliates to collect on PYOD's behalf").

354 McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089, 1090 (9th Cir. 2020); Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119, 1125 (8th Cir. 2020); Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260, 261 (3d Cir. 2019); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379, 403–404 (3d Cir. 2000); Jackson v. JTM Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2021 WL 1238565, at *6 (D. Md. Apr. 2, 2021); Long v. Pendrick Capital Partners II, L.L.C., 374 F. Supp. 3d 515, 536 (D. Md. 2019); Mullery v. JTM Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 2135484 (W.D.N.Y. May 16, 2019); Carlo v. Midwest Recovery Sys., L.L.C., 2018 WL 5267163, at *2 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 23, 2018); Norman v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2383099 (E.D. Pa. May 25, 2018); Polanco v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 132 F. Supp. 3d 567 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (collected through attorneys). See also McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 301 F. Supp. 3d 866, 884 (N.D. Ill. 2018); Thompson v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 1486974, at *24 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 31, 2015) ("[its] entire raison d'etre is to act as a vessel for the assignment of defaulted debts formally purchased by its parent, Sherman, for the sole purpose of facilitating efforts by Resurgent or other corporate affiliates to collect on PYOD's behalf"); Plummer v. Atl. Credit & Fin., Inc., 66 F. Supp. 3d 484 (S.D.N.Y. 2014). But see Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072, 1079 (N.D. Ill. 2014).

355 McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089, 1090 (9th Cir. 2020); Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2019).

356 Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2018). Accord Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2019). See also Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 1724, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017) (not deciding if the defendant debt buyer is a debt collector under the principal purpose test even but noting that it could qualify as a creditor "under the statute's plain terms"); Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119, 1125 (8th Cir. 2020) (rejecting debt buyer's argument that it cannot be debt collector because it is creditor).

357 Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 1724, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017); Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364, 371 (3d Cir. 2018) ("Whether an entity acquired the debts it collects after they became defaulted does not resolve whether that entity is a debt collector."); Kurtzman v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 709 Fed. Appx. 655, 659 (11th Cir. 2017) ("a non-originating debt holder [does not qualify as] a 'debt collector' for purposes of the FDCPA solely because the debt was in default at the time it was acquired"); Bank of N.Y. Mellon Tr. Co. v. Henderson, 862 F.3d 29, 34 (D.C. Cir. 2017) ("That the debt was already in default when the Bank purchased it did not make the Bank a debt collector.").

358 Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 898 F.3d 364, 370 (3d Cir. 2018).

359 Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2017).

360 Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2019).

- DNF Associates L.L.C.;[361]
- JTM Capital Management;[362]
- LR Credit 13, L.L.C.;[363]
- LVNV Funding, L.L.C.;[364]
- Midland Funding;[365]
- Pendrick Capital Partners, L.L.C.; and[366]
- Union Adjustment Co., Inc.[367]

Depending on their business models, certain buyers of distressed mortgage loans also meet this "principal purpose" standard.[368]

4.7.3 Regularly Collecting Debts Owed to Another

4.7.3.1 Generally

> The term "debt collector" means any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails . . . who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another.[369]

Unless excluded by another FDCPA provision,[370] a person who directly or indirectly regularly collects debts owed to another is a debt collector. The FDCPA also defines a debt collector as one whose principal business is debt collection, but one has to meet only one of these two prongs to be a debt collector since the two prongs are separated by "or."[371]

A party who regularly collect debts for another is a debt collector even if debt collection is not its principal business. On the other hand, the "regularly collects" prong applies only to those collecting debts owed to another, so that where a party is collecting on its own debt (such as a debt buyer),[372] the "principal business" prong would be the appropriate one to utilize.

A debt collector is one who regularly collects "debts," so that the debt collector must regularly collect "debts," as that term is defined in the FDCPA.[373] For example, regularly collecting business debts is not sufficient to make one an FDCPA debt collector. But a person is a debt collector if they regularly collect consumer debts, even if they also regularly or even principally collect business debts. The person's principal business can even be unrelated to debt collection, such as the practice of law or credit reporting, as long as the person regularly collects consumer debts owed to another.[374]

The consumer has the burden of pleading and proving that a party regularly collects debts owed to another.[375] But the consumer has a right to discovery to determine that fact.[376] The legislative history indicates "The requirement that debt collection be done 'regularly' would exclude a person who collects a debt for another in an isolated instance, but would include those who collect for others in the regular course of business."[377] There must be some proof that the instance of 361 Reygadas v DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119, 1125 (8th Cir. 2020). See also McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089 (9th Cir. 2020) (complaint sufficiently alleged debt buyer was debt collector).

362 Jackson v. JTM Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2021 WL 1238565 (D. Md. Apr. 2, 2021).

363 Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018).

364 Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D Ill Mar. 27, 2018). See also Norman v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2383099 (E.D. Pa. May 25, 2018; McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 301 F. Supp. 3d 866, 884 (N.D. Ill. 2018) ("a reasonable juror could reach a verdict in favor of plaintiff on the question of whether the principal purpose of LVNV's business is debt collection"); Mitchell v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6406594, at *4–5 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 15, 2017) (same).

365 Rivas v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 398 F. Supp. 3d 1294, 1303 (S.D. Fla. 2019), aff'd, 842 Fed. Appx. 483 (11th Cir. 2021). See also Bradley v. Selip & Stylianou, L.L.P., 2018 WL 4958964, at *5 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 15, 2018).

366 Schweer v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2906504, at *5 (M.D. Pa. July 7, 2017) (defendant Pendrick Capital Partners stipulated that principal purpose of business "is to buy defaulted debts and thereafter attempt to collect those debts" and that defendant was a debt collector under the FDCPA). See also Long v. Pendrick Capital Partners II, L.L.C., 374 F. Supp. 3d 515, 536 (D. Md. 2019).

367 Covarrubias v. Zee Law Group, 2017 WL 6570281 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 22, 2017) (unpublished).

368 Rivera v. Bayview Loan Servicing, 2020 WL 1508328, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2020); Williams v. Partners for Payment Relief Inc., 2020 WL 973753 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 28, 2020) (refusing to dismiss complaint which averred generally that company owning mortgage loan collected debts as its principal purpose); Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019) (complaint appropriately alleged distressed loan purchaser was debt collector); Tepper v Amos Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3446886, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2017) ("[d]efendant's business focuses exclusively on acquiring and servicing non-performing and semi-performing loans"), aff'd, 898 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2018).

369 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6).

370 See § 4 8, infra.

371 See, e.g., Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 817 F.3d 131, 136 (4th Cir. 2016), aff'd, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017); Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. Feb. 22, 2019). See also § 4.7.1, supra.

372 Henson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017). See § 4.7.2.2, supra.

373 See § 4.6, supra.

374 See Wesley v. Calvary Inv., L.L.C., 2006 WL 1285020 (E.D. Pa. May 9, 2006) (data furnisher); Durkin v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 2002 WL 31426397 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 28, 2002) (check authorization/guarantee service); Sutton, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 23, 1986) (credit reporting agency). See also Greaves v. Ann Davis Assoc. Inc., 2015 WL 668227 (D.N.J. Feb. 17, 2015) (real estate broker).

375 See, e.g., Acosta v. James A. Gustino, P.A., 646 Fed. Appx. 723 (11th Cir. Mar. 22, 2016); Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56, 60 (2d Cir. 2004); Cicalo v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1514245, at *1 (D. Conn. Mar. 27, 2018) (dismissing consumer's complaint where consumer provided no evidence about the number and frequency of debt collection communications); Hingston v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2016 WL 4059158 (D. Or. July 28, 2016).

376 Ferrante v. Law Offices of Lewisohn & Lewisohn, 2016 WL 8711075 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2016). See also Crawley v. CACH, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6841803, at *1 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 16, 2019).

377 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1697 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

debt collection that is involved in a case is not an isolated instance.[378]

Regularly does not mean frequently or as a substantial part of a person's business.[379] For example, a person who collects on debts 145 times a year and has a system in place to handle collections is regularly collecting even though collection work is only a very small percentage of the person's business.[380]

The Second Circuit has announced these factors to determine regularity:

> (1) [T]he absolute number of debt collection communications issued, and/or collection-related litigation matters pursued, over the relevant period(s), (2) the frequency of such communications and/or litigation activity, including whether any patterns of such activity are discernable, (3) whether the entity has personnel specifically assigned to work on debt collection activity, (4) whether the entity has systems or contractors in place to facilitate such activity, and (5) whether the activity is undertaken in connection with ongoing client relationships with entities that have retained the lawyer or firm to assist in the collection of outstanding consumer debt obligations. Facts relating to the role debt collection work plays in the practice as a whole should also be considered to the extent they bear on the question of regularity of debt collection activity (debt collection constituting 1% of the overall work or revenues of a very large entity may, for instance, suggest regularity, whereas such work constituting 1% of an individual lawyer's practice might not). Whether the law practice seeks debt collection business by marketing itself as having debt collection expertise may also be an indicator of the regularity of collection as a part of the practice.[381]

Most cases considering the meaning of "regularly" deal with whether a law firm regularly collects debts, and these cases are analyzed at § 4.7.3.3, infra.

A person is not automatically a debt collector even when including a disclosure that it is a debt collector or sending a validation notice.[382] Nevertheless, such a disclosure is a factor in a court's determination.[383] Evidence of experience in the field of collecting debts,[384] and the person's marketing of debt collection services[385] can also be factors.

Different types of entities meet the definition of debt collector, and not just collection agencies. Debt collector includes attorneys regularly collecting consumer debts.[386] Foreclosure attorneys and repossession companies can be debt collectors, but FDCPA coverage can be limited if their principal purpose is enforcement of security interests, as discussed at § 4.7.5, infra. A mortgage servicer that obtains servicing rights after default and its loss mitigation servicer can be debt collectors.[387]

Parties obtaining location information for debt collectors can be considered debt collectors, since parties that "indirectly" collect debts can be debt collectors.[388] But other courts find that "skip tracers" are not debt collectors.[389]

---

378 See, e.g., Waterston v. Advance Bur. of Collections L.L.P., 2019 WL 438486 (M.D. Ga. Feb. 4, 2019) (single instance of debt collecting activity); Hampton v. Steen, 2014 WL 5496454 (D. Or. Oct. 28, 2014) (did not indicate that the collector collected any other debts); Calhoun v. Certegy Check Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 4146886 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 20, 2014) (did not indicate that the check casher engaged in collecting any other debts); Richardson v. Calmes, 2006 WL 8432831, at *6 (M.D. La. Aug. 11, 2006) (low volume of local police engaging in private debt collection activities for a friend).

379 See, e.g., Oppong v. First Union Mortg. Corp., 215 Fed. Appx. 114 (3d Cir. 2007) (Wells Fargo's collection of debt was regular, even though small percentage of its activities); Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004); Wells v. LF Noll, Inc., 2019 WL 5596409, at *8 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 30, 2019) (issue is not dollar volume, but number of instances of collection); Dina v. Cuda & Assoc., 950 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Conn. 2013) (debt buyer filed over 1000 collection lawsuits in state); Carter v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2009 WL 2742560 (E.D. Va. Aug. 25, 2009) (mortgage servicer that asserted that only 0.21% of its business was related loans obtained in default, but its volume of $2 billion of loans met the "regularly" requirement).

380 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

381 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

382 See Saint Vil v. Perimeter Mortg. Funding Corp., 630 Fed. Appx. 928 (11th Cir. 2015); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010); Jones v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 569771, at *4 (D. Kan. Feb. 5, 2020); Griffin v. Robichaux, 2019 WL 6879758, at *4 (E.D. La. Dec. 17, 2019) (collection attorney's admission to regularly collecting did not make her debt collector in absence of evidence that she regularly collected consumer debts); Keyes v. Perry Law, 2018 WL 7502041 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 20, 2018); Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2017).

383 See, e.g., Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010); Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2017); Balogun v. Winn Law Group, 2017 WL 6940558 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2017); Myers v. Americollect, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 3d 839 (E.D. Wis. 2016); Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016); Sanchez v. Jackson, 2016 WL 6833974 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2016); Hooks v. Forman Holt Eliades & Ravin L.L.C., 2015 WL 5333513 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2015); Gregory v. Home Retention Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 6676008 (D.N.J. Nov. 24, 2014); Loveless v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 4437576 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 9, 2014); Wyant v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3446633 (W.D. La. June 10, 2014), adopted in part, rejected in part on other grounds by 2014 WL 4146351 (W.D. La. Aug. 19, 2014); McFadden v. Fla. Foreclosure Attorneys P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 12623693 (M.D. Fla. July 7, 2014); Deutsche Bank Tr. Co. Americas v. Garst, 989 F. Supp. 2d 1194 (N.D. Ala. 2013); ToroToroussian v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5524831 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 4, 2013).

384 See Greaves v. Ann Davis Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 668227 (D.N.J. Feb. 17, 2015).

385 See Simpson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2013 WL 2642143 (N.D. Ill. June 12, 2013).

386 See § 4.7.3.3, infra.

387 See § 4.8.9, infra.

388 Romine v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998) (entity collecting telephone numbers for collectors to use); Silva v. Nat'l Telewire Corp., 2000 WL 1466149 (D.N.H. Jan. 3, 2000) (same).

389 See Demaestri v. Verifacts Inc., 2012 WL 1192758, at *7 (D. Colo. Mar. 16, 2012) (does not consider whether skip tracer indirectly collects debts); Baker v. Trans Union L.L.C., 2010 WL 2104622 (D. Ariz. May 25, 2010) (location service's conduct appeared to be nothing more than "mere information gathering"). See also Goldstein v. Chrysler

Courts also find insufficient evidence of regularly collecting debts where companies merely perform such services as printing and mailing letters for debt collectors.[390] An FDCPA provision excludes process servers from the definition of debt collector,[391] and at least one court appears to exclude them as well for not collecting debts.[392] Courts have found an entity that merely processes payments for a debt collector not to be debt collector,[393] nor a data processor for an employer when it processes a garnishment order sent to the employer.[394] A company that only files liens against real property, but does not otherwise contact the consumer, has been found not to be a debt collector.[395]

4.7.3.2 Requirement that Debts Are Owed to Another

The "regularly collects" prong of the definition of debt collector applies only to those collecting debts owed to another, and not to persons collecting their own debts. In Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc.,[396] the Supreme Court held that a person collecting debts after purchasing those debts is collecting its own debts and is not collecting debts owed or due another. As a result, the "regularly collects" prong does not apply to debt buyers.[397]

It may be necessary to delve beneath the surface of the transaction to determine if the debt is owed to another. Just because a consumer's payment on a debt is made payable to a party collecting on the debt does not mean that the collector owns the debt and is not collecting for another.[398] So, too, just because an entity is an originating creditor does not mean it cannot collect debts owed to another. For example, if two originating creditors have an agreement to regularly collect each other's debts, then each would be acting as a debt collector in collecting the other's debts.[399] Nevertheless, the FDCPA has an exemption where a creditor who originates a debt seeks to collect that debt after assigning that debt to another.[400]

Whether an entity owns a debt can become complicated when the debt involves a mortgage loan. The entity servicing a mortgage loan may be servicing its own debt, but more often is servicing a debt owed to another. To determine if the servicer is the owner, federal law allows the consumer to send the servicer a Request for Information to identify the loan's owner,[401] which may show that the servicer is not the debt owner, and instead collecting for another.[402] On the other hand, a party not acting as a servicer, but as a trustee for the securitization trust owning the loan may be acting for the trust, and thus collecting debts owed to itself.[403]

The entity in whose name a foreclosure is instituted is not necessarily the mortgage loan owner. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac require that promissory notes and mortgages they guarantee be transferred to a servicer just prior to foreclosure so that the servicer can conduct the foreclosure in its own name,[404] and this practice is common throughout the industry. Servicers receive these transfers of enforcement rights temporarily and solely to meet requirements of state foreclosure laws. By contract, the prior owner of the loan remains the true beneficiary of the obligation during the foreclosure. By virtue of these temporary transfers of enforcement rights, the servicers do not become the loan owners.[405]

Another area where ownership is complicated involves federal student loans issued before July 1, 2010. Effective July 1, 2010, all federal student loans have been issued under the Direct Loan program, where the United States owns the debt. Any party other than the United States collecting on the loan is collecting for another.

Fin. Co., 276 F. Supp. 2d 687, 690 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (service locating cars for auto lender not a debt collector).

390 Aquino v. Credit Control Serv., 4 F. Supp. 2d 927 (N.D. Cal. 1998); Powell v. Computer Credit, Inc., 975 F. Supp. 1034 (S.D. Ohio 1997), aff'd, 1998 WL 773989 (6th Cir. Oct. 15, 1998); Laubach v. Arrow Serv. Bur., Inc., 987 F. Supp. 625 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (merely merged labels, printed, and mailed collection agency's letters); Trull v. Lason Sys., Inc., 982 F. Supp. 600 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (same).

391 See § 4.8.4, infra.

392 See Larroza v. Resurgence Capital, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2118134 (N.D. Ill. May 8, 2018).

393 See Hughes v. United Debt Holding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3970143 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2018).

394 See McGown v. Silverman & Borenstein, P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 545903 (D. Del. Feb. 7, 2014), adopted as modified by 2014 WL 1623773 (D. Del. Apr. 23, 2014).

395 Jordan v Tucker Albin and Assoc., Inc., 2019 WL 4647339 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 24, 2019).

396 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

397 But see § 4.7.2.2, supra (discussing coverage under "principal purpose" prong of general definition).

398 See Kelly v. Montgomery Lynch & Assoc., Inc., 2008 WL 1775251 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 15, 2008).

399 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

400 See § 4.8.8, infra.

401 12 C.F.R. § 1024.36. See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 3.3.4 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

402 See Beard v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 638455 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2018). See also Bridge v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 681 F.3d 355 (6th Cir. 2012).

403 Johnson-Gellineau v. Steine & Assoc., 2019 WL 2647598, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2019), aff'd, 837 Fed. Appx. 8 (2d Cir. 2020) (trustee for pool of securitized mortgage debt is a creditor).

404 See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 4.3.1 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (special issues related to GSE servicers).

405 Beard v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 638455 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2018). See also Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. 2020) (allowing § 1692g claim against law firm that identified servicer instead of Fannie Mae as owner of the loan in foreclosure action); Gritters v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1784134 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 13, 2018) (law firm's disclosure of servicer as owner of loan was deceptive and misleading when Freddie Mac was true owner of loan); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4862230 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2017) (borrower stated § 1692e claim based on law firm's false allegation in foreclosure complaint that Fannie Mae was holder of note); Sciortino v. Barrett Daffin Frappie Levin & Brock, L.L.P., 9 F. Supp. 3d 1322 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (servicer Nationstar was collecting on behalf of "true creditor" Fannie Mae when it threatened to foreclose).

But before July 1, 2010, most federal student loans were issued under the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program. Loans were owned by banks, and when the loan became delinquent, ownership would be transferred to a guaranty agency, which might eventually turn over ownership of the student loan to the United States as the ultimate insurer. If the guaranty agency owns the student loan on which it is collecting, then it is not collecting on a debt owed to another, and the "regularly collects" prong does not apply.[406]

If the guaranty agency is acting as a servicer or collector on loans that are owned by the United States, then it is regularly collecting debts owed to another.[407] It will most certainly obtain the account after it is in default, so the exclusion for servicers obtaining an account before default will not apply.[408] But other exclusions from the definition of debt collector may still apply, such as that it is acting as a fiduciary.[409]

A default guarantee insurer may pay off a creditor on the consumer's default, and acquires the debt as part of the requirement for paying the claim. The insurer then suing the consumer is collecting on a debt owed to it, and not owed to another.[410]

4.7.3.3 Attorneys Regularly Collecting Debts

Congress, in 1986, eliminated the FDCPA's exemption for attorneys.[411] Moreover, the Supreme Court finds attorney conduct in collection litigation to be debt collection.[412] As a result, an attorney or law firm is a debt collector if the attorney or firm regularly collects consumer debts owed to another—through communications, settlements, or litigation.[413]

An attorney who regularly collects debts for one client is a debt collector, and this status remains even when it collects debts for others only irregularly. If an attorney in a firm meets the definition of a debt collector, then the individual and not just the firm can be a debt collector and liable under the Act.[414] If an attorney in a firm regularly collects debts, then the firm can also be a debt collector, because the firm regularly collects debts.[415]

Consumers need not rely on the "principal purpose" prong to prove the attorney is a debt collector. Since the attorney is collecting debts owed to another, the consumer need only show the attorney or firm regularly collects debts.[416] There is much litigation over how much attorney collection is necessary to meet the standard of "regularly." While some courts find collection not regular when it is below a certain percentage of a law firm's revenues,[417] the better view held by several circuits is to look at the whole picture:[418] number, frequency, pattern of collection communications, staff and systems assigned to collections work, and an ongoing relationship with a creditor.[419]

A law firm's marketing of collection services and information on its website are also relevant.[420] Check not only the firm's website, but the firm's profile[421] and listings of those with licenses, registrations, or practice areas as collection agencies or collection attorneys.[422] While not conclusive, the 406 See Cadiz v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2019 WL 4254484 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2019) (guaranty agency owns debt and principal purpose is not debt collection).

407 Games v. Cavazos, 737 F. Supp. 1368 (D. Del. 1990) (when loan turned back to Department of Education, was collecting debt owed to another).

408 See § 4.8.9, infra.

409 See § 4.8.7, infra.

410 See Arencibia v. Mortg. Guaranty Ins. Corp., 659 Fed. Appx. 564 (11th Cir. 2016), aff'g, 2015 WL 7076691 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 13, 2015); Vasquez v. Allstate Ins. Co., 937 F. Supp. 773 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (insurer bringing claim under its right of subrogation is collecting debt owed to it).

411 Pub. L. No. 99-361, 100 Stat. 768 (effective July 9, 1986). See also § 3.4.2.2, supra, § 4.8.6, infra.

412 See § 4.3.3, supra.

413 See Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989).

414 Mayall v. The Randall Firm, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4696283, at *5 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2019); Egli v. Bass, 1998 WL 560270 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 26, 1998).

415 Note, too, that partners in a firm can also be liable for the acts of their other partners, so that the firm is liable even if only one partner is a debt collector. See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, and Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. 2000).

416 Garrett v. Derbes, 110 F.3d 317, 318 (5th Cir. 1997).

417 Argentieri v. Fisher Landscapes, Inc., 15 F. Supp. 2d 55 (D. Mass. 1998), later op., 27 F. Supp. 2d 84 (D. Mass. 1998) (0.4% of time in debt collection matters insufficient); Scannell v. Gunnoe & Assoc., 1997 1764768 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 28, 1997) (0.5% of law firm's cases insufficient to show that firm regularly collected debts); Hartl v. Presbrey & Assoc., 1996 WL 529339 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 1996) (insufficient where less than 1% of firm's business involved debt collection).

418 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56, 62–63 (2d Cir. 2004); Garrett v. Derbes, 110 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1997). See also James v. Wadas, 724 F.3d 1312 (10th Cir. 2013) (adopting a test based on numerous factors, but finding not regular collection); Schroyer v. Frankel, 197 F.3d 1170 (6th Cir. 1999) (not regular where represented debtors in many of the collection cases, other cases involved business debts, the limited amount of collection cases, and the nature of clients); Rico v. Eveland, 2020 WL 7414016 (D. Utah. Dec. 17, 2020) (applying James factors and finding that firm did not regularly engage in debt collection); Cashman v. Ricigliano, 2004 WL 1920798 (D. Conn. Aug. 25, 2004) (written agreement with collection agency and set up special address and telephone line for collection efforts).

419 Dichiara v. Pelsinger, 2010 WL 3613798 (D. Conn. Aug. 30, 2010) (contract with collection agency to act as its attorney).

420 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56, 62–63 (2d Cir. 2004); Evans v. Bull City Fin. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 3468390 (N.D. Ga. June 26, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 3458559 (N.D. Ga. July 18, 2018) (court took judicial notice of agency's website); Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 1075088, at *5 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 22, 2017) ("this Court takes judicial notice of NCS's website which includes facts showing that NCS regularly attempts to collect debts owed to others."), aff'd on other grounds, Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018); Gulisano v. J.A. Cambece Law Office, 2016 WL 7536097 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2016); Haynes v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 2013 WL 2452241 (N.D. Ga. June 5, 2013); Kirk v. Gobel, 622 F. Supp. 2d 1039 (E.D. Wash. 2009) (attorney advertised himself as collection lawyer); Kaiser v. Braje & Nelson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 1285143 (N.D. Ind. May 5, 2006); Derenick v. Cohn, 2004 WL 5598428 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 10, 2004) (attorney held himself out as having twenty-five years of experience in creditors' rights). See also Blanton v. RoundPoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 825 Fed. Appx. 369 (7th Cir. 2020) ("collection matters" on website refer to collection of commercial debt).

421 Fuller v. Becker & Poliakoff, P.A., 192 F. Supp. 2d 1361 (M.D. Fla. 2002).

422 See, e.g., Gulisano v. J.A. Cambece Law Office, 2016 WL 7536097 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2016).

law firm's self-identification as a debt collector in its communications to consumers supports a finding the firm is a covered debt collector.[423]

A firm can be a debt collector even if only a small percentage of the firm's revenues come from debt collection.[424] An attorney may meet the "regularly collects" test if debt collection is a minor, but regular part of the attorney's practice,[425] or if the attorney collects debts more than a handful of times in a year.[426]

This is consistent with the legislative history around the 1985 FDCPA amendment repealing the attorney exclusion. Both sides in the floor debate conceded that the amendment would make the Act apply not only to those lawyers who have collection practices, but also to those "who collect on an occasional basis" and "the small law firm which collects debts incidentally to the general practice of law."[427] Congress voted down amendments that would have required a covered attorney to have a "substantial" debt collection practice.[428]

Courts have no problem finding regular debt collection activity when an attorney sends out notices to consumers or institutes collection lawsuits roughly 50 or 100 times a year, despite that being a small percentage of a firm's revenues.[429] Consistently doing collection work for a client can be enough to make one a collector.[430]

On the other hand, an isolated collection case does not make a lawyer a debt collector.[431] Courts have found that an attorney is not regularly collecting debts where the attorney handles only 10 or 25 collection matters each year, and where those cases are a very small percentage of the firm's work.[432]

4.7.3.4 Enforcement of Security Interests As Debt Collection

The Supreme Court in Obduskey acknowledged that even a nonjudicial foreclosure of a mortgage is the collection of a debt.[433] The Court explained that, at a minimum, someone 423 Timberlake v. Robertson, Anschutz & Schneid, P.L., 2020 WL 2039722, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2020).

424 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004); Garrett v. Derbes, 110 F.3d 317, 318 (5th Cir. 1997); Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566, 569 (3d Cir. 1989) ("any attorney who engages in collection activities more than a handful of times per year must comply with the FDCPA"); Stojanovski v. Strobl & Manoogian, 783 F. Supp. 319 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (law firm which collected debts only 4% of cases).

425 See James v. Wadas, 724 F.3d 1312 (10th Cir. 2013); Garrett v. Derbes, 110 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1997) (639 cases in nine months represented 0.5% of his practice); Gatter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2016 WL 1384787 (D. Nev. Apr. 6, 2016) (less than 5% of law firm's business); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990) (attorney who represented four collection agencies even though debt collection was merely incidental to his primary law practice).

426 See Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566, 569 (3d Cir. 1989).

427 131 Cong. Rec. H10534–H10536 (daily ed. Dec. 2, 1985) (remark of Reps. Annunzio and Hiler).

428 H. Rep. No. 99-405, at 11 (Nov. 25, 1985), reprinted in 1986 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1752, 1760–1761.

429 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004) 145 notices were sent during a year as part of an ongoing relationship with a creditor, despite the collection work constituting less than 0.5%); Rani v. Drobenare, 2020 WL 6370249, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 19, 2020) (complaint survives motion to dismiss with reference to attached debt collection letter and averment that letter is "materially consistent with dozens, if not hundreds of other debt collection letters" that firm sent to consumers who owed back rent), adopted, 2020 WL 5417555 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 9, 2020); Gatter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2016 WL 1384787 (D. Nev. Apr. 6, 2016) (filing of at least 200 debt collection suits over three years satisfies "regularly" requirement); Kaiser v. Braje & Nelson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 1285143 (N.D. Ind. May 5, 2006); Cashman v. Ricigliano, 2004 WL 1920798 (D. Conn. Aug. 25, 2004) (90 letters in five months pursuant to written agreement with collection agency, set up special address and telephone line for collection efforts, and sued some 53 consumers); Silva v. Mid Atl. Mgmt. Corp., 277 F. Supp. 2d 460 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (law firm consistently accepted some 10 debt collection matters every year even though was less than 1% of total activity). See also Hester v. Graham, Bright & Smith, P.C., 289 Fed. Appx. 35 (5th Cir. 2008) (over previous two years, attempted to collect debts on 450 occasions for four clients and filed nearly 200 collection suits); Garrett v. Derbes, 110 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1997) (attorney who collected against 639 different individuals in nine-month period satisfied requirement although only represented 0.5% of his practice); Derenick v. Cohn, 2004 WL 5598428 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 10, 2004) (attorney filed 277 collection actions).

430 Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006) (consistently represented one client, even though collection practice was t 3% of revenue, and where collection practice was even smaller percent of clientele); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990) (attorney who represented four collection agencies even though debt collection was merely incidental to his primary law practice).

431 James v. Wadas, 724 F.3d 1312 (10th Cir. 2013) (over legal career represented only one collection client, never sent out a collection demand letter, over the preceding ten years she filed a total of only six to eight debt collection cases out of a total of 1789 cases, and that in the preceding year she generated a total of $1700 from her collection practice); Moda v. Aronoff, 2017 WL 4286832 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 27, 2017) (sued businesses for unlawful detainer two or three times a year); Lynch v. Custom Welding & Repair, Inc., 142 F. Supp. 3d 814 (N.D. Iowa 2015) (only evidence of attorney handling collections was the case before the court); Plummer v. Gordon, 193 F. Supp. 2d 460 (D. Conn. 2002); Mertes v. Devitt, 734 F. Supp. 872, 874 (W.D. Wis. 1990) (less than two collection cases a year over ten years not regular).

432 Reyes v. Steeg Law, L.L.C., 760 Fed. Appx. 285 (5th Cir. Jan. 17, 2019) (over three years, sent 36 letters); Roller v. Herrera, 2019 WL 4605555 (D. Or. Sept. 23, 2019) (six matters over several years that at most constituted 0.5% of workload and revenues); Burke v. Lawrence & Lawrence, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 1440837 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 22, 2018) (seven to eight collection matters annually, which represented six to seven percent of firm's legal matters); Gauntner v. Doyle, 554 F. Supp. 2d 779, 783 (N.D. Ohio 2008) ("pursued 4–9 debt collection matters per year, constituting an average of 6.8% of his overall practice during that time period"); Agarwal v. Catanzarite, 2007 WL 9771100 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 12, 2007) (five cases in past three years involved debt collection); Corbett v. Wolfgang, 2006 WL 3231257 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 6, 2006) (filed 29 foreclosure cases during course of year, and that debt collection was less than 1% of his cases); Camara v. Fleury, 285 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D. Mass. 2003) (30 active cases comprising 4.57% of practice); Mladenovich v. Cannonito, 1998 WL 42281 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 1998) (20 cases); Von Schmidt v. Kratter, 9 F. Supp. 2d 100 (D. Conn. 1997) (29 matters over two years). See also White v. Simonson & Cohen P.C., 23 F. Supp. 2d 273 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) (35 identical letters on same day with no ongoing relationship with creditor and no ensuing lawsuits).

433 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1036, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019) ("if the FDCPA contained only the primary definition, a business engaged in nonjudicial foreclosure who conducts a foreclosure is indirectly attempting to collect a debt. A person who regularly facilitates foreclosures therefore is one who regularly collects debts: "even if nonjudicial foreclosure were not a direct attempt to collect a debt, because it aims to collect on a consumer's obligation by way of enforcing a security interest, it would be an indirect attempt to collect a debt" (emphasis in original).[434]

The Court rejected the analyses of the Ninth and Tenth circuits, which had held that nonjudicial foreclosures did not involve the collection of a debt.[435] Before Obduskey, most other circuits had found the conduct of a nonjudicial foreclosure to be debt collection,[436] and the Ninth Circuit had found judicial foreclosures to be collection of a debt.[437]

As discussed at § 4.7.5, infra, Obduskey requires special treatment for debt collectors whose principal purpose is nonjudicial foreclosures. But Obduskey indicates that the term debt collector applies to all others regularly engaged in nonjudicial foreclosures where the mortgage loan is owed to another.

Those enforcing judicial foreclosures are even more clearly collecting a debt because a judicial foreclosure involves determination not only of title to the realty, but also a judicial determination of the amount of the debt owed.[438] There is also no question that a person who regularly demands payment is regularly collecting on a debt, even if that demand is related to a judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure.[439]

Those involved in repossession of personal property are also engaged in debt collection, as explained by the Supreme Court: "if the Act contained only the primary definition, enforcement of a security interest would at least be an indirect collection of a debt. The same may well be true of repo activity, a form of security-interest enforcement, as the point of repossessing property that secures a debt is to collect some or all of the value of the defaulted debt."[440] Older lower court decisions finding the opposite are thus no longer good precedent.[441]

While a towing company thus can be a debt collector if it regularly repossesses cars where the car loan is owed to another, Obduskey comes into play if the towing company's principal purpose is repossessing cars, as examined at § 4.7.5, infra. In addition, if a towing company is collecting its own towing and storage fees for tows unrelated to repossessions, then it is not collecting debts owed to another, and its principal purpose is towing and not debt collection.[442] On the other hand, if a towing company regularly collects for parking fees owed to another before it will release the vehicle, then the company can be a debt collector.[443] proceedings would qualify as a debt collector for all purposes" (emphasis in original)).

---

434 Id. See also McCray v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 839 F.3d 354 (4th Cir. 2016).

435 Obduskey v. Wells Fargo, 879 F.3d 1216, 1221 (10th Cir. 2018) ("[e]ntities engaged in non-judicial foreclosure actions in Colorado are not debt collectors under the FDCPA"); Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 572 (9th Cir. 2017) ("Because the money collected from a trustee's sale is not money owed by a consumer, it isn't 'debt' as defined by the FDCPA."), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 504 (2017). See also Best v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 279 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69, 75 (Cal. Ct. App. 2021) (describing as "absurd" former position of federal courts within Ninth Circuit that he object of foreclosure is not to obtain payment); Benko v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp., 454 P.3d 1263, 1267 n.4 (Nev. 2019) (noting that, in Obduskey, the Supreme Court rejected the body of Ninth Circuit law which held that a business enforcing a security interest through nonjudicial was not collecting a debt).

436 See, e.g., Weaver v. Boriskin, 751 Fed. Appx. 96 (2d Cir. 2018) (judicial foreclosure not determining the deficiency); Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2018); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 179 (3d Cir. 2015); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453, 461 (6th Cir. 2013); Wallace v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012); Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012); Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011); Minnifield v. Johnson & Freedman, L.L.C., 448 Fed. Appx. 914 (11th Cir. 2011); Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 503 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2007); Kaltenbach v. Richards, 464 F.3d 524 (5th Cir. 2006); Wilson v. Draper & Goldberg, P.L.L.C., 443 F.3d 373 (4th Cir. 2006). See also Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010) (implicitly recognizing the FDCPA's full applicability to judicial foreclosures).

437 McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 893 F.3d 680 (9th Cir. 2018).

438 See § 4.7.5.2.2, infra. See also McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 893 F.3d 680 (9th Cir. 2018); Weaver v. Boriskin, 751 Fed. Appx. 96 (2d Cir. 2018); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin. L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453 (6th Cir. 2013). But see Barnes v. Routh Crabtree Olsen P.C., 963 F.3d 993 (2020), discussed at § 4.7.5.2.2, infra.

439 See, e.g., Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984 (9th Cir. 2017) (overdue assessment to homeowner's association was a debt and law firm attempting to collect it was a debt collector); Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012) (foreclosure firms was debt collector as it demanded payment of the balance of note secured by security deed and repeatedly stated that it was a debt collector); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011) (FDCPA applied to request for illegal mortgage collection fees); Smith Carbone v. Gross Polowy L.L.C., 2019 WL 1114899 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2019) (FDCPA violation where foreclosure attorney sent mortgagor letter offering loan modification as alternative to foreclosure); Johnson v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 5262078, at *10–11 (N.D. Ga. July 2, 2018) (thousands of demands for payment, regularly enforced deficiency claims, and sent plaintiff form notices that characterized firm as debt collector), adopted, 2018 WL 5262049 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 19, 2018); Crosby v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 2027735 (M.D. Ga. May 1, 2018) (rejecting foreclosure law firm's claim that it was only enforcing security interest where firm's letter to debtor could be viewed as effort to collect debt); Amesbury v. Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, P.C., 252 F. Supp. 3d 125 (D. R.I. May 10, 2017) (foreclosure law firm sending out demand letters can be debt collectors).

440 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019). See also Rawlinson v. Law Office of William M. Rudow, L.L.C., 460 Fed. Appx. 254 (4th Cir. 2012).

441 See, e.g., Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693, 700 (6th Cir. 2003); Brooks v. Leon's Quality Adjusters, Inc., 2016 WL 4539967 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2016); Morris v. Equi First Corp., 2011 WL 1337404 (M.D. Tenn. Apr. 7, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1884602 (M.D. Tenn. May 18, 2011).

442 See Washington v. Ritter, Lien Sales, Inc., 2019 WL 6790687, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 16, 2019); In re Petralia, 559 B.R. 275 (Bankr. D. Mass. Sept. 30, 2016).

443 Cf. Cohen v. Dave's Towing Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 136679 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 9, 2015).

4.7.3.5 Landlord-Tenant Collections and Evictions

Persons hired before rent is past due on a residential rental property to manage that property are excluded from the definition of debt collector, even when later collecting rent or pursuing evictions.[444] On the other hand, third parties hired to collect overdue rent are clearly debt collectors—regularly collecting debts owed to another.[445] The result is no different if someone is hired to both evict tenants and collect past due rent.[446] Sending notice that an eviction action is imminent is also debt collection, making the person regularly sending such notices for another a debt collector.[447]

A person should also be a debt collector if the person regularly brings eviction actions seeking both the tenant's removal from the property and recovery of back rent or other charges.[448] On the other hand, courts may find that a person is not collecting on a debt if the person is merely seeking the tenant's removal after a foreclosure or the tenant's bankruptcy, or, otherwise, with no attempt to collect back due rent or other monies due.[449]

Even if there is no specific attempt to collect monies due in a particular case, the person is still a debt collector if the person in other matters regularly seeks both eviction and back rent or other charges. In the case before the court, the issue may be whether the debt collector's actions are in connection with collection of a debt,[450] but a person is a debt collector if, in other matters, the person regularly seeks rent or other monies.[451]

4.7.3.6 Debt Collector Employees, Managers, Officers

An officer or employee of a debt collection agency that regularly collects debts meets the definition of "any person" that regularly collects debts owed to another.[452] The FDCPA exempts employees or officers of "creditors" and government entities from the definition of debt collector.[453] But employees and officers of a collection agency are not covered by these exclusions.

The "regularly collects" prong of the debt collector definition includes those who directly or indirectly engage in debt collection. An officer, manager, or other supervisor is a debt collector if that individual establishes or implements policies or procedures, drafts form communications, or supervises, trains, reviews or manages those directly engaged in debt collection.[454]

444 See § 4.8.9, infra.

445 See Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009).

446 See Sanchez v. Law Office of Lance E. Armo, 2021 WL 1214559 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2021), adopted, 2021 WL 2292779 (E.D. Cal. June 4, 2021); Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016); Riley v. Giguiere, 2008 WL 436943 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 14, 2008) (eviction attorney was debt collector).

447 Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004); Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111, 115 (2d Cir. 1998).

448 See, e.g., Hodges v. Sasil Corp., 915 A.2d 1 (N.J. 2007).

449 Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C. v. Dye, 2016 WL 4766484, at *3 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 12, 2016); Bonfiglio v. Citifinancial Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5612194 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2015); Hutsler v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2452977 (E.D. Mo. June 2, 2014) (eviction post-foreclosure); Conlin v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 2014 WL 1746155 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 30, 2014) (eviction post-foreclosure); Keys v. Pearson Affiliated, Inc., 2013 WL 12205581 (C.D. Cal. May 14, 2013) (unlawful detainer actions against tenants are not debt collection activities because they seek to recover property, not money); Kalnoki v. First Am. LoanStar Tr. Serv. L.L.C., 2012 WL 3962516, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 10, 2012); Bond v. U.S. Bank, 2010 WL 1265852 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 29, 2010) (personal liability for mortgage debt discharged in bankruptcy); Baer v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2009 WL 102698 (D. Mass. Jan. 14, 2009) (no request for money while seeking to end tenancy). See also Adams v. Schneider, 2020 WL 5411378, at *3 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 9, 2020) (granting summary judgment for attorney who filed underlying state court unlawful detainer action, because plaintiff "was living at the residence rent free and without a lease" and thus "there was no 'transaction' establishing a debt"). Cf. Martinez v. Dennis P. Block & Assoc., 2020 WL 8483771 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2020) (letter warning that eviction would affect consumer's credit and future ability to rent, and failing to clearly state that past due rent was deferred, went beyond seeking mere possession and plausibly constituted attempt to collect debt).

450 See § 4.3, supra.

451 See Kaltenbach v. Richards, 464 F.3d 524, 529 (5th Cir. 2006).

452 Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012); Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6778681 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016) (owner/president personally called debtors); Mayfield v. Asta Funding, Inc., 95 F. Supp. 3d 685 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); Gerstle v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 76 F. Supp. 3d 503 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); Collins v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 9805805 (E.D. Tenn. June 7, 2013); Weakley v. Redline Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivables Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009); Krapf v. Prof'l Collection Serv., Inc., 525 F. Supp. 2d 324 (E.D.N.Y. 2007); del Campo v. Kennedy, 491 F. Supp. 2d 891 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (whether collector's employee is also debt collector depends on whether employee's activities were sufficient to be considered "material participation"), aff'd on other grounds, 517 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2008); Belin v. Litton Loan Serv., L.P., 2006 WL 1992410 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2006) (liability of employees who engaged in allegedly unlawful misconduct); Reade-Alvarez v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 369 F. Supp. 2d 353 (E.D.N.Y. 2005); Clark v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2005 WL 1586862 (D. Or. June 30, 2005). But see Kreisler v. Latino Union, Inc., 2007 WL 1118408 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 12, 2007) (employees cannot be liable); McKinney v. Cadleway Props., Inc., 2006 WL 3490433 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 4, 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 548 F.3d 496 (7th Cir. 2008) (employee contacting consumer not liable).

453 See §§ 4.8.1, 4.8.3, infra.

454 Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000); Camacho v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 480 F. Supp. 3d 303 (D. Mass. 2020); Currier v. PDL Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017) (supervised payment receipts); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 198 F. Supp. 3d 794, 812 (E.D. Mich. 2016); Phillips v. Archstone Simi Valley L.L.C., 2016 WL 400100 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2016) (law firm's partner involved in guiding or overseeing associates in litigation); Bentkowsky v. Benchmark Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 502948 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2015) (drafted collection letter); Schmidt v. Synergentic Comme'ns, Inc., 2015 WL 248635 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 20, 2015) (control debt collection); Legg v. HK Craig & Assoc., 2014 WL 12603172 (S.D. Fla. July 9, 2014) (consumer need not pierce the corporate veil in order to hold a principal personally liable for his actions as a debt collector where he is actively involved in supervising the debt collection); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Grp., L.L.C., 2013 WL 6843597 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2013) (owner trained all collectors and created their scripts, and participated in collection activity); Del Campo v. Mealing, 2013 WL 4764975 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2013); Smyth v. Merchants Credit Corp., 2012 WL 588744 (W.D. Wash.

Clearly a supervisor or manager actually signing collection letters can be a debt collector.[455]

A separate issue is whether an owner, partner, or shareholder who does not meet the FDCPA definition of debt collector can be personally liable for the acts of a debt collection agency. This liability will turn on the form of the agency's organization (e.g., L.L.C., sole proprietorship, partnership), state law, and the nature of the individual's relationship to the agency, such as whether the corporate veil should be pierced.[456]

4.7.4 Creditor or Debt Buyer's Use of a False Name

> . . . the term ["debt collector"] includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts.[457]

A "creditor"[458] is a debt collector even if debt collection is not its principal purpose if it uses a name other than its own in collecting debts, indicating that a different person is the collector. Thus, anyone collecting its own debts is a debt collector if it uses a false name indicating a separate person is involved, whether the collector is an originating creditor or a debt buyer.[459]

The false name provision applies even when a name is not literally false, as long as an unsophisticated consumer would consider it false.[460] Courts also have found that use of a false name need not be explicit, but implicit in the creditor's actions. For example, where a creditor's employee in contacting the consumer denies working for the creditor, the implication is that a third party is doing the collection.[461]

A creditor is a debt collector when it uses a name "not its own." Wells Fargo was found to be a debt collector when it collected under the name "America's Servicing Company."[462] A creditor using the name of a fake law firm or a fake collection agency makes it a debt collector.[463] It is even enough that an unsophisticated consumer would view a communication

---

Feb. 22, 2012); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012) (complaint alleged that they "personally designed, implemented, directed, and supervised the collection practices and policies of Brumbaugh & Quandahl, including the design and text of the letters and the procedures for their use"); Versteeg v. Bennett, Deloney & Noyes, P.C., 775 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (D. Wyo. 2011); Yentin v. Michaels, Louis & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 4104675 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 15, 2011); Arlozynski v. Rubin & Debski, P.A., 710 F. Supp. 2d 1308 (M.D. Fla. 2010); del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (officers actively involved in day-to-day operations); Carvana v. MFG Fin., Inc., 2008 WL 2468539 (D. Utah June 17, 2008) (corporate form does not protect officers, directors, or shareholders from individual liability if personally involved); York Gee Au Chan v. N. Am. Collectors, Inc., 2006 WL 778642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2006) (set and approved policies, practices, and procedures and directed unlawful activities); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd. 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (law firm's president, with duties of supervision and overall responsibility); Alaska Tr., L.L.C. v. Ambridge, 372 P.3d 207 (Alaska 2016). See also Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp, 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012) (owner involved in every aspect of collection, including direct collection actions); Reynolds v. Credit Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 756469 (D. Neb. Feb. 25, 2016). But see Iler v. Law Offices of Fishman & Townley, P.C., 2013 WL 6331288 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 4, 2013) (no liability where in charge of policymaking and management); Staats v. Accounts Recovery Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 2400445 (S.D. Ind. June 25, 2012). But cf Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000) (loosely worded dicta could be seen as saying the contrary).

455 Kettel v. Phillips, 2015 WL 12781037 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2015); Wilson v. NACM-Oregon Serv. Co., 2013 WL 6780627 (D. Or. Dec. 19, 2013) (managing attorney was a debt collector when she signed a writ of garnishment when there was not judgment to support the writ); Battle v. Gladstone Law Grp., P.A., 951 F. Supp. 2d 1310 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (signed complaint in collection action); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd. 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (attorney who signed letters).

456 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1201–1202 (11th Cir. 2010) (applying Ohio partnership law to find partner liable for acts of the partnership); Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872, 876 (7th Cir. 2000) (liability of partners); Weiss v. Sherloq Revenue Solutions, Inc., 2021 WL 965810 (S.D. N.Y. Mar. 12, 2021) (finding no alter ego liability); Blair v. Green Square Co. L.L.C., 2020 WL 6827247 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 20, 2020) (denied default judgment against individual defendant who allegedly "was responsible for setting the policies and procedures related to the collection practices," because Seventh Circuit allows individual FDCPA liability only where corporate veil is pierced); Lanteri v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2020 WL 3200076 (S.D. Ind. June. 15, 2020) (general partner who was 1% owner of collection agency was jointly and severally liable under FDCPA pursuant to state's partnership law); Smith v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 1864929 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 17, 2018) (as general partners of debt buyer GC Services, investors' group partners could be held vicariously liable for partnership's violations of FDCPA); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 612251 (D. Neb. Feb. 2, 2016) (directors and shareholders who do not personally participate in collection have liability only if the corporate veil is pierced); Murdoch v. Rosenberg & Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1209144 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2013) (limited liability collection law firm's managing partner could not be held personally liable for the conduct of the firm by virtue of her position); Hooks v. Forman Holt Eliades & Ravin L.L.C., 2012 WL 3322637 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 13, 2012), rev'd on other grounds, 717 F.3d 282 (2d Cir. 2013) (complaint made no specific allegations to establish his status as a debt collector and derivative liability was unavailable under applicable state law). See also Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119, 1126 (8th Cir. 2020) (evidence of scope of agency insufficient to establish debt buyer's FDCPA liability for acts of its debt collector); Jenkins v. Puckett and Redford P.L.L.C., 2020 WL 4517933, at *9 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 3, 2020) (individual employees of debt collector can be held personally liable under FDCPA without piercing corporate veil).

457 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6). The "false names" sentence first appeared in House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee prints in April 1976. It was present in all the major Senate bills. See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

458 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(4). See § 4.5, infra.

459 Vincent v. Money Store, 736 F.3d 88 (2d Cir. 2013) (assignee a debt collector because it used a false name).

460 Catencamp v. Cendant Timeshare Resort Group-Consumer Fin., Inc., 471 F.3d 780 (7th Cir. 2006); Maguire v. Citicorp Retail Services, Inc., 147 F.3d 232 (2d Cir. 1998).

461 Kempf v. Famous Barr Co., 676 F. Supp. 937 (E.D. Mo. 1988).

462 See Kilpakis v. JPMorgan Chase Fin. Co., 229 F. Supp. 3d 133 (E.D.N.Y. 2017); Pimental v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 70016 (D.R.I. Jan. 6, 2016).

463 Catencamp v. Cendant Timeshare Resort Group-Consumer Fin., Inc., 471 F.3d 780 (7th Cir. 2006); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. LoanPointe, L.L.C., 2011 WL 4348304 (D. Utah Sept. 16, 2011) (payday lender used a false name), aff'd, 525 Fed. Appx. 696 (10th Cir. 2013); Daley v. Provena Hosps., 88 F. Supp. 2d 881 (N.D. Ill. 2000); Dorsey v. Morgan, 760 F.

as coming from an outside attorney where a letter from an in-house attorney just has the attorney's name and the word "attorney" in the communication.[464] Improper use of a third-party name is not limited to law firm and collection agency names. A creditor becomes a debt collector when the creditor's employee pretends to be a police officer.[465]

A debt owner's use of a name not registered with a state as an alternative business name may indicate a false name. However, a creditor may not be using a false name when it consistently uses a business name in dealing with all its customers (not just those in collection) rather than its incorporated name,[466] changes its business name,[467] or uses a name very close to its incorporated name.[468]

Reference to a division within a creditor, such as a creditor's recovery department, is not a false name if the name of the creditor is included.[469] But a communication from a department within the creditor can make the creditor a debt collector if the least sophisticated consumer would believe that the internal department is a third-party collector.[470] For example, a communication from Citicorp only identified as from Debtor Assistance can be viewed as using a false name.[471]

Even though a parent company owned the creditor, an unsophisticated consumer could believe that use of the parent's name in combination with the words "check recovery service" implied a third party and not a division of the creditor.[472] But a creditor may not be viewed as using a false name when the collection is under the name of a separate corporate entity in whom the creditor has an ownership stake, but where that entity acts independently, using only its own name, the activities of two entities did not form single economic enterprise, and the creditor did not control the other entity's debt collection activities.[473] The separate entity, though, can be the debt collector.

Other times, a creditor collects under the name of a real third-party collection agency or a law firm, but it is really the creditor doing the collection, and the collection agency or law firm is only nominally involved.[474] Thus a false name may be involved where a creditor hires a "flat rate collector" (paid a flat amount per letter sent irrespective of the outcome) whose only role is to mail out letters for the creditor under the flat rate collector's letterhead, and that collector engages in no bona fide efforts to collect the creditor's debts.[475]

Similarly, a creditor falsely uses a law firm's name when it pays the law firm a flat rate to help draft a template for collection letters and to mail the letters on the law firm letterhead,

Supp. 509 (D. Md. 1991) (dunning letters appear to be from outside counsel), Nitzkin v. Craig, 922 N.W.2d 676 (Mich. Ct. App. 2018).

464 Laws v. Cheslock, 1999 WL 160236 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 9, 1999); Britton v. Weiss, 1989 WL 148663 (N.D.N.Y. Dec. 8, 1989).

465 See, e.g., Aurandt v. Brown, 2017 WL 1215451 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2017).

466 Gutierrez v. AT&T Broadband, L.L.C., 382 F.3d 725 (7th Cir. 2004) (South Chicago Cable, Inc. did business as "AT&T Broadband" in the origination and collection of accounts); Wolfe v. Bank One Corp., 433 F. Supp 2d 845 (N.D. Ohio 2005) (Bank One making calls in the name of United Mileage Plus); Dickenson v. Townside TV & Appliance, Inc., 770 F. Supp. 1122 (S.D. W. Va. 1990). See also Scalabrini v. PMAB, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1049167, at *4–5 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2020).

467 Porter v. Wachovia Dealer Serv., Inc., 63 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 979 (D. Or. 2007) (consumer's originating creditor, WFS Financial, which in course of parties' dealings notified consumer that it changed its name to Wachovia Dealer Serv., remained an exempt creditor).

468 Williams v. HSBC Bank, 2014 WL 12616751, at *2 (W.D. Mo. June 30, 2014) ("It is difficult for this Court to fathom how Plaintiffs could credibly contend that a creditor with the name HSBC Bank USA, N.A. would try to deceive the Plaintiffs by use of the name 'CIBM HSBC BANK USA'"); Allgood v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 6234691 (D. Nev. Dec. 2, 2013) ("USAA" appeared in both names); Schaffhauser v. Citibank, 2007 WL 2752141 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2007) (using name combinations that all included word "Citibank" would not confuse least sophisticated consumer); Friedman v. Rubinstein, 1997 WL 757875 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 1, 1997) (initial dealings in name "Caesars Palace" and subsequent suit in name "Desert Palace, Inc., d.b.a. Caesars Palace"); Young v. Lehigh Corp., 1989 WL 117960 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 28, 1989) (Lehigh Country Club's use of name of its parent corporation, Lehigh Corp., would not indicate that third party was attempting to collect debts).

469 Hunnell-Villines v. Hartford Life & Accident Ins. Co., 2020 WL 374688, at *2–3 (D. Kan. Jan. 23, 2020) (letter in name of insurance company department, Receivable Mgmt. Services); Bongiovanni v. World Fin. Network Nat'l Bank Recovery, 2013 WL 142080 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 11, 2013); Mahan v. Lab. Corp. of Am., 2011 WL 836674 (S.D. Ala. Mar. 9, 2011); Sheldon v. Unum Life Ins. Co., 2007 WL 3124535 (D. Neb. Oct. 23, 2007). See also Saenz v. Buckeye Check Cashing of Ill., 2016 WL 5080747 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2016) (on creditor's letterhead, letter stated debt transferred to "our office for our collection"); Medica Self-Insured v. Tenet Healthcare Corp., 2007 WL 1385589 (D. Minn. May 4, 2007) (informed consumer that it was creditor's collection department); Gorham-Dimaggio v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2005 WL 2098068 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 30, 2005) (referred to internal loan counseling department).

470 Maguire v. Citicorp Retail Services, Inc., 147 F.3d 232, 237 (2d Cir. 1998); Smith v. Univ. Cmty. Hosp., Inc., 2019 WL 4194802, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 4, 2019) (reasonable jury could find that Patient Financial Services presented itself as third-party debt collector rather than division of the creditor); Fleming v. Greystar Mgmt. Serv., L.P., 2016 WL 4491846 (E.D. Wash. Aug. 25, 2016); Torres v. Kroger Co., 2012 WL 1836100 (D. Colo. May 21, 2012); Sheldon v. Unum Life Ins. Co., 2006 WL 1288774 (D. Neb. May 9, 2006). See also Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

471 Maguire v. Citicorp Retail Services, Inc., 147 F.3d 232, 237 (2d Cir. 1998). See also Sheldon v. Unum Life Ins. Co., 2006 WL 1288774 (D. Neb. May 9, 2006).

472 Torres v. Kroger Co., 2012 WL 1836100 (D. Colo. May 21, 2012).

473 See Allen v. Nelnet, Inc., 2007 WL 2786432 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2007). See also Harrison v. NBD Inc., 968 F. Supp. 837 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

474 See Magness v. Walled Lake Credit Bur., L.L.C., 2014 WL 12610219 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 18, 2014) (Bank of America used third-party collector's name, but creditor did all collecting).

475 See Vincent v. Money Store, 736 F.3d 88 (2d Cir. 2013); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623, 634 639 (7th Cir. 2002); Burns v. Ross Stuart & Dawson, Inc., 2016 WL 7013007 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 1, 2016); Canterbury v. Columbia Gas, 2001 WL 1681132 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2001); Domico v. Etan Indus., 1998 WL 765058 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 26, 1998); Denkers v. United Compucred Collections, Inc., 1996 WL 724784 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 27, 1996); Fratto v. Citibank, 1996 WL 554549 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 1996). See also Haber v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 2921659 (E.D. Pa. June 27, 2014) (question of fact whether servicer only nominally involved).

with the creditor retaining the account files.[476] But a creditor is not a collector where the law firm whose name is used is more intimately involved in the collection.[477]

4.7.5 Special Treatment of Those Enforcing Security Interests As Their Principal Purpose

4.7.5.1 Generally

> For the purpose of section 1692f(6) of this title, such term ["debt collector"] also includes any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests.[478]

The above-quoted sentence contained in the definition of "debt collector" is commonly called the "limited-purpose" definition, juxtaposed to what is called the "primary definition" or "general definition" —regularly collecting debts owed or due another[479] or debt collection as a "principal purpose."[480] The limited-purpose definition subjects those whose principal purpose is conducting repossessions or nonjudicial foreclosure to the proscriptions in FDCPA § 1692f(6)[481] relating to specific unfair or unconscionable means of enforcing security interests. Since the substantive prohibitions of FDCPA § 1692f(6) also apply to debt collectors generally, they apply to any person fitting the primary definition of debt collector, whether or not they fit the special-purpose definition of debt collector.[482]

In Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., the Supreme Court examined how the limited-purpose definition relates to the general definition in the context of a nonjudicial foreclosure.[483] The Court held that enforcement of a security interest is debt collection, so that one regularly enforcing such interests for another meets the general definition of a debt collector.

Nevertheless, where a person's principal purpose is conducting nonjudicial foreclosures, the limited-purpose definition controls, so that only the proscriptions in FDCPA § 1692f(6) apply to the collector when it engages in no more than the steps for a nonjudicial foreclosure as required by state law. According to the Court, "the word 'also,' [in the limited purpose definition] strongly suggested that one who did no more than enforce security interests did not fall within the scope of the general definition."[484]

In other words, a person whose principal purpose is enforcement of security interests and who does no more than take steps set out by state law to enforce a security interest must comply with FDPCA § 1692f(6), but it is not a debt collector for purposes of the FDCPA's other provisions applicable to debt collectors generally. This ruling overturned or limited holdings by a number of circuits that found the limited-purpose definition only expanded coverage rather than limited the general definition.[485] Instead, the Supreme Court sided with other circuits primarily from Western states, where nonjudicial foreclosure of deeds of trust is the predominant method of foreclosure,[486] and where in many of these states the lender waives any claim to a deficiency judgment by choosing to proceed with a nonjudicial foreclosure.[487]

Obduskey has implications not just for law firms whose principal business is nonjudicial foreclosures, but for any entity whose principal business is the nonjudicial enforcement of security interests. Courts are likely to see Obduskey as precedent applicable to repossession companies or others whose principal business involves self-help repossession of motor vehicles or other personal property. These companies must comply with FDCPA § 1692f(6),[488] but may not have to comply with other FDCPA provisions. As described at § 4.7.5.2.2, infra, Obduskey does not limit the exposure of those whose principal purpose is conducting judicial foreclosures, who regularly conduct judicial foreclosures, or who regularly collect unsecured debts for others in addition to conducting foreclosures. All FDCPA provisions would apply to them.

Section 4.7.5.2, infra, examines whether a person's principal purpose is enforcement of security interests; failure of 476 Vincent v. Money Store, 736 F.3d 88 (2d Cir. 2013); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623, 634–639 (7th Cir. 2002). See also Taylor v. Perrin, Landry, deLaunay & Durand, 103 F.3d 1232 (5th Cir. 1997) (law firm did not even send letters out on law firm stationary); Young v. Citicorp Retail Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 280508 (D. Conn. May 19, 1997).

477 Pearson v. Pea River Elec. Co-op., Inc., 2014 WL 6895181 (M.D. Ala. Dec. 5, 2014); Cangelosi v. New Orleans Hurricane Shutter & Window, L.L.C., 2013 WL 395138 (E.D. La. Jan. 31, 2013); Villarreal v. Snow, 1996 WL 473386 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 19, 1996).

478 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6). Proscriptions concerning the enforcement of security interests first appeared in S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(7) (1977); 123 Cong. Rec. S3485 (daily ed. Mar. 4, 1977).

479 See § 4.7.3, supra.

480 See § 4.7.2, supra.

481 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(6), discussed at § 8.6, infra.

482 See Dowers v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2018 WL 4566665 (D. Nev. Sept. 24, 2018) (mortgage servicer that regularly collects debts subject to § 1692f(6)'s substantive prohibitions when conducting nonjudicial foreclosure even though enforcement of security interests is not its principal purpose).

483 ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

484 Id.

485 See Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2018); McCray v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 839 F.3d 354, 360 (4th Cir. 2016); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 179 (3d Cir. 2015); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 704 F.3d 453, 461 (6th Cir. 2013); Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012); Kaltenbach v. Richards, 464 F.3d 524 (5th Cir. 2006).

486 See Obduskey v. Wells Fargo, 879 F.3d 1216 (10th Cir. 2018), aff'd, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019); Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568 (9th Cir. 2016).

487 See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures Appx. E (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (summary of state foreclosure laws). In other states where nonjudicial procedures are the predominant means of foreclosure, deficiency claims are allowed after a nonjudicial sale.

488 See Rivera v. Dealer Funding, L.L.C., 178 F. Supp. 3d 272 (E.D. Pa. 2016); Dallman v. Felt & Lukes, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6628996 (W.D. Wis. Dec. 17, 2013); Buzzell v. Citizens Auto. Fin., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 1014 (D. Minn. 2011); Seibel v. Soc'y Lease, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 713 (M.D. Fla. 1997); Clark v. Auto Recovery Bur., Inc., 889 F. Supp. 543 (D. Conn. 1994); Ghartey v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 1992 WL 373479 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 23, 1992).

a collector to offer that proof will likely indicate that the person is subject to all FDCPA provisions, and not just section 1692f(6). Section 4.7.5.3, infra, examines an important qualifier in Obduskey, that a collector escapes the FDCPA's full coverage only when it is following the required steps for a nonjudicial foreclosure or repossession, and it does nothing more. Regardless of its principal purpose, the collector falls outside the limited-purpose definition once its activities go beyond the steps necessary to conduct the nonjudicial foreclosure or repossession. The additional conduct may be subject to the full scope of the FDCPA.

4.7.5.2 Security Interest Enforcement As Principal Purpose

4.7.5.2.1 Introduction

Few entities meet the standard of having enforcement of security interests as a principal purpose necessary to be covered only under the limited-purpose definition. If a person engages in various forms of debt collection, and not just enforcement on secured debts, the person's primary purpose may not be enforcement of security interests. It is irrelevant that a person's principal purpose in dealing with a specific consumer is enforcing a security interest; the principal purpose of a person's overall activities must be the enforcement of security interests.

If the collector's goal is recovery of the amount due, then its principal purpose is not enforcing security interests. Even if a person only deals with secured debts, that may not be enough if the purpose is collection of money on the underlying debts, and not solely transferring title of the residence or possession of personal property.[489] The person must show that the principal purpose is the transferring of title, possession, or control of collateral from the consumer—the act of conducting nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings or seizures pursuant to a self-help repossession.

Obduskey states its holding as applying where a "business is engaged in no more than the kind of security-interest enforcement at issue here—nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings."[490] In Obduskey "the only basis alleged for concluding that McCarthy is a debt collector under the Act is its role in nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings."[491] "Proceedings" is narrower than the overall collection on a defaulted mortgage, referring to only the steps necessary to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure.

Obduskey also states "We here confront only steps required by state law, we need not consider what other conduct (related to, but not required for, enforcement of a security interest) might transform a security-interest enforcer into a debt collector subject to the main coverage of the Act."[492] That is, to fit within the limited-purpose definition, the collector's principal purpose must be to enforce security interests, and, as discussed at § 4.7.5.3, infra, the collector's activity must have been limited to an action required to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure under state law.

The limited-purpose "debt collector" definition found in FDCPA § 1692a(6) has no counterpart under many state debt collection laws. Because mortgages represent an obligation to pay a debt, those who carry out foreclosures may be subject to a wide range of unfair debt collection claims under state debt collection statutes.[493]

4.7.5.2.2 Conduct of judicial foreclosures

While the Obduskey Court left for another day the question of whether those who enforce mortgages through judicial procedures are subject to all FDCPA provisions,[494] courts after Obduskey consistently find that they are subject to all FDCPA provisions.[495] This means that a multi-state foreclosure law

489 See, e.g., Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (law firm sent demand letter that included claim for attorney fees); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019) (distinguishing Obduskey because collection letter not part of process to enforce security interest); Weiner v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 424 F. Supp. 3d 163, 167 (D. Mass. 2019) (Rushmore is "undoubtedly" a debt collector under § 1692a(6)'s primary definition because the servicer did not only participate in the foreclosure but also routinely serviced the loan). See also Cordeiro v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3404742 (D.R.I. June 19, 2020) (limited-purpose definition did not apply when foreclosure law firm demanded use and occupancy charges in post-foreclosure eviction).

490 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1031, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

491 Id.

492 Id., 139 S. Ct. at 1040.

493 Torliatt v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4495480, at *2 (N.D. Cal. June 22, 2020); Best v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 64 Cal. App. 5th 568, 279 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69 (Cal. Ct. App. 2021) (California Rosenthal Act applies to parties conducting nonjudicial foreclosures without restrictions found by Obduskey); Davidson v. Seterus, Inc., 21 Cal. App. 5th 283, 290, 230 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 455 (Cal. Ct. App. 2018) (limitations from FDCPA's "debt collector" definition do not apply to Rosenthal Act's coverage of mortgage servicers).

494 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1039, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

495 Williams v. Partners for Payment Relief Inc., 2020 WL 973753, at *6 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 28, 2020) (court must follow Sixth Circuit precedent, Obduskey does not limit FDCPA application to Ohio judicial foreclosure); Bronstein v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 703652, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 11, 2020) (rejects application of Obduskey to Pennsylvania's judicial foreclosure); Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (Obduskey not applicable to judicial foreclosure, even where plaintiff waives deficiency claim); Woodard v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2020 WL 61038, at *8 (D. Or. Jan. 6, 2020) (Ninth Circuit precedent holding FDCPA broadly applicable to judicial foreclosures not affected by Obduskey); Lloyd v. Pluese, Becker, Saltzman, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6113859, at *2 (D.N.J. Nov. 18, 2019) ("Indeed, the few courts to have considered Obduskey . . . since it was decided have read the decision narrowly, and have specifically distinguished judicial foreclosures from nonjudicial foreclosures."); Berg v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5592720, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 30, 2019); Gold v. Shapiro, Dicaro & Barak, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4752093, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2019) (Obduskey did not abrogate Second Circuit precedent holding that full scope of FDCPA applies to New York judicial foreclosures); Berg v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5592720, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 30, firm may not have a principal purpose of enforcing security interests where it conducts nonjudicial foreclosures in some states, and judicial foreclosures in others.

Applying section 1692f(6), but not other FDCPA provisions to those who conduct judicial foreclosures, would make no sense considering that section 1692f(6) applies only to "taking or threatening to take any nonjudicial action to effect dispossession or disablement of property." Congress' intent surely is not that certain debt collectors would only be subject to a provision not applicable to them.

In Obduskey, the Supreme Court referred to the availability of deficiency judgments as a "potentially relevant" distinction between judicial and non-judicial foreclosures.[496] Unlike nonjudicial foreclosures, in the typical judicial foreclosure, the court enters a judgment of foreclosure that includes a monetary sum representing the unpaid principal balance. This judicial determination plays a key role in determining any personal deficiency liability to which the debtor will be exposed.[497] That one creditor remedy is a sale of the property to recover the judgment debt[498] does not change the fact that the lawsuit is seeking to collect on a debt, not just to enforce a security interest.

Nevertheless, some judicial foreclosures do not involve a potential deficiency. Examples include a judicial tax sale, a foreclosure after bankruptcy that has discharged the personal obligation on a debt, where the creditor has waived any deficiency, and where state law prohibits a deficiency. Courts, though, find that a person does not have security interest enforcement as a principal purpose where it conducts judicial foreclosures, including even those that cannot lead to a deficiency.[499] Moreover, to determine whether its principal purpose is only enforcement of security interests, the question is not whether an individual judicial foreclosure seeks a deficiency, but whether the collector consistently seeks foreclosures without seeking a deficiency.

The Ninth Circuit's decision in Barnes v. Routh Crabtree Olsen P.C.[500] shows why it is important to focus on the appropriate FDCPA definition when analyzing coverage of foreclosures. In rejecting FDCPA claims arising from a judicial foreclosure, the Barnes court omitted any analysis of the defendant mortgage servicer and law firm's principal purpose and their other activities. Instead, the court focused on the concept of "debt collection," a term not defined by the FDCPA.[501] According to the Barnes court, a foreclosure that did not seek to recover a deficiency claim was not "debt collection" because it did not involve collection of money directly from the borrower.[502] It is true that earlier decisions from the Ninth Circuit took this position.[503] Underlying those decisions, adopted by the Barnes court, was the misconception that a foreclosure does not involve collection of a debt, because the money comes from the sale of the property and not directly from the debtor. The Supreme Court, in Obduskey, considered this argument and rejected it.[504] In focusing on the "debt collection" term, the Barnes court ignored this aspect of the Supreme Court's analysis. Courts in the Ninth Circuit following Barnes may find that a person whose principal purpose is conducting judicial foreclosures exclusively in Oregon and not engaged in other collection work can be subject only to the limited-purpose debt collector definition.[505]

2019) (Obduskey did not affect FDCPA liability of law firm that conducts judicial foreclosures); Flowers v. Baltax 2017, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3501584, at *4 (D. Md. Aug. 1, 2019) (Obduskey limited to nonjudicial foreclosures); Werner v. Selene Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1316465, at *4 n.9 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2019) (Obduskey did not affect FDCPA liability of law firm that conducts judicial foreclosures). See also Ward v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 2103124, at *8 (W.D. Wash. May 14, 2019).

496 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1039, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019). See also Obduskey v. Wells Fargo, 879 F.3d 1216, 1221 (10th Cir. 2018) (referring to the right to collect a deficiency claim as a personal liability of the mortgagor as the "obvious and critical difference between judicial and nonjudicial foreclosures"); Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 581 n.2 (9th Cir. 2016) (availability of deficiency judgments is "the principal difference between a judicial and nonjudicial foreclosure").

497 See, e.g., Ward v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 2103124, at *8 (W.D. Wash. May 14, 2019); Brunner v. Clearspring Loan Services, Inc., 2018 WL 7268146 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 2, 2018) (mortgage deficiency claim is a debt for purposes of the FDCPA).

498 National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 10.4 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing formula for calculation of deficiency claims under various state laws).

499 Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (although waived deficiency, law firm sent a demand letter that included a claim for attorney's fees); Flowers v. Baltax 2017, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3501584 (D. Md. Aug. 1, 2019) (judicial tax sales). See generally Lavi M. Ben Dor, Finality and Foreclosure: Determining A Homeowner's Ability to Appeal in Mortgage Foreclosure Cases, 168 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1745, 1765 (2020) (majority rule applied to judicial foreclosures by federal and state courts is that judgment finding liability, setting amount owed, and ordering foreclosure sale is final and appealable, because it fixes liability even though further executions measures may be needed to collect).

500 963 F.3d 993 (9th Cir. 2020).

501 Id. at 1001 ("A judicial foreclosure proceeding is not a form of debt collection when the proceeding does not include a request for a deficiency judgment or some other effort to recover the remaining debt.").

502 Id. at 998.

503 See Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 572 (9th Cir. 2017), cert denied, 138 S. Ct. 504 (2017) ("Because the money collected from a trustee's sale is not money owed by a consumer, it isn't 'debt' as defined by the FDCPA.").

504 The Obduskey Court found unambiguously that "foreclosure is a means of collecting a debt." Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1036, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019). Rejecting the contention that collection of a covered debt must come "from the debtor," the Obduskey Court countered, "even if nonjudicial foreclosure were not a direct attempt to collect a debt, because it aims to collect on a consumer's obligation by way of enforcing a security interest, it would be an indirect attempt to collect a debt" (emphasis in original). Id. at 1036–1037. See also Best v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 279 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69, 75 (Cal. Ct. App. 2021) (Obduskey "effectively overruled" the lower court rulings holding that foreclosure is not "debt collection"); Benko v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp., 454 P3d 1263, 1267 n.4 (Nev. 2019) (noting that Supreme Court in Obduskey rejected body of Ninth Circuit law that held enforcing security interest through foreclosure was not debt collection).

505 See Smith v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2021 WL 1788395 (W.D. Wash. May 5, 2021) (applying Barnes to limit FDCPA's application to Washington judicial foreclosure, noting that plaintiff presented no facts showing defendants sought deficiency and no evidence regarding

4.7.5.2.3 Mortgage servicers, foreclosure trustees, foreclosure law firms

Most mortgage servicers do not have foreclosures as a principal purpose. Servicers spend most of their time managing loans that are not in default, collecting timely payments, managing escrow accounts, and providing accounting services to borrowers and investors.[506] Servicers regularly file and collect on proofs of claims in bankruptcy cases where many borrowers are not in default on the mortgage loan. Some specialized servicers focus on foreclosures, and then an issue will be whether their purpose is primarily the conduct of nonjudicial foreclosures or broader activities, including loan modifications, collection of payments, and the conduct of judicial foreclosures. Servicers can be debt collectors, even though they act through attorneys or other companies in collecting debts. Principles of vicarious liability can make both a servicer that is a debt collector and its attorneys liable under the FDCPA.[507]

Courts have routinely found that the FDCPA applies to mortgage servicers' activities related to collection of payments and foreclosures.[508] Because servicers engage in such a wide range of activities, the Supreme Court's Obduskey ruling should not change the basic analysis that has found mortgage servicers subject to broad coverage under the FDCPA.

One significant exception to the FDCPA's general coverage of mortgage servicers comes into play when the loan was not in default when the servicer took over its servicing.[509] The FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) exception to the "debt collector" definition is discussed extensively at § 4.8.9, infra. The existence of the FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) exception is itself an indication that Congress intended full FDCPA coverage of mortgage servicers when the exception does not apply. Congressional drafters specifically expressed their intent for the FDCPA to apply to mortgage servicers that obtained their defendants' broader debt collection activities under primary debt collector definition). See also Kunin v. Lang Law, Ltd., 2021 WL 83549 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 11, 2021) (Barnes applied to bar FDCPA claim involving judicial replevin action to seize boat where no monetary claim raised); Rivin v. Patrick K. Willis Co., 2020 WL 8365251, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 4, 2020) (Barnes does not preclude § 1692f(6) claim arising from nonjudicial vehicle repossession involving breach of peace).

---

506 The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act ("RESPA") defines mortgage "servicing" as "receiving any scheduled periodic payments from a borrower pursuant to the terms of any federally related mortgage loan, including amounts for escrow accounts . . . and making payment to the owner of the loan or other third parties of principal and interest and such other payments with respect to the amounts received from the borrower as may be required pursuant to the terms of the mortgage servicing loan document or servicing contract." 12 C.F.R. § 1024.2. See CW Capital Asset Mgmt., L.L.C. v. Chicago Props., L.L.C., 610 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 2010); In re Alcide, 450 B.R. 526 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2011); National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 4.2.1 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (general discussion of mortgage servicer's role in foreclosures).

507 Roche v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1452346 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 25, 2020) (vicarious liability can make servicer liable under FDCPA for communications by servicer's law firm to debtor); In re Bernadin, 610 B.R. 787 (Bankr. E.D. Pa 2019); Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019). See also § 11.4.4, infra.

508 Wallace v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012); Birster v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 481 Fed. Appx. 579 (11th Cir. 2012) (servicer communicated with homeowner about payments as well as conducted foreclosure); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 2010); Goldsmith v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2021 WL 816453, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 3, 2021) (Ocwen routinely identified itself in communications as debt collector and performed debt collection activities); Rhodeman v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5955368, at *15 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2019), reconsideration denied, 2020 WL 1698709 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 3, 2020) (refusing to dismiss § 1692e claims against servicer for demanding unauthorized inspection and loan modification fees); Roche v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1452346 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 25, 2020) (servicer's communications through its attorney with represented borrower violated § 1692c); Flournoy v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1285504, at *2 (D. Md. Mar. 17, 2020) (allowing § 1692e claim against servicer for seeking attorney fees not legitimately incurred); Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019) (servicer, as principal, liable under FDCPA for actions of its agent, a law firm); Childress v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 3767464 (E.D. Ky. Aug. 9, 2019) (allowing § 1692c(a)(2) claim against servicer for communicating with represented borrower); Weiner v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 424 F. Supp. 3d 163, 167 (D. Mass. 2019) (Rushmore is "undoubtedly" a debt collector under § 1692a(6)'s primary definition because the servicer did not only participate in the foreclosure but also routinely serviced the loan); Fisher v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 5865605, at *4 (D. Minn. Oct. 21, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 5865449 (D. Minn. Nov. 8, 2019) (servicer routinely threatened acceleration action it did not intend to take); Werner v. Selene Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1316465 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2019) (claim stated under § 1692e based on servicer's letter demanding payment contrary to terms of modification agreement); Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (entering summary judgment for borrower against mortgage servicer on § 1692c(a)(2) claims involving contact with represented borrower and denying servicer's summary judgment on § 1692d and § 1692e claims); Tabb v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1012004 (D. Del. Mar. 4, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss; servicer identified itself as "debt collector" in multiple communications to borrower), aff'd in part, vac'd in part, remanded in part, 798 Fed. Appx. 726 (3rd Cir. 2020); Lucas v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 404033, at *6 (D. Mass. Jan. 31, 2019) (servicer's activities in connection with loss mitigation can be debt collection under FDCPA); Odsather v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6696688 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 20, 2018) (§ 1692e(8) violation where servicer failed to communicate borrower's dispute of deficiency debt to credit reporting companies); Bauer v. Roundpoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2018 WL 5388206, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 29, 2018) (allowing claim against servicer for threatening judicial foreclosure on time-barred mortgage debt); Heejoon Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 685 (D. Haw. 2017); McCleary v. DLJ Mortg. Capital, Inc., 2017 WL 4542054, at *15 (S.D. Ala. Oct. 11, 2017) (servicer covered when acquired servicing of loan in default); Moore v. Seterus, Inc., 2016 WL 7374651 (S.D. Ala. Dec. 16, 2016) (servicer is covered debt collector where it forecloses regularly but foreclosures not its principal business activity); Mello v. Walled Lake Credit Bur., L.L.C., 2013 WL 12077491 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 17, 2013) (servicer identified itself as debt collector in communications with borrower); Marchisio v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 12897471 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2012) (servicer registered as "debt collector" with state and engaged in debt collection activities regularly); Warren v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 6393111 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 21, 2015); Pike v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 3824390 (N.D. Ohio June 19, 2015); Justice v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2015 WL 235738 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 16, 2015). See generally § 7.4.11, infra, summarizing claims for deceptive practices involving mortgage servicing. See Appx. E.1.2.2.3.1, infra.

509 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(iii).

servicing rights after default: "Finally, the committee does not intend the definition to cover the activities of . . . mortgage service companies and others who service outstanding debts for others, so long as the debts were not in default when taken for servicing. . . ."[510]

Under another but less frequently applicable exception, servicers may also be exempted from FDCPA coverage when a servicer owns the loan that it services, often referred to as an "in portfolio" loan. In such a case, the servicer may argue that it is the "creditor,"[511] and not a debt collector. More often, though, the mortgage servicer is collecting on loans originated and owned by an unrelated entity. In case of uncertainty, advocates should confirm the identity of a loan's owner before bringing an FDCPA claim against a mortgage servicer. The Request for Information procedures available under the RESPA rules authorize the borrower to address an inquiry about ownership of the loan to a mortgage servicer.[512]

In certain nonjudicial foreclosures states, the security instrument designates a third-party trustee to conduct a public sale of the property in the event the borrower defaults, acting fairly toward both the lender and borrower. When the loan is headed to foreclosure, the lender typically "substitutes" a new entity to act as trustee—a company that deals exclusively with the conduct of foreclosure sales, a foreclosure law firm, or, in Colorado, a government official. The substitute trustee records foreclosure notices as required by state law and conducts the sale. The trustee communicates information about the sale to the borrower, and, depending upon local law, may perform a range of other functions that involve communications with the homeowner about the debt. Much litigation about the application of the limited-purpose definition relates to these substitute foreclosure trustees,[513] and the issue will be whether the activities in question involve necessary steps for a nonjudicial foreclosure.[514]

Prior to Obduskey, courts of appeals often found that law firms conducting foreclosures were debt collectors subject to the FDCPA.[515] Lower courts routinely made similar findings.[516]

510 S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 3–4 (Aug. 2, 1977) (emphasis added), available at Appx. A.3, infra.

511 The term "creditor" is defined in 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(4).

512 12 C.F.R. § 1024.36. See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 3.3.4 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

513 See, e.g., Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 573 n.5 (9th Cir. 2017) ("a trustee of a deed of trust might become a 'debt collector' under the general definition if he did something in addition to the actions required to enforce a security interest" (emphasis in original)); Jones v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 3017612, at *6 (D. Ariz. July 10, 2019) (following Obduskey, foreclosure trustee not debt collector under primary definition); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019) (primary definition applies to trustee because collection letter not part of the process to enforce the security interest); Fitzgerald v. Bosco Credit, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3844333 (N.D. Cal. July 15, 2016) (trustee carrying out trustee duties not debt collector), subsequent decision, 2017 WL 3602482 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2017); Trotter v. Bayview Loan Serv., 2015 WL 8966926 (D. Idaho Dec. 15, 2015); Wagner v. Nat'l Default Servicing Corp., 2015 WL 3626506 (D. Nev. June 10, 2015); Long v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 1268279 (D. Utah Mar. 19, 2015); Natividad v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 2299601 (N.D. Cal. May 24, 2013) (notice of default was communication required by law to enforce security interest); Von Brincken v. GMAC Mortg., 2013 WL 322909 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 25, 2013); Reynolds v. Homecomings Fin. Network, Inc. 2013 WL 315221 (D. Nev. Jan. 25, 2013), aff'd, 599 Fed. Appx. 802 (9th Cir. 2015); Zinni v. Jackson White, P.C., 2012 WL 869008 (D. Ariz. Mar. 14, 2012); Duran v. Aurora Loan Serv., 2009 WL 230985 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2009); Fong v. Prof'l Foreclosure Corp., 2005 WL 3134059 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 22, 2005). See also Burnett v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 706 F.3d 1231, 1236 (10th Cir. 2013) (trustee under deed of trust is covered as one in a "business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests," referencing 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)); Ruffner v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp. of Washington, 2021 WL 1414205, at *4 (D. Or. Apr. 12, 2021) (possible § 1692f(6) claim against trustee for conducting nonjudicial foreclosure without authority to enforce note); White v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 4431416 (W.D. Tenn. Sept. 14, 2018) (foreclosure trustee violates § 1692f(6) by conducting sale while borrower's application for loss mitigation was pending); Memmott v. OneWest Bank, 2011 WL 1560985 (D. Or. Feb. 9, 2011), adopted as modified by 2011 WL 1559298 (D. Or. Apr. 25, 2011) (notice of default an action taken in actual pursuit of foreclosure).

514 See § 4.7.5.3, infra.

515 In re Holyfield, 740 Fed. Appx. 695, 697–698 (11th Cir. 2018) (law firm was debt collector based on complaint's averment that firm appeared frequently on docket in foreclosure cases in local courts); Carlin v. Davidson Fink L.L.P., 852 F.3d 207 (2d Cir. 2017) (foreclosure firm's § 1692g letter gave vague and misleading information about amounts owed and dates due); McCray v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 839 F.3d 354 (4th Cir. 2016) (foreclosure attorneys subject to FDCPA in providing cure statement and sending § 1692e(11) notice; rejecting § 1692a(6)(F)(i) fiduciary exception); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015) (foreclosure firm's communication in form of complaint for judicial foreclosure could be basis for FDCPA claim); Mellentine v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 515 Fed. Appx. 419 (6th Cir. 2013) (law firm's status as debt collector was sufficiently alleged where firm (1) "held itself out as a debt collector," (2) worked on behalf of company to whom plaintiffs owed debt, (3) specialized in foreclosures, and (4) had specific information regarding their mortgage debt); Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012) (foreclosure firm was debt collector as it demanded payment of balance of note secured by security deed and repeatedly stated that it was debt collector); Kaltenbach v. Richards, 464 F.3d 524 (5th Cir. 2006) (attorney foreclosing on manufactured home subject to FDCPA in failing to provide notice of debt verification rights). See also McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 893 F.3d 680 (9th Cir. 2018) (foreclosure law firm conducting judicial foreclosure under Arizona law subject to FDCPA for seeking fees to which not entitled); Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984 (9th Cir. 2017) (overdue assessment to homeowner's association was debt and law firm attempting to collect it was debt collector). See generally Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) (law firm did not dispute FDCPA applied to its § 1692g debt verification rights notice sent in connection with foreclosure lawsuit).

516 Smith Carbone v. Gross Polowy L.L.C., 2019 WL 1114899 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2019) (FDCPA violation where foreclosure attorney sent mortgagor letter offering loan modification as alternative to foreclosure and suggesting foreclosure had commenced when it had not); Mansoorian v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 6413484, at *2–3 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2018) (allowing claims that foreclosure firm's letters violated § 1692e and § 1692f by including sums for unauthorized fees); Johnson v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 5262078, at *10–11 (N.D. Ga. July 2, 2018) (pro se plaintiff's allegations that foreclosure firm mailed thousands of demands for payment, regularly enforced deficiency claims, and sent plaintiff form notices that characterized firm as debt collector satisfied "debt collector" pleading requirement), adopted, 2018 WL

Unless the law firm has enforcement of security interests as its principal purpose and the actions in question were required to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure, Obduskey does not affect the law firm's debt collector status.[517] Law firms and attorneys can be debt collectors in connection with pleadings and other documents filed with judicial foreclosure proceedings.[518]

4.7.5.2.4 Evidence of purposes beyond security enforcement

One source to show that a law firm or other entity's purpose is broader than enforcement of a security interest is the person's website that may flaunt a broad range of activities.[519] Information on a law firm's broad range of activities (including judicial foreclosures) also can be found on court docket entries, Westlaw or Lexis.[520] A servicer's annual reports and other regulatory filings may give a more accurate picture of the scope of the company's business than its assertions in litigation.

Publicly available information may show that relatively few cases in which a law firm or servicer initiates a foreclosure end with a foreclosure sale. In a large portion of cases, the firm or servicer likely plays a role in effectuating cures, settlements, and other alternatives to a foreclosure sale, all of which constitute regular debt collection activity. A very small portion of the entity's time may be spent carrying out the mechanical tasks required by state law to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure sale.

Discovery can reveal the portion of the company's overall work devoted to foreclosures, and, of that portion, the breakdown of time spent conducting a nonjudicial foreclosure proceeding compared to other collection activities related to mortgage debt. Seek details of a company's role in collecting overdue mortgage payments and in communications with borrowers about payment of their loans. A law firm's retainer agreements also may provide useful information.

4.7.5.3 Obduskey Ruling Limited to Steps Required to Enforce Security Interest

4.7.5.3.1 Introduction

In its short decision, Obduskey explicitly states no fewer than four times that its holding is that the FDCPA does not generally apply where collectors "are engaged in no more than security-interest enforcement."[521] The Court based its ruling on the case before it on the assumption that the foreclosure law firm's challenged conduct in the case was "required under state law."[522] "The only basis alleged for concluding that [the 5262049 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 19, 2018); Scott v. Albertelli Law Partners, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3730892 (S.D. Fla. June 27, 2018) (attorneys' work in the context of foreclosure litigation is debt collection for FDCPA purposes, allowing claims to proceed for failing to cease collection after § 1692g letter), adopted, 2018 WL 5098837 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 27, 2018); Crosby v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 2027735 (M.D. Ga. May 1, 2018) (rejecting foreclosure law firm's claim that it was only enforcing security interest where firm's letter to debtor could be viewed as effort to collect debt); Strader v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 741425 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 7, 2018) (FDCPA applies to foreclosure attorneys, rejecting defense of common law litigation privilege); Amesbury v. Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, P.C., 252 F. Supp. 3d 125 (D. R.I. May 10, 2017) (foreclosure law firm sending out demand letters can be debt collectors); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4862230 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2017) (allowing claims against law firm for falsely certifying foreclosing plaintiff's authority to foreclose); Hoffman v. Phelan Hallinan, L.L.P., 2016 WL 4089163 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 2, 2016) (FDCPA covers attorneys engaged in debt collection litigation, and foreclosure qualifies as debt collection); Hall v. MLG, P.A., 981 F. Supp. 2d 1267 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Graveling v. BankUnited, 970 F. Supp. 2d 12431 (N.D. Ala. 2013); Everett v. Shaheen, Jacobs & Ross, P.C., 2011 WL 4837510 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 27, 2011) (foreclosing attorney who sent a demand for payment was within FDCPA), adopted, 2011 WL 4837317 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 12, 2011); Malowney v. Zacur, Graham & Costis, P.A., 2011 WL 1655572 (M.D. Fla. May 2, 2011) (foreclosure attorneys' fee demands subjected them to FDCPA claims beyond those under § 1692f(6)); Pettway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005) (foreclosure firm acted as debt collector when it solicited borrowers to pay off underlying mortgages). See also State ex rel. Coffman v. Robert J. Hopp & Assoc., 422 P.3d 617 (Colo. App. 2018) (foreclosure firm violated Colorado Fair Debt Collection Practices Act by assessing unauthorized foreclosure costs to borrowers' accounts).

517 Williams v. Partners for Payment Relief Inc., 2020 WL 973753 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 28, 2020) (allowing FDCPA claim against law firm that filed foreclosure complaint for a plaintiff that did not have authority to foreclose); Gary v. Hladik Onorato & Federman, L.L.P., 2020 WL 871330 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 21, 2020) (allowing § 1692e claim against foreclosure law firm that filed complaint for recovery of interest amounts not authorized under state licensing law); Berg v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5592720, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 30, 2019) (Obduskey did not affect existing law subjecting law firms that conduct judicial foreclosures to full FDCPA liability); Smith v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2019 WL 2994695 (W.D. Wash. July 9, 2019) (foreclosure law firm violated FDCPA in filing time-barred judicial foreclosure complaint); Tevere v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 2019 WL 2341389 (N.D. Ill. June 3, 2019) (summary judgment against foreclosure firm under §§ 1692e, 1692f for repeat filing of same claim contrary to state law).

518 Speights-Carnegie v. Blackstone Condo. Ass'n, 2018 WL 1519158 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018) (improper claims for attorney fees, repair costs, and late charges asserted in state court condominium foreclosure pleadings were false representations in violation of § 1692e(2)); Machles v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 2017 WL 5172516 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2017) (attorneys' false statements in pleadings, including in affirmative defenses, going to authority to foreclose and service of statutory notice were material and had potential to confuse borrower about status of loan). See also Randall v. Paul, 897 N.W.2d 842 (Minn. Ct. App. 2017) (debt collector attorney can comply with both state statute on enforcing mechanic's liens and FDCPA).

519 See, e.g., Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694, at *3 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (firm's website states firm specializes in third-party collections); Hunter v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 2010 WL 2507038 (E.D. Tenn. June 16, 2010) (considering firm's website description of its work and self-identification as debt collector in its communications with borrower).

520 In re Holyfield, 740 Fed Appx. 695, 697–698 (11th Cir. 2018) (firm appeared frequently on the docket in foreclosure cases). See also Brown v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2763854, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 27, 2021) (summary judgment in favor of defendant law firm improper where disputed facts raised as to nature of firm's activities, including involvement in judicial and nonjudicial foreclosures).

521 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., 139 S. Ct. 1029 at 1033, 1037, 1040, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

522 Id. at 1039. Based on the parties' arguments, the Obduskey Court incorrectly assumed that the defendant law firm's initial communication with the borrower (an attempt to comply with FDCPA § 1692g) law firm] is a debt collector under the Act is its role in nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings."[523]

The Court went on to limit its holding:

> This is not to suggest that pursuing nonjudicial foreclosure is a license to engage in abusive debt collection practices like repetitive nighttime phone calls; enforcing a security interest does not grant an actor blanket immunity from the Act. But given that we here confront only steps required by state law, we need not consider what other conduct (related to, but not required for, enforcement of a security interest) might transform a security-interest enforcer into a debt collector subject to the main coverage of the Act.[524]

Consequently, a collector whose principal purpose is enforcement of a security interest and who does no more than follow "only steps required by state law" for such enforcement escapes liability for FDCPA provisions other than those in section 1692f(6). A collector may be subject to the complete Act when it engages in other conduct that state law does not require as necessary steps to enforce a security interest.[525]

This limitation is significant because under most states' mortgage foreclosure laws, only a few discrete actions are required to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure. Typically, a state statute requires that a foreclosing party first record and serve some type of notice of default.[526] The foreclosing party must then serve, advertise, and sometimes post notice of the foreclosure auction.[527] Other requirements focus on the conduct of the sale itself, the bidding process, and conveyance of title to a buyer. All other acts and communications in connection with collection of the mortgage debt fall outside the limitation prescribed by the Supreme Court.

The record in Obduskey is quite unusual, where the Court assumed that the foreclosure law firm in the case took no actions in connection with collection of the mortgage debt other than those required by state law to enforce the security interest. In a typical foreclosure, the foreclosure firm communicates frequently with mortgagors in default, both in writing and verbally. Law firms respond to mortgagors' inquiries, communicate about loss mitigation, request payments, and provide information about the extent of the debt.

Post Obduskey, where the consumer alleges that the challenged conduct is not required by state law,[528] courts consistently find persons whose principal purpose is security interest enforcement are still subject to the FDCPA's full scope.[529] For was a notice required under state foreclosure law. The § 1692g debt collector initial contact letter is mandated by the FDCPA and is not a necessary step in any state's foreclosure law. Post-Obduskey, courts made aware of this distinction have allowed debtors to proceed with claims asserting violations of § 1692g by parties that proceeded with a nonjudicial foreclosure contrary to the FDCPA's debt validation protections. Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606, 633 (D. Md. 2020) (trustee had obligation to respond to verification request before proceeding to serve notices of foreclosure sale under state law); Sciortino Bankruptcy Estate v. Shapiro Pendergast & Hasty, L.L.P., 2019 WL 7496253 at *5 (N.D. Ga Nov. 27, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 7493533 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 17, 2019); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019). See also Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694, at *3 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (allowing § 1692g overshadowing claim in context of judicial foreclosure).

523 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1038, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

524 Id. at 1039, 1040.

525 See Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568 (9th Cir. 2017); Gagnon v. Hal P. Gazaway & Assoc., 2019 WL 4539926, at *2 (D. Alaska Sept. 19, 2019 (Obduskey "makes clear that the requirement of state law was central to its holding that the letter at issue there did not subject the law firm to the full range of the FDCPA"); Eastman v. NPL Capital, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1596142, at *3 (D. Colo. Apr. 15, 2019) (post-Obduskey decision granting leave to amend complaint to specify that debt collector's actions were outside requirements to foreclose under Colorado law, court noting, "I am doubtful that repeated phone calls and communications with a homeowner's parents are required to pursue a nonjudicial foreclosure under Colorado state law"); Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019) (distinguishing Obduskey where challenged conduct involved servicer's efforts to collect deficiency six months after foreclosure).

526 See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures Appx. E (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (describing steps necessary to foreclose under law of each state).

527 See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 5.5 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing various types of notices required under state foreclosure laws). See Heagerty v. AMIP Mgmt., L.L.C., 2021 WL 2587720 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 20, 2021) (mag.; applying Obduskey to limit FDCPA coverage, two notices of sale sent by law firm were required by state nonjudicial foreclosure statutes).

528 See Bates v. Green Farms Condo. Ass'n, 958 F.3d 470, 482–483 (6th Cir. 2020) (complaint did not specifically aver that defendants' actions fell outside scope of required foreclosure procedures).

529 Brown v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2763854, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 27, 2021) (denying summary judgment to law firm where it conceded that letters it sent to plaintiff were not required by Missouri law as part of state's foreclosure procedure); Walker v. Hill, 2021 WL 1062238, at *12 (E.D. Va. Mar. 19, 2021) (law firm engaged in variety of servicing activities with respect to debtor's loan before initiating Virginia nonjudicial foreclosure, precluding Obduskey limits); Hullett v. Plunkett Cooney P.C., 2020 WL 2176880, at *4 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 16, 2020) (law firm's validation letter containing demands for payment not a requirement to foreclose under state law); Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 89694, at *5 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2020) (law firm's demand for payment sent prior to initiation of foreclosure was not a "necessary antecedent step" to foreclose under Iowa law); Woodard v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2020 WL 61038, at *8 (D. Or. Jan. 6, 2020) (allegation that foreclosure firm violated FDCPA by not responding to validation letter and sending letter of intent to proceed with foreclosure sale did not describe acts required under Oregon law to foreclose); Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606, 629–639 (D. Md. 2020) (threatening foreclosure before permitted by state law); Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (allowing claims under §§ 1692e(11) and 1692(g) against attorney representing condo association for not identifying himself as debt collector and not specifying amount owed); Sciortino Bankruptcy Estate v. Shapiro Pendergast & Hasty, L.L.P., 2019 WL 7496253, at *5 (N.D. Ga Nov. 27, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 7493533 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 17, 2019) (law firm's initial communication validation notice under § 1692g not a requirement of state foreclosure law); Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019) (actions to collect a deficiency six months after foreclosure not necessary to enforce security interest); Gagnon v. Hal P. Gazaway and Assoc., L.L.C., 2019 WL 4539926 (D. Alaska Sept. 19, 2019) (law firm subject to broad FDCPA coverage where violative notice at issue was not required step in Alaska nonjudicial foreclosure process); Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128, at *2 (D. Md. July 17, 2019) (borrower's claims involve "a variety of conduct example, this includes a foreclosure trustee sending a notice required by state law, but the notice also threatened a foreclosure sale before a date when the sale could take place under state law.[530] Another example involves a mortgage servicer's attempt to collect an inflated amount, threatening to foreclose without intending to do so, and contacting the borrower's parents in order to further debt collection.[531]

The full scope of the FDCPA should apply when content is added to a statutory notice or modifies the substance of a required text.[532] Omission of required information from a statutory notice can create similar problems. Under many state laws, a defective notice may render a foreclosure sale voidable, or even void.[533] beyond standard procedures in a nonjudicial foreclosure, including contradicting her right to dispute the debt, collecting or threatening to collect an inflated mortgage reinstatement amount, threatening to foreclose on her property before it was permitted by law, and misrepresenting its compliance with the terms of the deed of trust."); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C. 2019 WL 2066924, at *4 (D. Neb. May 2, 2019) (distinguishing Obduskey, finding that foreclosure law firm violates § 1692g by sending defective notice of validation rights, as letter "was not required by Nebraska nonjudicial foreclosure law and went beyond providing FDCPA disclosures by misstating who could assume the debt valid if not disputed within thirty days"); Eastman v. NPL Capital, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1596142 (D. Colo. Apr. 15, 2019) (seeking inflated amount and threatening to foreclosure with intent to do so). But see Garland v. Orlans P.C., 2020 WL 2542036 (E.D. Mich. May 19, 2020), aff'd on other grounds, 999 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2021) (ignoring Obduskey's limitation to acts required to foreclose); Harris v. NewRez, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3254800 (W.D. Tenn. July 19, 2019) (treating facts alleged as identical to Obduskey, dismissing FDCPA claim alleging law firm proceeded to initiate nonjudicial foreclosure without complying with § 1692g); Nguyen v Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 2019 WL 6887206 (D. Or. Nov. 21, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 6879732 (D. Or. Dec. 17, 2019) (dismissing § 1692e claim against undefined mix of defendants carrying out nonjudicial foreclosure, no discussion of whether acts in question were required to foreclose under state law).

530 Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606, 629–630 (D. Md. 2020); Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128 (D. Md. July 17, 2019).

531 Eastman v. NPL Capital, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1596142 (D. Colo. Apr. 15, 2019).

532 Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340, at *1 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) ("[plaintiffs] allege that the information in the foreclosure notice went beyond he requirements of the Michigan Foreclosure Statute, in violation of the FDCPA and the RCPA [the Michigan Collection Practices Act]"); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798, 810 811 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) ("[plaintiffs'] claims concern information not required under the Michigan statute"; "plaintiffs have stated a plausible theory that the defendant abused Michigan's foreclosure-by-advertisement statute by including extra information as a means to publicly disseminate private facts about the plaintiffs' indebtedness to shame them into paying"); Salewske v. Trott & Trott P.C., 2017 WL 2888998, at *7 (E.D. Mich. July 7, 2017) (debt collectors could not add whatever content they wished, no matter how abusive, false, or misleading, to a notice authorized by a state statute and claim a "complete defense to FDCPA liability"). But see Brian v. Gislason & Hunter L.L.P., 2021 WL 101132, *2 (D. Minn. Jan. 12, 2021) (rejecting two claims of § 1692e violations where notices sent to third parties were required by state foreclosure statute).

533 See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 5.5.2.6 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

4.7.5.3.2 Conduct only related to required steps to enforce a security interest

Prior to Obduskey, certain courts limited the FDCPA's applicability to section 1692f(6) even where a person whose principal purpose of nonjudicial foreclosures engaged in any conduct related to or in some way furthering a foreclosure, and not just required by state law.[534] This view is no longer viable after Obduskey.[535]

The Obduskey Court was concerned with the FDCPA's application where it would interfere with nonjudicial foreclosure sales in cases where the only thing the debt collector did was attempt to comply in good faith with the steps required to foreclose under state law.[536] Sweeping into the limited-purpose exception all debt collection activities that are merely "related to" a mortgage debt does not implicate this concern over federal interference with core state foreclosure procedures.[537] Where conduct is not required by state law, debt collectors can avoid FDCPA liability and still comply with state law by, for example, keeping false and misleading content out of their notices.[538]

Moreover, the "related to" standard is overly vague. The steps required to conduct a foreclosure sale under state law are set out in statutes and are well-defined by decades of case law. On the other hand, "related to" a mortgage debt or foreclosure is vague and overly expansive.

Obduskey can be read as explicitly rejecting the "related standard." The Court pointed out that an attorney who made 534 See, e.g., McNamara v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2018 WL 6137599, at *4 (C.D. Cal. May 22, 2018) ("actions taken to facilitate a nonjudicial foreclosure sale do not constitute 'debt collection' within the meaning of the FDCPA"); Bushlow v. MTC Fin., 2018 WL 1745803, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2018) (defendant "just engaging in the normal work of a trustee"), aff'd, 771 Fed. Appx. 375 (9th Cir. 2019); Manos v. MTC Fin., 2017 WL 8236356, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2017) (all allegations concerning trustee and servicer "concern actions taken to facilitate foreclosure, not collect a debt"; all communications were related to default and foreclosure); Arias v. Select Portfolio Serv., 2017 WL 6447890, at *6 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2017) (all servicer's communications were limited to foreclosure process); Bybee v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 4322392 (D. Mont. Sept. 28, 2017) (RESPA notices were communications related to enforcement of security interest); Martinez v. Trinity Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4071386, at *4–5 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 2017) (none of the consumer's allegations about trustee's conduct, including demand for inflated fees, "were unrelated to the foreclosure").

535 See § 4.7.5.3.1, supra.

536 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1037 1038, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390_ (2019). See also Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 576 (9th Cir. 2017) (expressing concern over FDCPA conflicts with core state foreclosure laws).

537 See Eastman v. NLP Capital, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1596142, at *2 (D. Colo. Apr. 15, 2019) (the Obduskey Court's concern over potential conflicts with state law "becomes less relevant where the security-interest holder is not attempting to pursue a nonjudicial foreclosure but only threatening foreclosure without taking any steps toward such in order to collect a debt").

538 See, e.g., Ellison v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 347 F. Supp. 3d 370, 380–381 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (rejecting law firm's conflict arguments, finding state law foreclosure requirements can be met without violating FDCPA).

repeated nighttime calls to a borrower while pursuing a nonjudicial foreclosure would be subject to the full range of FDCPA liability.[539] These nighttime calls are "related to" enforcement of a security interest, but the Court acknowledged that the FDCPA's full scope would apply.

This view that the limited-purpose exception applies only to "required" conduct is consistent with the case law prior to Obduskey. Courts that treated the principal purpose definition as overriding the general definition limited that holding to conduct required by state law.[540] Even courts that treated foreclosures as always subject to broad FDCPA coverage often pointed to conduct beyond the requirements to foreclose as an alternative basis to reject a defendant's claim to exclusion from the general definition.[541]

4.7.5.4 Pleading Tips to Avoid the Obduskey Limited-Purpose Loophole

Careful pleading can avoid much of Obduskey's potential impact. Obduskey arose from a motion to dismiss a complaint, and the decision was grounded on assumed facts that are unlikely ever to coalesce in the circumstances giving rise to an FDCPA claim. The Court assumed as true the fact that the law firm in question had conduct of nonjudicial foreclosures as its principal purpose. Then the Court assumed that the firm's notices and other communications with the debtor were all required steps in the conduct of a nonjudicial foreclosure under Colorado law.[542] 540 Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568, 573 n.5 (9th Cir. 2017) ("a trustee of a deed of trust might become a 'debt collector' under the general definition if he did something in addition to the actions required to enforce a security interest" (emphasis in original), aff'd, 139 S. Ct. 1029 (2019); Crosby v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 2027735 (M.D. Ga. May 1, 2018) (rejecting claim of law firm threatening nonjudicial foreclosure that it was only enforcing security interest where firm's letter to debtor could be viewed as effort to collect debt); Williams v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 9450471 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 11, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 9455375 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 14, 2016) (rejecting servicer claim that it engaged solely in in rem foreclosure activities when it had sent borrower letter unconditionally demanding payment); Williams v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 8711209 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 22, 2016) (incorrectly suggesting New York foreclosure not debt collection, but refusing to dismiss FDCPA claim asserting servicer sent borrower demand for payment before initiating a foreclosure); Bailin v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2015 WL 4711113 (D. Nev. Aug. 7, 2015) (denying dismissal of § 1692(d)(5) claims; claims were not premised upon mortgage servicer's foreclosure but, rather, upon repeated telephone calls in connection with collection of the note); Lohse v. Nationstar Mortg., 2014 WL 5358966 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2014) (homeowners' claim was based upon the servicer's failure to report to credit reporting agencies that debt was disputed after receiving what homeowners described as a "validation of debt" letter; did not involve any statutorily mandated communication for nonjudicial foreclosure); Anderson v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 4631222 (D. Or. Sept. 12, 2014); Reyes-Aguilar v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 2153792 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2014); Memmott v. OneWest Reg'l Bank, 2014 WL 715441 (D. Or. Feb. 21, 2014) (denying mortgage servicer's motion to dismiss where it allegedly resumed foreclosure after it terminated the HAMP agreement with which the homeowner had been complying; homeowner alleged an "attempt at debt collection [that] is not 'necessary to effectuate foreclosure'" and that was therefore not protected by even the Hulse decision); Natividad v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 2299601 (N.D. Cal. May 24, 2013).

539 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1039, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

541 Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012); Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 2010); Wilson v. Draper & Goldberg, P.L.L.C., 443 F.3d 373 (4th Cir. 2006); Caprel v. Specialized Loan Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 4678313 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 7, 2016) (servicer's solicitation for loan modification was action to collect money); Luna v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 11120875 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 9, 2015) (in finding assignee of mortgage regularly collects monetary debts, court looks to creditor's business generally and not just its activities directed to individual plaintiff), adopted, 2016 WL 158128 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 12, 2016); Parker v. CitiMortg., Inc., 2014 WL 12577116 (M.D. Fla. July 10, 2014) (motion and affidavit filed by servicer in state court foreclosure action were communications made to collect a debt); McFadden v. Fla. Foreclosure Attorneys P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 12623693 (M.D. Fla. July 7, 2014) (foreclosure firm attorneys used letters that stated they were attempts to collect a debt and provided a balance due); Donnelly-Tovar v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 2d 1037, 1048 (D. Neb. 2013) (rejecting argument that collecting was not involved since the consumer did not owe the debt discharged in bankruptcy and the debt buyer was only enforcing a mortgage lien; "If the letter is not an attempt to collect a debt, then it can only be an attempt to defraud or extort money from a person with no obligation to pay it or solicitation of a gift. A disclaimer stating that the letter is not an attempt to collect a debt,' does not make that true."); Moore v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 848 F. Supp. 2d 107, 125 (D.N.H. 2012) (defendant law firm was in fact collecting on the underlying debt when it "informed [the homeowners] that their note had been accelerated 'and the entire balance [of $493,555.36] is due and payable forthwith and without further notice'" and because the complaint "supports a plausible inference that [the firm's] foreclosure activities were at least intermingled (if not coextensive) with its more mainstream collection activities"); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6091797 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 7, 2011) (claim was stated under §§ 1692d, 1692e, and 1692f where it was alleged that the debt collector represented that it would not seek a deficiency if the consumer gave it a deed in lieu of foreclosure and then sought the deficiency); Robinson v. BAC Home Loan Serv., L.P., 2011 WL 2490601 (S.D. Tex. June 21, 2011) (foreclosure attorneys subject to FDCPA claims beyond § 1692f(6) because of their fees demands); Malowney v. Zacur, Graham & Costis, P.A., 2011 WL 1655572 (M.D. Fla. May 2, 2011) (foreclosure attorneys' fees demands triggered broad FDCPA coverage); In re Robinson, 2011 WL 832857 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Mar. 3, 2011) (holding creditor in contempt because once it was granted relief from automatic stay to pursue in rem foreclosure alone, bank served a complaint that "made the debtor a defendant in a way that would appear to most debtors—and certainly to the least sophisticated debtor—as seeking a money judgment against her"); Carter v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2010 WL 1875718 (N.D. Cal. May 7, 2010); Pettway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331, at *5 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005) ("Harmon acted as a debt collector when it solicited borrowers to pay off the underlying mortgages"; fact that it was also pursuing foreclosure did not insulate it from FDCPA liability); Ray v. Int'l Bank, Inc., 2005 WL 2305017 (D. Colo. Sept. 21, 2005) (where foreclosure sale resulted in payment of money, foreclosing attorney covered by FDCPA). Walker v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp., 308 P.3d 716 (Wash. Ct. App. Aug. 5, 2013). See also Adams v. Albertelli, 2016 WL 931103 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016) (denying dismissal to foreclosure attorneys alleged to have violated the FDCPA by trying to secure a deficiency judgment on reverse mortgage that provided homeowners were not liable for any deficiency, as seeking deficiency was debt collection).

542 One of the communications at issue in Obduskey was an FDCPA validation letter that the law firm sent to the debtor. This was clearly not a required step to conduct a foreclosure under Colorado law. A quick Westlaw search of the law firm's litigation activity would show that the

If a mortgage servicer or law firm regularly conducts foreclosures for others, it qualifies as a debt collector under the primary definition. If the consumer pleads facts with sufficient specificity to plausibly show that the defendant falls within the primary definition, it should be the defendant's burden to plead and prove that it is entitled to the protection of the limited-purpose definition.[543]

Thus, to the extent possible, it is prudent for the consumer to plead facts in the complaint in order to cut off an Obduskey challenge.[544] The complaint can describe, for example, how the law firm or servicer's principal purpose is not the enforcement of security interests. How advocates can investigate this issue without discovery is discussed at §§ 4.7.3.3 and 4.7.5.2.4, supra.

The pleading can also describe why the challenged activities were not essential to the conduct of a nonjudicial foreclosure under state law. The defendant may argue that everything it does related to a foreclosure, no matter how remotely related, is covered by Obduskey. Federal courts may be easily confused about what the requirements are to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure under applicable state law. The complaint should mention what these are and describe how the actions in question were not necessary under state law to conduct a foreclosure, or, perhaps, that they even violated state law requirements.

Finally, in considering ways to avoid any impact from the Obduskey decision, advocates should keep in mind that framing claims within the scope of FDCPA § 1692f(6) can effectively address many forms of foreclosure and repossession misconduct. When the limited-purpose definition applies, the foreclosing party is still a "debt collector" for purposes of section 1692f(6).[545] FDCPA § 1692f(6) prohibits threatening or taking nonjudicial foreclosure or repossession actions when there is not a "present right" to do so. Advocates should review the state and federal laws that limit when and how a foreclosure or repossession can be conducted. Failure to comply with any of these laws means that the party does not have a present right to foreclose or repossess. The range of claims available under FDCPA § 1692a(f)(6) is discussed in § 8.6, supra.

4.8 Exclusions from "Debt Collector" Definition

4.8.1 Creditor Employees Collecting in the Creditor's Name, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include—
>
> (A) any officer or employee of a creditor while, in the name of the creditor, collecting debts for such creditor.[546]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A) excludes from the definition of debt collector employees and officers of a creditor, but only if they are collecting debts for such creditor and in the name of such creditor. The exclusion only applies if the employee or officer meets three separate requirements: the individual must be employed by the creditor (e.g. not by a collection agency); collecting debts for the creditor (e.g. not for a friend or other creditor); and collecting debts using the creditor's name (e.g. not in the name of a collection agency).

Although "creditor" is defined in the FDCPA as including "any person . . . to whom a debt is owed,"[547] at least one court has refused to extend the exemption to those employees.[548]

The FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A) exception only excludes a creditor's employees and officers, not the creditor's collection agency, since the provision does not mention the creditor's agents or representatives.[549] Nevertheless, issues can arise where a collection agency loans an employee to the creditor and that individual is under the creditor's direction and control, not that of the collection agency. Is the individual still an employee of the collection agency or now a de facto employee of the creditor?[550] Such an individual has a heavy burden to prove employment by the creditor and not the collection agency.[551]

The FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A) exclusion explicitly applies only to the creditor's employees and officers, not to the creditor itself. When the FDCPA means a provision to apply to a creditor, it uses the term "creditor," and not officers or employees of a creditor. A few courts have cited FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A) as firm conducted foreclosures regularly in neighboring New Mexico, a judicial foreclosure state. The complaint made no specific allegations regarding the nature of the law firm's practice. The law firm made a blanket assertion that all of its activities were required to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure under state law. This contention was never challenged.

---

543 Brown v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2020 WL 10313788, at *3 (S.D. Tex. June 22, 2020) (denying law firm's motion to dismiss where firm alleged in memorandum it was engaged in no more than nonjudicial foreclosures, but complaint did not include such allegation).

544 See, e.g., Bates v. Green Farms Condo. Ass'n, 958 F.3d 470, 480 481 (6th Cir. 2020) (dismissing FDCPA claims where complaint contained no averments about nature of defendant law firm's and condominium management company's business).

545 Dowers v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 852 F.3d 964, 971 (9th Cir. 2017); Ponthieux v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2021 WL 211252 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2021), adopted, 2021 WL 1089849 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2021); Thomas v. General Motors Fin. Co., 2020 WL 8771383 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 30, 2020) (Obduskey does not bar claim involving breach of peace vehicle repossession against limited purpose debt collector covered by § 1692f(6)); Shelton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4747669, at *14 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2019); Cordeiro v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3404742 (D.R.I. June 19, 2020) (allowing § 1692f(6) claim against foreclosure law firm that was subject to limited purpose definition when it conducted nonjudicial foreclosure in violation of FHA servicing regulations).

546 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(A). See also S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(i) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

547 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(4). See § 4.5, supra.

548 Collins v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 9805805 (E.D. Tenn. June 7, 2013).

549 See de Mayo, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 23, 2002).

550 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(a), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; de Mayo, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 23, 2002).

551 Andrews v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 3424900, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 9, 2017).

the basis for their exclusion of an originating creditor from the definition of debt collector.[552] But these courts are confused as to the FDCPA's coverage provisions. Originating creditors do not fall within the general definition of debt collector—they are not collecting a debt owed to another and are not in the principal business of debt collection. Since originating creditors are not debt collectors, there is no need to exclude them from the definition of debt collector under FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A).

Employees and officers of a creditor that regularly engage in collection work, on the other hand, do need the protection of section 1692a(6)(A) to escape being debt collectors and being liable under the FDCPA. They are collecting debts owed to another and regularly collect such debts. They would be covered debt collectors but for the application of FDCPA § 1692a(6)(A).

4.8.2 An Entity Not Principally a Collector, Collecting for a Commonly Owned or Affiliated Entity, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(B)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (B) any person while acting as a debt collector for another person, both of whom are related by common ownership or affiliated by corporate control, if the person acting as a debt collector does so only for persons to whom it is so related or affiliated and if the principal business of such person is not the collection of debts.[553]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(B) provides an exclusion if the following are all applicable:

- The collector is collecting on a debt owed to another;
- The debt owner has common ownership or is affiliated by corporate control with the collector;
- The collector only collects for those that share common ownership or are affiliated by corporate control; and
- The collector's principal business is not the collection of debts.[554]

The Seventh Circuit has held that, to be covered by the exclusion, the affiliate collector is not required to collect in the name of the debt owner, but presumably can collect under its own name.[555]

4.8.3 State and Federal Officials, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(C)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (C) any officer or employee of the United States or any State to the extent that collecting or attempting to collect any debt is in the performance of his official duties;[556]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(C) excludes from the definition of debt collector state or federal employees if their attempts to collect particular debts are within their official duties. Federal employees and officers include those employed by the IRS,[557] the U.S. Department of Education,[558] other federal agencies and departments,[559] and receivers appointed by federal courts.[560]

The term "state" means "any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision

552 See Shedd v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 4565775 (S.D. Ala. Aug. 31, 2016); McCrimmon v. Mariner Fin. N.C., Inc., 154 F. Supp. 3d 256, 258 (M.D.N.C. 2016); Allgood v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 6234691 (D. Nev. Dec. 2, 2013).

553 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(B) (Supp. II 1979). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(ii) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

The exclusion contained in this section first appeared in a broader form in a Senate minority bill late in the legislative process. S. 1130, 123 Cong. Rec. S4,884 (daily ed. Mar. 25 1977). It was incorporated in the subsequent Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee drafts with the present qualifications. The legislative history does not explain the exclusion's exact purpose. "One subsidiary or affiliate which collects debts for another subsidiary or affiliate is not a 'debt collector' so long as the collecting affiliate collects only for other related entities and its principal business is not debt collections." S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

554 See Fox v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994) (whether Citicorp was affiliated with actual creditor, whether Citicorp collected debts for non-affiliated entities, or whether debt collection was Citicorp's principal business precluded summary judgment); Rogers v. Capital One Serv., L.L.C., 2011 WL 873312 (D. Conn. Feb. 19, 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 447 Fed. Appx. 246 (2d Cir. 2011) (factual question whether collector's principle business was collection, thus denying it the benefit of the exclusion); Kreisler v. Latino Union, Inc., 2007 WL 1118408 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 12, 2007) (individual cannot have common ownership or affiliation with a business entity). See also Aubert v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 137 F.3d 976 (7th Cir. 1998) (exclusion applies); Jarzyna v. Home Prop., L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (same); Grodberg v. Hendricks Auto. Grp. Corp., 2008 WL 11429306 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 31, 2008) (same); Burns v. Bank of Am., 655 F. Supp. 2d 240 (S.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 360 Fed. Appx. 255 (2d Cir. 2010) (same).

555 Aubert v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 137 F.3d 976 (7th Cir. 1998); Jarzyna v. Home Prop., L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2011); Taylor v. Rollins, Inc., 1998 WL 164890 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 1998).

556 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(C). This provision was consistently included in bills leading to the Act. Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(iii) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

557 See Kennedy v. Comm'r, Dep't of Treasury Internal Revenue Serv., 790 Fed. Appx 447 (3d Cir. 2019); Al-Sharif v. United States, 296 Fed. Appx. 740 (11th Cir. 2008); Israel v. Everson, 210 Fed. Appx. 549 (8th Cir. 2006); Coble v. Wilkins, 2012 WL 665976 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 29, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 1450047 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 20, 2012), aff'd, 475 Fed. Appx. 17 (4th Cir. 2012).

558 See Wagstaff v. United States, 2013 WL 3989224 (Fed. Cl. July 31, 2013), aff'd on other grounds, 595 Fed. Appx. 975 (Fed. Cir. 2014); Ainsworth v. U.S. Dep't of Educ., 2019 WL 6134482, at *2 (N.D. Okla. Nov. 19, 2019); Allen v. United States Dep't of Educ., 755 F. Supp. 2d 122 (D.D.C. 2010).

559 See Diaz v. Dep't of Defense, 2008 WL 4671833 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 23, 2008) (Department of Defense); McCall v. GMAC Mortg. Corp., 2007 WL 1201535 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 6, 2007) (Veterans Administration); Geiger v. Fed. Bur. of Prisons, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1155 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (Bureau of Prisons).

560 See Weiss v. Weinberger, 2005 WL 1432190 (N.D. Ind. June 9, 2005).

of any of the foregoing."[561] State employees thus include not just officials at state agencies,[562] but local sheriff officers,[563] police officers,[564] district attorneys,[565] and local judges and court officers.[566]

The exclusion only applies to an employee or officer collecting debts in the performance of their official duties. A state official collecting a debt outside those duties is not excluded.[567] While such an official cannot take advantage of the section 1692a(6)(C) exclusion, the consumer must still prove the official otherwise meets the FDCPA's definition of debt collector, such as regularly collecting debts owed to another.[568]

The exclusion only applies to officers or employees of government entities; it does not apply to private parties collecting debts on behalf of the government entity.[569] Sometimes an individual can have dual employment, such as a private collector and as a deputy sheriff. Even if an individual is employed by a government entity, the exclusion does not apply if the individual is not collecting while in the status of a government employee.[570] A private individual can be appointed as a government employee or official, and then the exclusion could apply, but it may be unclear whether a temporary appointment to assist the state in debt collection makes the individual an officer or employee of the state.[571]

The explicit language of FDCPA § 1692a(6)(C) excludes from the definition of debt collector officers and employees of government entities, and not the government entities themselves.[572] When the FDCPA means something more than officers or employees, it uses other language, such as persons or creditors.[573]

The limit of the exclusion makes perfect sense. The United States and the state typically will not fall within the general definition of a debt collector in that they are not in the business the principal purpose of which is the collection of debts and do not regularly collect debts owed another. Certain officers or employees may be viewed as regularly collecting debts owed to another (i.e., owed to the United States or the state), so the exclusion has direct relevance to them.

In addition, sovereign immunity may prevent claims against the government entities, further removing any purpose for FDCPA § 1692a(6)(C) to apply to government entities.[574] Sovereign immunity may not extend to employees and officers, and certainly does not extend to private entities collecting for the state.[575]

4.8.4 The Service of Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(D)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (D) any person while serving or attempting to serve legal process on any other person in connection with the judicial enforcement of any debt;[576]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(D) excludes from the definition of debt collector not just the service of process to initiate a collection lawsuit, but any service or legal process involving the legal enforcement of a debt. It applies to serving a foreclosure notice[577] or the service of process of a subpoena upon a

561 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(8). See § 4.11, infra.

562 See Okoro v. Garner, 21 Fed. Appx. 486 (7th Cir. 2001); Streater v. Cox, 2008 WL 564884 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 28, 2008) (FDCPA does not apply to state officers or employees), aff'd on other grounds, 336 Fed. Appx. 470 (6th Cir. June 30, 2009); Dep't of Revenue v. Michaels, 2008 WL 360631 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 8, 2008) (Florida Dep't of Revenue exempt); Eley v. Evans, 476 F. Supp. 2d 531 (E.D. Va. 2007) (county officials not debt collectors); Fleeger v. Bell, 95 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (D. Nev. 2000) (district attorneys), aff'd, 2001 WL 1491252 (9th Cir. Nov. 26, 2001); Gary v. Spires, 473 F. Supp. 878 (D.S.C. 1979) (state check collection officials).

563 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Rojo v. Watson, 2016 WL 5394679 (D. Neb. Sept. 27, 2016); Georgeadis v. County of Fairfield, 2000 WL 1459418 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2000).

564 See Parrish v. City of Highwood, 1998 WL 773994 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 30, 1998).

565 Landfried v. Spokane County, 2011 WL 1584328 (E.D. Wash. Apr. 27, 2011).

566 See Heredia v. Green, 667 F.2d 392 (3d Cir. 1981); Georgeadis v. County of Fairfield, 2000 WL 1459418 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2000).

567 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(c) ("The exemption applies only to such governmental employees in the performance of their 'official duties' and, therefore, does not apply to an attorney employed by a county government who also collected bad checks for local merchants where that activity is outside his official duties."), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

568 See Richardson v. Calmes, 2006 WL 8432831, at *6 (M.D. La. Aug. 11, 2006) ("The volume of [police] Defendants' alleged debt collection activities is simply not great enough to qualify them as 'debt collectors' [under § 1692a(6)].").

569 See Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd., 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (law firm that contracted with municipalities to collect government debt was not exempt); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003); Gradisher v. Check Enf't Unit, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 2d 988 (W.D. Mich. 2001).

570 Burgess v. Lee Acceptance Corp., 2008 WL 5111905 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 4, 2008) (denying deputy sheriff's motion to dismiss; question of fact where court ordered him to execute writ to seize property, but plaintiff presented evidence that serving officer was an independent contractor, not an officer of court).

571 See Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 317, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 1598, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016) ("Assuming, arguendo, that special counsel do not rank as 'state officers'" for purposes of § 1692a(6)(C)); Keefer v. Wiles, Boyle, Burkholder & Bringardner, Co. 2008 WL 4404295 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 23, 2008) (applicability of § 1692a(6)(C) to attorneys appointed as special counsel to state attorney general depended on factual determination).

572 E.g., Passa v. City of Columbus, 2007 WL 3125130 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 24, 2007. But see Games v. Cavazos, 737 F. Supp. 1368 (D. Del. 1990).

573 E.g., Passa v. City of Columbus, 2007 WL 3125130 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 24, 2007).

574 See § 12.6.5, infra. See also Codar Inc. v. Arizona, 168 F.3d 498 (9th Cir. 1999); Little v. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp., 537 F. Supp. 2d 942 (W.D. Tenn. 2008).

575 See Del Campo v. Kennedy, 517 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2008).

576 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(D). This section first appeared in the Senate minority bill S. 1130, 123 Cong. Rep. S. 4884 (daily ed. Mar. 25, 1977) at § 802(8)(D) and was retained in subsequent Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee drafts. Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(iv) tracks the statutory language exactly.

577 Duraney v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2008 WL 4204821 (W.D. Pa. Sept. 11, 2008), aff'd, 2010 WL 2993810 (3d Cir. Aug. 2, 2010).

witness to appear in an action for debt. But the provision applies to service related to the legal enforcement of a debt, and not, for example, to presentment of a state-required notice about a tenant or consumer's rights to avoid the legal enforcement of a debt.[578]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(D) only excludes from the definition of a debt collector a person "while" serving or attempting to serve legal process. This exclusion does not exempt process servers, but only their activity while serving process. The exclusion does not apply to a process server while filing false affidavits that process was served,[579] or to a process server seeking to collect payment on a debt.[580]

The exclusion for a person while serving legal process also does not apply to a person other than the one actually serving legal process, even where the FDCPA violation involves the service of legal process. For example, the FDCPA § 1692a(6)(D) exclusion is not applicable to a collection lawyer for its directions to a process servicer.[581]

4.8.5 Nonprofit Consumer Credit Counselors, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(E)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (E) any nonprofit organization which, at the request of consumers, performs bona fide consumer credit counseling and assists consumers in the liquidation of their debts by receiving payments from such consumers and distributing such amounts to creditors;[582]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(E) excludes from the definition of debt collector a nonprofit requested to perform bona fide consumer credit counseling and also that assists consumers in what is known as a debt management plan.[583] This exclusion requires the credit counselor to be nonprofit, so that it does not apply to profit-making entities offering debt management plans.[584] Even a nonprofit credit counselor cannot take advantage of the exclusion if its credit counseling is not bona fide—that is it if it is a ruse to profit from the consumer.[585]

4.8.6 Attorney Exclusion No Longer Applies

Congress, in 1986, repealed an exclusion from the scope of the FDCPA for attorneys when they were collecting a debt for a client in the client's name and their collection efforts were within the legal concept of the practice of law.[586] Congress found this exception had blossomed into a major loophole, and that some law firms had become indistinguishable from collection agencies. By 1985, more lawyers were regularly collecting consumer debts than were persons working in the non-lawyer debt collection industry.[587] The current FDCPA coverage of attorneys is discussed at § 4.7.3.3, supra.

578 Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998) (state mandated three-day demand for payment of past-due rent).

579 See Avina v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2021 WL 873336 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 9, 2021); Makhnevich v. MTGLQ Investors, L.P., 2020 WL 764158 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 14, 2020); Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018); Rendon v. HBLC, Inc., 2017 WL 7275423 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 25, 2017); Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650046 (N.D. Cal. July 21, 2015); Sanchez v. Abderrahman, 2014 WL 4919153 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 12, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 4919258 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2014); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2013 WL 5219053 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2013); Harbison v. Litow & Pech, P.C., 2013 WL 1095654 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 18, 2013); Freeman v. ABC Legal Serv. Inc., 827 F. Supp. 2d 1065 (N.D. Cal. 2011); Spiegel v. Judicial Attorney Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 382809 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 1, 2011); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., L.L.C., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

580 See Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006).

581 See Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998); Mateti v. Activus Fin., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2507423 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2009); Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzak, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 39 F. Supp. 2d 394 (S.D.N.Y. 1999); Andrews v. South Coast Legal Serv., Inc., 582 F. Supp. 2d 82 (D. Mass. 2008); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002); Alger v. Ganick, O'Brien & Sarin, 35 F. Supp. 2d 148 (D. Mass. 1999).

582 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(E). This subsection was added during drafting by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee staff. Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(v) tracks the statutory definition with only minor, non-substantive language changes for clarity.

583 See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("[t]he term debt collector is not intended to include . . . non-profit consumer credit counseling services which assist consumers by apportioning the consumer's income among his creditors pursuant to a prior arrangement"). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)(4)-e, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

584 See Hutchinson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 22, 1987); Hirsch, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 7, 1978) (exclusion does not apply to licensed, profit-making credit counselor).

585 But see Limpert v. Cambridge Credit Counseling Corp., 328 F. Supp. 2d 360 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) (failed to consider if whether firm's counseling was bona fide), amended in part on other grounds, 2005 WL 3395347 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 16, 2004).

586 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F) (Supp. II 1979), repealed by Pub. L. No. 99-361, 100 Stat. 768 (July 9, 1986).

The former exclusion of attorneys from FDCPA liability first appeared in S. 3838. See S. 3838, 122 Cong. Rec. S16,273, at § 802(f) (daily ed. Sept. 21, 1976). With small changes in wording, it was contained in most subsequent bills. Two bills deleting the attorney exemption passed the Senate. S. 2851 and S. 1103, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. (Sept. 13, 1984). One bill died in the House: H.R. 4617, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. (Jan. 24, 1984). A second House bill passed on a voice vote. H.R. 237, 99th Cong., 1st Sess., 132 Cong. Rec. H10534 (daily ed. Dec. 2, 1985).

587 Oversight Hearing on FDCPA and H.R. 4617 Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs and Coinage of the House Comm. on Banking, Fin. and Urban Affairs, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. (Jan. 31, 1984); Hearings on H.R. 237, Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs and Coinage of the House Comm. on Banking, Fin. and Urban Affairs, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. (Oct. 22, 1985); H.R. Rep. No. 405, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. (Nov. 26, 1985), reprinted in 1986 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1752, 132 Cong. Rec. H10534 (daily ed. Dec. 2, 1985) (statement of Rep. Annunzio).

4.8.7 Collecting Debts Incidental to Fiduciary or Escrow Arrangements, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(i)

The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .

(F) any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent that such activity (i) is incidental to a bona fide fiduciary obligation or a bona fide escrow arrangement;[588]

FDCPA § 1692a(F)(i) excludes from the definition of debt collector those collecting debts owed to another where that activity is incidental to a bona fiduciary obligation or escrow arrangement. Even if the exclusion applies to one debt that is collected pursuant to a fiduciary obligation or escrow arrangement related to that debt, the same person can be a covered debt collector when collecting on another debt that is not pursuant to the fiduciary obligation. But the exclusion applies even when the fiduciary obligation or escrow arrangement was entered into after a debt went into default.[589]

One indicator whether a person is acting pursuant to a fiduciary obligation is where state or federal law defines that activity as a fiduciary one.[590] Property management companies are generally found to be acting pursuant to a bona fide fiduciary obligation to the property owners.[591] A trustee for a securitized investment trust holding home mortgages has a fiduciary obligation to the trust.[592] But an entity operating a check diversion program is not acting in a fiduciary capacity for the district attorney authorizing the program.[593]

Even if there is a bona fide fiduciary obligation or escrow arrangement, the debt collection activity to be excluded must be incidental, and not central, to that obligation or arrangement. Where a loan servicer or collection law firm takes an account after default, collection of the debt is central and not incidental to its activities, even if the debts arguably are collected pursuant to a fiduciary obligation.[594] Similarly, even if a check diversion program is acting in a fiduciary capacity, its collection activities are not merely incidental, but central to its fiduciary duties.[595]

In a number of nonjudicial foreclosure states, a foreclosure trustee holds a mortgage deed and is responsible for foreclosing on the property if the homeowner defaults. The Fourth Circuit has found that the FDCPA § 1692a(F)(i) exclusion did not apply to a foreclosure trustee foreclosing on a deed of trust, since that action is more than just incidental to its fiduciary obligation.[596]

But the Ninth Circuit has found that a foreclosure trustee's sending notices prior to foreclosure were incidental to what it found to be an escrow arrangement.[597] Similarly, the Eleventh Circuit has found a foreclosure trustee had a fiduciary relationship; sending foreclosure notices was incidental to its fiduciary obligations.[598]

Paying creditors out of an escrow arrangement was found incidental to the escrow arrangement.[599]

A trustee collecting debts for a securitized investment trust holding home mortgages has been found to be incidental to its fiduciary obligation to the trust.[600] A bail bondsman collecting on its collateral is also incidental to its fiduciary obligations.[601]

Under the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program, a guaranty agency has certain responsibilities for student loans originated by a lender, but ultimately insured by the Department of Education. By federal regulation, such a 588 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(i). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(vi)(A) tracks the statutory language with only format changes.

This section was added late in the legislative process, while the bills were in the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

589 Raburn v. Cmty. Mgmt., L.L.C., 761 Fed. Appx. 263 (5th Cir. 2019).

590 Harris v. Liberty Cmty. Mgmt., Inc., 702 F.3d 1298, 1302 (11th Cir. 2012); Cadiz v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2019 WL 4254484 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2019); Yergovich v. Small Cmty. Specialists L.L.C., 337 F. Supp. 3d 635 (E.D. Va. 2018); Barnett v. Homeowner Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 8186604 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 9, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 8186598 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 9, 2017); Seo v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2016 WL 521065 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2016); Buckman v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co., 924 F. Supp. 1156 (S.D. Fla. 1996) (criminal bond forfeiture), aff'd on other grounds, 115 F.2d 892 (11th Cir. 1997). See also Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568 (9th Cir. 2017) (minority opinion at footnote 9).

591 Raburn v. Cmty. Mgmt., L.L.C., 761 Fed. Appx. 263 (5th Cir. 2019); Harris v. Liberty Cmty. Mgmt., Inc., 702 F.3d 1298, 1302 (11th Cir. 2012); Yergovich v. Small Cmty. Specialists L.L.C., 337 F. Supp. 3d 635 (E.D. Va. 2018); Barnett v. Homeowner Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 8186604 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 9, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 8186598 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 9, 2017); Taylor v. Precision Prop. Mgmt., 2015 WL 1756981 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 17, 2015); Lusco v. Univ. Realty of Tampa, 2014 WL 1152934 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 21, 2014); Johnson v. Young, 2007 WL 2177956, at *3 (S.D. Ohio July 27, 2007); Reynolds v. Gables Residential Serv., Inc., 428 F. Supp. 2d 1260, 1264 (M.D. Fla. 2006); Berndt v. Fairfield Resorts, Inc., 339 F. Supp. 2d 1064, 1068 (W.D. Wis. 2004) (management company for timeshare company).

592 Junod v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 584 Fed. Appx. 465 (9th Cir. 2014).

593 See Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 415 F. Supp. 3d 935 (N.D. Cal. 2019); Del Campo v. Mealing, 2013 WL 4764975 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2013).

594 Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019); Grady v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 929928 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 2012); Reed v. Smith, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21463 (M.D. Ala. July 25, 1994).

595 See Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 415 F. Supp. 3d 935 (N.D. Cal. 2019); Del Campo v. Mealing, 2013 WL 4764975 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2013).

596 McCray v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 839 F.3d 354, 361 (4th Cir. 2016) (central, not incidental); Wilson v. Draper & Goldberg, P.L.L.C., 443 F.3d 373, 377 (4th Cir. 2006) (central, not incidental). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(f), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

597 Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d 568 (9th Cir. 2017) (a minority opinion in that case argues that this is not incidental but central to the escrow arrangement).

598 Hasbun v. Reconstruct Co., 508 Fed. Appx. 941 (11th Cir. 2013).

599 See Fisher v. Congress Title, 2007 WL 77333 (D.N.J. Jan. 8, 2007), aff'd, 2007 WL 1862683 (3d Cir. June 29, 2007).

600 Junod v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 584 Fed. Appx. 465 (9th Cir. 2014).

601 Buckman v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co., 924 F. Supp. 1156 (S.D. Fla. 1996) (criminal bond forfeiture), aff'd on other grounds, 115 F.2d 892 (11th Cir. 1997).

guaranty agency has a fiduciary obligation to the Department of Education.[602] The Ninth Circuit and most other courts find a guaranty agency's collection actions under the FFEL program to be incidental to its fiduciary obligation because the guaranty agency has other responsibilities.[603] A subsequent guaranty agency's fiduciary obligation is not incidental though where a guaranty agency turns over a defaulted student loan to the second guaranty agency to collect on that loan.[604]

Whether a guaranty agency is excluded from the debt collector definition when owning a student loan, this is not the case where the guaranty agency is acting as a servicer or as a debt collector for the United States under the federal Direct Loan program—since 2010, all new federal student loans are under the Direct Loan, not the FFEL program.

In an Eleventh Circuit decision, the majority held that a guaranty agency may fall under the fiduciary obligation exemption even where the debt is alleged to be nonexistent, since a person may attempt to collect a debt "incidental to a bona fide fiduciary obligation" whether the debt sought to be collected is "owed or due" another or only "asserted to be owed or due another."[605]

4.8.8 Credit Originator Collecting on Behalf of Another, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (F) any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent such activity . . . (ii) concerns a debt which was originated by such person;[606]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii) excludes from the definition of debt collector a credit originator that transfers a debt to another, but then collects that debt for the other entity that now owns the debt.[607] For example, this exclusion would apply to a mortgage loan originator that sells the loan, but then services the loan for the transferee.[608] It would also apply to a retailer or credit card issuer that assigns its accounts to a financer or a trust, but is responsible for collection on those accounts.

The term "originated" is not defined, but in common usage a debt is originated by a person where that person initially extends the credit. Originator does not apply to someone who brokers credit, someone who services the account after the credit is extended,[609] or a company that authorizes a merchant accepting a consumer's check.[610] Assignees and transferees also cannot take advantage of the exclusion because they are not originators.[611] The Eleventh Circuit has found that a bail bondsman originates a debt in that it is the consumer and bail bondsman who enter into the indemnification agreement and note, even though the bond is with an insurance company.[612]

The FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii) exclusion does not apply to either the originating creditor or any other entity that is collecting on its own debt. The exclusion states that it applies to one "collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another." Where the originator transfers the debt to another, and then the debt is transferred back to the originator, the nature of that second transfer determines the exclusion's applicability. If the debt is transferred only for purposes of collection, the exclusion applies. The exclusion does not apply where ownership is transferred back to the originator, because then the originator would not be collecting for another. An entity collecting on its own debt may be a debt collector under the "principal purpose" prong of the general debt collector definition.[613]

Courts sometimes use FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii) as the basis to find an originating creditor collecting its own debt not to be 602 Murungi v. Texas Guaranteed, 402 Fed. Appx. 849 (5th Cir. 2010); Rowe v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 559 F.3d 1028, 1034 (9th Cir. 2009); Cadiz v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2019 WL 4254484 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2019); Seo v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2016 WL 521065 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2016); Kozaczek v. N.H. Higher Educ. Assistance Found., 2014 WL 3640779 (D. Vt. July 21, 2014); Donohue v. Reg'l Adjustment Bur., Inc., 2013 WL 607853 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 19, 2013); Lasserre v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2012 WL 2191628 (M.D. La. June 14, 2012); Pelfrey v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 71 F. Supp. 2d 1161 (N.D. Ala. 1999), aff'd 208 F.3d 945 (11th Cir. 2000).

603 Lima v. United States Dep't of Educ., 947 F.3d 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2020) (guaranty agency is "obligated to release its judgment against Plaintiff if Plaintiff's debt is consolidated, rehabilitated, or repaid. Defendant also is obligated to maintain records, report to the National Student Loan Database System, and properly administer its operating fund. Those obligations are not illusory, even if Defendant has not had to perform some of them"); Murungi v. Texas Guaranteed, 402 Fed. Appx. 849 (5th Cir. 2010); Cadiz v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2019 WL 4254484 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2019); Seo v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2016 WL 521065 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2016); Kozaczek v. N.H. Higher Educ. Assistance Found., 2014 WL 3640779 (D. Vt. July 21, 2014); Pelfrey v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 71 F. Supp. 2d 1161 (N.D. Ala. 1999), aff'd, 208 F.3d 945 (11th Cir. 2000); Montgomery v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 238 B.R. 806 (D. Minn. 1999).

604 Rowe v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 559 F.3d 1028, 1034 (9th Cir. 2009).

605 See Darrisaw v. Penn. Higher Educ. Assistance Agency, 949 F.3d 1302, 1307 (11th Cir. 2020).

606 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(ii). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(vi)(B) tracks the statutory language with only stylistic and format changes.

This section was added late in the legislative process while the bills were in the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

607 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(f), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

608 See, e.g., Lupo v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 5714641 (D. Md. Sept. 28, 2015; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(f), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

609 See Amini v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 398636 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 7, 2012).

610 See Winterstein v. CrossCheck, Inc. 149 F. Supp. 2d 466 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (check guarantee service's "authorization" of check not an origination of debt); Holmes v. Telecredit Serv., 736 F. Supp. 1289 (D. Del. 1990) (same); Games v. Cavazos, 737 F. Supp. 1368, 1387 (D. Del. 1990) (school and lender originate guaranteed student loan, not the guaranty agency).

611 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(f), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

612 Buckman v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co., 115 F.3d 892 (11th Cir. 1997).

613 See § 4.7.2, supra.

a debt collector.[614] It very well may be that such a creditor is not a debt collector (it is not collecting for another and its principal purpose is unlikely to be debt collection). But the court would be wrong in using the FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(ii) exclusion as the basis for the creditor's exemption, because the creditor is not collecting a debt owed to another.

4.8.9 When Person Obtains Debt Not Yet in Default, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii)

4.8.9.1 Generally

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (F) any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent such activity . . . (iii) concerns a debt which was not in default at the time it was obtained by such person;[615]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) excludes from the debt collector definition a person collecting on a debt owed to another, if that person obtained the debt when the debt was not in default. Nevertheless, the exclusion will not apply to the same person collecting on an account obtained after default. The person can be a covered debt collector for some accounts and not others.[616] A servicer obtaining an account after default is a debt collector if the account is owed or due another.[617]

"Obtained" does not mean obtained ownership—if it did, the exclusion would be a nullity because it applies only to those collecting debts for another. The Seventh Circuit defines "obtained" as acquiring the authority to collect money on behalf of another.[618] A mortgage servicer,[619] management company,[620] or rental agent[621] obtains a debt when hired to take on a specific account to service or to manage. For servicers, the relevant date is when the transfer of servicing rights became effective. This usually occurs in connection with the transfer of servicing rights for a large pool of loans.[622]

A servicer is not a debt collector when entrusted with accounts not yet in default.[623] The Senate Report leading to the FDCPA's enactment indicates the exclusion applies to "mortgage service companies and others who service outstanding debts for others, so long as the debts were not in default when taken for servicing."[624] The same is the case for a property management company or rental agent that obtains an account prior to default.[625] A person is not a debt collector if an account is obtained prior to default, even if the person engages in collection after the account is in default.[626]

When an entity obtained an account through its merger with the original creditor at a time when the debt was not in default, the successor entity is not a debt collector.[627] Where a company obtained the debt through its merger with the original creditor at a time when the debt was in default, many courts hold that the company may be a debt collector subject to the FDCPA with regard to the defaulted accounts.[628] However, some courts have found that where a company obtained a debt through its merger with the original creditor at a time when the debt was in default, the company is not a debt collector with regard to 614 See Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693, 699 (6th Cir. 2003). See also Anderman v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 803 Fed. Appx. 290 (11th Cir. 2020).

615 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(iii). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(vi)(C) tracks the statutory language with only stylistic and format changes.

This section first appeared late in the legislative process in Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee drafts.

616 See Bailey v. Sec. Nat'l Servicing Corp., 154 F.3d 384 (7th Cir. 1998) (exclusion's application on collection of same debt depends whether collecting on original debt in default or on its loan modification no longer in default).

617 E.g. Tusen v. M&T Bank, 2017 WL 4990524(D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2017).

618 Carter v. AMC, L.L.C., 645 F.3d 840 (7th Cir. 2011). See also Papetti v. Does 1–25, 691 Fed. Appx. 24 (2d Cir. 2017); Geiger v. Florida Hosp. Mem'l Med. Ctr., 2017 WL 1177310 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 29, 2017).

619 See Alibrandi v. Fin. Outsourcing Services, Inc., 333 F.3d 82, 84–85 (2d Cir. 2003); Wadlington v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 76 F.3d 103, 107 (6th Cir. 1996); Bailey v. Sec. Nat'l Servicing Corp., 154 F.3d 384, 387–388 (7th Cir. 1998); Perry v. Stewart Title Co., 756 F.2d 1197, 1208 (5th Cir. 1985).

620 Carter v. AMC, L.L.C., 645 F.3d 840 (7th Cir. 2011); Gonon v. Cmty. Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 5692559 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2015) (homeowners' association property manager); Eke v. FirstBank Florida, 779 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (S.D. Fla. 2011); Lamb v. HSC Real Estate, Inc., 2008 WL 467410 (E.D. Wash. Feb.19, 2008).

621 Ramsay v. Sawyer Prop. Mgmt. of Md. L.L.C., 593 Fed. Appx. 204 (4th Cir. 2014); Franceschi v. Mautner Glick Corp., 22 F. Supp. 2d 250 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

622 Johnson-Gellineau v. Steine & Assoc., 2018 WL 1605574, at *13 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2018), aff'd, 837 Fed. Appx. 8 (2d Cir. 2020).

623 Macias v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 718 Fed. Appx. 32 (2d Cir. 2017); Brumberger v. Sallie Mae Servicing Corp., 84 Fed. Appx. 458 (5th Cir. 2004); Valletta v. Navient Corp., 2017 WL 1437563 (D. Ariz. Apr. 24, 2017).

624 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

625 Ramsay v. Sawyer Prop. Mgmt. of Md. L.L.C., 593 Fed. Appx. 204 (4th Cir. 2014) (rental agent); Gonon v. Cmty. Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 5692559 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2015) (homeowners' association property manager); Taylor v. Precision Prop. Mgmt., 2015 WL 1756981 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 17, 2015) (condo association's property manager); Eke v. FirstBank Florida, 779 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (property manager); Franceschi v. Mautner Glick Corp., 22 F. Supp. 2d 250 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (rental agent).

626 See Gentleman v. Massachusetts Higher Educ. Assistance Corp., 272 F. Supp. 3d 1054 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Gonon v. Cmty. Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 5692559 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2015) (homeowners' association property manager); Fontell v. Hassett, 870 F. Supp. 2d 395 (D. Md. 2012) (condominium association and its management agent); Franceschi v. Mautner Glick Corp., 22 F. Supp. 2d 250 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

627 See, e.g., Mathieson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 524 F. Supp. 3d. 1246, 1259 (M.D. Fla. 2021) (§ 1692a(6)(f)(iii) exception applies where mortgage was not in default when servicer took over servicing rights through corporate merger); Hines v. Regions Bank, 2020 WL 4335830 (N.D. Ala. July 28, 2020), aff'd, 2021 WL 4551301 (11th Cir. Oct. 5, 2021); Kovacik v. PNC Bank, 2015 WL 5255265 (W.D. Pa. Sept. 9, 2015); Ware v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 12861350 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 11, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 12861676 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 30, 2014); Centennial Bank v. Noah Grp., L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 1256 (S.D. Fla. 2010).

628 See Riley v. Home Retention Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 11906643 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2014); McAdams v. Citifinancial Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 141128 (M.D. La. Jan. 16, 2007).

those accounts, because the debt is not deemed to have been "obtained" for debt collection purposes.[629]

A debt buyer or other transferee of an account's ownership does not benefit from this exclusion. The Supreme Court has ruled that a debt buyer does not collect debts owed to another, because it is the current owner.[630] FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) applies only to a person collecting on debts owed to another, so that it is not applicable to a debt buyer, whether it purchased a debt prior to or after default. Instead, a debt buyer is a debt collector if its principal purpose is debt collection,[631] whether or not the debt at issue was in default when purchased—as long as none of the other exclusions set out in FDCPA § 1692a(6) apply. On the other hand, that a debt buyer purchased a debt after default does not make it a debt collector—its principal business must be debt collection.[632]

FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iii) is an exception to a person being defined as a debt collector. As an exception to the general rule, the burden should be on the collector to prove that the exception applies and that the loan was not in default when obtained.[633] Nevertheless, it is prudent for the consumer to allege both that the entity regularly collects debts owed to another and that such debts were in default when the entity obtained the debt—failure to plead the debt is in default has led some courts to dismiss a case.[634]

4.8.9.2 When Does Default Occur?

The FDCPA does not define default and courts are not consistent as to standards as to when a debt is considered in default. Certainly, a debt is in default by the time the creditor characterizes a debt as a bad debt, has handed it over for collection, or has written it off—if not before then.[635] A debt can be in default prior to the creditor sending a formal notice of default.[636]

On the other hand, a debt is not in default when services have been rendered, but the bill not yet sent.[637] An initial demand for payment is unlikely to be defined as declaring the debt in default. The Second Circuit has found that a debt that is merely outstanding does not make it in default, but only after some period of time does an outstanding debt go into default.[638] Even though a billing statement says it is due when rendered, it does not immediately go into default if not paid upon receipt.[639]

On the other hand, even if a creditor or debt collector characterizes a debt as not yet in default, the debt can be in default.[640] A creditor's self-serving statement that a debt is not in default may not be persuasive and a debt can be in default well before the creditor declares the debt in default.[641]

---

629 See, e.g., Brown v. Morris, 243 Fed. Appx. 31, 34–35 (5th Cir. 2007) (where mortgage company was not "specifically assigned" the mortgage for debt collection purposes, but rather acquired it through merger with previous mortgage company, the successor company was not deemed to have "obtained" the mortgage while it was in default); Esquivel v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 682925 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2013) (same); Pascal v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 5878142, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2013) (same). See also Fenello v. Bank of Am., 926 F. Supp. 2d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (that the merger occurred after the plaintiffs' default did not change the fact that, by operation of law, the bank now stood in the place of the company it merged with as plaintiffs' loan servicer), aff'd, 577 Fed. Appx. 899 (11th Cir. Aug. 12, 2014); Forester v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 3206471 (S.D. Ala. Aug. 7, 2012) (even though Countrywide obtained plaintiff's loan through assignment when it was already in default, when Countrywide then merged into BACHLS that entity (BACHLS) was not a debt collector). Cf. Rico v. Eveland, 2020 WL 7414016 (D. Utah. Dec. 17, 2020) (successor attorneys were not debt collectors, because they did not obtain debt through assignment for debt collection purposes but, instead, obtained it through purchase of law firm that included debt).

630 Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

631 See § 4.7.2, supra.

632 Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

633 Garner v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 8294293 (6th Cir. Oct. 27, 2017). See also Heejoon Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 685 (D. Haw. 2017) (servicer failed to meet burden to show loan not in default when acquired servicing rights, could not rely on claim it acquired servicing rights through a corporate merger). But see Wade v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2019 WL 8333548, at *9 (W.D. Tenn. Dec. 20, 2019) (denying borrower's motion for summary judgment because borrower did not produce evidence of default status of loan at time of servicing transfer).

634 Qurashi v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 760 Fed. Appx. 66 (6th Cir. 2019); Scott v. Mortg. Grp., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3732097 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 30, 2017); Keeton v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 217 F. Supp. 3d 177 (D.D.C. 2016); Dareing v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2015 WL 11255490 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 18, 2015), adopted, 2015 WL 11364358 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 13, 2015). Compare McFadden v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2021 WL 3284794, at *3 (D.D.C. July 30, 2021) (complaint survives motion to dismiss when alleges loan was in default when servicer acquired servicing rights, need not aver details of when and how loan went into default), and Torliatt v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1904596, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2020) (complaint against mortgage servicer failed to allege that notice of default as defined under mortgage was ever given).

635 See Anderson v. Good Shepherd Hosp., Inc., 2011 WL 846091 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 8, 2011) (sending of "final notice" and thereafter transmitting account to third party for collection indicated that debt was in default).

636 Lombana v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 3999366 (C.D. Cal. June 29, 2015).

637 Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990, 992 (11th Cir. 2016) (upholding determination on summary judgment that debt was not in default at time of transfer to collector, because hospital creditor hadn't asked debtor to pay balance after insurance); Gould v. ClaimAssist, 876 F. Supp. 2d 1018 (S.D. Ill. June 27, 2012). See also Brown v. Knoxville HMA Holdings, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1322885, at *10 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 20, 2020); Lange v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2020 WL 1302512 (D. Alaska. Mar. 18, 2020) (entity hired to record hospital lien six days after patient's discharge was not debt collector, since debt was not in default and hospital intended to pursue patient's medical insurance coverage before billing him).

638 Alibrandi v. Fin. Outsourcing Services, Inc., 333 F.3d 82, 87 (2d Cir. 2003). See also Papetti v. Does 1–25, 691 Fed. Appx. 24 (2d Cir. 2017).

639 Mahon v. Anesthesia Bus. Consultants, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1452333 (D. D.C. Apr. 13, 2016) (not in default when obtained account immediately on billing going out even though said due when rendered).

640 Echlin v. Dynamic Collectors, Inc., 102 F. Supp. 3d 1179 (W.D. Wash. 2015). But see Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990, 992 (11th Cir. 2016) (upholding determination on summary judgment that the debt was not in default at time of transfer to collector because hospital creditor hadn't asked debtor to pay the balance after insurance).

641 Magee v. AllianceOne, Ltd., 487 F. Supp. 2d 1024 (S.D. Ind. 2007).

Where the creditor or servicer indicates or acts as if the debt is in default, then the debt should be in default at least by that point in time, even if it is not yet in default.[642] One court used this test: "would a reasonable person in the debtor's position believe that the creditor viewed the debt as being in default?"[643] But the fact that the consumer disputes that the loan is in default or even disputes that the consumer owes the debt does not change the fact that the debt should be considered in default for purposes of rebutting the exclusion when the creditor has declared or views the loan to be in default.[644]

Relevant to a determination is the contract's definition of default.[645] If the contract provides that "If I do not pay the full amount of each monthly payment on the date it is due, I will be in default," then any payment that is overdue is a default.[646] If a contract defines default as being late by one month, the fact that the creditor has discretion as to when it acts on the default does not change the fact that the debt is in default if payment is a month late.[647] If applicable law defines default, that can also determine if there has been a default.[648]

It is clear that there is no one simple test whether a debt is in default. One court listed these factors as relevant to a determination if a debt is in default: the number of times a creditor has requested payment, the time that has elapsed since the first request, the urgency of the language used in those requests, the debtor's knowledge that they have been referred to a third party, the creditor's internal policies, any representations made by or on behalf of the creditor—either publicly or to a specific debtor—about how it collects debts, and apparent attempts by the creditor or third party to circumvent the FDCPA's consumer protections.[649]

The Third Circuit finds that dishonored checks are in default because there is a failure to pay when due.[650] A loan is in default for purposes of FDCPA coverage even if the debtor is curing the default in a chapter 13 bankruptcy. A servicer obtaining the debt at that point is a debt collector.[651]

A servicer still takes a loan when it is in default even if the servicer brings the loan out of default through a loan modification or otherwise—the status when it began to service the loan remains controlling.[652] However, where a loan was in default,

642 See Bowen v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4183081 (D. Me. Sept. 20, 2017); Bohringer v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 141 F. Supp. 3d 1229 (S.D. Fla. 2015); Mavris v. RSI Enters. Inc., 86 F. Supp. 3d 1079 (D. Ariz. 2015); Head v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4276148 (D. Kan. July 14, 2015); Langley v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 6965274 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 10, 2015); Hoehn v. FCC Fin., L.L.C., 126 F. Supp. 3d 472 (D.N.J. 2015); Geary v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1286347 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 20, 2015); Haber v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 2921659 (E.D. Pa. June 27, 2014); Thomas v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2012 WL 2829451 (E.D. Ark. July 10, 2012).

643 See Mavris v. RSI Enters. Inc., 86 F. Supp. 3d 1079, 1086 (D. Ariz. 2015).

644 Bridge v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 681 F.3d 355 (6th Cir. 2012). See also Schlosser v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 323 F.3d 534 (7th Cir. 2003); Makhnevich v. MTGLQ Investors, L.P., 2021 WL 3406484, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2021) (debtor can deny all liability for debt at same time as avers that defendant treated debt as in default); Zinetti v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co. 2020 WL 409725, at *7 (D. Del. Jan. 24, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 1536092 (D. Del. Feb. 14, 2020); Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128 (D. Md. July 17, 2019); Thomas v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2018 WL 3608398 (W.D. Wash. July 26, 2018); Czerniak v. Servis One, Inc., 2017 WL 1196886 (N.D. Ill. Mar 31, 2017) (servicer incorrectly believed personal liability on mortgage debt still owed after bankruptcy discharge); Ayres v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 129 F. Supp. 3d 249 (D. Md. 2015); Alhassid v. Bank of Am., 60 F. Supp. 3d 1302 (S.D. Fla. 2014); Galante v. Ocwen Loan Servicing L.L.C., 2014 WL 3616354 (D. Md. July 18, 2014); Haynes v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2009 WL 10677040 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 11, 2009), adopted, 2009 WL 10677775 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 31, 2009) (homeowner asserted had cured mortgage default in chapter 13 while servicer treated loan as in default).

645 See, e.g., Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 6892465 (D.N.H. Nov. 21, 2016); McClenahan v. Equifax Info. Serv. L.L.C., 2016 WL 554819 (D. Minn. Feb. 11, 2016); Kapsis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing Inc., 923 F. Supp. 2d 430 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (whether a debt is in default may be determined by the contract if it contains a default provision); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Serv., 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (W.D. Wis. 2002). See also Ngo v. NPAS, Inc., 2021 WL 149121 (E.D. La. Jan. 15, 2021) (no evidence that consumer's debt was ever determined to be "in default" according to the terms of the creditor hospital's "conditions of admission"); Metzger v. Seterus, Inc., 2020 WL 2468480 (D. Minn. May 13, 2020) (under plain terms of promissory note, owing late charge is not same as being in default); Koepplinger v. Seterus, Inc., 2020 WL 2063416 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2020) (loan not in default at acquisition of servicing rights solely because late fee assessed; contractual terms did not set due date for payment of a late fee), adopted, 2020 WL 5705915 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 26, 2020); Raya v. NPAS, Inc., 2020 WL 3550009 (E.D. Va. Mar. 31, 2020).

646 Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 6892465 (D.N.H. Nov. 21, 2016). See also Castellanos v. Deutsche Bank, 2012 WL 2684968 (S.D. Ohio July 6, 2012).

647 Wood v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3484664 (D. Or. Aug. 14, 2017).

648 See Skerry v. Mass. Higher Educ. Asst. Corp., 73 F. Supp. 2d 47, 53, 54 (D. Mass. 1999) (applying definition of "default" in Federal Family Education Loan Program regulations to construe § 803(6)(F)(iii)); Jones v. InTuition, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 775, 779 (W.D. Tenn. 1998) (same). See also 12 C.F.R. § 1024.31 (defining "delinquency" under RESPA as "[a] borrower and a borrower's mortgage loan obligation are delinquent beginning on the date a periodic payment sufficient to cover principal, interest, and, if applicable, escrow becomes due and unpaid, until such time as no periodic payment is due and unpaid.").

649 See Mavris v. RSI Enters. Inc., 86 F. Supp. 3d 1079 (D. Ariz. 2015).

650 F.T.C. v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007). See also Durkin v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 2002 WL 31426397 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 28, 2002); Winterstein v. CrossCheck, Inc. 149 F. Supp. 2d 466 (N.D. Ill. 2001).

651 In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 135 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020).

652 Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261, at *8 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019) (servicer covered where loan was in default when servicer took over and servicer modified loan after it had commenced foreclosure); Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017) (where mortgage was in default when servicer took over, servicer does not become a "creditor" by offering a modification or other loss mitigation option later); Poynter v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5380926 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 23, 2016) (fact that loan may have been modified later did not alter servicer's status as debt collector if loan was in default when the servicer took over servicing); Traut v. Quantum Servicing Corp., 2016 WL 8844254 (D. Mass. Aug. 4, 2016) (servicer is debt collector when borrower was under trial modification plan or forbearance agreement when servicer took over); Gritters v Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 7451682 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 31, 2014) (servicer still debt collector even though it made relevant but a loan modification brings the loan out of default, and then a new servicer takes over the loan, then that new servicer can claim to obtain the account while it was not in default and is not covered by the FDCPA when collecting on the modified loan.[653] The result is different if the modification fails, and the new servicer instead seeks to collect on the original debt where that original loan was in default at the time the servicer obtained the debt.[654]

Medical debt, in particular, raises issues because medical providers often do not expect prompt payment while insurance claims are processed that will cover all or much of the amount owed.[655] Look to see if the provider has a published policy as to payments that might suggest when the provider considers a debt in default.[656]

Medical providers may also hire collectors or subrogation agents to seek subrogation from the consumer when the consumer receives payment from a third party that is responsible for the consumer's injuries. Where the collector obtains an account for this purpose prior to the payment by the third party, the consumer is not yet be in default in the obligation to forward those payments to the medical provider, and the exception to coverage applies to the collector.[657]

4.8.10 Secured Parties Involving Commercial Credit, FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iv)

> The term ["debt collector"] does not include . . .
>
> (F) any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent such activity . . . (iv) concerns a debt obtained by such person as a secured party in a commercial credit transaction involving the creditor.[658]

The FDCPA § 1692a(6)(F)(iv) exclusion applies where a retailer or lender puts up consumer accounts receivable as collateral for commercial financing, and then defaults on that obligation. A secured party collecting on the payments due on the retailer's or lender's consumer accounts receivable is covered by this exclusion, so as not to be a debt collector.[659]

Nevertheless, FDCPA § 1692(a)(6) provides "Notwithstanding the exclusion provided by clause (F) of the last sentence of this paragraph, the term includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts." Since the exclusion for secured parties involving commercial credit is in clause (F), a secured party is a covered debt collector if it uses any name other than its own.

4.8.11 Private Bad Check Diversion Programs, FDCPA § 1692p

Section 1692p,[660] added to the FDCPA in 2006,[661] creates a limited exclusion from the definition of debt collector for private entities operating bad check diversion programs only if those entities meet a list of conditions. The check diversion program must be one established by a state or district attorney within its jurisdiction as a pretrial diversion program for alleged bad check offenders who agree to participate voluntarily to avoid criminal prosecution.[662] In addition, the program cannot involve the following types of checks: collection efforts under modified loan; original loan had been in default when servicer took over); Harris v. LNV Corp., 2014 WL 12530946 (M.D. Tenn. Jan. 8, 2014) (mag.; forgiving some debt or modifying loan after acquisition does not remove from coverage); Oliver v. Ocwen Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2013 WL 210619 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 18, 2013). See also McWhorter v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3315375 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 3, 2017) (debtor was under trial HAMP plan at time of servicing transfer and later received modification; not clear whether original loan agreement or modification controlling, or whether borrower was current under trial plan). But see Ross v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3636543 (E.D. Tenn. July 31, 2018) (loan was subject to cure plan in chapter 13 case so not in default when servicer took over—failing to recognize that under bankruptcy law the mortgage default is not cured until chapter 13 plan is completed).

---

653 Bailey v. Sec. Nat'l Servicing Corp., 154 F.3d 384 (7th Cir. 1998); Vilkofsky v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2573874 (W.D. Pa. June 14, 2017) (mortgage servicer was exempt as the mortgage was brought current by a loan modification agreement before the servicing rights were transferred); Wallace v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 3859745 (D.N.J. Aug. 30, 2011) (company servicing a current payment plan or forbearance agreement rather than demanding payment on a defaulted loan); In re Tolliver, 2012 WL 2952239 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. July 19, 2012) (forbearance payment plan not considered after default).

654 Bailey v. Sec. Nat'l Servicing Corp., 154 F.3d 384 (7th Cir. 1998).

655 Roberts v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 2012 WL 3288076 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2012). See also National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 9.2.2.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

656 See Mavris v. RSI Enters. Inc., 86 F. Supp. 3d 1079 (D. Ariz. 2015).

657 Kesselman v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 668 F. Supp. 2d 604 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2009). See also Dantin v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 2005 WL 6075786 (M.D. La. Apr. 13, 2005); Hamilton v. Trover Solutions, Inc., 2003 WL 21105100 (E.D. La. May 13, 2003), aff'd, 104 Fed. Appx. 942 (5th Cir. 2004). Compare Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171, 1195 (D. Utah 2019) (reasonable person would view hospital's billing processor as treating accounts it serviced as in default), and Wagoner v. NPAS, Inc., 456 F. Supp. 3d 1030, 1033 (N.D. Ind. 2020) (same hospital billing processor received accounts to process insurance coverage before they were in default).

658 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(F)(iv). Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(vi)(D) tracks the statutory language with only stylistic and format changes.

This section was added late in the legislative process during the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee drafts.

659 See Melendez-Febus v. Toyota Credit de Puerto Rico Corp., 2009 WL 2950369 (D. P.R. Sept. 9, 2009) (defendant exempt enforcer of security agreement); Friedman v. Textron Fin. Corp., 1997 WL 467175 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 12, 1997) (commercial lender exempt). See also S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 3–4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("the committee does not intend the definition [of debt collector] to cover . . . the collection of debts collateral for commercial credit extended to the creditor"); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(f), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

660 See also Reg. F § 1006.2(i)(2)(vii).

661 See § 3.4.2.4, supra.

662 15 U.S.C. § 1692p(a)(2)(A).

- Postdated checks for payday loans where the lender knew at the time of the check issuance that there were insufficient funds in the consumer's account;
- Checks involving the consumer's good faith stop payment order;
- Checks dishonored because of adjustments made at the bank without notice to the consumer;
- Checks in partial payment where partial payment had been accepted in the past;
- Checks written by a person not competent or not legal age; or
- Checks for illegal transactions.[663]

The private entity operating the check diversion program must be subject to an administrative support services contract with the state or district attorney and must operate under the direction, supervision, and control of the state or district attorney.[664] In addition, the check diversion program is only excluded from the definition of debt collector if it:

- Complies with the state's penal laws;[665]
- Complies with its contract and state directives;
- Does not exercise independent prosecutorial discretion;[666]
- Contacts alleged offenders for participation in the program only after the state or district attorney finds probable cause under the bad check law and that contact with the individual is appropriate, and that no payment followed a demand for payment;[667]
- Includes in the initial written communication with the alleged offender a clear and conspicuous disclosure that there is an opportunity to dispute the alleged violation, to file a crime report in the case of check forgery or related fraud, and to file a written dispute within 30 days that will trigger the state or district attorney investigating the matter again for probable cause before further proceedings;[668] and
- Only charges fees authorized by its contract with the state or district attorney.[669]

The failure of the program to meet all of these conditions is not itself an FDCPA violation—only that the provision does not exclude the check diversion program from the debt collector definition.[670] If not excluded, the consumer must still show that the diversion program otherwise qualifies as a debt collector and that its practices violate the FDCPA.

4.8.12 Debt Collectors Not Covered Under Regulation F, § 1006.1(c)

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) is based on the CFPB's authority under the FDCPA, the Dodd-Frank Act, and the E-SIGN Act.[671] Since Regulation F is issued based, in part, on the CFPB's authority under the FDCPA, it applies to all debt collectors covered by the FDCPA unless otherwise excluded.[672] The Regulation contains two such exclusions, discussed below.

Regulation F § 1006.1(c)(1) explicitly excludes from the Regulation F definition of debt collector those excluded by 12 U.S.C. § 5519(a). That provision excludes "a motor vehicle dealer that is predominantly engaged in the sale and servicing of motor vehicles, the leasing and servicing of motor vehicles, or both."[673] But not excluded are motor vehicle dealers that:

- Provide consumers with any services related to residential or commercial mortgages or self-financing transactions involving real property;
- Operate a line of business involving motor vehicle retail credit or lease extensions where the credit contract is not routinely assigned to a third party (e.g., a buy-here, pay-here dealer); or
- Offer a consumer financial product or service not involving the sale, financing, leasing, rental, repair, refurbishment, maintenance, or other servicing of motor vehicles, motor vehicle parts, or any related or ancillary product or service.[674]

With the exceptions noted above, motor vehicle dealers are excluded debt collectors for purposes of Regulation F (but not for purposes of the FDCPA), even where they regularly collect 663 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692p(a)(2)(A), 1692p(b).

664 15 U.S.C. § 1692p(a)(2)(B).

665 But cf. Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 6140460 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2019) (requirement applies to private check diversion company, so that district attorney's failure to company with penal laws does not prevent application of the exclusion).

666 Cf. Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 6140460 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2019) (discussing this requirement but reaching no conclusion).

667 Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 6140460 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2019) (notice letter did not provide that district attorney would be the one determining probable cause); Cavnar v. BounceBack, Inc., 2015 WL 4429095 (E.D. Wash. July 17, 2015) (exclusion did not apply where no evidence additional demand for payment made). See also Breazeale v. Victim Services, Inc., 2015 WL 13860897 (N.D. Cal. July 16, 2015) (complaint plausibly alleged that defendants did not effectively implement measures imposed by district attorneys).

668 Cavnar v. BounceBack, Inc., 2015 WL 4429095 (E.D. Wash. July 17, 2015) (exclusion did not apply where gave consumer only 10 days, not 30, and did not disclose dispute would lead to new investigation).

669 15 U.S.C. § 1692p(a)(2)(C).

670 Cavnar v. BounceBack, Inc., 2015 WL 4429095 (E.D. Wash. July 17, 2015) (exclusion did not apply where did not comply with conditions).

671 Reg. F § 1006.1(a) (specifying legal authority for Regulation F as "sections 814(d) and 817 of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA or Act), 15 U.S.C. 1692*l*(d), 1692o; title X of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act), 12 U.S.C. 5481 et seq.; and paragraph (b)(1) of section 104 of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN Act), 15 U.S.C. 7004").

672 For example, the Regulation F supplemental information states:

> The Bureau explained that it was not finalizing § 1006.1(c)(2) as part of the November 2020 Final Rule because all of the provisions of that final rule apply to debt collectors as defined in § 1006.2(i). The Bureau nevertheless reserved § 1006.1(c)(2) so that the Bureau could clarify which provisions of this final rule, if any, apply to debt collectors only if they are collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service.

86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5771 (Jan. 19, 2021).

673 12 U.S.C. § 5519(a).

674 12 U.S.C. § 5519(b).

debts for another or collect their own debts under a fictitious name.

The second exclusion, found in Reg. F § 1006.1(c)(2), states that Reg. F §§ 1006.34(c)(2)(iii) and (3)(iv) (certain of the provisions dealing with verification notices) apply to debt collectors only when they are collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in 12 U.S.C. § 5481(5). This exclusion is examined at §§ 9.4.6 and 9.4.7, infra.

4.9 Limited-Content Message, Regulation F § 1006.2(j)

4.9.1 Overview

> (j) Limited-content message means a voicemail message for a consumer that includes all of the content described in paragraph (j)(1) of this section, that may include any of the content described in paragraph (j)(2) of this section, and that includes no other content.[675]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) introduces a new concept, called a "limited-content message."[676] It applies to voicemail messages, but not to other forms of messages.[677] To qualify, it must include all the content described at Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(1), and it may include content described at Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(2), but it may contain no other content.

The Official Interpretations provide an example of a message that fails to qualify:

> If a voicemail message includes content other than the specific items described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2), and such other content directly or indirectly conveys any information about a debt, the message is a communication, as defined in § 1006.2(d). For example, a voicemail message that includes a statement that the message is from a debt collector and a request to speak to a particular consumer is not a limited-content message because it includes more than the required or permitted content.[678]

A limited-content message is defined as one left for a "consumer." Any message knowingly left for a third party is not a limited-content message.[679] As Regulation F's Official Interpretations explain:

> For example, assume that a debt collector has a telephone number that the debt collector knows belongs to the consumer's friend. A voicemail message left after calling that number is not a limited-content message, even if the message includes no more than the content described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2), because the debt collector knowingly left the message for someone other than the consumer.[680]

On the other hand, the regulation's supplemental information states that, "messages left without knowledge that the voicemail belongs to a third party, or if a debt collector is unsure to whom the voicemail belongs, are limited-content messages."[681]

As discussed in § 4.2.5, supra, the Regulation F Official Interpretations state that a debt collector does not convey information regarding a debt if the debt collector leaves the consumer a voicemail message that is a limited-content message.[682] As a result, a limited-content message that complies fully with Reg. F § 1006.2(j) is not a "communication"[683] and does not trigger the prohibition on communications with third parties[684] or the requirement to provide certain disclosures in the initial and subsequent communications in FDCPA § 1692e(11) [Reg. F § 1006.18(e)].[685] Moreover, Regulation F's Official Interpretations specify that, "[a] debt collector who leaves only a limited-content message for a consumer does not violate Reg. F § 1006.14(g)'s [FDCPA § 1692d(6)'s] requirement to meaningfully disclose the caller's identity with respect to that voicemail message."[686]

Thus, a fully compliant limited-content message effectively provides debt collectors with a safe harbor from the requirements of FDCPA §§ 1692c(b), 1692d(6), and 1692e(11) [Reg. F §§ 1006.6(d)(1), 1006.14(g), and 1006.18(e)]. This addresses a bind collectors face when they leave voicemails for consumers. As explained by the Regulation F supplemental information:

> If a voicemail or other message is a communication with a consumer, FDCPA section 807(11) [§ 1692e(11)] requires that the debt collector identify itself as a debt collector or inform the consumer that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose. A debt collector who leaves a message with such disclosures, however, risks violating FDCPA section 805(b)'s [§ 1692d(b)'s] prohibition against revealing debts to third parties if the disclosures are seen or heard by a third party.[687]

Limited-content messages are still "attempts to communicate," and are subject to all Regulation F provisions regulating attempts to communicate.[688] The Official Interpretations

675 Reg. F § 1006.2(j).
676 See Reg. F § 1006.2(j).
677 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-1. See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,748 (Nov. 30, 2020) (discussing how CFPB considered and rejected application of concept of limited-content messages to emails, texts, and social media).
678 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-1.
679 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-2. See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,749 (Nov. 30, 2020) (discussing how CFPB considered and rejected definition of limited-content messages that would have permitted leaving messages with third parties).
680 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-2.
681 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,749 (Nov. 30, 2020).
682 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.
683 See § 4.2, supra.
684 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1). See also CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #1, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov ("Since a limited-content message is an attempt to communicate and not a communication under the Debt Collection Rule . . . a debt collector who leaves only a limited-content message does not violate the prohibition against third-party communications.").
685 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)-1.
686 Reg. F. Official Interpretations § 2(j)-3.
687 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,747 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnotes omitted).
688 Reg. F. § 1006.2(b). See § 4.2, supra.

provide as examples of requirements that may still apply to limited-content messages Reg. F § 1006.6(b) (communications at inconvenient times or places, communications with a consumer represented by an attorney, and certain communications at the consumer's place of employment), § 1006.6(c) (communications after a refusal to pay or cease communication notice), and § 1006.22(f) (although no § 1006.22(f) provisions deal with voicemails).[689] Even though a voicemail message is only a limited-content message, it still can lead to a violation of these or other FDCPA provisions. Section 4.2.1, supra, identifies Regulation F provisions and Official Interpretations that apply to "attempts to communicate."

In a FAQ, the CFPB discussed several types of messages that do not qualify as limited-content messages. First, a voicemail message that includes content required by state law that is beyond the optional or required content outlined in Reg. F § 1006.2(j) is not a limited-content message.[690] Next, if a call drops in the middle of leaving a voicemail message, the partial message that did not include all of the required elements of a limited-content message would not be a limited-content message.[691] Finally, voicemails modeled after Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Associates, Inc.[692] are not limited-content messages.[693]

A contact that does not qualify as a limited-content message is not automatically a communication.[694] The Regulation F supplemental information states: "By finalizing a definition of limited-content message that excludes third-party messages, therefore, the Bureau has not determined that messages other than limited-content messages sent to third parties are always communications under the FDCPA and the final rule."[695] The definition of communication is discuss in § 4.2, supra.

4.9.2 Required Information in a Limited-Content Message

(1) Required content. A limited-content message is a voicemail message for a consumer that includes:

(i) A business name for the debt collector that does not indicate that the debt collector is in the debt collection business;

(ii) A request that the consumer reply to the message;

(iii) The name or names of one or more natural persons whom the consumer can contact to reply to the debt collector; and

(iv) A telephone number or numbers that the consumer can use to reply to the debt collector.[696]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that to qualify as a limited-content message, a voicemail to a consumer must contain four items: a business name for the debt collector not indicating that the collector is in the debt collection business; a request that the consumer call back; a name of a person to call back; and a number to call back.[697] The Official Interpretations use this example: "This is Robin Smith calling from ABC Inc. Please contact me or Jim Johnson at 1-800-555-1212."[698]

A collector whose business name indicates it is in the debt collection business would not be able to avail itself of a limited-content message. As the Regulation F supplemental information explains:

> [T]he Bureau expects that many debt collectors will be able to disclose a business name (e.g., a doing business as (d/b/a) name) without revealing that they are in the debt collection business. Moreover, industry has long been subject to FDCPA section 808(8) [§ 1692f(8)], which allows debt collectors to include their business name on an envelope only if the name does not indicate that the debt collector is in the debt collection business. But circumstances might exist that would prevent debt collectors from taking advantage of the limited-content message definition. For example, a debt collector's business name might reveal that the debt collector is in the debt collection business. In such circumstances, a message that includes the debt collector's business name would not be a limited-content message, as defined in final § 1006.2(j).[699]

The CFPB clarifies in an FAQ that Regulation F "does not require the business name in a limited-content message to be the debt collector's legal name or registered DBA," but that "[s]tate licensing or other laws, however, may require a debt collector to use their registered DBA when leaving messages for consumers."[700] The FAQ also clarifies that, "leaving a limited-content message does not violate the requirement to meaningfully disclose the caller's identity with respect to that voicemail message, even though that message may contain abbreviations or may not include the debt collector's full legal name."[701] However, the collector must not use false, deceptive,

689 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-2.
690 CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #3, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
691 CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
692 870 F. Supp. 2d 694 (D. Minn. 2012) ("We have an important message from [company's name]. This is a call from a debt collector. Please call [company's telephone number].")
693 CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #6, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
694 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-2 ("If a voicemail message includes content other than the specific items described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2), and such other content directly or indirectly conveys any information about a debt, the message is a communication, as defined in § 1006.2(d).") (emphasis added).
695 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,749 (Nov. 30, 2020).
696 Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(1).
697 Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(1).
698 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)(1)-1.
699 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,752 (Nov. 30, 2020).
700 CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #8, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
701 Id.

or misleading representations in violation of FDCPA § 1692e when disclosing its name or otherwise violate the FDCPA.[702]

In terms of which names indicate that the collector is in the debt collection business, the FAQ notes that "if a debt collector could properly use the business name on an envelope without violating the FDCPA or the Debt Collection Rule, the debt collector could use the same business name in a limited-content message."[703] Whether a collector's name reveals that it is in the business of debt collection is based on the business name and not be based on what the recipient might learn after additional research.[704]

If a caller ID includes a business name or other information not complying with the requirements for a limited-content message, then the message is not a limited-content message. The Regulation F supplemental information states that, "[t]he Bureau acknowledges that caller ID information may disclose more information than permitted by [Reg. F] § 1006.2(j). In these circumstances, such voicemail messages would not meet the definition of limited-content message."[705] Similarly, a phone number conveyed with letters and not numbers (a "vanity number" such as 1-800-COLLECT) could prevent a message from being a limited-content message. The Regulation F supplemental information states: "a vanity telephone number that reveals that the debt collector is in the debt collection business would not comply with final [Reg. F] § 1006.2(j)(1)(i)."[706]

4.9.3 Optional Information in a Limited-Content Message

> (2) Optional content. In addition to the content described in paragraph (j)(1) of this section, a limited-content message may include one or more of the following:
>
> (i) A salutation;
>
> (ii) The date and time of the message;
>
> (iii) Suggested dates and times for the consumer to reply to the message; and
>
> (iv) A statement that if the consumer replies, the consumer may speak to any of the company's representatives or associates.[707]

In addition to required information to qualify a voicemail as a limited-content message,[708] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that the collector has the option to include four additional items: a salutation; the date and time; the dates and times requested for the consumer's reply; and a statement that a consumer reply can be with any of the company's representatives or associates.[709] An example of a limited-content message containing both required and optional information would be "Hi, this is Robin Smith calling from ABC Inc. It is 4:15 p.m. on Wednesday, September 1. Please contact me or any of our representatives at 1-800-555-1212 today until 6:00 p.m. Eastern time, or any weekday from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Eastern time."[710]

Not included in either required or optional information in a limited-content message is the consumer's name. The Regulation F's supplemental information considers whether to allow this information and rejects it to avoid conveying information regarding a debt.[711] Also rejected was allowing a generic reference to an account:

> The Bureau does not believe that the word account necessarily discloses the existence of a debt because consumers may receive messages about their accounts with companies other than debt collectors. In the context of the final rule's limited-content message, however, referring to an account would increase the risk of a prohibited third-party disclosure.[712]

While a limited-content message can include a statement that a consumer reply can be with any of the company's representatives or associates, a message that includes a more detailed description of the representative or associate group is not a limited-content message.[713] The Official Interpretations provide an example: "a reference to an agent with the 'credit card receivables group' is not a limited-content message because it includes more than a statement that the consumer's reply may be answered by a representative or associate."[714]

4.10 "Person," Reg. F § 1006.2(k)

> (k) Person includes natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies.[715]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) adds a definition of "person" that tracks the definition found at 1 U.S.C. § 1 to include natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies.[716] "Persons" as used in the FDCPA need not be natural persons. A debt collector violating an FDCPA provision applying to a "person" can be liable to corporations, partnerships, companies, associations, nonprofits, and others.[717] A

702 Id.
703 Id. See also § 8.8, infra.
704 See CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #9, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
705 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,753 (Nov. 30, 2020).
706 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,753 (Nov. 30, 2020).
707 Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(2).
708 See § 4.9.2, supra.
709 Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(2).
710 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)(2)-2.
711 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,752 (Nov. 30, 2020).
712 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,752 (Nov. 30, 2020).
713 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)(2)-1.
714 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)(2)-1.
715 Reg. F § 1006.2(k).
716 Reg. F § 1006.2(k).
717 See Anarion Invs. L.L.C. v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 794 F.3d 568 (6th Cir. 2015). See also Valhalla Inv. Props, L.L.C. v. 502, L.L.C., 456 F. Supp. 3d 939, 946 (M.D. Tenn. 2020), aff'd, 832 Fed.

"consumer," by contrast, as defined in the FDCPA,[718] must be a natural person. As a result, when a provision applies to a "consumer," the provision applies only to natural persons who otherwise meet the definition of debt collector.[719]

The Regulation F supplemental information explicitly rejects narrowing the definition of person found at 1 U.S.C. § 1:

> The Bureau declines to delete the definition of person or to narrow it to include only natural persons because the plain language of the FDCPA illustrates that Congress did not intend to limit the term person, as used in the FDCPA, to natural persons. For example, the definition of debt collector in the FDCPA uses the phrase "any person" repeatedly, and there is no doubt that Congress intended to include non-natural persons in the definition of debt collector. Where the statute was intended to be limited to natural persons, Congress achieved that intent by using the term consumer.[720]

4.11 "State," FDCPA § 1692a(8)

(8) The term "State" means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision of any of the foregoing.[721]

The FDCPA definition of "State" is necessary to clarify the meaning of an FDCPA exemption from the definition of debt collector for any officer or employee of any "State" to the extent that collecting or attempting to collect any debt is in the performance of the officer or employee's official duties.[722] As defined, this exemption applies to officers or employees not just of the fifty states, but of U.S. territories and possessions, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, and counties, cities, towns, and other political subdivisions.

Appx. 413 (6th Cir. 2020) (distinguishing FDCPA's treatment of "consumer" and "person").

718 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3).

719 See § 4.4, supra.

720 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,754 (Nov. 30, 2020).

721 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(8). Reg. F § 1006.2*(l)* tracks the statutory language.

722 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(C), discussed at § 4.8.3, supra.

Chapter 5 FDCPA §§ 1692b, 1692c: Collector Communications with Consumers and Third Parties

5.1 Introduction

This chapter discusses the specific requirements which the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) imposes on debt collectors under 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692b and 1692c. Most of this chapter considers FDCPA § 1692c and Regulation F § 1006.6 (effective November 30, 2021), addressing debt collector communications with the consumer and also generally prohibiting communications about the debt with third parties.

FDCPA § 1692b and Reg. F § 1006.10 address an exception to the rule that prohibits contacting third parties—where the debt collector seeks the consumer's location information from third parties. This exception is addressed in § 5.2, infra.

The FDCPA restricts the times and places a debt collector may contact a consumer, restricts third-party contacts, and prohibits contacting a consumer represented by an attorney.[1] The consumer can also require the collector to cease communications with the consumer.[2] These restrictions, along with others,[3] protect the consumer's right to privacy and the security of the consumer's relationships with third parties, including attorneys, coworkers, and employers.[4] This was considered an "extremely important protection" by Congress.[5] Congress explicitly refers to "invasions of individual privacy" as harm the FDCPA was intended to address.[6]

5.2 Third-Party Contacts for Consumer Location Information, FDCPA § 1692b

5.2.1 Text of FDCPA §§ 1692b, 1692a(7)

FDCPA § 1692b provides:

> Any debt collector communicating with any person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer shall—
>
> (1) identify himself, state that he is confirming or correcting location information concerning the consumer, and, only if expressly requested, identify his employer;
>
> (2) not state that such consumer owes any debt;
>
> (3) not communicate with any such person more than once unless requested to do so by such person or unless the debt collector reasonably believes that the earlier response of such person is erroneous or incomplete and that such person now has correct or complete location information;
>
> (4) not communicate by post card;
>
> (5) not use any language or symbol on any envelope or in the contents of any communication effected by the mails or telegram that indicates that the debt collector is in the debt collection business or that the communication relates to the collection of a debt; and
>
> (6) after the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with regard to the subject debt and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, such attorney's name and address, not communicate with any person other than that attorney, unless the attorney fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to communication from the debt collector.

Location information is defined in FDCPA § 1692a (7):

> The term "location information" means a consumer's place of abode and his telephone number at such place, or his place of employment.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) at § 1006.10 essentially tracks the FDCPA § 1692b statutory language and the definition of location information from § 1692a(7), with minor technical changes. The regulation's official interpretations and the rule's supplemental information provide additional clarifications.

5.2.2 Overview

FDCPA § 1692b establishes a detailed, narrow exception to section 1692c(b)'s general prohibition of third-party contacts,[7] and allows debt collectors in some circumstances to contact third parties to obtain information about the consumer's residence, residential telephone number, and place of

1 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a), (b); Reg. F § 1006.6(b), (d).
2 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c); Reg. F § 1006.6(c).
3 E.g., § 1692d (5) (repeated phone calls).
4 See Appx. E.2.2.4, infra.
5 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also 122 Cong. Rec. H7,308 (daily ed. July 19, 1976) (remarks of Rep. Annunzio on H.R. 13720) ("[t]he bill's controls on communications are quite reasonable and strike a fair balance between the debt collector's need to contact and the consumer's right to privacy and right to be free from harassment").
6 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692(a).
7 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b) states: "Except as provided in section 1692b of this title, without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector, or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, or as reasonably necessary to effectuate a post judgment judicial remedy, a debt collector may not communicate, in connection with the collection of any debt, with any person other than the consumer, his attorney, a consumer reporting agency if otherwise permitted by law, the creditor, the attorney of the creditor, or the attorney of the debt collector." See § 5.7, infra.

employment.[8] The burden of proof is on the debt collector to prove the exception applies.[9]

The FDCPA § 1692b exception applies only where the collector's contact is with a third party, and not with the consumer,[10] and where the purpose of a communication is acquiring location information.[11] If the consumer is deceased, location information includes location information for a person authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate as described in Regulation F § 1006.6(a)(4) (effective November 30, 2021) and its associated commentary.[12]

To take advantage of the FDCPA § 1692b exception, collectors must make certain disclosures, but not identify the person's employer unless upon request,[13] and must not indicate the consumer owes a debt.[14] There are also limits to the number of location communications,[15] and no communication seeking location information is allowed if the consumer is represented by an attorney.[16] Enforcement of FDCPA § 1692b is discussed at § 5.2.12, infra.

A preliminary issue though is whether a debt collector's contact with a third party can be viewed as a communication regarding a debt, covered by both FDCPA §§ 1692b and 1692c(b). If the communication is not so viewed, so that these FDCPA sections do not apply to the communication, then the debt collector can contact third parties, including for location information, without complying with section 1692b.[17]

5.2.3 The Legislative History

Congress, in 1977, repeatedly amended the location information provision to arrive at the current procedures for a debt collector to obtain a consumer's contact information. According to the 1977 Senate report:

> While this legislation strongly protects the consumer's right to privacy by prohibiting a debt collector from communicating the consumer's personal affairs to third persons, the committee also recognizes the debt collector's legitimate need to seek the whereabouts of missing debtors. Accordingly, this bill permits debt collectors to contact third persons for the purpose of obtaining the consumer's location. In seeking this information, however, the debt collector must observe certain guidelines . . .[18]

Provisions restricting the acquisition of location information appeared in various forms in all but one of the bills leading to the FDCPA. One of the earliest bills would only have permitted collectors to use telephone calls to obtain location information.[19] Most subsequent bills allowed collectors seeking location information to use the telephone, the mail (except for postcards), and telegrams.[20]

The Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee dropped this approach, implicitly permitting personal visits to obtain location information.[21] The subcommittee also added the requirement that the collector "state he is confirming or correcting location information,"[22] the clause permitting additional contacts of third parties providing incomplete information,[23] and the provision allowing non-attorney contacts when the consumer's attorney is unresponsive.[24] Most bills permitted the debt collector to use its own name in the contents, but not on the envelopes, of letters requesting location information, but the full Senate Banking Committee dropped this provision during markup.[25]

5.2.4 Role of Definition of Communication in FDCPA § 1692b Analysis

When a debt collector communicates with a third-party seeking location information, FDCPA § 1692b requires that the debt collector not indicate the consumer owes a debt.[26]

As discussed in § 4.2, supra, FDCPA § 1692a(2) defines a communication for purposes of the Act as the conveying of information directly or indirectly regarding a debt.[27] Several courts have examined whether a collector's contact conveys information directly or indirectly regarding a debt when it does not indicate the consumer owes a debt.[28] The Sixth and 8 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(7). See also Appx. E.2.1, infra.

9 See § 5.2.7, infra.
10 See § 5.2.5, infra.
11 See § 5.2.6, infra.
12 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 10(a)-1. A person authorized to behalf of the estate is defined as the executor, administrator, or personal representative of the consumer's estate. "Persons with such authority may include personal representatives under the informal probate and summary administration procedures of many States, persons appointed as universal successors, persons who sign declarations or affidavits to effectuate the transfer of estate assets, and persons who dispose of the deceased consumer's financial assets or other assets of monetary value extrajudicially." See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(a)(4)-1. See also § 5.2.9.2, infra.
13 See § 5.2.8, infra.
14 See § 5.2.9, infra.
15 See § 5.2.10, infra.
16 See § 5.2.11, infra.
17 See § 5.3.2, infra.
18 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 5, reprinted at 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also 138 Cong. Rec. S4885 (daily ed. Mar. 25, 1977) (remarks of Sen. Garn) ("[a]lthough both of the bills introduced in the House and Senate purport to prohibit harassment and abusive tactics, in reality they provide a Federal mechanism for the minute regulation of the internal business operations of the debt collection industry. . . . The debt collector is severely limited in contacts that can be made with the consumer at his place of employment or home").
19 H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 803 (1976).
20 E.g., H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 803 (1976); S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804 (1977).
21 Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977).
22 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(1).
23 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(3).
24 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(6).
25 Compare Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1977), with H.R. 5294, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804 (1977) (as passed by Senate).
26 See § 5.2.9, infra.
27 The term "communication" is the focus of § 4.2, supra, and Appx. E.1.5, infra.
28 The term "communication" is the focus of § 4.2, supra, and Appx. E.1.5, infra.

Tenth Circuits have found that, to constitute a communication under FDCPA § 1692b, a message must at least imply the existence of a debt.[29]

The Fifth Circuit found that a debt collector's call to, and conversation with, a consumer's sister did not violate FDCPA § 1692b because it did not convey information about the debt.[30] However, the collector called looking for the consumer, not seeking location information, and, when the sister asked "where are you from?" the collector responded "Bay Area Credit Service."[31] The Tenth Circuit, in Marx v. General Revenue Corp.,[32] found FDCPA § 1692b did not apply to the debt collector's fax to a consumer's employer, as it did not convey information directly or indirectly regarding a debt. The fax displayed the name "GRC," the GRC logo, address, phone number, and an ID number for the consumer's account. The fax sought the consumer's employment status, hire date, corporate payroll address, position, and whether the individual works full- or part-time. The Sixth Circuit agreed with Marx that FDCPA § 1692b did not apply to a collector's voicemail left at the consumer's work that stated the caller's name, return number, and reference number, because it did not convey information regarding the debt.[33]

Under this interpretation, however, FDCPA § 1692b's location provision would be extremely limited—as it would never apply where the debt collector does not indicate to the third party that the consumer owes a debt. This is not what Congress intended when drafting FDCPA § 1692b. A collector should still have to comply with the restrictions in section 1692b when contacting a third party, regardless of whether or not they imply the existence of a debt.

A number of federal district courts have found that there was a communication for FDCPA § 1692b purposes, even where the debt collector's communication did not disclose information about a specific debt to the third-party.[34] As one court noted:

> [A] review of section 1692c(b), in connection with the entire statutory scheme, indicates that Congress intended to broadly regulate contact between the debt collectors and third parties. . . . If the court were to adopt Defendant's interpretation of section 1692c(b) and construe the provision as only prohibiting third party communications in which some information about a debt is actually disclosed, section 1692b would be superfluous. . . . If Congress had intended for the statute to be interpreted in this manner, it would not have drafted section 1692b.[35]

5.2.5 FDCPA § 1692b Does Not Apply to Communications with the Consumer

To be covered under FDCPA § 1692b, the collector's communications must be with anyone other than the consumer—such as with a friend, neighbor, employer, or adult child—and must be for the purpose of locating the consumer. Communications delivered to the consumer, even if they could be seen by other parties, are not covered by this provision.[36]

29 Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 703 (10th Cir. 2016); Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740, 742 (6th Cir. 2015); Marx v. General Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 2011). See also Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049 (7th Cir. 2019) (emails that did not include any information about debt were not communications for § 1692g(a) purposes).

30 Fontana v. HOVG L.L.C., 989 F.3d 338 (5th Cir. 2021).

31 Id.

32 668 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 2011). See also Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 703 (10th Cir. 2016) (debt collector's call to consumer's apartment manager, that allegedly was to confirm consumer's address, was not considered a "communication" under FDCPA, because debt collector did not refer to any debt owed by consumer during phone call).

33 Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015) (rejecting argument that narrow interpretation of definition of "communication" in § 1692a(2) would make § 1692b(2) and (5) redundant, because § 1692b provides valuable protection for debt collectors engaging in the single, important activity of seeking location of missing debtors). See also Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049, 1055 (7th Cir. 2019) (debt collector's message must at least imply existence of debt to meet Act's definition of "communication" for purposes of § 1692g(a); emails that only contained name and email address of debt collector did not constitute such communications); Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 179 F. Supp. 2d 861 (N.D. Ill. 2002), aff'd, 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (collector calling consumer's co-worker did not discuss consumer's debt; no violation of § 1692c(b)); Boozer v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C. 2019 WL 5295730 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2019); Thompson v. Nationwide Debt Mgmt. Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4574566, at *4 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 13, 2017) (phone calls did not constitute § 1692a(2) "communications," as they did not mention debt or directly ask for location information); Litt v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 146 F. Supp. 3d 857 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 20, 2015).

34 Thomas v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 579 F. Supp. 2d 1290, 1296–1297 (E.D. Mo. 2008) (agency's employee's conversation with girlfriend was "communication" under FDCPA even though employee did not impart debt information); Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (debt collector's message stating that it was a call from NCO Financial Systems considered communication); Belin v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2006 WL 1992410, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2006) (messages that gave phone number to call, directions to have debtor call that number, were communications under FDCPA); West v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 998 F. Supp. 642, 645 (W.D.N.C. 1998) (telephone call to neighbor requesting that he ask consumer to call back on "very important" matter was communication under FDCPA). See also Miller v. Prompt Recovery Services, 2013 WL 3200659, *11 (N.D. Ohio June 24, 2013) (collector's call to consumer's son, in which he did not discuss debt, nor request location information, found to have no other legitimate purpose and violated § 1692c(b); discussing and rejecting narrow definition of communication in Marx: "Given the purpose of the FDCPA, and its broad reach, it seems unlikely that Congress intended to define the term 'communication' so narrowly that it would essentially sanction the use of third-parties to coerce payment.").

35 West v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 998 F. Supp. 642, 644–645 (W.D.N.C. 1998).

36 Mora v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 408 F. Supp. 3d 297, 303–304 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 8, 2019) (LVNV's affixing of summons and complaint to consumer's front door without envelope or other wrapping to conceal contents of documents was not violation of § 1692b because summons and complaint were delivered to the consumer; their purpose was not to acquire location information about her).

5.2.6 FDCPA § 1692b Only Applies Where Purpose Is to Acquire Location Information

The FDCPA § 1692b exception to the general prohibition of third-party contacts applies only if the collector is attempting to obtain location information, defined as "a consumer's place of abode and his telephone number at such place, or his place of employment."[37] The location purpose of a debt collector's contacts with third parties may be indicated by the debt collector disclosing the purpose,[38] by asking for the consumer's contact information,[39] or by the collector's notes. In one case, a court refused to infer that fourteen calls to the consumer's brother-in-law were to obtain location information because the debt collector asserted that the calls were made to talk to the consumer, who had given that phone number as his contact phone.[40]

The FTC staff has stated that the collector may contact third parties to confirm location when the collector has good reason to believe the location information in the consumer's file is stale.[41] Once the collector has either the consumer's home address and phone number or work address, its future activities do not fall within this exception because it may no longer claim to be communicating for the purpose of acquiring location information.[42] A debt collector's communication to a third party that it would "come after" the consumer for a payment of the debt went beyond solely acquiring location information.[43]

5.2.7 Burden of Proof Under FDCPA § 1692b

FDCPA § 1692c(b) begins: "Except as provided in section 1692b . . . a debt collector . . . may not communicate . . . with any person . . ." The Third[44] and Tenth[45] Circuits hold that because section 1692b is an exception to section 1692c(b)'s broad prohibition of third-party contacts, the burden is on the debt collector to prove that the challenged third-party communications fit within section 1692b's exception for acquisition of location information.[46] The Ninth Circuit analyzed 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act by comparing it to FDCPA § 1692b(3), finding that both provisions are affirmative defenses for which the creditor bears the burden of proof.[47]

37 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(7); Reg. F § 1006.10(a). See Cozmyk v. Fin. Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 2088766 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2012); Krapf v. Collectors Training Inst. of Ill., Inc., 2010 WL 584020 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 16, 2010) (contact with consumer's employer "did not involve an inquiry into Consumer's location information, but rather, revealed that Consumer had a 'business matter,' and because the defendant "later placed another call to Consumer's employer in an attempt to use Consumer's employer as a means of inducing Consumer to return Defendant's call"). See also Shand-Pistilli v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2010 WL 2978029 (E.D. Pa. July 26, 2010) (inquiry into current employment status went beyond boundaries of location information); Kwait, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 24, 1989), reproduced at Appx C.3.2, infra; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-2 ("debt collector may not call third parties under the pretense of gaining information already in his possession"), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra. Cf. Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (violation of § 1692c(b), but no violation of § 1692b(2) absent communication to acquire location information).

38 See Lynn v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1247815 (D. Md. Mar. 25, 2013) (triable issue of fact as to whether call was seeking location information from third party or whether it was wrong-number call intended for debtor where debt collector had admitted that, while reaching debtor was its primary motive, its secondary motive was locating debtor).

39 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012).

40 Kenny v. Mercantile Adjustment Bur., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1855782 (W.D.N.Y. May 1, 2013). See also Hamburger v. Northland Group, Inc., 2015 WL 631066 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 12, 2015) (evidence indicated collector's calls were to talk to son, not locate him); Williams v. Web Equity Holdings, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3845952 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 5, 2014) (parents' pleadings failed to reveal inquiry about debtor's (their son's) whereabouts); Schwinn v. Shapiro & Ingle, L.L.P., 2013 WL 1010457 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 13, 2013) (sending foreclosure notices to homeowner at his mother's and son's addresses failed to state § 1692b claim, as there was no allegation of location purpose for sending letters; claim under § 1692c(b) stated).

41 See Kwait, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 24, 1989). See also Allen v. Checkredi of Kentucky, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4791947 (E.D. Ky. Nov. 17, 2010) (multiple calls to obtain address acceptable).

42 See Hultman v. Prof'l Choice Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 2963869 (D. Neb. June 9, 2017) (creditor had given collector consumer's work phone number so that collector could not claim voicemails collector left at consumer's work were to acquire location information); Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Mich. 2012) (collector had already gotten in touch with consumer and was already aware of the consumers' location); Quigley v. Verizon Wireless, 2012 WL 1945784 (N.D. Cal. May 30, 2012) (court allowed leave to amend complaint for consumer to add that "at all times when ER was communicating with his son, it knew of his place of abode, his telephone number at such place, and his place of employment," to address collector's § 1692b claim); Kempa v. Cadlerock Joint Ventures, L.P., 2011 WL 761500 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2011); Baker v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1365002 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 11, 2009) (no bona fide error defense where debt collector called third parties after consumer provided location information); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(7) (other information, e.g., work phone number, is not location information), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Davignon, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 7, 1980). But cf. Kwait, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 24, 1989); Cinalli, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 17, 1978).

43 See Fajer v. Kaufman, Burns & Assoc., 2011 WL 334311 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 28, 2011).

44 Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C.,793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015).

45 Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 705 (10th Cir. 2016) (§ 1692b provides limited exception to liability under § 1692c(b), not separate basis for liability).

46 See also Garner v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 8294293, at *4 (6th Cir. Oct. 27, 2017) (because § 1692a(6)(F) is exception to generally applicable definition of "debt collector," defendant bears burden of showing that exception to rule applies). For more discussion of burden of proof for FDCPA exceptions, see § 11.6.6, infra.

47 Nyab v. Capital One Bank, 942 F.3d 480, 498–499 (9th Cir. Oct. 31, 2019).

5.2.8 Required Disclosures While Seeking Location Information

If a debt collector wishes to avail itself of the exception allowing third party contacts seeking to find location information, the collector must identify themselves individually, state that they are confirming or correcting the consumer's location information, and, only if expressly requested, identify their employer.[48]

FDCPA § 1692b says that the collection employee "must identify himself" and Regulation F § 1006.10(b)(1) (effective November 30, 2021) further specifies that the employee must "[i]dentify himself or herself individually by name."

One question is whether the employee must use the employee's real name or can use an alias. Reg. F states that the use of employee aliases is not prohibited under the regulations implementing FDCPA § 1692e as long as the employee "uses the assumed name consistently and . . . the debt collector can readily identify any employee using an assumed name."[49] The obligation is not only on the employee, but also on the employer to have a system in place that can effectively and readily identify the employee based on the alias.[50] Precedent prior to Reg. F concerning the use of an employee alias is examined at § 6.8, infra. The employee may identify the name of the employer only upon request,[51] and then must reveal the true legal name.[52]

If the debt collector leaves a message for a third party, it must disclose that the call is to obtain contact information about the named consumer.[53] A voicemail message left for a third party does not meet the criteria for a limited-content message as defined by Reg. F § 1006.2(j) because it is not a message for the consumer.[54]

5.2.9 Collector Must Not Indicate the Consumer Owes a Debt

5.2.9.1 Generally

FDCPA § 1692b(2), (4), and (5) limits communications seeking location information that reveal that a consumer owes a debt or has a debt in collections:

- Section 1692b(2) prohibits the collector from stating that the consumer owes a debt;
- Section 1692b(4) prohibits any communication by post card;
- Section 1692b(5) prohibits a debt collector from using any language, or symbol in any communication or on any envelope indicating that the consumer owes a debt, that it is in the collection business, or that the communication relates to debt collection.[55]

According to the FTC staff, FDCPA § 1692b(1), which permits a collector to reveal the name of its employer upon the third party's request, is an exception to section 1692b(5).[56]

FDCPA § 1692b(2) is violated when a collector leaves messages on a third party's voicemail revealing that the agency is collecting on a debt owed by the consumer.[57] FDCPA § 1692b(5) is violated where a fax sent to a consumer's employer seeking employment verification indicates that the communication is from a debt collector or relates to debt collection.[58] The applicability of each provision hinges on whether the debt collector's contact constitutes a "communication" under the FDCPA as discussed at § 5.2.4, supra.

48 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(1); Reg. F § 1006.10(b)(1). See Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012) (failed to comply with § 1692b(1)'s requirements); Davis-Fisk v. Overton, Russell, Doerr & Donovan, L.L.P., 2018 WL 4509489 (N.D.N.Y. 2018) (default judgment for consumer where she alleged collector did not state that he was confirming or correcting location information); Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Mich. 2012); Puttner v. Debt Consultants of Am., 2009 WL 1604570 (S.D. Cal. June 4, 2009) (complaint stated claim alleging that collectors called consumer's parents without stating that they were confirming or correcting location information); Thomas v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 579 F. Supp.1290, 1297 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 30, 2008) (debt collector's request to third party for "better number" to reach debtor "real quick" did not meet safe harbor of § 1692b(1)); Cinalli, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 17, 1978); Charest, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 13, 1996), reproduced at Appx. C.3.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

49 Reg. F § 1006.18(f). See § 7.3.14.3, infra.

50 See § 7.3.14.3, infra.

51 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(1); Reg. F § 1006.10(b)(1). See also Clark v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2005 WL 1586862 (D. Or. June 30, 2005) (denying summary judgment to defendant where collector gave agency's name to employer, which would be proper only if collector were seeking location information and not if calling to reach debtor).

52 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(14) (use of true name). FTC Official Staff Commentary § 804-2 ("When asked, however, he must give the true and full name of the employer, to comply with this provision and avoid a violation of §807(14)."), reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra; § 3.4.4.4, supra.

53 See Cathcart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 27, 1979), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

54 See § 4.9, supra (discussing limited content messages).

55 See also Reg. F § 1006.10(b)(2), (3), (4).

56 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 804-4 ("A debt collector may not use his actual name in his letterhead or elsewhere in a written communication seeking location information, if the name indicates collection activity (such as a name containing the word "debt", "collector", or "collection"), except when the person contacted has expressly requested that the debt collector identify himself."), reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra; § 3.4.4.4, supra. See Jackson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 128 F. Supp. 3d 980 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (post judgment fax to consumer's employer seeking employment verification with "COLLECTION" on both pages constituted communication that violated § 1692b(5) and § 1692c(b)). See also Davignon, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 7, 1980); Kennedy, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 10, 1978), reproduced at Appx. C.3.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

57 Clayson v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 751 F. Supp. 2d 491 (Nov. 16, 2010). But see Cozmyk v. Fin. Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 2088766 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2012) (when debt collector communicates with third party, message is not communication until it is received or understood by third party).

58 See Jackson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 128 F. Supp. 3d 980 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (post judgment fax to consumer's employer seeking employment verification with "COLLECTION" on both pages constituted communication that violated § 1692b(5) and § 1692c(b)). But see Marx v. General Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. Dec. 21, 2011) (fax sent to consumer's employer for employment verification that included collector's logo was not communication, because it did not convey information regarding debt).

5.2.9.2 Exception Where Consumer Is Deceased

When the consumer is deceased, the collector may wish not just to locate the contact information of the individual responsible for paying the estate's debts, but to identify who that individual is. In seeking the identity of that person, the question is raised whether the collector can ask third parties who is responsible for handling the financial affairs of the deceased, or whether this conflicts with the FDCPA § 1692b(2) prohibition that the collector not state to third parties that the consumer owes a debt.

The Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) interpretations resolve this by allowing the debt collector to state to third parties that the debt collector is seeking to identify and locate the person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate. The debt collector may also state that the debt collector is seeking to identify and locate the person handling the financial affairs of the deceased consumer.[59]

Previously, the FTC in 2011 announced a different approach in an enforcement policy where it would not pursue collectors for violating FDCPA § 1692b(2) in certain circumstances,[60] but the CFPB declined to adopt the same language approved by the FTC when it finalized Reg. F.[61]

The CFPB declined to require collectors first to check public records to identify the person responsible for the estate's debts. Nevertheless, the rule's supplemental information states that "[t]he Bureau supports the FTC's encouragement for debt collectors to make good-faith efforts to search public records before communicating with a deceased consumer's estate."[62]

5.2.10 Limits on the Number of Location Communications

FDCPA § 1692b(3) provides that, if a debt collector is communicating with a third party to locate a consumer, the collector cannot "communicate with any such person more than once unless requested to do so by such person or unless the debt collector reasonably believes that the earlier response of such person is erroneous or incomplete and that such person now has correct or complete location information."[63]

The Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) version of FDCPA § 1692b(3) adds the phrase "In addition to complying with § 1006.14(b)(1),"[64] which prohibits "plac[ing] telephone calls or engag[ing] any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number."[65]

Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) provides standards to determine a presumption as to whether the collector has violated section 1006.14(b)(1). First, a violation is presumed[66] if the collector places a telephone call more than seven times in seven days.[67] The official interpretations clarifies that this presumptive limit applies to collector calls seeking location information from third parties.[68] The presumptive limit in Reg. F. § 1006.14(b)(2) applies to calls to "a particular person," meaning that these presumptive limits apply separately to each third-party and consumer that the collector attempts to call.

However, with the limited exception of certain student loan debts, the call frequency limit applies per debt in collection.[69] As a result, a debt collector can place telephone calls to a third party to obtain location information far more frequently if a consumer has multiple accounts in collection with the same collector (e.g. up to 35 telephone calls per week to the third-party if the consumer has five accounts in collection with that same collector).

Once the debt collector actually communicates with a third party to obtain location information, it is prohibited from communicating with that third party again "unless requested to do so by such person or unless the debt collector reasonably believes that the earlier response of such person is erroneous or incomplete and that such person now has correct or complete location information."[70] If one of the exceptions apply and a second communication is permissible, the debt collector cannot have a second phone conversation within seven days of the first phone conversation.[71]

While not addressed in Regulation F, the FTC's Official Staff Commentary previously clarified that, "[a] debt collector may not leave telephone messages with neighbors when the debt collector knows the consumer's name and telephone number and could have reached him directly."[72]

Litigation regarding the FDCPA § 1692b(3) statutory provision prior to the Regulation F enactment relates to the collector's justification for multiple contacts, where it claims it reasonably believes a third party can obtain location information, and that the additional contacts are made to learn if the party has obtained the information.[73] The Fourth Circuit

59 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 10b(2)-1.

60 FTC Statement of Policy Regarding Communications in Connection with the Collection of Decedents' Debts, 76 Fed. Reg. 44,915 (July 27, 2011), available at www.ftc.gov.

61 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,798–76,799 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("[I]n its Policy Statement on Decedent Debt, the FTC stated that it would refrain from taking enforcement action under FDCPA section 804(2) against debt collectors who state that they are seeking to locate a person 'with the authority to pay any outstanding bills of the decedent out of the decedent's estate.'").

62 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,799 (Nov. 30, 2020).

63 See also Reg. F § 1006.10(c).

64 Reg. F § 1006.10(c).

65 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1). See § 6.7.2, infra.

66 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(ii). See § 6.7.2, infra.

67 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B). See § 6.7.2, infra.

68 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(iii); 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,799 (Nov. 30, 2020).

69 Reg. F § 1006(b)(4). See § 6.7.2, infra.

70 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(3).

71 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B). See § 6.7.2, infra.

72 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977) (prohibiting a second call to leave a message with a relative of the consumer), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

73 Kuntz v. Rodenburg L.L.P., 838 F.3d 923 (8th Cir. 2016) (where debtor's father told collection law firm that he wanted to call his daughter and check with her before responding further, it was reasonable for in one case ruled that a collector could continue calling the third party until it reasonably believed that it had received a complete response.[74] Even where a court allows repeated calls pursuant to this exception to FDCPA § 1692b(3), the calls may violate section 1692d(5) if they become so frequent as to be abusive.[75]

5.2.11 No Communication Allowed If Consumer Is Represented

FDCPA § 1692b(6) provides that a debt collector seeking a consumer's location information from a third party shall not do so after it learns the consumer is represented by an attorney with regard to the debt and knows or can readily ascertain the attorney's name and address.[76] The collector instead must communicate only with the attorney for location information, unless the attorney fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to the debt collector's communication.[77] This requirement may prevent the debt collector from contacting a credit reporting agency to obtain a represented consumer's contact information.[78] collector to believe that parent had or could obtain location information, permitting follow-up call to learn if he had acquired or was now willing to provide correct or complete location information); Worsham v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 497 Fed. Appx. 274 (4th Cir. 2012) (repeated calls to consumer's brother-in-law to find her location were permitted where brother-in-law responded, but without providing location information); Allen v. Checkredi of Kentucky, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4791947 (E.D. Ky. Nov. 17, 2010); Sclafani v. BC Services, Inc., 2010 WL 4116471 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 18, 2010); Kasalo v. Monco Law Offices, S.C., 2009 WL 4639720 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 7, 2009) (applying exception for "erroneous or incomplete information" where collector called consumer's parents when consumer's attorney did not return phone calls).

74 Worsham v. Account Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 497 Fed. Appx. 274 (4th Cir. Nov. 14, 2012). But cf. Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015) (collector who contacted consumer's daughter and neighbors more than once without permission, leaving several messages for consumer to call them in violation of § 1692c(b), failed to meet its burden of proving it fit into any exception under § 1692b)).

75 See Sclafani v. BC Services, Inc., 2010 WL 4116471 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 18, 2010); Deas v. Am. Recovery Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 3514560 (N.D. Miss. Oct. 29, 2009) (debt collection agency violated §§ 1692b(3), 1692d, and 1692d(5) by placing dozens of telephone calls to plaintiff's home, purportedly attempting to locate third-party debtor, after plaintiff informed agency that debtor did not live at his residence and requested that they cease calling).

76 See Reg. F § 1006.10(b)(5); Gustin v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2014 WL 1923735 (N.D. Ala. May 13, 2014) (allowing claim under § 1692b (6) to go to jury where collector called consumer's aunt for location information when it knew consumer was represented); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 804-5, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Stockham, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 15, 1986), discussed at § 3.3.4.4, supra. Cf. Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926, 942, n.2 (9th Cir. 2007) (discussing role of consumer and attorney for purposes of FDCPA including that when debt collector "knows that a consumer has retained counsel with regard to the subject debt, he may not generally contact anyone other than that attorney to determine the consumer's whereabouts").

77 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(6).

78 See Valdez v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2010 WL 4643272 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 16, 2010).

5.2.12 Enforcement of FDCPA § 1692b

The Seventh Circuit, in Todd v. Collecto, Inc., found that the third party receiving the contact does not have standing to enforce FDCPA § 1692b or the related provision of section 1692c(b).[79] While recognizing that some FDCPA provisions, such as section 1692f, protect third parties, the Seventh Circuit refused to find that a son who had been contacted for his mother's location could obtain FDCPA relief for the debt collector revealing his mother's debt to him. Other courts however have ruled otherwise.[80]

It is unclear whether the consumer can sue directly for a violation of FDCPA § 1692b, or whether the section 1692b violation means the collector no longer has the protection of section 1692b for the third-party contact, so that the collector has instead violated the general rule against third-party contacts found in section 1692c(b). The Eleventh Circuit indicates the consumer can sue directly under FDCPA § 1692b.[81] The Third and Tenth Circuits though find that FDCPA § 1692b is a type of affirmative defense or safe harbor for debt collectors and is not an independent FDCPA claim for the consumer.[82]

5.3 Communication with the Consumer Generally, FDCPA § 1692c(a)

5.3.1 Overview

FDCPA § 1692c(a) prohibits three practices in connection with collection of a debt:

- Communication at unusual or inconvenient times or places, section 1692c(a)(1);[83]
- Communication with a consumer known to be represented by an attorney, section 1692c(a)(2);[84] and
- Communication with consumers at their workplace when the employer prohibits such contacts, section 1692c(a)(3).[85]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) clarifies that FDCPA § 1692c(a) prohibits not only certain types of actual communication with the consumer, but also attempts

79 731 F.3d 734 (7th Cir. 2013).

80 See, e.g., Kuntz v. Rodenburg, L.L.P., 2014 WL 12841784 (D.N.D. Dec. 19, 2014) (father stated claim where debt collector communicated with him more than once for purpose of acquiring location information about his daughter, in violation of § 1692b).

81 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012). See also Kuntz v. Rodenburg, L.L.P., 2014 WL 12841784 (D.N.D. Dec. 19, 2014) (father stated claim where debt collector communicated with him more than once for purpose of acquiring location information about his daughter, in violation of § 1692b). Cf. Todd v. Collecto, Inc., 731 F.3d 734 (7th Cir. 2013) (§ 1692b(2) is privacy protection for consumer who supposedly owes debt).

82 Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015); Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 703 (10th Cir. 2016).

83 See § 5.4, infra.

84 See § 5.5, infra.

85 See § 5.6, infra.

to communicate.[86] For example, the prohibition on calling at unusual or inconvenient times includes persistent calls at inconvenient times where the consumer does not answer the phone, so that there is no communication, only attempted communication.[87]

There are three preconditions to a debt collector's liability for any of these three prohibitions. The communication or attempted communication must be:

- A communication with the consumer in connection with the collection of any debt;[88]
- Without the consumer's prior consent;[89] and
- Without a court's express permission.[90]

5.3.2 Prohibitions Apply to Communications in Connection with Collection of a Debt

In order for the restrictions found in FDCPA § 1692c(a) to apply, a communication must be made to the consumer "in connection with the collection of any debt."[91] This section discusses a few relevant FDCPA § 1692c cases interpreting "in connection with the collection of any debt." For a more general discussion of cases interpreting "in connection with the collection of any debt" that cuts across different sections of the FDCPA, see § 4.3, supra. The term communication also contains similar language "conveying of information regarding a debt," which is analyzed in detail at § 4.2, supra.

In cases involving FDCPA § 1692c(a), courts have found communications not in connection with the collection of a debt where the communication states it was for informational purposes only and not an attempt to collect a debt,[92] where collection of a debt was not referenced in the communication,[93] or where the communication does not state it is from a debt collector.[94]

But a communication not mentioning a debt can be in connection with collection of a debt where the consumer is asked to call a phone number and the number is the agency's collection service.[95]

86 See Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1), (2), (3). "Attempt to communicate" is defined at Reg. F § 1006.2(b), and discussed at § 4.2, supra.

87 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,759 (Nov. 30, 2020).

88 See § 5.3.2, infra.

89 See § 5.3.3, infra.

90 See § 5.3.4, infra.

91 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a).

92 Collazo v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 443 F. Supp. 3d 398, 400–401 (W.D.N.Y. 2020).

93 Cf. Morgan v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 719 Fed. Appx. 735, 745–746 (10th Cir. Dec. 12, 2017) (no communication in connection with collection of debt where contacts with third party did not reference debt); Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 703 (10th Cir. 2016) (no communication in connection with collection of debt where phone call to third party did not reference debt).

94 Collazo v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 443 F. Supp. 3d 398, 400–401 (W.D.N.Y. 2020).

95 See Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4264967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 8, 2019); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018); Simpson v. Safeguard Prop., L.L.C., 2015 WL 2193135 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2015).

5.3.3 Consumer's Prior Consent to the Communication

FDCPA § 1692c(a)'s three prohibitions[96] as to collector communications do not apply if the consumer has provided "prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector."[97] The burden is on the collector to show such consent. Several 1977 House bills[98] and a 1976 Senate bill[99] required that consumers plead and prove the absence of prior consent when alleging violations of these provisions. These requirements were dropped in later Senate bills shifting the burden of proof to the debt collector.

The FDCPA and Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) are clear that the consent must be "prior."[100] Consent cannot be obtained during a collector-initiated communication. For example, if the debt collector learns during a communication that it is communicating at an inconvenient time or place, the collector may ask the consumer during that communication what time or place would be convenient, but the FDCPA prohibits the collector from asking the consumer to consent to the continuation of that inconvenient communication that the collector has just initiated.[101] The prior consent must be "meaningful" and "voluntary."[102] Although there is no requirement that the prior consent be in writing, a cautious collector would obtain it in this form.[103]The statute and Reg. F are also clear that the consumer must give prior consent directly to the debt collector;[104] consent provided for in the credit agreement is not effective.[105] Nor can a debt collector rely on the consumer's prior consent given to a creditor or to a 96 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(1), (2), (3), discussed at §§ 5.4, 5.5, and 5.6, infra.

97 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a); Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(4)(i). See also Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 1010 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2013) (consumer consented to receive default notices from debt collector in stipulation agreement; collector did not violate § 1692c(a)(2) by sending notices, despite fact that consumer had retained attorney in interim).

98 E.g., H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(e) (1976); H.R. 5294 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(e) (1977). See § 3.4.2.1, supra.

99 S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(f) (1976). See § 3.4.2.1, supra.

100 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a); Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(4)(i); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-1.

101 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-1.

102 See H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977) ("The Committee intends that in section 804 the 'prior consent' be meaningful, i.e., that any prior consent by a consumer is to be voluntary consent . . ."). See Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006). See also Taylor, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 3, 1978), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

103 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

104 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a); Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(4)(i); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-2.

105 See H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977) ("The Committee intends that in section 804 the 'prior consent' . . . shall be expressed by the consumer directly to the debt collector. Consequently, the Committee intends that any term in a contract which requires a consumer to consent in advance to debt collection communication would not constitute 'prior consent' by such consumer.").

previous debt collector.[106] The consumer may limit the consent to a particular time period, person, or context.[107]

5.3.4 A Court's Express Permission for the Communication

FDCPA § 1692c(a)'s three prohibitions[108] as to collector communications do not apply if the collector has the "express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction."[109] Such permission might involve a court order in a particular case permitting a debt collector to contact a represented consumer directly.[110]

Courts are split on whether court procedural rules amount to "express permission of a court." The Seventh Circuit found that where an attorney represented the consumer, but the attorney did not file an appearance, the collector could send pleadings directly to the consumer under state court rules.[111] A Massachusetts federal court rejected such an interpretation and found that:

> [I]nterpreting "express permission of a court" to mean "express permission" in a state law fails to afford "court" its plain and ordinary meaning. See Black's Law Dictionary 356 (7th ed. 1999). Furthermore, the fact that the next subsection of section 1692c expressly allows a communication that is "otherwise permitted by law" evidences a Congressional intention not to allow such an exception in section 1692c(a)(2).[112]

Express permission of a court is different than permitted by a rule or statute.

Where a federal requirement conflicts with the prohibitions found in FDCPA § 1692c(a), a court may find that the other federal statute prevails. A court has held that a mortgage servicer could send monthly statements to a consumer known to be represented by an attorney, as Truth in Lending Act regulations provided that the statements were to be sent to the consumer.[113]

Less clear is where a state law requires that notices in connection with collection of a debt be sent to a consumer. Some lower courts hold that the notices should be sent only to the represented consumer's lawyer,[114] but other courts allow them to be sent to the consumer.[115]

106 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-2.

107 See generally Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006).

108 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(1), (2), (3), discussed at §§ 5.4, 5.5, and 5.6, infra.

109 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a). See also Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(4)(ii).

110 See Resler v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2003 WL 193498, at *4 (D. Minn. Jan. 23, 2003) (mailing of writ of execution directly to represented consumer did not violate § 1692c(a)(2) as writ was issued directly to consumer as required by state law, and thus within exception of § 1692c(a) for communications with express permission of court, because "the state court's default judgment was in effect that court's permission to follow the collection procedures outlined in Minnesota law, including service of the levy directly on the judgment debtor"); McKneelen, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 4, 1987) (post judgment court order to contact represented consumer), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

111 Holcomb v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg, L.L.C., 900 F.3d 990, 922–933 (7th Cir. Aug. 21, 2018) (consumer's attorney had appeared in two hearings but had not filed written appearance; filing appearance was necessary to acquire status of "attorney of record" for purposes of state rule). See also Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak, 392 F.3d 914 (7th Cir. 2004) (in dicta, reasoning that summons and complaint could be served on represented consumer to extent allowed by state procedural rules, as that would come within § 1692c(a) exception for "communications with the express permission of the court"); Baranowski v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2017 WL 3278322 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2017) (either Illinois Supreme Court Rule allowing notices to be sent to party whose lawyer has withdrawn or state court's ruling allowing service of notice on consumer amounted to "express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction" to send notice to consumer); Foh v. Chase, 2015 WL 5254312 (M.D.N.C. Sept. 9, 2015); Palisades Collection, L.L.C. v. Kuchinsky, 2014 WL 7883575 (N.J. Super. App. Div. Feb. 18, 2015).

112 McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1, 70 (D. Mass. 2012). See also Washington v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 211 F. Supp. 3d 1041, 1056 (N.D. Ill. 2016), reconsideration denied, 2017 WL 2958250 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2017) (§ 1692c(a)(2) provides greater protection to consumers than Illinois garnishment statute by preventing debt collectors from directly contacting debtors who have retained counsel); Fisher v. Bernhardt & Strawser, P.A., 2013 WL 3990744, at *13 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013).

113 See Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2016). But see Crespo v. Butler & Hosch, P.A., 2014 WL 11531360 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 21, 2014) (denying summary judgment for foreclosing law firm on its bona fide error defense to § 1692c(a)(2) violation, since jury could reasonably conclude that its procedures were not reasonably adapted to avoid error). See also CFPB Advisory Opinion, Safe Harbors from Liability under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act for Certain Actions Taken in Compliance with Mortgage Servicing Rules under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (Regulation X) and the Truth in Lending Act (Regulation Z), 81 Fed. Reg. 71,977 (Oct. 19, 2016) (addressing communications with successors in interest and providing early intervention notices and responding to borrower-initiated communications after invoking cease communication right under FDCPA §1692c).

114 Bob Fisher v. Bernhardt & Strawser, 2013 WL 3990744 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013) (sending state court conference notice to represented consumer violated § 1692c(a)(2)); McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1, 71 (D. Mass. 2012) (sending state-mandated delinquency notice to represented consumer prohibited); Johnson v. Statewide Collections, Inc., 778 P.2d 93 (Wyo. 1989) (demand for payment of dishonored check that was required by state statute to represented consumer violated FDCPA).

115 Mavroff v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2015 WL 9581763 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 30, 2015); Hooks v. Forman Holt Eliades & Ravin L.L.C., 2012 WL 3322637 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 13, 2012) (acceptable to send state required foreclosure notice); Vitullo v. Mancini, 684 F. Supp. 2d 747 (E.D. Va. 2010) (foreclosure attorney's pursuit of non-judicial foreclosure by sending notice of foreclosure directly to consumer known to be represented by counsel did not violate FDCPA, because consumer's lawyer did not give foreclosure attorney notice that foreclosure notice should be sent to him). See also Davis v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 7117185 (D. Kan. Dec. 7, 2016) (granting consumer leave to amend because court could not determine, as a matter of law, that collector's letter sent to represented consumer requesting more detail about consumer's dispute of its report to consumer reporting agency, was or was not "in connection with the collection of a debt").

5.4 Contacts at Unusual or Inconvenient Times or Places, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1)

5.4.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1)

(a) Communication with the consumer generally—Without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, a debt collector may not communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt—

(1) at any unusual time or place or a time or place known or which should be known as inconvenient to the consumer. In the absence of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, a debt collector shall assume that the convenient time for communicating with a consumer is after 8 o'clock [a.m.] and before 9 o'clock [p.m.], local time at the consumer's location[.][116]

A provision similar to this was present in each bill preceding the final Act. Early bills prohibited all contacts from 9:00 p.m. to 8:00 a.m., but the Senate changed the bill to include only a presumption that the time period is inconvenient.[117] The Senate also extended the provision to prohibit contacts at unusual or inconvenient places.[118] The original House bill permitted contacts until 10:00 p.m., but later bills used the 9:00 p.m. limit.[119] The prohibition against contacting a consumer at an inconvenient or unusual place was added by a Senate bill, S.918,[120] late in the 1977 legislative process.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) generally tracks this provision but clarifies that it applies to attempts to communicate at unusual or inconvenient times or places, and not just communications at those times or places.[121] For example, the prohibition on calling at unusual or inconvenient times or places includes persistent calls at inconvenient times where the consumer does not answer the phone, so that there is no communication, only an attempt at communication.[122]

5.4.2 Contacts at Inconvenient Times

FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) creates a presumption that any communication received between 9:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. was made at an unusual or inconvenient time. The parallel provision in Regulation F § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) (effective November 30, 2021) clarifies that this provision applies to any mode of communication between 9:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m., including emails, text messages, and other modes of electronic communication.[123] Consequently, collectors cannot send texts or emails during those hours, even if not viewed by the consumer at that time.[124]

This time-period applies regardless of the day of the week that the collector is communicating.[125] Consumers and debt collectors must provide specific evidence regarding the times communications were made to support a claim or defense.[126]

The presumptively inconvenient time period is calculated in local time at the consumer's location, so debt collectors must take into account the consumer's time zone when determining when to communicate. The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and Federal Trade Commission have required two of the largest debt collectors to consider the consumer's zip code and area code to determine the convenient time to call in each time zone.[127]

Many consumers' cell phone area codes are associated with an area of the country quite distant from the consumer's home address. If a debt collector has conflicting or ambiguous information regarding a consumer's location, then, in the absence

116 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(1). See also Reg. F. § 1006.6(b)(1)(i); Appx. E.2.2.1, infra.

117 Compare S. 656, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., § 804(a)(1) (1977), with S. 918, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(a)(1) (1977).

118 Id.

119 H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(1)(C) (1976).

120 S. 918, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(a)(1) (1977).

121 See Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1).

122 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,759 (Nov. 30, 2020).

123 Reg. F Official Interpretations§ 6(b)(1)(i)-1. See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,765 (Nov. 30, 2020).

124 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-1.

125 The FTC staff initially considered Sunday presumptively inconvenient or unusual, and therefore an improper time to contact a consumer. Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 22, 1980); Coupel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 15, 1978); Hamilton, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 18, 1977). But cf. Halliday, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 25, 1986). Later, the FTC staff treated Sunday like any other day. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(a)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

126 See Garrett v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2017 WL 3193759 (M.D. Fla. July 27, 2017) (consumer presented admissible third-party phone records and testimony by Sprint representative to support her claim that calls were made outside of allowable hours); Woodward v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2014 WL 809003 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2014); Lacourte v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2013 WL 4830935 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 4, 2013) (requiring specific fact pleading of inconvenience); Turner v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 2013 WL 3441100, at *2 (D.N.J. July 9, 2013). See also Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987) (jury verdict of no liability for pre-8:00 a.m. phone call upheld because pro se debtor failed to establish any damages and collector testified that he had erroneously failed to consider difference in time zones).

127 See CFPB v. Encore Capital Group, 2015-CFPB-0022 (Sept. 9, 2015) ("In the absence of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, Encore must assume that the Consumer is located in the local time-zone associated with the United States Postal Service postal code associated with the Consumer's address or in the local time-zone associated with the area code associated with the Consumer's telephone number being dialed."); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 0:15-cv-02064 (D. Minn. Apr. 23, 2015) (unusual time includes before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m. at consumer's location, as evidenced by consumer's zip code and area code of consumer's telephone number), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov. See also Vinson v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 908 F. Supp. 2d 274 (D. Mass. 2012) (time zone governed by federal law, not local custom); Smith v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 2012 WL 3138024 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2012) (allegation that debt collector called her in U.S. at 7:00 a.m. Eastern Standard Time stated claim). But cf. Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987) (jury verdict of no liability for pre-8:00 a.m. phone call upheld because pro se debtor failed to establish any damages and collector testified that he had erroneously failed to consider difference in time zones).

of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, the debt collector complies with Reg. F. § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) if the debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with the consumer at a time that would be convenient at all of the locations at which the debt collector's information indicates the consumer might be located.[128]

For example, if a consumer's cell phone area code is associated with the Eastern time zone and a residential address with the Pacific time zone, the convenient times to communicate are after 11:00 a.m. Eastern time (8:00 a.m. Pacific time) and before 9:00 p.m. Eastern time (6:00 p.m. Pacific time).[129] Similarly, if the cell number's area code is associated with the Eastern time zone and the landline telephone number with an area code associated with the Mountain time zone, the convenient times to communicate are after 10:00 a.m. Eastern time (8:00 a.m. Mountain time) and before 9:00 p.m. Eastern time (7:00 p.m. Mountain time).[130]

For electronic communications, the applicable time is when the collector sends the communication, not when the consumer receives it or views it.[131] The collector sends the electronic communication when it is actually sent, and not when it is scheduled to be sent at a later time.[132]

Communications are also inconvenient if made at times the collector knows or should know[133] are inconvenient.[134] Collection contacts could be at an inconvenient time for the consumer for many reasons: consumers might be sleeping during the day because they work nights, or they work or care for a family member at a certain time of day. A debt collector should not phone a consumer after being told the consumer was busy serving customers.[135]

The Official Interpretations for Reg. F provide that a debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient if the consumer uses the word "inconvenient" to notify the debt collector.[136] The Interpretations provide this example:

> The consumer answers the call but states "I am busy" or "I cannot talk now." The debt collector asks the consumer when would be a convenient time. The consumer responds, "on weekdays, except from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m." The debt collector asks the consumer whether there would be a convenient time on weekends. The consumer responds "no." Based on these facts, the debt collector knows or should know that the time-period between 3:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m. on weekdays, and all times on weekends, are inconvenient to the consumer.[137]

The consumer does not have to use the word "inconvenient." The Regulation F supplemental information states:

> The Bureau declines to restrict how a consumer may designate a time or place as inconvenient. The statute does not prescribe any specific actions or require precise responses or utterances on behalf of the consumer to invoke these communications protections, and nor does this final rule impose such requirements. The Bureau determines that a flexible approach is necessary when it comes to communications, which by their very nature are dynamic, depend upon the specific circumstances, and differ from consumer to consumer. Such fluid communications cannot be scripted, nor can every permutation be anticipated.[138]

Similarly, a court held that collection calls violated FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) when made after the consumer notified the debt collector that "all phone calls are inconvenient" because of the consumer's physical condition.[139] If the collector has any doubt as to whether the consumer is indicating a time or place is inconvenient, the collector is allowed to follow-up with questions to clarify the consumer's intent, as in the prior example from the Official Interpretations where the consumer indicated the consumer "was busy."[140]

The consumer indicating clearly to the collector that a time or place is inconvenient is not the only way a collector can be so informed. Reg. F Official Interpretations provide "depending on the facts and circumstances, the debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient even if the consumer does not specifically state to the debt collector that a time or place is 'inconvenient.'"[141] The collector should know that certain days are inconvenient if the creditor provides the collector with a file on the consumer that contains recent notes that the consumer should not be disturbed on certain days[142] Regulation F has also clarified that collectors must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a person through a medium of communication after the person requested that the debt collector not use that medium of communication[143]

Because the statutory language about contacting the consumer at inconvenient times applies to "communicating with a consumer,"[144] prohibited contact is not limited to phone calls, but includes any other mode of communication.[145] The 128 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-2. See also Messing v. Rubin & Yates, L.L.C., 2014 WL 916748 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2014).

129 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-2(i).

130 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-2(ii).

131 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-1.

132 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,765 (Nov. 30, 2020).

133 See § 5.4.4, infra (discussion of known or should have known standard).

134 See Petri v. Valarity, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650911 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 13, 2015) (allegation that collection agency continued to call in evening, after expressly being asked not to do so, sufficiently stated claim under § 1692c(a)(1)); S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 2, ("Collection abuse takes many forms, including . . . telephone calls at unreasonable hours.") reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

135 Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984).

136 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1.

137 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1(ii).

138 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,761 (Nov. 30, 2020).

139 See Hilgenberg v. Elggren & Peterson, 2015 WL 4077765 (D. Utah July 6, 2015).

140 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,762 (Nov. 30, 2020).

141 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1.

142 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1(i).

143 Reg. F § 1006.14(h); § 6.9, infra.

144 See § 5.3.1, supra. See, e.g., Diaz v. D.L. Recovery Corp., 486 F. Supp. 2d 474 (E.D. Pa. 23, 2007) (§ 1692c(a) requires communication with consumer; no communication was alleged against defendant; claim was dismissed).

145 See § 4.2, supra, Appx. E.1.4.2, infra. See also Reddin v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2016 WL 3743148 (E.D. Cal. July 13, 2016) (debtor's mother not

Reg. F Official Interpretations explicitly state that if a time is inconvenient, the collector cannot send an email during that time—the applicable time is when the email is sent, not when the consumer opens it.[146]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide a limited exception to communicating at inconvenient times or places. If the consumer initiates a communication at a time previously designated as inconvenient, the collector can use the same mode of communication to respond only once at that same inconvenient time. A second such communication is not permitted unless the consumer conveys that the time is no longer inconvenient.[147] If the consumer initiates an additional communication at a time designated as inconvenient, the collector can respond again, but again only once and only with the same mode of communication.[148]

The collector's one response using the same mode of communication includes a collector response that the consumer does not answer, such as an unanswered phone call. "The Bureau determines that a debt collector's unanswered call does constitute the debt collector's one permitted reply as described under comment 6(b)(1)-1."[149] If the consumer initiates an email at a time designated as inconvenient, the collector can reply with an automated response, but that counts as the one allowed reply at that inconvenient time.[150]

If the consumer visits the collector's website or mobile application during a time the consumer has indicated as inconvenient, the collector can provide information on that website or on that mobile application in response. Once the consumer stops navigating the site or application, the collector cannot further communicate during that inconvenient time.[151]

5.4.3 Contacts at Inconvenient Places

FDCPA § 1692(c)(a)(1) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1) (effective November 30, 2021) prohibit a collector from contacting the consumer at unusual or inconvenient places, and not just unusual or inconvenient times. Examples might be a hospital, a military combat zone, a church or other place of worship, a daycare,[152] or a funeral parlor. A debt collection letter delivered to the consumer at his brother's address, at which he had never lived, was sufficiently "unusual" or "inconvenient" to state a claim under FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1).[153]

If the consumer notifies the collector or the collector otherwise knows that a place is inconvenient, then the collector should not direct communications to that place. The Reg. F Official Interpretations state that if a location, including the consumer's home, is an inconvenient place, the collector should not contact the consumer at that location, not only by calling a landline there, but also by sending mail to that address, unless the consumer qualifies the request to allow mail.[154] This restriction on a location though does not apply to emails, texts, or calls to cell phones, unless the debt collector knows that the consumer is presently at a place that it would be unusual or inconvenient to receive a communication.[155]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide that a debt collector knows or should know that a place is inconvenient if the consumer uses the word "inconvenient" to notify the debt collector.[156] The consumer does not have to use the word "inconvenient." The Regulation F supplemental information states:

> The Bureau declines to restrict how a consumer may designate a time or place as inconvenient. The statute does not prescribe any specific actions or require precise responses or utterances on behalf of the consumer to invoke these communications protections, and nor does this final rule impose such requirements. The Bureau determines that a flexible approach is necessary when it comes to communications, which by their very nature are dynamic, depend upon the specific circumstances, and differ from consumer to consumer. Such fluid communications cannot be scripted, nor can every permutation be anticipated.[157]

Reg. F Official Interpretations also provide "depending on the facts and circumstances, the debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient even if the consumer does not specifically state to the debt collector that a time or place is 'inconvenient.'"[158] For example, the collector should know that a place is inconvenient if the creditor provides the collector with a file on the consumer that contains recent notes that the consumer should not be disturbed at that place.[159]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide a limited exception to communicating at inconvenient places. If the consumer initiates a communication from a place previously designated as inconvenient, the collector can use that same mode of communication to respond only once to that place. A second such communication is not permitted unless the consumer conveys that the place is no longer inconvenient.[160] If the consumer initiates an additional communication from an inconvenient place, the collector can respond again but only once to such place using the same mode of communication as the consumer-initiated communication.[161] protected by § 1692c from two debt collection calls that did not violate any other section of FDCPA).

146 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-1.

147 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-2.

148 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-2(i), (ii), (iv).

149 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,763 (Nov. 30, 2020).

150 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,764 (Nov. 30, 2020).

151 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-2(iii).

152 See CFPB Small Business Review Panel For Debt Collector And Debt Buyer Rulemaking 29–30 (July 28, 2016), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

153 See Duran v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 3661538 (S.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016).

154 Reg. F Official Interpretations §§ 6(b)(1)-1(iii), 6(b)(1)(ii)-1.

155 Reg. F Official Interpretations §§ 6(b)(1)-1(iii), 6(b)(1)(ii)-1.

156 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1.

157 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,761 (Nov. 30, 2020).

158 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1.

159 Cf. Reg. F Official Interpretations §6(b)(1)-1(i) (example applicable to inconvenient time).

160 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-2.

161 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-2(i), (ii), (iv).

The collector's one response using the same mode of communication includes a response that the consumer does not answer, such as an unanswered phone call. "The Bureau determines that a debt collector's unanswered call does constitute the debt collector's one permitted reply as described under comment 6(b)(1)-1."[162]

While the CFPB declined to designate any locations as presumptively inconvenient in Regulation F,[163] workplaces are inconvenient places to contact many types of workers.[164] Courts treat FDCPA §§ 1692c(a)(1) and 1692c(a)(3) as banning workplace collection contacts whenever a consumer informs the debt collector to stop such calls because they are inconvenient or prohibited.[165] Contact to a consumer's workplace in violation of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3) is discussed at § 5.6, infra.

5.4.4 The Known or Which Should Be Known Standard

FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) provides that a collector cannot contact the consumer at a time or place that is "known or should be known" as inconvenient. This clearly means that once a debt collector receives a request to cease communication at specified inconvenient times or places, whether the request is made orally or in writing, the debt collector then knows the time or place is inconvenient and must honor that request.[166]

Previously it was critical to inform the debt collector o the reason for the inconvenience, rather than provide a vagu request to not call[167] or just a broad statement of not want ing calls.[168] The Reg. F Official Interpretations (effectiv November 30, 2021) provide, however, that a debt collecto knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient i the consumer uses the word "inconvenient" to notify the deb collector and also stated that "depending on the facts and circumstances, the debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient even if the consumer does not specifically state to the debt collector that a time or place is 'inconvenient.'"[169] In addition, Reg. F § 1006.14(h) has clarified that collectors must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a person through a medium of communication after the person requested that the debt collector not use that medium of communication.[170] As a result, collectors must honor consumer requests regarding a particular type of communication, such as a request to cease collection calls, even if the request did not adequately inform the collector that the time or place was inconvenient.

The statutory language "known or should be known" also means that a collector should be able to infer from the circumstances when a time or place is inconvenient to the consumer. The collector has a burden of reasonable inquiry to determine the times or places that are unusual or inconvenient for a particular consumer.

This "should have known standard" places a burden on the debt collector to pay careful attention to the information in their collection file and to carefully listen to the consumer's statements about the convenience of the call. For example, the

162 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,763 (Nov. 30, 2020).

163 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,767 (Nov. 30, 2020).

164 See Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Williams, Scott & Assoc., 2015 WL 12856779 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 4, 2015), aff'd, 2017 WL 540996 (11th Cir. Feb. 10, 2017) (summary judgment for FTC on § 1692c(a)(1) claim because collection agency and its associates "called some consumers repeatedly at work, even though the collectors knew or should have known that those calls were inconvenient or prohibited"); Burke v. Coachella Valley Collections Services, 2011 WL 13217709 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 25, 2011); Appx. E.2.2.3, infra. But see Thompson v. Nationwide Debt Mgmt. Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4574566, at *5 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 13, 2017) (no imputed knowledge that nurse should not be called at work); Sanchez v. Client Services, Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (supervisor testified it was acceptable to telephone school cafeteria worker at job).

The FTC has also issued staff letters notifying several collectors that the consumer's workplace may by its nature be an inconvenient place to receive debt collection contacts. Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

165 Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (continuing to telephone and talk to consumer at work after she said she could not talk at work and would call collector from home violated § 1692c(a)(3)); Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. Sept. 30, 2005) (debt buyer violated §§ 1692c(a)(1), 1692c(a)(3) by repeatedly calling after consumer expressly requested collector not to do so because he was not permitted to receive personal calls at work); Pittman v. J.J. Mac Intyre Co., 969 F. Supp. 609 (D. Nev. 1997) (allegations in consumer's complaint, that debt collector called her at her job in attempt to collect debt, even after she had indicated that she could not talk at work," were sufficient to state claim under § 1692c(a)(1)).

166 Gilroy v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 632 F. Supp. 2d 132 (D.N.H. June 17, 2009) (consumer told collector that 8:00 p.m. was inconvenient to her because she goes to bed early); Brzezinski v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2006 WL 1982501 (E.D. Wis. July 12, 2006); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96, 104 (D. Conn. 2005) (violation of § 1692c(a)(1), (3) where defendant repeatedly telephoned the plaintiff at work after being told by the plaintiff he was not permitted to receive personal calls at work).

167 See Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887, at *19 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017); Forgues v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 1588665 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 20, 2016); Sellers v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 1179231 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 24, 2016); Ghawi v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2015 WL 6958010, at *6 (D. Conn. Nov. 10, 2015).

168 See Roider v. Capital Mgmt. Services, 2011 WL 5553796 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 15, 2011) (debt collector did not know or have reason to know that calling the plaintiff at her workplace was prohibited, or that it was inconvenient or unusual time or place, § 1692c(a) was not violated); Shand-Pistilli v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2011 WL 2415142 (E.D. Pa. June 16, 2011) (plaintiff's statement "I'm not interested in these solicitation calls" was insufficient to put defendant on notice that she viewed telephone calls to her home as inconvenient); Jones v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2011 WL 2050195 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2011) (no evidence that plaintiff ever informed debt collector that calls were inconvenient). See also Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borack, P.A., 2008 WL 11331725 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 14, 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 346 Fed. Appx. 409, 411 (11th Cir. 2009) (finding material issues of fact as to whether letter's language sufficiently notified attorney that consumer's residence was inconvenient place to receive telephone calls).

169 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)-1. See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,761 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("The Bureau declines to restrict how a consumer may designate a time or place as inconvenient."); Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003).

170 Reg. F § 1006.14(h), discussed at § 6.9, infra.

creditor's file, including the loan application listing the consumer's place of employment, may tell the collector whether the consumer's job is one for which contacts at the workplace are inherently inconvenient or whether the consumer has indicated certain times or places are inconvenient. Or a family member might tell the collector that the consumer is ill or asleep, or a labor union might warn a collector not to contact its members at work.

5.4.5 Other FDCPA Provisions Also Regulate Phone Calls

FDCPA § 1692c(b)[171] prohibits most calls to unobligated persons, except to obtain the consumer's location information as permitted by section 1692b.[172] Collectors are prohibited under FDCPA § 1692f(5) from causing charges to be made to any person for phone calls (or other communications) by concealing the true purpose of the communication.[173] When the debt collector reaches a consumer, FDCPA § 1692e(11)[174] requires disclosure of the caller's identity and the debt collection purpose of the call, as do sections 1692d(6)[175] and 1692e(14).[176] Under Reg. F (effective November 30, 2021), there are presumptive call frequency limits,[177] a collector must cease calling a consumer upon the consumer's request,[178] and a debt collector that wants to leave a voicemail message must comply with content requirements in order to qualify the contact as a limited content message subject to specific safe harbors from FDCPA liability.[179] Numerous FDCPA provisions prohibit abuse, such as repetitious calls, and deceptive practices on the telephone.[180]

A threat to do an act that would violate FDCPA § 1692c would itself violate other provisions of the FDCPA.[181] Representing that the collector will contact the consumer at an inconvenient place unless requested not to in writing by the consumer may be deceptive violating FDCPA § 1692e, as the consumer has the right to be free of such a contact without making a written request.[182] The consumer may also order the collector to cease most common communications under FDCPA § 1692c(c).[183]

In addition, the Telephone Consumer Protection Act restricts debt collectors' calls to numbers on the do-not-call list and automated calls to cell phones, providing strong remedies for violations, as discussed elsewhere in this treatise.[184]

5.5 Contacting a Consumer Known to Be Represented by an Attorney, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2)

5.5.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2)

> (a) Communication with the consumer generally—Without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, a debt collector may not communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt—
>
> * * *
>
> (2) if the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with respect to such debt and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, such attorney's name and address, unless the attorney fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to a communication from the debt collector or unless the attorney consents to direct communication with the consumer[.][185]

Senate bill, S. 918, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(a)(2) (1977), dropped an early provision prohibiting a debt collector from contacting a represented consumer "after the initial communication."[186] Congress might have intended through this deletion to prohibit even one collection contact with a consumer known to be represented as to a particular debt.

Regulation F generally tracks this provision but clarifies that it applies to attempts to communicate with a consumer represented by an attorney, and not just communications with such a consumer.[187]

5.5.2 Overview of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2)

FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) prohibits collectors contacting consumers if the collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with respect to the debt.[188] The provision only

171 See § 5.7, infra.
172 See § 5.2, supra.
173 See § 8.5, infra.
174 See § 7.2.11, infra.
175 See § 6.8, infra.
176 See § 7.2.14, infra.
177 Reg. F § 1006.14(b), discussed at § 6.7, infra.
178 Reg. F § 1006.14(h), discussed at § 6.7.2, infra.
179 Reg. F § 1006.2(j), discussed at § 4.9, supra.
180 See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692d, 1692e, 1692f.
181 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(5), 1692e(10), discussed at §§ 7.2.5, 7.2.8, infra.
182 See Brzezinski v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2006 WL 1982501 (E.D. Wis. July 12, 2006). But see Wan v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 369 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (holding statement in collector's letter to consumer that "[i]f you notify us in writing to stop contacting you by telephone at your residence or place of employment, no further contact will be made" does not to violate §§ 1692e or 1692c(a)(1)).
183 § 5.8, infra.
184 See § 14.3.2.1, infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
185 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(2). See also Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2).
186 S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1977); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1976); H.R. 5294, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1977).
187 See Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,759 (Nov. 30, 2020).
188 See McCusker v. Ocwen Loan Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4529986 (D. Mass. July 27, 2015); Strasers v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2012 WL 405454 (E.D. Wash. Feb. 8, 2012); Appx. E.2.2.2, infra.

refers to representation by an attorney,[189] but one court has suggested a debt collector may be restricted from contacting a consumer if the consumer authorized an agent to communicate with the debt collector.[190]

Absent an applicable exception,[191] once the collector learns that the consumer is represented by an attorney with respect to a particular debt, the collector must deal exclusively with the attorney and should not contact the consumer[192] or continue an ongoing conversation with the consumer with respect to the particular debt.[193] But the CFPB views the knowledge only extending to those debts for which the collector knows that the consumer has representation, even where the collector knows the consumer has representation for at least one debt.[194] Some older cases have found such violations to be technical or de minimis,[195] while others have found that any communication in violation of the provision creates FDCPA liability.[196]

After learning of the consumer's representation, the collector should not then contact the consumer, even to confirm with the consumer the attorney's retention,[197] the reason for the retention,[198] the scope of the attorney representation,[199] or to obtain the attorney's contact information, where the collector had the opportunity to obtain that when the consumer notified the collector of the representation.[200] A verification rights notice,[201] bills,[202] or even legal notices, should not be presented directly to the consumer. A court has held permissible a debt collector's confirmation that it would cease collection because of the consumer's legal representation where there was no request for payment.[203] The collector can contact the consumer

189 See Edwards, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 7, 1991); Hollcraft, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 10, 1988); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-3Federal Deception Law (4th ed. 2022).

190 Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 4365745 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 10, 2007) (where agent was not attorney, but was engaged for purpose of mediating resolution, had debt collector communicated directly with consumer rather than his appointed agent, it arguably would have violated FDCPA).

191 See §§ 5.3.3, 5.3.2, 5.3.4, supra, § 5.5.4, infra. FDCPA § 1692c(a) creates prohibitions on certain types of communications when there is no "prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction." The consumer's consent should be the collector's responsibility to both raise and prove as an exception. But see Halsey v. Litton Loan Servicing, 2013 WL 3754919, at *3 (D.N.H. July 13, 2013) (plaintiff's claim that Ocwen communicated with him directly after notice of representation dismissed, in part because he did not allege that Ocwen did not have his prior consent to communicate with him). Note also that an attorney's consent to direct communication with the consumer is another exception. Some courts may find that an attorney's instruction to a client to contact the debt collector might constitute such consent. See, e.g., Jackson v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 7023945, at *5 (E.D. Mo. 2020).

192 See Appx. E.2.2.2, infra.

193 See Curtis v. Caine & Weiner Co., 2016 WL 520987 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 10, 2016).

194 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,768 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("The Bureau interprets the protections afforded a consumer under FDCPA section 805(a)(2) to apply to a particular debt allegedly owed by the consumer, but not to future or other debts allegedly owed by the consumer, unless the debt collector knows that an attorney represents the consumer with respect to those debts and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, the attorney's name and address.").

195 Pearce v. Rapid Check Collection, Inc., 738 F. Supp. 334 (D.S.D. 1990) (letter threatening suit to consumer known to be represented by counsel was "technical" error and not a violation); Bieber v. Associated Collection Services, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 1410 (D. Kan. 1986) (asking consumer whether he intended to file for bankruptcy after being informed consumer was represented was legitimate business inquiry, not so extensive as to be prohibited).

196 Chung v. Shapiro & Denardo, L.L.C., 2015 WL 3746332 (D.N.J. June 15, 2015) (even if state law permitted direct communication with represented consumer, it would not absolve law firm from FDCPA liability); Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 98 F. Supp. 3d 568 (E.D.N.Y. 2015). See also § 12.7.2, infra. As with any case, when raising a FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) violation in federal court, examine whether the violation resulted in a concrete harm to the consumer for Article III standing. See § 11.15, infra.

197 See Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 1010 (D. Minn. 2013); Hockenhull v. Law Office Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2012 WL 6525504 (D.R.I. Dec. 13, 2012) (cannot confirm representation, even when attorney has out-of-state office).

198 Istre v. Miramed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4988201 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 7, 2014).

199 See Young v. Northand Group, 2018 WL 306023 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 5, 2018) (denying dismissal where collector informed of representation asked consumer if she had retained counsel for bankruptcy purposes); Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 1010 (D. Minn. 2013) (jury question raised). See also Curtis v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2016 WL 1161598 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 23, 2016) (disputed fact as to whether collection agency's single reference to payment of debt after consumer stated that she was represented by an attorney was attempt to collect debt); Istre v. Miramed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4988201 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 7, 2014) (may ask for contact information for attorney, but may not ask why attorney was retained). But see Robin v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2014 WL 3734318 (E.D. Mo. July 29, 2014) (may ask for court docket number); Ikonomidis v. Duggins Law Firm, P.L.C., 2014 WL 3497246 (E.D. La. July 14, 2014) (whether lawyer represented consumer on debt being collected was at issue).

200 See Hanks v. Valarity, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1886960 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 24, 2015). See also Istre v. Miramed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1020015 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 9, 2015) (rejecting collection agency's consent defense based upon fact that telephone conversation was initiated by consumer from attorney's office with attorney present, since undisputed material facts established that no prior consent was given by either consumer or counsel directly to the debt collector). But see Messick v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 1180169 (D. Minn. Mar. 25, 2016) (call was to confirm spelling of the attorney's name with no attempt to collect debt and therefore not "communication").

201 See Zaborac v. Mut. Hosp. Services, Inc., 2005 WL 1690553 (S.D. Ind. July 19, 2005); Simmons v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2002 WL 31898324 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 30, 2002), vacated due to settlement, 2003 WL 255238 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 4, 2003). See also Zaborac v. Mut. Hosp. Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 2538643 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 7, 2004).

202 See Yarney v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 929 F. Supp. 2d 569 (W.D. Va. 2013).

203 See Salsbury v. Trac A Chec, Inc., 365 F. Supp. 2d 939 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 18, 2005). See also Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171, 1197 (D. Utah Feb. 5, 2019) (no summary judgment to consumer where contact was to confirm that would not contact consumer again because of legal representation); Klein v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., (E.D. Mo. Oct. 12, 2017) (where consumer informed collection agency that she was represented by attorney, and was then asked in same call for her mailing address, email address, and telephone number, there was no violation, as there was no request for payment).

directly if the consumer has provided prior consent to do so directly to the collector.[204]

The Official Interpretations to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provide that, where a represented consumer initiates the contact with the collector, the collector may respond because the communication from the consumer constitutes prior consent. But this does not negate the collector's knowledge that the consumer is represented by an attorney and does not permit the collector to later contact the consumer, unless the collector knows the consumer is no longer represented by an attorney or another exception applies.[205]

5.5.3 Collector's Knowledge that Consumer Has Legal Representation

5.5.3.1 Actual Knowledge

Notice to the collector that an attorney represents the consumer for all or specified current or future debts should trigger the requirement that the collector deal only with the consumer's attorney on the specified debts.[206] Issues may arise where the notification is not clear as to the scope of representation.[207] Notification should be made clear that it is an attorney representing the consumer and not just a paralegal or other non-attorney.[208]

There is no requirement that notification to the collector be in any particular form.[209] A court determined that a debt collector did not need to be provided the account number in addition to the consumer's and lawyer's contact information.[210] A written letter notifying the collector of the representation is not even required. The only requirement is that the collector in some manner learns that there is legal representation.

Whether the collector has that actual knowledge of legal representation is a question of fact. The consumer must show that the debt collector had actual knowledge about the representation without ambiguity and that it was provided a reasonable time to process the notice.[211]

A court allowed the consumer's lawyer's settlement offer to the debt collector to be admitted to show the debt collector's knowledge of the consumer's legal representation.[212]

A mortgage servicer may learn of the representation from the loan file.[213] A lower court left open the possibility that a mortgage servicer's investigation of the consumer's bankruptcy might have revealed the consumer's representation.[214] A collector's knowledge of legal representation in one matter may lead it to know that there is legal representation regarding 204 See, e.g., Hochroth v. Ally Bank, 461 F. Supp. 3d 986, 1007–1008 (D. Haw. 2020) (mortgage servicer could communicate with consumer, even though represented by attorney, when consumer initiated multiple phone calls to mortgage servicing company and transmitted letter to mortgage servicing company).

205 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(2)-1.

206 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra. See also Fisher v. Bernhardt & Strawser, P.A., 2013 WL 3990744 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013) (denying motion to dismiss where consumer's lawyer stated she represented consumer regarding FDCPA claim and requested collector stop all contact of consumer).

207 Ikonomidis v. Duggins Law Firm, P.L.C., 2014 WL 3497246 (E.D. La. July 14, 2014).

208 See Stockham, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 15, 1986), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. Cf. Yee v. Ventus Capital Services, Inc., 2006 WL 1310463 (N.D. Cal. May 12, 2006) (collection agency's motion for partial summary judgment denied because defendants' argument that plaintiff's attorney offered nonlegal services and because it had spoken with nonlawyer was unpersuasive and its business records were not competent evidence on that point).

209 See Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003); Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2016) (letter omitting debtor's account numbers and referring to her previous married name as "aka" rather than "fka" provided the agency enough information); Miceli v. Orange Lake Country Club, Inc., 2015 WL 5081621 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 5, 2015); Istre v. Miramed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4988201 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 7, 2014) (phone notice acceptable); Lassiter v. Integrity Solution Services, Inc., 2014 WL 1040677 (D. Colo. Mar. 18, 2014) (service of FDCPA suit on debt collector sufficient); Day v. Am. Home Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 2231988 (E.D. Cal. June 3, 2010) (notice does not have to be in writing); Clayson v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 2010 WL 547476 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 11, 2010) (same); Bianchi v. The Bureaus, Inc., 2008 WL 597587 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 27, 2008) (bankruptcy notice with information had been mailed to collector); Tong v. Capital Mgmt. Services Group, Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1145 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (consumer attorney's fax of his representation letter and collection letter were together sufficient).

210 See Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2016). Cf. Alvarado v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2015 WL 1815863 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 22, 2015).

211 See Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016); Wyman v. Northland Group, Inc., 2014 WL 12586057 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 3, 2014); Sanford v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 3798285 (E.D. Mich. July 22, 2013); Fisher v. Bernhardt and Strawser, P.A., 2013 WL 3990744 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013); Appx. E.2.2.2, infra. See also Dunning v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 903 F. Supp. 2d 1362 (S.D. Fla. 2012) (not reasonable to expect debt collector to react within hours to emailed notice); Marchman v. Credit Solutions Corp., 2011 WL 1560647 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 5, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1557853 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 25, 2011) (failed to allege that defendant was aware of representation); Silver v. Law Offices of Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2010 WL 3000053 (D. Conn. July 28, 2010) (judgment for defendant where it had not opened email notice of representation); McKeown v. Mary Jane M. Elliott P.C., 2007 WL 4326825 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 10, 2007) (where representation letter was ambiguous in referring to "limited representation," did not state unequivocally that attorney represented consumer with respect to debt, and as matter of policy attorney refused phone calls responding to representation letter, debt collector did not have reason to know consumer was represented by attorney).

212 Alvarado v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2015 WL 859109 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 27, 2015) (settlement letter fell outside protection of Federal Rule of Evidence 408 and was allowed in to show debt collector's knowledge of representation).

213 See Garrison v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 233 F. Supp. 3d 1282 (M.D. Fla. 2017); Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4264967 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 11, 2016). But see Pewzner v. Med. Recovery Specialists, L.L.C., 2012 WL 12905552 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 5, 2012) ("business relationship" between hospital creditor and agency not sufficient to demonstrate actual knowledge on the part of the agency).

214 See Gagnon v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 563 B.R. 835 (N.D. Ill. 2017). But see Polster v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2017 WL 1196888, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017) (attorney representation in one capacity (bankruptcy) "does not necessarily entail attorney representation in a separate, albeit related, capacity").

another debt with the same consumer.[215] Look to see if the consumer's representation was actually noted in the collection file.[216]

5.5.3.2 Imputed Knowledge of the Consumer's Representation

Where there is no proof of the collector's actual knowledge, consumers would benefit if they could impute such knowledge, such as where the creditor hiring the collector has that knowledge or where the collector has knowledge of the consumer's legal representation in another matter. The statutory language is not helpful here because it requires the collector to know about the representation, not "know or should have known."

If the consumer cannot impute such knowledge, collectors would have reason to remain purposefully ignorant about the collection history of the debts they collect,[217] and creditors would support their ignorance. The purpose of FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) would be better served if a collector is required to take affirmative steps to determine a consumer's legal representation—inquire of its creditor as to its knowledge of legal representation, review files of other debts with the same consumer to see if there is legal representation of that debt, or affirmatively inquire of the consumer when there is reason to suspect such representation.[218]

Nevertheless, according to the Seventh and Eighth Circuits and some lower courts in other circuits,[219] the creditor's knowledge that the consumer is represented by an attorney is not to be imputed to the collector. Other courts though do impute such knowledge.[220]

A state UDAP claim might lie against the creditor for not informing the debt collector of the consumer's representation.[221] Where a debt buyer's agent has knowledge of the consumer's representation, where an agency relationship can be established, that agent's knowledge should be imputed to its principal, so that the debt buyer can be liable for contacting a represented consumer, either directly or through another debt collector.[222]

FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) limits a collector's communication with the consumer where the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney "with respect to such debt."[223] Courts generally hold that a collector who knows a consumer is represented by an attorney regarding one debt is not necessarily required to assume the attorney represents the consumer on other debts.[224] The mere existence of a bankruptcy petition may not be enough to establish that a collection law firm actually knew that the consumer was represented by 215 Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016) (debt collector had actual knowledge of representation through recent state lawsuit).

216 See Gustin v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2014 WL 1923735 (N.D. Ala. May 13, 2014). Cf. Erickson v. General Elec. Co., 2012 WL 601171 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 23, 2012) (granting summary judgment for debt buyer, since consumer failed to timely pursue discovery regarding debt buyer's actual knowledge that consumer was represented by counsel at time of communication).

217 Cf. Mullen v. Compton, 2013 WL 3367080 (S.D. Ohio July 5, 2013) (no evidence to support willful blindness by collector).

218 See Abrams v. MiraMed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1319385 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 29, 2013) (collector can inquire of consumer).

219 See Schmitt v. FMA Alliance, 398 F.3d 995 (8th Cir. 2005) (creditor's knowledge will not be imputed to debt collector); Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004) (creditor's knowledge of consumer's bankruptcy representation not imputed to collector); Wolhuter v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 12819153, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 28, 2015); Mullen v. Compton, 2013 WL 3367080 (S.D. Ohio July 5, 2013); Martinez v. Johnson, 2013 WL 1031363 (D. Utah Mar. 14, 2013); Vega v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 2012 WL 458468 (D.N.J. Feb. 9, 2012); Lynch v. Nelson Watson & Assoc., 2011 WL 2472588 (D. Kan. June 21, 2011); Appx. E.2.2.2, infra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

220 See Micare v. Foster & Garbus, 132 F. Supp. 2d 77 (N.D.N.Y. 2001) (unless debt collector had procedure in place by which it asked creditors whether debtor was represented by counsel and creditor suppressed information, creditor's knowledge may be imputed to debt collector); Powers v. Prof'l Credit Services, Inc., 107 F. Supp. 2d 166, 168 (N.D.N.Y. 2000) ("[t]o allow a creditor to hire a debt collector after receiving actual knowledge that the consumer has retained legal representation for that debt and then withhold knowledge of this representation from the debt collector would blatantly circumvent the intent of the FDCPA). But see Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004); Erickson v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2011 WL 1869044 (D. Minn. May 16, 2011) (question of fact as to whether the consumer's bankruptcy retainer agreement with an attorney included representation on the underlying debt); Offril v. J.C. Penny Co., 2009 WL 69344 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2009).

221 See § 16.3.5, infra.

222 See Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018); But see Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119 (8th Cir. 2020) (issues of material fact remained regarding nature of relationship of debt buyer and third-party collector hired by debt buyer where third-party collector contacted consumer directly when debt buyer, not third-party, knew consumer was represented by counsel; consumer had not established agency relationship between debt buyer and third-party collector).

223 The language "with respect to such debt" was added by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee, but the Senate report does not mention a purpose for the amendment. S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

224 See Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 113 (3d Cir. 1991); Wolhuter v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7177620 (M.D. Fla. July 22, 2016); Nordwall v. PNC Mortg., 2015 WL 4095350, at *3 (M.D. Fla. July 7, 2015); Wright v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2015 WL 419618, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 2, 2015); Hernandez v. Scott, 2011 WL 4626244 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 3, 2011); Crenshaw v. Computex Info. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 1640175 (D.N.J. Apr. 30, 2011); Dragon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 483 F. Supp. 2d 198 (D. Conn. 2007); Berndt v. Fairfield Resorts, Inc. 337 F. Supp. 2d 1120 (W.D. Wis. 2004); Udell v. Kansas Counselors, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 2d 1135 (D. Kan. 2004); Buffington v. Schuman & Schuman, P.C., 2001 WL 34082273 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2001); Goodman v. S. Credit Recovery, Inc., 1999 WL 14004 (E.D. La. Jan. 8, 1999); Spinarski v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22547 (D.N.M. Sept. 19, 1996); Robinson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 876 F. Supp. 385 (N.D.N.Y. 1995); Masuda v. Thomas Richards & Co., 759 F. Supp. 1456 (C.D. Cal. 1991). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra; Herold, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 14, 1979).

an attorney.[225] Of course, that fact of representation for one debt or a bankruptcy filing may lead to a factual finding that a collector did have actual knowledge of the consumer's legal representation—such a finding is for the finder of fact.[226]

5.5.4 Consumer's Attorney Must Reasonably Respond to Debt Collector's Communications

If the consumer's attorney fails to respond to a collector's communications within a reasonable period of time, the consumer loses the protection against collector contacts. The statute does not define what constitutes a reasonable time and that question may remain for determination at trial.[227] Earlier bills had omitted this requirement,[228] used the language "unless the attorney is unjustifiably nonresponsive,"[229] or required an attorney response within seven days.[230]

5.6 Contacts at Workplace Are Restricted, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3) and Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(3)

> (a) Communication with the consumer generally—Without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, a debt collector may not communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt—
>
> * * *
>
> (3) at the consumer's place of employment if the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication.[231]

FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3) prohibits contacting the consumer at work in contravention of the employer's policy against such communication if the collector knows or has reason to know of such policy.[232] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) generally tracks this provision but clarifies that it applies to attempts to communicate with a consumer at the consumer's place of employment where the collector knows such communication is not permitted, and not just actual communications at the place of employment.[233] A separate Reg. F provision, examined at § 8.10, infra, prohibits emails to a consumer sent to an email address that the collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer unless the email address was obtained through certain specified procedures.

A debt collector knows or has reason to know that a consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving communications if the consumer tells the debt collector that the consumer cannot take personal calls at work. The debt collector may ask follow-up questions regarding the employer's prohibitions or limitations on contacting the consumer at the place of employment to clarify statements by the consumer.[234]

But the regulation's supplemental information provides:

> The Bureau concludes that a consumer need not undertake specific actions or utter specific words to be afforded the statutory protections provided under FDCPA section 805(a)(3). The statute does not prescribe any specific actions or require precise responses or utterances on behalf of the consumer to invoke the workplace communications protections, and nor does this final rule impose such requirements. Even if a consumer does not precisely state that the employer prohibits the consumer from receiving 225 Grubermann v. Seas & Assoc., 2016 WL 4378975 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 2016).

226 Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016) (debt collector had actual knowledge of representation through recent state lawsuit).

227 See Graff v. Henriques, 2008 WL 3916039 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2008) (question of fact as to failure of plaintiff's counsel to respond to defendant's correspondence); Blum v. Fisher & Fisher, 961 F. Supp. 1218 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (whether thirty days was reasonable period presented questions of fact); Phillips v. Amana Collection Services, 1992 WL 227839 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 1992); Gibson v. Rossman & Co., Civ. Act. No. 81-C-754 (W. Va. Cir. Ct. 1982) (issue of material fact whether collector waited reasonable period before it contacted consumer, having called consumer's attorney on May 15, 18, 19, and 21 and consumer on May 21). Cf. In re Webster, 2009 WL 2634576 (Bankr. D. Mass. Aug. 21, 2009) (whether consumer's attorney refused, when requested to communicate with debt collector, to confirm his representation was disputed fact).

228 S. 656, 95th Cong., 1 Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1976).

229 S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1976); H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(2) (1976).

230 H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(1)(D) (1976).

231 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(3). See also Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(3).

Bills leading to the FDCPA contained many types of provisions restricting contacts at work. S. 918, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(b) (1977) (no contact if known to be inconvenient or one contact if convenience unknown); S. 656, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(b) (1977); H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(b) (1976); H.R. 29, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(b) (Jan. 1976); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(b) (1976) (one contact at work permitted or two contacts per month under specified circumstances); H.R. 5294, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(b) (1977) (three contacts at work per thirty-month period permitted, except no contacts at work if consumer so requests and supplies home phone number); H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(a)(1)(A) (1976) (no contacts at work). The final version contains one of the most restrictive provisions considered by Congress.

232 See Appx. E.2.2.3, infra. See also Austin v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., Inc., 834 F. Supp. 557 (D. Conn. 1993) (continued telephone calls to consumer at her place of employment, after collector had been asked to cease such calls because they inconvenienced consumer, violated § 1692c(a)(1) and collector's discussion of consumer's debt with consumer's secretary was improper communication with third party in violation of § 1692c(b)); Sluys v. Hand, 831 F. Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (sending collection letters to consumer's employer violated § 1692c(b)); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-4, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra, supra. But see Roider v. Capital Mgmt. Services, 2011 WL 5553796 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 15, 2011) (FDCPA § 1692c(a) was not violated where debt collector did not know or have reason to know that calling plaintiff at her workplace was prohibited, or that it was inconvenient or unusual time or place).

233 See Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(1). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,759 (Nov. 30, 2020).

234 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(3)-1.

debt collection communications at the workplace, the debt collector nevertheless may know or have reason to know, based on the facts and circumstances, that the employer prohibits such communications. Accordingly, the Bureau is finalizing revised comment 6(b)(3)-1 to provide that a debt collector knows or has reason to know that a consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication if, for example, the consumer tells the debt collector that the consumer cannot take personal calls at work.[235]

A consumer's statement to a debt collector that she "could not talk to him at work," while ambiguous, is nevertheless sufficient to put the collector on notice that she was prohibited from engaging in debt collection communications at work.[236] Even if an employer does not have a formal policy as to collection calls at work, a call to the consumer at work might also violate FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1) as a contact at an inconvenient time or place.[237] Collectors must also honor consumer requests to stop using a particular type of communication, which could include a request not to call the consumer's work phone number.[238]

The FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3) protection broadly applies to all types of communications at work, not just phone calls.[239] If the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits all collection communications at work, the debt collector should not call, mail, fax, text, e-mail, or otherwise communicate with a consumer at work.[240] However, even if the debt collector knows about a workplace policy prohibiting collection communications at work, that prohibition only applies to communications like calls or texts to personal devices like cell phones if the collector knows the consumer is at work when communicating or attempting to communicate.[241]

The protection may be modified by the consumer's prior consent[242] or by a court order. Because under FDCPA § 1692c(d) the term "consumer" includes the consumer's spouse, a parent of a minor child, and a guardian, executor, or administrator,[243] a collector may not contact those individuals at work if the collector knows or has reason to know that such calls are prohibited by the employer.

5.7 Prohibited Third-Party Contacts, FDCPA § 1692c(b)

5.7.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(b)

(b) Communication with third parties—Except as provided in section 1692b of this title, without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector, or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, or as reasonably necessary to effectuate a post-judgment judicial remedy, a debt collector may not communicate, in connection with the collection of any debt, with any person other than the consumer, his attorney, a consumer reporting agency if otherwise permitted by law, the creditor, the attorney of the creditor, or the attorney of the debt collector.[244]

According to the 1977 Senate report:

[T]his legislation adopts an extremely important protection . . . it prohibits disclosing the consumer's personal affairs to third persons. Other than to obtain location information, a debt collector may not contact third persons such as a consumer's friends, neighbors, relatives or employer. Such contacts are not legitimate collection practices and result in serious invasions of privacy, as well as loss of jobs.[245]

A House Report also states:

Contacting a consumer's employer prior to final judgment can cause irreparable harm to the consumer's job or reputation. . . . The committee strongly believes that a debt collector's contact with a consumer's employer prior to final judgment (absent consumer consent or express court permission) constitutes unwarranted invasion of the consumer's privacy and interference with the consumer's employee-employer relationship.[246]

235 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,769 (Nov. 30, 2020). See also Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003). See Appx. E.2.2.3, infra. But see Roudebush v. Collecto, Inc., 2004 WL 3316168 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 12, 2004) (rejecting erroneously claim that collector's statement unlawfully restricted consumers' rights under § 1692c(a)(3); while it was true that this notice expanded somewhat § 1692c(a)(3) rights, it also reduced them as well by requiring writing, yet court ignored that language of Act).

236 Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,769 (Nov. 30, 2020).

237 See §§ 5.4.2, 5.4.3, supra. See also Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017); Dauval v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2013 WL 9921550 (M.D. Fla. June 27, 2013) (collection agency's call to consumer's place of employment violated §§ 1692c(a)(1) and 1692c(a)(3)).

238 Reg. F § 1006.14(h), Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-2; § 6.9, infra.

239 See also Rush v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 977 F. Supp. 2d 414 (D.N.J. 2013) (unanswered calls at work were "communications" because they were made after plaintiffs learned defendant's caller ID).

240 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,769 (Nov. 30, 2020).

241 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,770 (Nov. 30, 2020).

242 See § 5.3.3, supra (prior consent). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

243 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(d), discussed at § 5.3.5, supra (including discussion of relevant sections of Regulation F and its interpretations). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(d)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

244 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b). See also Reg. F § 1006.6(d).

245 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

246 H.R. Rep. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977).

5.7.2 Contacting Third Parties Generally Prohibited

FDCPA § 1692c(b)'s strict limitations on third-party contacts make it one of the FDCPA's most important protections. Section 1692c(b) protects the consumer's privacy, and also protects the consumer's relationship with friends, neighbors, coworkers, and others. It protects both the consumer[247] and the third party from the embarrassment and strain on their relationship of how to deal with the collector's revelation to the third party of the consumer's private financial affairs. Debt collectors sometimes contact third parties, particularly close friends and relatives to pressure them to assume financial responsibility for the consumer's debt.[248] This provision is also intended to stop those contacts.

Except for efforts to locate a consumer[249] or pursuant to one of the exceptions provided in FDCPA § 1692c(b),[250] a debt collector may not phone, write, or visit a consumer's employer,[251] coworker,[252] relatives (except the spouse),[253] friends,[254] neighbors,[255] other creditors,[256] the consumer' bank,[257] or any other third party.[258] In a decision that was subsequently vacated for an en banc hearing to address the plaintiff's standing,[259] the Eleventh Circuit found that a debt collector's electronic com-

247 For purposes of FDCPA § 1692c, as discussed in § 5.10, infra, "consumer" includes others such as the consumer's spouse, parent if a minor, guardian, executor, or administrator. See FDCPA § 1692c(d); Reg. F § 1006.6(a).

248 See, e.g., Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Fed. Check Processing, Inc., 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 13, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 5940485 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2016) (payday debt buyer called consumers' family, friends, employers, and coworkers, and accused consumer of "check fraud" or other crimes, and falsely threatened criminal prosecution, legal action, or wage garnishment)

249 15 U.S.C. § 1692b, discussed at § 5.2, infra.

250 See §§ 5.7.4, 5.7.5, infra.

251 See Jackson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 128 F. Supp. 3d 980 (E.D. Mich. 2015); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. LoanPointe, L.L.C., 2011 WL 4348304 (D. Utah Sept. 16, 2011), aff'd, 2013 WL 1896820 (10th Cir. May 8, 2013); Thomas v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 2730787 (D. Md. July 12, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 3567043 (D. Md. Aug. 10, 2011); Krapf v. Collectors Training Inst. of Ill., Inc., 2010 WL 584020 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 16, 2010); Mangum v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, Inc., 2010 WL 672744 (D. Idaho Feb. 20, 2010); § 5.6, supra, Appx. 5.2.2.4, infra. See also Timmons v. Specified Credit Ass'n 1, Inc., 2014 WL 2154148 (E.D. Mo. May 21, 2014) (debt collector did not violate § 1692c(b) when she called consumer's place of employment, as she did not disclose existence of debt, but asked only for human resources fax number in order that she could forward job verification letter); Bolton v. Pentagroup Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2009 WL 734038 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 2009) (defendant's threat to contact consumer's commanding officer violated FDCPA); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2003 WL 22425024 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 22, 2003) (summary judgment granted to defendant where employer called collector and was told that collector could not talk or answer questions without consumer's consent); S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; H.R. Rep. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977); 123 Cong. Rec. H2,919, H2,923 (daily ed. Apr. 4, 1977) (remarks of Rep. Annunzio) ("[i]t is simply not an employer's responsibility to collect debts for debt collectors").

252 See Ortega v. Griggs & Assoc., 2012 WL 2913202 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012); Terry v. C & D Complete Bus. Solutions, 2011 WL 144920 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 18, 2011); Fajer v. Kaufman, Burns & Assoc., 2011 WL 334311 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 28, 2011); Wideman v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2009 WL 1292830 (W.D. Pa. May 7, 2009); Austin v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., Inc., 834 F. Supp. 557 (D. Conn. 1993). See also Niven v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 4190961 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 10, 2008) (although collector left two voicemails with debtor's assistant at work, summary judgment denied because debt collector's bona fide error defense raised questions of triable fact). Cf. Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (call at work violated §§ 1692c(a)(3) and 1692d(2), but not § 1692c(b) because debt was not mentioned).

253 See McMann v. Selene Fin. LP for Wilmington Sav., 332 F. Supp. 3d 481, 486 (D. Mass. Sept. 14, 2018) (sister); Aitken v. Debt Mgmt. Partners, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1810345 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 17, 2015) (mother); Friedman v. Sharinn & Lipshie, P.C., 2013 WL 1873302 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2013) (daughter listened to voicemail); Dorris v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc. 2013 WL 1209629 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2013) (mother); Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Mich. 2012); Anderson v. Didonato, 2012 WL 6553675 (E.D. Va. Nov. 19, 2012) (sister), adopted, 2012 WL 6561259 (E.D. Va. Dec. 14, 2012); Beckworth v. Law Office of Thomas Landis, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1361671 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 18, 2012) (mother); Nichols v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 3488365 (D. Ariz. Oct. 27, 2009) (disputed facts about calling consumer's mother), aff'd, 423 Fed. Appx. 744 (9th Cir. 2011); Appx. E.2.2.4, infra. But see Collier v. Prof'l Bur. of Collections, 2012 WL 3745720 (D. Md. Aug. 28, 2012) (call to the father's phone did not violate FDCPA where message provided ample opportunity for recipient to ignore it or delete it); Jones v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2011 WL 2050195 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2011) (collector contacted plaintiff's mother but nothing in record to indicate that content of communications was improper).

254 See Thomas v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 2730787 (D. Md. July 12, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 3567043 (D. Md. Aug. 10, 2011); Kreisler v. Latino Union, Inc., 2007 WL 1118408 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 12, 2007) (girlfriend contacted); O'Connor v. Check Rite, 973 F. Supp. 1010 (D. Colo. 1997) (consumer's roommate). See also Murphy v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 1465761 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2011) (ex-boyfriend).

255 Lapan v. Greenspoon Marder P.A., 2018 WL 1033224 (D. Vt. Feb. 22, 2018) (collection law firm, in course of pursuing nonjudicial foreclosure on timeshare, sent list of delinquent timeshares holders to all of delinquent timeshare holders); West v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 998 F. Supp. 642 (W.D.N.C. 1998). See Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Mich. 2012).

256 See McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2012) (condominium association's attorneys violated § 1692c(b) by conducting secret communications with mortgage company that held mortgage on condominium unit).

257 See Muzuco v. Re$ubmitIt, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3242013 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 7, 2012).

258 See Travers v. Collecto, Inc., 2013 WL 55819 (D. Mass. Jan. 2, 2013) (new occupant at consumer's former residence). But see Johnson-Gellineau v. Stiene & Assoc., 837 Fed. Appx. 8, (2d Cir. 2020) (collection attorney communicating with county clerk in connection with foreclosure proceedings did not violate § 1692c(b)).

259 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021), vacating 17 F.4th 1016 (11th Cir. 2021). See also § 11.15, infra (discussing standing).

munication with its third-party mailing vendor, that included specific details regarding the debt, the precise amount of the debt, the entity to which the debt was owed, and the fact that the debt concerned the consumer's son's medical treatment, was a third-party communication made in connection with the collection of the debt in violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b).[260] A debt collector is strictly liable for a violation of this provision,[261] unless it can successfully establish a bona fide error defense.[262]

The following types of conduct are generally prohibited:

- Leaving voicemail messages that result in a third-party disclosure, if the voicemail message does not qualify as a limited-content message under Reg. F § 1006.2(j);[263]
- Email and text messages that result in a third-party disclosure where the email address or phone number for text messages were not obtained in one of the methods provided by Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)-(5), discussed at § 5.7.9, infra,
- Direct message on social media or other electronic messages that result in a third-party disclosure;[264]
- Leaving a letter or summons requesting payment in a consumer's mailbox without putting it in an envelope;[265]
- Communicating information to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service for the purpose of collecting a student loan from a resident alien;[266]
- Providing a consumer's contact information to a credit card issuer with the goal of having the credit card account pay off the debt;[267]
- Sending a collection letter to the consumer with the collector's name on the envelope that indicated it was a debt collector, and its logo with a large red dollar sign and the words "SPECIAL SETTLEMENT OFFER" were visible through the glassine window of the envelope;[268]
- Making a collect call that discloses the call's purpose to a live operator, who might in turn convey the information to a third party answering the telephone;[269]
- Failing to take reasonable steps to prevent eavesdropping by companions of a consumer making a payment;[270] and
- Sending a fax to the consumer's workplace

A letter to the consumer care of the consumer's employer can be anticipated to be opened by third parties, and thus can be found to violate FDCPA § 1692c(b).[271] On the other hand, courts have found that envelopes addressed to the consumer at a residential address that do not convey a debt collection purpose do not violate FDCPA § 1692c(b) just because they are mailed to the wrong address and a third party might end up opening the envelope and reading the contents.[272]

260 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1036 (11th Cir. 2021), vacating & superseding upon reh'g 994 F.3d 1341 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated on other grounds pending en banc resolution (seeking briefing only on standing), 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021). Cf. In re FDCPA Mailing Vendor Cases, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 3160794 (E.D.N.Y. 2021) (discussing that Supreme Court in Transunion v. Ramirez stated in dicta that courts have not recognized disclosures to printing vendors as actionable publications, and that communication of alleged non-payment of relatively minimal debt to mailing vendor doubtfully constitutes a "matter publicized . . . of a kind that . . . would be highly offensive to a reasonable person"; dismissing for lack of Article III standing). But see Dunn v. Global Trust Mgmt., L.L.C., 506 F. Supp. 3d 1214 (M.D. Fla. 2020) (collector's communications with third-party regarding facilitation of collection of outstanding debts that did not demand payment were not considered communications in connection with collection of debt and did not violate § 1692c(b)).

261 See § 3.2.4, supra. See also Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 819 F. Supp. 2d 874 (D. Minn. 2011); Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. 2011) (rejecting debt collector's argument that it could not be held liable absent the intentional or deliberate disclosure to third parties through the leaving of voicemail messages for the plaintiff). See also Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 18, 1978), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

262 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c), discussed at § 12.2, infra.

263 See § 5.7.8, infra.

264 In contrast to emails and text messages, Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)-(5), does not outline procedures reasonably adapted to avoid a third-party communication under Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) for social media direct message. See § 5.7.9.1, infra.

265 Curto v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5196708 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2011) (summons and complaint left in curbside mailbox without envelope). But see Mora v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 408 F. Supp. 3d 297 (Oct. 8, 2019) (affixing summons and complaint to consumer's front door without envelope or other wrapping to conceal contents of documents was not violation of § 1692c(b), because consumer did not allege that anyone actually saw summons and complaint while they were on her front door).

266 See Durham, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 2, 1984), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-5, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

267 See Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007). See also Balogun v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2934886 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 5, 2007) (certifying class where collection letter alleged to evidence violation § 1692c(b) by sharing information about consumer's debt with credit card issuer).

268 See Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6778681 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(8); § 8.8, infra.

269 Cathcart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 10, 1980) (incidental contacts with telephone operators permissible). But cf. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-3, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

270 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 18, 1978). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-4, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2.2, infra.

271 Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015, 1036 (9th Cir. Aug. 1, 2012).

272 Davis. v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 687 Fed. Appx. 140 (3d Cir. Apr. 24, 2017) (law firm sent consumer foreclosure notices by certified and regular mail at addresses with which consumer "had no connection;" certified letters were returned as unclaimed or undeliverable; no allegation that notices sent by regular mail were received or opened by any third party); Lorang v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 3891802 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 5, 2017); Wisdom v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 3747586 (D. Utah July 11, 2016); Duran v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 3661538 (S.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013); Darden v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2013 WL 12125739 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 28, 2013); Segal v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2006 WL 449176, at *7 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 22, 2006) (letter addressed to consumer only at address of consumer's stepson did not violate § 1692c(b); "Clearly, it was improper for anyone other than [plaintiff] to open the July 7, 2004 letter without her permission.").

A threat to make a prohibited third-party contact does not violate FDCPA § 1692c(b) unless it is carried out,[273] but it does violate the general provisions of FDCPA § 1692e[274] and the specific provisions of other sections.[275] Thus, a privacy notice indicating that the debt collector would share the consumer's financial information with others in the absence of the consumer's objection was a threat to violate this provision and violated the FDCPA.[276] Another FDCPA provision prohibits a debt collector from threatening to reveal the consumer's financial information to a third party.[277]

5.7.3 Is a Third-Party Contact a Communication for Purposes of FDCPA § 1692c(b)?

As with FDCPA §§ 1692b and 1692c(a), discussed above, an analysis of whether a debt collector violated section 1692c(b) begins with whether the debt collector's contact with the third party constitutes a "communication" as defined by the FDCPA.[278] FDCPA § 1692a(2) defines a communication for purposes of the Act as the conveying of information directly or indirectly regarding a debt.[279] If the third-party contact is not a "communication," then FDCPA § 1692c(b) does not apply to restrict the contact.

The Seventh Circuit in Gburek[280] interpreted "communications" for purposes of FDCPA § 1692c as applying, even though the communication did not demand payment, as long as the nature of the parties' relationship and the purpose and context of the communications viewed objectively indicated that the communications were made in connection with the collection of a debt.[281] Demand for payment is not the only factor for determining FDCPA § 1692c(b).

Several lower courts have also utilized a broad interpretation of what constitutes a communication for purposes of FDCPA § 1692c(b). Voicemails have been found to be communications because they contained vague references to the debt, including a long reference number and comments about documents and the consumer's involvement,[282] but see § 5.7.8, supra, for more discussion about the treatment of voicemails under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021). A reference that the third party should "know who she is doing business with" was found sufficient to indirectly convey information about the consumer's debt.[283] Use of the collector's name that suggests debt collection can also be sufficient to make a third party contact an FDCPA communication.[284] Even messages that gave a phone number to call, and directions to have the consumer call that number, were found to be communications violating FDCPA § 1692c(b).[285]

The Sixth Circuit, however, found that a debt collector who left his name and the name of his collection agency, Van Ru Credit Corporation, along with a return number and reference number as a voicemail at the consumer's business was not a communication.[286] The Tenth Circuit found that a debt collector's fax seeking to verify the consumer's employment did not convey information about a debt and therefore there was no violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b).[287]

When a telephone call is unanswered, courts have found that the call does not constitute a "communication" under the Act.[288] Regulation F clarifies that an unanswered call is an attempt to communicate,[289] however the regulations only 273 See Bougie v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 13234187 (D. Minn. May 24, 2011) (summary judgment for collection law firm on claim that it violated § 1692c(b) by asking consumer for his employer's contact information; no allegation that firm actually communicated with his employer).

274 See Weiss, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 17, 1986); Mansfield, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 20, 1978); Krieger, FTC Informal Staff Letter (undated); Taylor, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 3, 1978); §§ 7.2.5.4, 7.2.10, 7.3, infra. But see Weber v. Payco-General Am. Credits, 1990 WL 341654 (D. Conn. Dec. 13, 1990) (threat to conduct investigation was not threat to unlawfully communicate with third parties).

275 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692e(5), 1692e(10). See Henderson v. Credit Bur. Inc., 1989 WL 78235 (W.D.N.Y. July 13, 1989); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979); §§ 7.2.5.4, 7.2.10, 7.3, infra.

276 See Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 695451 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 14, 2006).

277 See Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009).

278 See §§ 4.2, 5.2.4, 5.3.2, supra.

279 Some courts also find that the communication is not a communication under FDCPA § 1692c(b) until it is received or understood by the third-party. See, e.g., Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., 819 F. Supp. 2d 874, 879–880 (D. Minn. 2011). See also § 5.7.3, infra.

280 Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380 (7th Cir. 2010) (exploring consumer's mortgage payment options).

281 Id. at 385.

282 Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1438763 (S.D. Cal. 2010).

283 Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303377 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2011).

284 Scaccia v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, 2018 WL 1701953 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2018). But see Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc.870 F. Supp. 2d 694 (D. Minn. 2012) (no communication where collector's name left on cell phone shared with other family members).

285 Belin v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2006 WL 1992410, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2006).

286 Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015).

287 Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013). See also Morgan v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 719 Fed. Appx. 735, 745–746 (10th Cir. Dec. 12, 2017) (mortgage loan servicers' letter to homeowner's husband, offering to pay all occupants of property $1000 to vacate premises, did not constitute prohibited "communication," because letter did not reference any debt or suggest that homeowner owed debt); Scribner v. Works & Lentz, Inc., 655 Fed. Appx. 702, 703 (10th Cir. 2016) (no violation of § 1692c where debt collector's call to consumer's apartment manager, was not "communication" under FDCPA because debt collector did not refer to any debt owed by consumer during phone call).

288 Davis v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 2016 WL 1078166, at *4 (D.N.J. Mar. 18, 2016); Rush v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 977 F. Supp. 2d 414 (D.N.J. Oct. 17, 2013); Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 870 F. Supp. 694, 706 (D. Minn. 2012); Cozmyk v. Prompt Recovery Services, Inc., 851 F. Supp. 2d 991 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 30, 2012); Worsham v. Acct. Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 5873107, at *3 (D. Md. Nov. 22, 2011), aff'd, 497 Fed. Appx. 274 (4th Cir. 2012) (finding that unanswered telephone calls "can hardly be considered 'communications' under the FDCPA").

289 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(b)-1(i).

prohibit communications and not attempts to communicate with third parties.[290]

5.7.4 Parties With Whom Debt Collectors May Communicate Without Violating FDCPA § 1692c(b)

FDCPA § 1692c(b) and Regulation F § 1006.6(d)(1) (effective November 30, 2021) explain that a debt collector must not communicate with any person other than:

- The consumer, defined as including for purposes only of FDCPA § 1692c, the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), guardian, executor, or administrator.[291]
- The consumer's attorney;[292]
- A credit reporting agency if otherwise permitted by law;[293]
- The creditor;[294] and
- The creditor's or collector's attorney.[295]

One court held that foreclosure attorneys could communicate with other creditors: "As a practical matter, in a state foreclosure action, the first and second mortgage holders and other creditors must be able to communicate regarding the balance or settlement of the outstanding mortgages."[296] An alternative approach would be for the creditor (not the creditor's attorney) to communicate directly with the other creditors, since the creditor will typically not be limited by the FDCPA.

The consumer's co-debtors who are individually obligated on the debt are also considered consumers under FDCPA § 1692c(b) and Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1).[297] The FDCPA also includes within the definition of consumer "alleged debtors."[298]

5.7.5 Exceptions to the Prohibition on Third-Party Communications in FDCPA § 1692c(b)

As discussed in § 5.7.4, supra, FDCPA § 1692c(b) and Regulation F § 1006.6(d)(1) (effective November 30, 2021) specify parties with whom debt collectors can communicate without violating the general prohibition against third-party disclosures. Additionally, as discussed in this section, FDCPA § 1692c(b) and Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2) contain four exceptions to compliance with FDCPA § 1692c(b).

The first exception is where the debt collector complies with FDCPA § 1692b.[299] As discussed at § 5.2, supra, the FDCPA provides a limited exception to section 1692c(b) for third-party contacts to learn location information for the consumer's residential address and phone number or their work address.[300] Even when obtaining this limited information,[301] however, the collector may not state that the consumer owes any money and cannot use the collection company's name unless it is requested.[302]

A second exception is where the consumer has provided prior consent to the third-party contact.[303] According to FTC staff, a debt collector may not contact a legitimate nonprofit

290 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1).

291 See FDCPA § 1692c(d); Reg. F § 1006.6(a), discussed at § 5.10, infra.

292 See Phillips v. N. Am. Capital Corp., 1999 WL 299872 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 30, 1999). See also Sweigart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 25, 1978); Atteberry, Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. Cf. Nogali v. Transcon Fin., Inc., 2015 WL 12656934 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2015) (once debt collector was informed that consumer's former personal injury lawyer no longer represented her, collector could no longer proceed under § 1692c(b)'s exception for communications with consumer's lawyer).

293 See Nogali v. Transcon Fin., Inc., 2015 WL 12656934 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2015); Darden v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2013 WL 12125739 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 28, 2013); Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006); McGrath, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 12, 1979); Sweigart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 25, 1978), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997) (whether check collection agency was liable under § 1692c(b) turned on whether it was "consumer reporting agency"). But see Miceli v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2016 WL 7666167 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2016) ("Although the FCRA ordinarily permits communications with consumer reporting agencies, it does not permit communications that are known to be inaccurate. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(a)(1).").

294 Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006), aff'd, 309 Fed. Appx. 315 (11th Cir. 2009) (confidential communication issued from foreclosing party or its counsel to counsel for another creditor involved in foreclosure, regarding payoff figure, did not violate § 1692c(b), as such communication was not subject to FDCPA).

295 See Forman v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 199 (S.D.N.Y. 2005); Shrestha v. Nadel, 2001 WL 286852 (D. Conn. Mar. 21, 2001); Dreyfuss, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 20, 1987); Bagwell, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 6, 1987), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(6)-8, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

296 Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006), aff'd, 309 Fed. Appx. 315 (11th Cir. 2009) (confidential communication issued from foreclosing party or its counsel to counsel for another creditor involved in foreclosure, regarding payoff figure, did not violate § 1692c(b), as such communication was not subject to FDCPA). Cf. Best v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 279 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69, 75 (2021) (business engaged in only nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings is not "debt collector" within meaning of FDCPA, and therefore they would not be forbidden to communicate with third parties), citing Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, ___L. Ed. 2d ___(2019). See § 4.7.5, supra, for a detailed discussion of Obduskey.

297 See Baker v. Springer, Inc., 2010 WL 4942017 (D. Minn. Nov. 30, 2010) (reasonably believed, based on its information, to be co-obligor).

298 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3) defines the term "consumer" to include a person "allegedly obligated." See § 4.4, supra.

299 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(i).

300 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692a(7), 1692b; Reg. F § 1006.10, discussed at § 5.2, supra.

301 Termed "location information." 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(7); Reg. F § 1006.10(a).

302 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692b(1), 1692b(2); Reg. F § 1006.10(b), discussed at § 5.2, supra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 804, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

303 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(ii). See Martin v. United Collections Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 4255405 (E.D. Mo. July 14, 2015) (when requested by plaintiff, collection agency was permitted to submit Automated Universal Data Form to delete another person's information from plaintiff's credit file); Stewart v. Salzman, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16865 (D. Conn. Nov. 2, 1987) (consent to conversation could not be implied; consent may be given directly to debt collector).

counseling service assisting the consumer with their debts[304] or the consumer's bank to compare a signature on a dishonored check with the consumer's signature specimen (although the payee-creditor in the latter situation could contact the bank) without prior consent of the consumer.[305] It may be a violation for the debt collector to try to get a third-party financial institution to lend money to the consumer to pay the debt.[306] In all those situations, the consumer must provide prior consent to the contacts.[307]Prior consent cannot be given during the third-party communication, but must precede that communication.[308] The statute provides that the consumer's prior consent must be "given directly to the debt collector."[309] Consequently, such consent cannot be given in the underlying credit agreement with the creditor. Nor can the consent be given to the creditor or a prior collector—it must be given directly to the current collector.[310] In another context, the FTC has rejected the notion that consent to a third-party contact may be inferred from the consumer's acts.[311] It is irrelevant also that the third party first called the collector—the collector cannot use that as permission for subsequent contacts.[312] A detailed discussion of consumer consent is provided at § 5.3.3, supra.

One area that has caused some confusion is where a third party makes a payment for the consumer. FTC staff have stated in this situation the consumer's consent can be implied, but only for purposes of allowing the collector to give a receipt to the third party.[313] Later, the FTC staff took the position that the collector may reasonably infer a consumer's consent to additional contacts with the third party from the third party's volunteering to make a payment for the consumer.[314]

A third exception is that a court of competent jurisdiction may authorize otherwise prohibited third-party contacts.[315] The "express permission of a court" cannot come from a statute, but must come as a court order or opinion.[316]

The fourth exception is that a collector also may contact a third party if it is reasonably necessary to affect a post judgment judicial remedy.[317] Thus a collector may contact an employer or bank to further a garnishment or a third-party occupant in an execution of an eviction judgment.[318]

Conversely, third-party contacts generally are not permitted within this exception in order to pursue a prejudgment remedy,[319] although court permission could be obtained for third-party contacts necessary to effectuate a prejudgment remedy. Prejudgment contacts might also be reasonably necessary to effectuate a post judgment remedy,[320] but collectors

304 Sweigart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 25, 1978). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-5, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

305 Evenchick, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 30, 1978). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-5, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

306 See Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007); Balogun v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2934886 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 5, 2007) (certifying class where collection letter was alleged to evidence violation § 1692c(b) by sharing information about consumer's debt with credit card issuer).

307 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(ii). See § 5.3.3, supra.

308 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(2)-1, referencing § 6(b)(4)(i)-1.

309 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(ii). See Stewart v. Salzman, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16865 (D. Conn. Nov. 2, 1987); Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But cf. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-1 (consumer's consent can be presumed to give a third part a receipt when the third party makes a payment for the consumer), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 18, 1978).

310 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(2)-1, referencing § 6(b)(4)(i)-2.

311 Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 13, 1989).

312 Stewart v. Salzman, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16865 (D. Conn. Nov. 2, 1987) (attorney's discussion of debt with sister of debtor violated § 1692c(b) even though sister telephoned attorney about debt).

313 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letters (July 18, 1978, Jan. 18, 1978, Dec. 30, 1977), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

314 Fisher, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 19, 1992), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

315 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(iii). See McLain v. Gordon, 2010 WL 3340528 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 24, 2010) (collector obtained leave from court to contact third parties). But see Ingram v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 252886 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (pro se plaintiffs' complaint stated § 1692c(b) claim against foreclosure attorneys because communications to their tenants that foreclosure was pending occurred after foreclosure proceedings had been voluntarily dismissed, and thus any exemption from FDCPA coverage for activities that occur as part of "foreclosure process" did not apply).

316 See § 5.3.4, supra; McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1, 67 (D. Mass. 2012) ("express permission of a court" does not mean "express permission in a law"). But see Resler v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2003 WL 193498, at *4 (D. Minn. Jan. 23, 2003) (mailing of writ of execution directly to represented consumer did not violate § 1692c(a)(2) because "Minnesota law requires service of a garnishment levy on the judgment debtor" and default judgment "was in effect that court's permission to follow the collection procedures outlined in Minnesota law, including service of the levy directly on the judgment debtor").

317 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b); Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(2)(iv). See also Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2012 WL 3582963 (D. Minn. Aug. 17, 2012) (garnishment communication to employer was proper to effectuate post judgment judicial remedy and did not violate § 1692c(b)); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-5, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

318 See Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2012 WL 3582963 (D. Minn. Aug. 17, 2012) (garnishment communication to employer was proper to effectuate post judgment judicial remedy and did not violate § 1692c(b)); Appx. E.2.2.4, infra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Mansfield, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 20, 1978).

319 But see Busam v. Wilkinson, 2012 WL 3067935 (D. Or. July 26, 2012) (use of subpoena to consumer's mortgage company to gather consumer's location information in order to serve summons in state collection action was consistent with discovery under state rules and did not violate FDCPA). But cf. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-6, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

320 See Zanayed v. Gertler & Gertler, Ltd., 2000 WL 294183, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 17, 2000) ("The wage deduction summons in this case was necessary to effectuate the post judgment judicial remedy of wage garnishment."); Bagwell, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 9, 1987). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-6, (b)-8, discussed must circumscribe those contacts to stay within this narrow exception.[321]

Once a judgment is paid or otherwise satisfied, the exception to affect a post judgment remedy would no longer apply to an improper garnishment notice sent to the consumer's employer, since there is no longer a right to seek a post judgment remedy.[322]

Publishing a notice of sale when the foreclosure had been dismissed, similarly is not a protected post judgment remedy.[323]

Because consumer consent, court permission, and to effectuate post judgment remedies are exceptions to the rule against third-party contact, the burden of proof as to these exceptions is on the debt collector.[324] For a discussion of burden of proof for FDCPA exceptions, see § 5.2.7, supra, and § 11.6.6, infra.

5.7.6 Other Allowed Third-Party Contacts

The Higher Education Act (HEA) allows for administrative wage garnishment without a court judgment to collect on defaulted federal student loans, so that this garnishment does not fall within FDCPA § 1692c(b)'s exception to effectuate a post judgment remedy. Nevertheless, courts have held that the more specific HEA trumps section 1692c(b).[325] Thus a debt collector can contact the student loan borrower's employer to garnish the wages.

The FTC staff has indicated it is not a violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b) for a collector to communicate through an interpreter to a non-English-speaking consumer,[326] to respond to an inquiry of the Better Business Bureau,[327] or contact the joint holder of a checking account, although that individual did not sign the check in question.[328]

The FTC staff has taken the position that a collector may compile a list of the drivers' license numbers or a list of the first three letters of the last name, first initial, and house or box number of consumers reported to have written dishonored checks and then distribute the lists as bad check writer lists to merchants who take checks from consumers.[329] Whether such coding is sufficient to protect consumers' privacy is open to question.[330]

5.7.7 Leaving Messages with Third Parties for the Consumer

Whether FDCPA § 1692c(b) is violated when a debt collector leaves a message for the consumer with a third party will depend on whether the message is treated as a communication under section 1692c(b).[331] Courts have found that messages left with third parties for consumers are communications leading to a FDCPA § 1692c(b) violation if the message asks the consumer to return a call to discuss a debt[332] or refers to a defaulted account.[333] The FTC staff also indicates that sending a debt collection letter to the consumer in care of a third party also violates section 1692c(b) if the consumer does not normally accept mail at that address.[334] Improperly contacting such third parties may also constitute harassment and abuse where the collector already has the consumer's location information.[335]

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), voicemails that qualify as limited-content messages[336] will be at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988). But cf. Bath, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 28, 1987); Roberts, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 7, 1980). A collection agency may not report dishonored check to law enforcement agency. Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 18, 1978). However, if the check's payee is not "debt collection," the payee-creditor would be exempt from the FDCPA, and could report the dishonored check to law enforcer. See Evenchick, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 30, 1978).

321 But see Taylor v. Heath W. Williams, L.L.C., 510 F. Supp. 2d 1206 (N.D. Ga. 2007) (collector's letter to magistrate court did not violate § 1692c, as it would not be embarrassing or threatening to consumer's employment, requirement not found in FDCPA).

322 See Taylor v. Heath W. Williams, L.L.C., 510 F. Supp. 2d 1206 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

323 See Friello v. Bank of New York, 2012 WL 4892856 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 15, 2012).

324 Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015) (relating to burden of proof for exceptions to the provision regarding third party contacts for location information).

325 See Moss v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5416928 (S.D. Ga. Sept. 26, 2012); Bennett v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1605108 (S.D. Ga. May 8, 2012), aff'd, 2013 WL 310066 (11th Cir. Jan. 28, 2013) (unpublished); National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law § 9.3.4 (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

326 Zbrzeznj, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 21, 1992), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

327 Jones, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1992), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

328 Borowski, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 6, 1992), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Hoffman v. GC Services Ltd., 2010 WL 9113645, at *11 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 3, 2010) ("The court finds that this evidence presents a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether plaintiff's decision to give his mother a power of attorney (along with control over his checking account and mail) constituted 'consent' for the defendants to speak with his parents about the PayPal account."); National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (varying rules about liability on joint bank accounts).

329 Fleming, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 1, 1982). FTC staff's premise that such a list protects individual consumer's privacy may be erroneous in some instances. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-4, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

330 See § 6.5.3, infra.

331 See §§ 4.2, 5.7.3, supra.

332 See Wideman v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2009 WL 129830 (W.D. Pa. May 7, 2009).

333 See Vinson v. North Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2011 WL 13319719 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 11, 2011).

334 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(b)-1, (b)-4 (collector may use "in care of" letter only if consumer lives at or accepts mail at other party's address), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

335 Rozga, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 5, 1978); Faulkner, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 15, 1978). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

336 Reg. F. § 1006.2(j), discussed at § 4.9, supra.

considered attempted communications[337] and not communications.[338] However, the definition of limited-content messages specifies that such messages must be left for a consumer, not a third party.[339] Thus, any message left for a third party is not a limited content message and can still be a violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b). However, where a message involves only a request for the consumer to call back and no information whatsoever about the debt, the message may not be a communication within FDCPA § 1692c(b)'s scope and thus not a section 1692c(b) violation.[340] An informal FTC staff opinion letter even indicates that a collector may ask the parents whether they take financial responsibility for a non-minor child, as long as the collector does not reveal the existence of the debt.[341] But FTC staff has also indicated that a message can be in connection with a debt even if the debt is not specifically mentioned.[342]

5.7.8 Voicemails for Consumers Overheard by Third Parties

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), voicemails that qualify as limited-content messages[343] will be considered attempted communications[344] and not communications.[345] As a result, contacts that qualify as limited-content messages will not be third-party disclosures although voicemail messages that do not comply with that definition can still lead to third-party disclosures.

The remainder of this section describes the law that applied to voicemail messages prior to November 30, 2021. This law is still valid precedent to the extent that a voicemail message does not qualify as a limited-content message.

A debt collector leaving a voicemail message for a consumer, in an attempt to comply other FDCPA requirements, may disclose the collection agency's identity[346] and describe the purpose of the communication.[347] But such disclosures run the risk of being overheard by a third party that shares the voicemail. The Eleventh Circuit has found that this risk of being overheard by a third party is not justification for violating other FDCPA requirements.[348] Thus voicemail messages left for the consumer have to walk a tightrope to comply with all of the applicable FDCPA requirements. Some courts find that inadvertent disclosure of a debt to a third party through a message on a shared voicemail does not violate FDCPA § 1692c(b), unless the collector has reason to suspect a third party will overhear the message.[349] Other courts find voicemail messages overheard by a third party violate FDCPA § 1692c(b), regardless of the collector's state of knowledge.[350] These courts find that a debt collector assumes the risk of violating FDCPA § 1692c(b) when on a shared answering machine it identifies itself as a debt collector and indicates that it is attempting to collect a debt.[351]

Courts have ruled that a message has to have been heard by the third party, and that the mere possibility that a third party might hear a voicemail is not sufficient to violate FDCPA

337 Reg. F. § 1006.2(b), discussed at § 4.2, supra.

338 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.

339 Reg. F. § 1006.2(j). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,749 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("final § 1006.2(j)'s definition of limited-content message does not permit third-party messages, either in live conversations or as voicemail messages.").

340 See Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(2)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Rosenberg, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 29, 1986); Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977). See also Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Associates, Inc., 179 F. Supp. 2d 861 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (collector asked consumer's co-worker for consumer in call and uttered profanity and hung up when told she was not available; because debt collector did not discuss consumer's debt with coworker, there was no violation of § 1692c(b)).

341 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 22, 1990).

342 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(a)-1, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Rozga, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 5, 1978); Faulkner, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 15, 1978).

343 Reg. F. § 1006.2(j), discussed at § 4.9, supra.

344 Reg. F. § 1006.2(b), discussed at § 4.2, supra.

345 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.

346 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(6).

347 15 U.S.C. §§ 1695e(11), 1692f(5).

348 Edwards v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 584 F.3d 1350, 1354 (11th Cir. 2009).

349 See Mostiller v. Chase Asset Recovery Corp., 2010 WL 335023 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 22, 2010) (no violation for disclosing debt to roommate who overheard message, because there was no claim that collector intended third party to hear or knew or should have known of risk); Mark v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2009 WL 2407700, at *5 (D. Minn. Aug.4, 2009) (FDCPA was not intended to protect against risk of inadvertent disclosure); Edwards v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1346, 1363 (N.D. Ga. 2008) (inadvertent, unintended "communication" with third-party does not constitute violation of FDCPA); Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Companies, L.L.C., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1164 (N.D. Cal. 2003). See also Zweigenhaft v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2014 WL 6085912 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2014) (FDCPA privacy restrictions on voice mails were outdated, should be disregarded; no violation when parent's debt was revealed to their child in brief voicemail).

350 Marisco v. NCO Fin. Systems, Inc., 946 F. Supp. 287 (E.D.N.Y. May 23, 2013) (consumer adequately pleaded violation of § 1692c(b) where collection agency that identified itself as debt collection company and indicated that it was attempting to collect a debt, left message on answering machine at consumer's residence that was overheard by consumer's mother-in-law); Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2013); Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. June 7, 2011) (voicemail messages left for debtor, which were heard by her boyfriend and friend, violated § 1692c(b)); Kelemen v. Prof'l Collection Sys., 2011 WL 31396 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 4, 2011) (consumer stated claim under § 1692c(b) when alleged collector left message on plaintiff's work voicemail that was overheard by her co-worker). See also Williams v. CT Corp. Sys., 2007 WL 9700908 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 6, 2007) (no violation of § 1692c(b) where collector left message for borrower's wife's voicemail, because § 1692c(d) defines "consumer" to include consumer's spouse).

351 Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2013); Marisco v. NCO Fin. Systems, Inc., 946 F. Supp. 287 (E.D.N.Y. May 23, 2013) (collection agency that identified itself as debt collection company and indicated that it was attempting to collect debt, left message on answering machine at consumer's residence that was overheard by consumer's mother-in-law).

§ 1692c(b).[352] A voicemail left on a consumer's cell phone is also not likely to result in a violation, because it is assumed consumers are in control of their own cell phone.[353]

A collector cannot avoid liability under FDCPA § 1692c(b) by leaving a voicemail that states the message is intended for an identified person, requests that others stop listening, and then after a pause indicates it is a debt collection call.[354] This is particularly the case where the voicemail's outgoing message indicates that others share the voicemail, or where it is difficult for the listener to skip to the next message on the phone without hearing the collector's message.[355] In a stipulated FTC order, a debt collector agreed that it would only leave a message on the consumer's voicemail if the outgoing message only identifies the consumer's first and last name, the collector had talked to the consumer at that phone number once before, and the collector had not been requested to stop leaving messages.[356]

Other collectors have tried an approach that calls a number with a prerecorded message that asks the consumer to press a particular number only if they are the named individual, and does not provide any other information that can be left as a voicemail. (In a number of instances, the system has not operated properly and instead leaves a message concerning collection of a debt on the voicemail, as if the number had been pressed.[357] Even this approach can violate the FDCPA—if the recorded call asking the consumer to press a particular number does not first identify itself as a collection call, this should violate section 1692e(11). But if it does identify itself as a collection call, and a third party overhears the message, there can be a violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b).[358]

5.7.9 Emails and Texts Viewed by Third Parties

5.7.9.1 Generally

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) addresses whether a collector can raise the bona fide error defense where a text or email communication mistakenly sent to or read by a third party violates FDCPA § 1692c(b)'s prohibition of third-party contacts. Third-party communication via emails or texts is prohibited, but Regulation F defines standards as to whether the collector has maintained procedures reasonably adapted to avoid a third-party communication. Of course, even if such procedures are in place, there is still a violation if the email or text was intentionally sent so as to be viewed by a third party and did not result from a bona fide error.[359]

FDCPA § 1692k(c) provides that a debt collector may not be held liable for an FDCPA violation if the debt collector shows by a preponderance of evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error. Regulation F defines procedures that are reasonably adapted to avoid an error involving an email or text being viewed by a third party.

A debt collector maintains procedures that are reasonably adapted to avoid a bona fide error in sending an email or text message communication that would result in a FDCPA § 1692c(b) or Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1) violation if those procedures include steps to reasonably confirm and document that the collector has complied with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3).

Depending on their size, the scope of their operations, and other business-specific facts, different debt collectors may take different approaches to reasonably confirming and documenting compliance with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3). The Bureau declines to specify by rule a single set of steps or elements that all procedures must or should include under Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3). As the Bureau noted in the preamble to the proposal, however, procedures permitting a debt collector to use obviously incorrect email addresses merely because the addresses were obtained consistent with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) would not satisfy the requirement to reasonably confirm and document compliance. In this circumstance, any purported confirmation of the debt collector's compliance with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) would not be reasonable.[360]

Failure to comply with the Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) procedures does not violate FDCPA § 1692c(b), if the text or email is not disclosed to a third party. Compliance with the procedures

352 Miller v. MediCredit, Inc., 2019 WL 6709388, at *8 (E.D. Va. Dec. 9, 2019). See also Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., 819 F. Supp. 2d 874, 879–880 (D. Minn. 2011); Rayl v. Moores, 2010 WL 4386784, at *3 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 28, 2010); Seaworth v. Messerli, 2010 WL 3613821, at *5, n.6 (D. Minn. Sept. 7, 2010) (letter mailed to consumer that is never received not communication under FDCPA). But see Cerrato v. Solomon & Solomon, 909 F. Supp. 2d 139 (D. Ct. 2012) (eight unanswered telephone calls—all of which displayed Solomon's name and telephone number—constitute "communications" under FDCPA).

353 Bryan v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 3d 686 (W.D.N.C. 2021) (no violation of § 1692c(b) when consumer played voicemail message on cell phone in earshot of sister and mother, because cell phone was in her sole possession and control when message was overheard, even though caller appeared as "unknown"); Nelson v. Receivables Outsourcing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3854796 (D.N.J. Aug. 14, 2018); Zortman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 870 F. Supp. 2d 694 (D. Minn. May 2, 2012).

354 Lande v. Online Info. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6609563 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 3, 2016); Nicaisse v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 9462106 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 28, 2015); Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2013); Thompson v. Diversified Adjustment Services, Inc., 2013 WL 3973976 (S.D. Tex. July 31, 2013); Leahey v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 756 F. Supp. 2d 1322, 1327 (N.D. Ala. 2010); Berg v. Merchants Ass'n Collection Div., Inc., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1336, 1341 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (explaining that forewarning does not alert listener to refrain from listening to message in presence of others, nor does it ensure that third party will not overhear contents of message).

355 Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2013).

356 United States v. Expert Global Solutions, Inc., 2013 WL 5870336 (N.D. Tex. July 16, 2013) (stipulated order).

357 See Abernathy v. NCC Bus. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 4320810 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 18, 2012); Pawelczak v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., 2012 WL 2192263 (N.D. Ill. June 14, 2012) (similar system failed in thirteen calls to consumer in three months).

358 Pawelczak v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., at *5 2012 WL 2192263 (N.D. Ill. June 14, 2012).

359 See § 12.2, infra, discussing the elements of a bona fide error defense.

360 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,777 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnote omitted).

helps determine the collector's bona fide error defense where there is a prohibited third-party communication.

But even if there is no disclosure to a third party, failure to comply with the procedures may result in violations of other Regulation F provisions. Compliance with the Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) procedures not only contribute to a bona fide error defense for an otherwise violative third-party communication, but also provides a safe harbor for the email or text revealing the debt collector's name or other information indicating that the communication relates to the collection of a debt,[361] as examined at § 8.9, infra. Compliance with the same procedures also is an exception to the prohibition that a collector communicates or attempt to communicate with a consumer by sending an email to an email address that the debt collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer,[362] discussed at § 8.10, infra.

Procedures comply with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) if the collector takes steps to reasonably confirm and document that:

1. The collector acquired an email address in a manner set out by Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4) or the phone number for a text message in a manner set out by Ref. F § 1006.6(d)(5);[363] and
2. The collector has not sent an email to the email address or a text to the phone number where the collector knew that the email or text previously led to a third-party disclosure.[364]

As to the second requirement, a collector knows of such third-party disclosure if any person informs the collector of that fact.[365] The Regulation F supplemental information states "[t]hus, to comply with § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii), it is necessary (but not sufficient) for a debt collector to accept and track complaints."[366]

A collector sending in bona fide error an email to an address or a text to a number that previously led to a third-party disclosure goes to whether the collector's procedures are reasonably adapted to avoid disclosure to a third party. The supplemental information to Regulation F states:

> [I]f a debt collector sends repeated emails to an email address or text messages to a telephone number that the debt collector knows has led to a third-party disclosure, that conduct would likely show that the debt collector's procedures are not reasonable and that the debt collector is not entitled to a safe harbor from civil liability.[367]

As for the first requirement concerning procedures to acquire the email address or phone number for text messages, compliance with the procedures for acquiring an email address require that the email address is obtained pursuant in a manner described in at least one of the three subsections of Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4). Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) considers procedures where the collector obtains the email address itself, Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii) where the creditor obtains the email address, and Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(iii) where a prior collector obtains the email address. The procedures for obtaining a phone number for text messages are found at Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(5). These separate procedures are examined at §§ 5.7.9.2 to 5.7.9.5, infra.

In contrast to emails and text messages, Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) does not outline procedures that are reasonably adapted to avoid a bona fide error for other types of electronic messages, including direct messages via social media.[368] The supplemental information to Regulation F states:

> In light of the apparent variations in direct messaging technology, the Bureau is unable to assess how well the procedures in final Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) through (5) would address the risk of third-party disclosures in the direct messaging context. Therefore, for purposes of Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) through (5), the Bureau declines to define the term email to include direct messaging technology in mobile applications or on social media.[369]

5.7.9.2 Procedures Where the Debt Collector Acquires the Email Address from the Consumer

Compliance with Regulation F § 1006.6.(d)(4)(i) (effective November 30, 2021) occurs where either the consumer used the email address to communicate with the debt collector about the debt and has not since opted out of communications to that email address,[370] or the collector received directly from the consumer prior consent to use the email address to communicate about the debt and the consumer has not withdrawn the consent.[371] Opting out of communications to an email address is examined at § 5.8, infra. Note that in both cases the communication must be "about the debt."

Prior consent includes consent via any medium of communication, including in writing, electronically, or orally.[372] It also includes the consumer providing the email address on the debt collector's website or online portal if the collector discloses clearly and conspicuously that it may use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt.[373]

361 See Reg. F § 1006.22(g).
362 See Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3).
363 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3)(i).
364 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii).
365 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(3)(ii)-1.
366 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,779 (Nov. 30, 2020).
367 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,778, 76,779 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnote omitted).
368 See also Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4), discussed at § 8.11, infra, for additional restrictions on the use of social media.
369 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,777 (Nov. 30, 2020).
370 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(A).
371 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B).
372 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-1 explains "[f]or purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B), a consumer may provide consent directly to a debt collector through any medium of communication, such as in writing, electronically, or orally."
373 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-2.

Collectors may use an email address provided by the consumer's employer if the collector obtained the email address via one of the two methods outlined in Reg. F § 1006.6.(d)(4)(i).[374]

5.7.9.3 Procedures Where the Creditor Obtains the Email Address from the Consumer

Email addresses obtained by creditors from consumers require special procedures for their use in a bona fide error defense. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) explains the basis for this in its supplemental information:

> [A] consumer might agree to receive electronic communications from a creditor without considering the risk that a third party might read those communications, but a consumer who is indifferent to the disclosure of creditor communications may not be indifferent to the disclosure of debt collection communications. Thus, a consumer's decision to communicate electronically with a creditor does not, without more, suggest that the risk of third-party disclosure is particularly low. Nor does a disclosure in account opening materials, without more, suggest that the risk of third-party disclosure is particularly low. Years may pass, and a consumer's circumstances may change, between the time a consumer opens an account and the time the account is transferred to a debt collector.[375]

Compliance with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii) occurs where a number of specific requirements are met. Again, this is not an affirmative requirement for collectors but rather, a type of safe harbor for collectors who choose to implement these procedures. First, the creditor obtained the consumer's email address from the consumer.[376] Second, before the collector uses the email address, the creditor must have used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the account and the consumer has not asked the creditor to stop its use.[377] Examples of creditor use of an email address include sending to the email address required disclosures, bills, invoices, periodic statements, payment reminders, and payment confirmations. Communications about the account do not include, for example, marketing or advertising materials unrelated to the consumer's account.[378]

In addition, the collector can only use that email address obtained from the creditor if the creditor (not the collector) has previously sent to the consumer a written or electronic notice (not an oral message, such as a live or robocall phone message[379]), to an address the creditor obtained from the consumer and used to communicate with the consumer about the account, that clearly and conspicuously discloses five items:[380]

1. That the debt has been or will be transferred to the debt collector, and the name of that debt collector;[381]
2. The email address and the fact that the debt collector might use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt;[382]
3. That, if others have access to the email address, then it is possible they may see the emails;[383]
4. Instructions for a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer could opt out of such an email communication to that address;[384] and
5. The date by which the debt collector or the creditor must receive the consumer's request to opt out, which must be at least thirty-five days after the date the notice is sent. The notice may instruct the consumer to send the notice to the creditor or the collector, but not both.[385]

The creditor, not the collector, is responsible for sending the disclosure, but the creditor's failure to do so does not create any FDCPA liability for the creditor. Instead, the creditor's failure to properly send the disclosure means that the collector cannot rely on a bona fide error defense on the procedures by which the creditor obtained the email address.

Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable. The location and type size must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated.[386] The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide different sample language for written[387] or electronic[388] disclosures that the creditor may, but is not required to use. The notice may be 374 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3), discussed at § 8.10, infra.

375 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,780 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnote omitted).
376 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(A).
377 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(B).
378 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(ii)(B)-1.
379 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,784 (Nov. 30, 2020).
380 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C).
381 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(1); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(1)-1.
The debt collector's name is an important requirement of these disclosures for a number of reasons. One is that the CFPB declined to require that the notice be close in time to the collector's use of the email address, because it assumed that the creditor designating a collector would be close in time to when the collector would use the email address. See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,785 (Nov. 30, 2020).
382 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(2).
383 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(3).
384 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4).
385 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(5); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(5)-1.
386 Reg. F Official interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-1.
387 "We are transferring your account to ABC debt collector, and we are providing ABC debt collector with the following email address for you: [email address]. ABC debt collector may use this email address to communicate with you about the debt. If others have access to this email address, then it is possible they may see the emails. If you would like to opt out of communications by ABC debt collector to [email address], please fill out the enclosed form and return it in the enclosed envelope so that we receive it by [date]." Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-2(i).
388 "We are transferring your account to ABC debt collector, and we are providing ABC debt collector with the following email address for you: [email address]. ABC debt collector may use this email address to communicate with you about the debt. If others have access to this email address, then it is possible they may see the emails. If you would like to opt out of communications by ABC debt collector to [email address], please click here by [date]." Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-2(ii).

contained in a larger communication to the consumer, if the notice is clear and conspicuous.[389]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide two examples of a reasonable and simple opt-out method. When the notice is sent in writing, the creditor supplies a reply form and a pre-addressed envelope together with the opt-out notice. Requiring a consumer to call or write to obtain the form is not a reasonable and simple method.[390]

When the disclosure is sent electronically, an example of a reasonable and simple opt-out method is the notice including a hyperlink or allowing a reply to the disclosure with the word "stop." Not reasonable or simple is requiring a consumer who receives the opt-out notice electronically to opt out by postal mail, telephone, or visiting a website without providing a link.[391]

The collector cannot use the email address during the 35-day opt-out period, but the 35-day period is not a deadline for the consumer to opt out of further communications to that email address.[392] Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits, with certain exceptions, a collector from communicating through a medium if the consumer requests the collector not to use that medium.[393] The consumer's rights under Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) do not expire and continue to be effective after the thirty-five-day period.

In addition, the consumer continues to have ongoing rights under FDCPA § 1692c(c), so that if at any time the consumer properly notifies the collector that the consumer refuses to pay or wants the collector to cease all further communication, the collector must, with certain exceptions, stop all communications, through email and other mediums.[394] However, a consumer's request to opt out of a debt collector's use of a particular email address under Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(D) will only apply to the collector's use of that email address and does not affect the collector's ability to communicate with the consumer through other means absent the consumer invoking rights under FDCPA § 1692c(c).[395]

Another limit on the collector's use of creditor-obtained email addresses is that the domain must be available for use by the general public (e.g. @gmail.com) and not reserved to particular corporations or institutions (e.g. @nclc.org).[396] In addition, the collector must not know that the address is provided by the consumer's employer.[397] A debt collector knows that an email address is provided by the consumer's employer if any person has informed the debt collector that the address is employer-provided, but the collector need not conduct a manual review of consumer accounts to determine whether an email address might be employer-provided.[398]

5.7.9.4 Procedures Where a Prior Debt Collector Obtains the Email Address from the Consumer

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) sets out procedures where a prior debt collector obtained the email address.[399] The immediately prior collector[400] must have used that email address to send an email to the consumer (and the consumer cannot then have opted out of communications to that email address) and any prior collector obtained the email address in compliance with Reg F. § 1006.6(d)(4)(i), as described at § 5.7.9.2, supra, or in compliance with Reg. F § 1006(d)(4)(ii), as described at § 5.7.9.3, supra.[401] There is no compliance where the immediately prior collector did not use the email address to send an email to the consumer, even though another collector prior to it had complied with either Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii) and used the email address to send the email to the consumer.[402]

Collectors may use an email address provided by the consumer's employer if the collector obtained the email address in compliance with Reg. F § 1006.6.(d)(4)(iii).[403]

5.7.9.5 Procedures for When a Debt Collector Obtains a Phone Number for Text Messages

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) sets out two procedures to obtain a phone number for text messages in Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(5). One is that the consumer initiated the first text (not just a telephone call from a cell phone),[404] has not since opted out of receipt of texts to that number, and the collector confirms that the number still belongs to the consumer, 389 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-3.

390 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1(i).
391 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1(ii). See also 12 C.F.R. § 1022.25 (reasonable and simple opt out method for use of eligibility information about consumer received from affiliate to make solicitation to consumer about products or services, referenced in Reg F supplemental information). See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,785 (Nov. 30, 2020).
392 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(D).
393 See Reg. F Official interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(D)-1. Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) is examined at § 6.9, infra.
394 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(D)-1. See § 5.8, infra.
395 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(D)-2.
396 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(E)-1.
397 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E).
398 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(ii)(E)-2.
399 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(iii).
400 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(iii)-1 (discussion of immediately prior).
401 See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(iii)-2(i), (ii).
402 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(iii)-2(iii).
403 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3), discussed at § 8.10, infra.
404 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(5)(i)-1. See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,790 (Nov. 30, 2020) ("Because a consumer who places a telephone call to a debt collector generally can control who listens to the conversation by initiating or engaging in the call in private, the Bureau does not believe that a consumer's decision to call a debt collector, without more, generally suggests that the risk of third-party disclosure is low if the debt collector sends a text message to the same telephone number. Therefore, the text of § 1006.6(d)(5)(i), and new comment 6(d)(5)(i)-1, clarify that the consumer use method for text messages does not apply if the consumer only used the telephone number to communicate with the debt collector about the debt by telephone call.").

either by receiving a text from the consumer within the last sixty days or by checking a database of reassigned numbers within the last sixty days.[405] The consumer's initiation of a text message must be about the debt. It does not include a text in response to a call from the collector to the consumer's cell phone number simply asking who is calling the consumer.[406]

A qualifying reassigned number database is the one the FCC has established (if currently established)[407] or a substantially similar commercial database.[408] The commercial database must be substantially similar in terms of completeness and accuracy.[409] Based on FCC findings, the CFPB considers that existing commercial databases may not meet this standard. Regulation F's supplemental information indicates the unreliability of existing databases and provides the features of the FCC database:

> The FCC has observed that, although commercial databases currently exist to help callers determine whether a telephone number has been reassigned, these databases are not comprehensive. For this reason, in December 2018, the FCC announced the creation of a new database to serve as a single, comprehensive source for determining whether a telephone number has been reassigned. The purpose of the database, known as the Reassigned Numbers Database, is to help curb the proliferation of unwanted telephone calls directed to reassigned telephone numbers. Once operational, the database will contain reassigned number information from each provider that obtains North American Numbering Plan U.S. geographic numbers and toll-free numbers. Users will be able to consult the database to determine whether a telephone number has been permanently disconnected since a particular date—such as the date the consumer last consented to communicate by text message or the date of the consumer's most recent text message—and therefore no longer belongs to the consumer. If the database shows that a particular telephone number has been disconnected, then a debt collector has reason to anticipate that sending a text message to that number will result in a third-party disclosure. Thus, once operational, the FCC's Reassigned Numbers Database can help debt collectors comply with FDCPA § 1692c(b) and the final rule's prohibition on third-party disclosures.[410]

The other way to comply with the procedures for acquiring a phone number for text messaging is if the collector received directly from the consumer prior consent—through any mode of communication, including in writing, electronically, or orally[411]—to send texts to that number about the debt,[412] the consumer has not since withdrawn that consent, and either the consent was provided within the past sixty days or the collector checked a reassigned number database within the last sixty days.[413] Prior consent includes the consumer providing the text message number on the debt collector's website or online portal if the collector discloses clearly and conspicuously that it may use the number to communicate with the consumer about the debt.[414]

Note that the procedures for obtaining a phone number for a text message do not allow for the number to be acquired by either the creditor or a prior collector. The CFPB is concerned that phone numbers may be disconnected and then re-assigned to a third party, so Regulation F requires not only that the collector obtain the number, but that it do so within the last sixty days or check a reassigned number database within the last sixty days.

5.7.10 Third Party Enforcement of FDCPA § 1692c(b)

While many courts find aggrieved third parties have standing to bring claims under FDCPA §§ 1692d, e, and f,[415] only a few courts have found a third party has standing to raise a claim under FDCPA § 1692c(b).[416]

405 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(5)(i).

406 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,790 (Nov. 30, 2020).

407 Established in In re Advanced Methods to Target & Eliminate Unlawful Robocalls, 33 FCC Rcd. 12024 (Dec. 12, 2018). See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(5)-1.

408 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(5)-1.

409 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,791 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnotes omitted).

410 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,791 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnotes omitted).

411 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(5)(ii)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-1).

412 For CFPB guidance as to the nature of consent, see Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-1,-2.

413 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(5)(ii).

414 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(5)(ii)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-2 "for guidance concerning when a debt collector may treat a consumer who provides a telephone number for text messages as having consented directly to the debt collector"). Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-2 says that: "If a consumer provides an email address to a debt collector (including on the debt collector's website or online portal), the debt collector may treat the consumer as having consented directly to the debt collector's use of the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B) if the debt collector discloses clearly and conspicuously that the debt collector may use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt."

415 See, e.g., Rawlinson v. Law Office of William M. Rudow, L.L.C., 460 Fed. Appx. 254, 258 (4th Cir. 2012) (aunt of debtor had standing under § 1692d, e, and f); Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (son of debtor); Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693 (6th Cir. 2003) (son of debtor had FDCPA standing). See also McKenney-Becker v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2015 WL 170520 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 13, 2015) (husband aggrieved by debt collector's conduct); Aviles v. Wayside Auto Body, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 3d 216 (D. Conn. 2014) (niece, passenger in car during threatened repossession); Mills v. ACS Recovery, Inc., 2014 WL 916674 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2014) (father repeatedly contacted); Thompson v. Gateway Fin. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 5989240 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2012) (denying motion to dismiss children's FDCPA claims); Maddox v. Martin Co., L.L.C., 2006 WL 1308211 (S.D. Ohio May 11, 2006) (debtor's aunt protected from violations of § 1692e, but not of § 1692c; aunt awarded $500); Sibersky v. Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler & Schwartz, P.C., 2000 WL 1448635 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2000) (husband who was not consumer could pursue FDCPA claims); Wenrich v. Robert E. Cole, P.C., 2001 WL 4994 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2000) (parents alleged to be obligated). Cf. Sibersky v. Goldstein, 155 Fed. Appx. 10, 11–12 (2d Cir. 2005) (husband of debtor did not state a claim under one of the FDCPA provisions that applied to any person).

416 Scott v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 139 F. Supp. 3d 956, 966 (S.D. Iowa 2015) (issue of fact remained as to whether collector alleged third party plaintiff owed debt, and therefore had standing to raise claim under

The Seventh Circuit found that FDCPA § 1692c(b) protects the privacy of the consumer who supposedly owes the debt, not the third party. Allowing third parties to seek relief for a collector's violation would be "inconsistent with § 1692c(b), a provision that places control over the disclosure of a consumer's information squarely in the hands of the consumer, not the third party who may receive the disclosure."[417] However, FDCPA § 1692c(b) explicitly prohibits communications to "any person other than the consumer," and section 1692k grants a private right of action to "any person." Other FDCPA protections are limited by their language to "consumers," but that is not true of section 1692c(b).

5.8 Right to Stop Collection Contacts, FDCPA § 1692c(c)

5.8.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692c(c) and Reg F § 1006.6(c)

(c) Ceasing communication—If a consumer notifies a debt collector in writing that the consumer refuses to pay a debt or that the consumer wishes the debt collector to cease further communications with the consumer, the debt collector shall not communicate further with the consumer with respect to such debt, except—

(1) to advise the consumer that the debt collector's further efforts are being terminated;

(2) to notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor may invoke specified remedies which are ordinarily invoked by such debt collector or creditor; or

(3) where applicable, to notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor intends to invoke a specified remedy.

If such notice from the consumer is made by mail, notification shall be complete upon receipt.[418]

This provision appeared in the midst of House efforts to pass the Act,[419] and was modified in each subsequent bill. In some bills, the consumer's notice to the collector to cease contacts was not required to be in writing.[420] A 1977 Senate version added certain permissible collector communications after receipt of a consumer's request to cease communication.[421]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) generally tracks this provision but clarifies that, after the consumer's notification, not only communication but attempts to communicate are prohibited.[422] For example, a collector violates this provision if it continues to call the consumer even if the consumer does not answer the telephone call.

5.8.2 The Consumer's Right to Stop Collection Contacts

FDCPA § 1692c(c) requires a debt collector to halt all collection efforts, excluding a few exceptions discussed in § 5.8.4, infra, upon receipt of the consumer's written request to cease communications or the consumer's written refusal to pay the debt.[423] The requirement to cease further contacts applies to communications and attempted communications, including even phone calls the consumer does not answer.[424]

1692c(b) as consumer, when it wrongly garnished her wages); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627, 633, 635 (E.D. Pa. 2013) (consumer is defined not just as someone obligated to pay debt, but someone either obligated or allegedly obligated to pay debt and, as such, collector treated plaintiff as if she were obligated on debt, which gave her standing to bring claims under § 1692c(b)); Deuel v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 700 F. Supp. 2d 1306 (S.D. Fla. 2010); Bank v. Pentagroup Fin., L.L.C., 2009 WL 1606420 (E.D.N.Y. June 9, 2009) (one who received recorded calls aimed at different consumer has no standing under § 1692c; granting motion to dismiss as plaintiff lacks standing to bring § 1692c claim because: (1) he was not obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt; and (2) he has not alleged that he is consumer's spouse, parent, guardian, executor, or administrator); Thomas v. Consumer Adjustment Co. Inc., 579 F. Supp.1290, 1298–1299 (E.D. Miss. 2008). Cf. Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693, 697 (6th Cir. 2003), citing Wright v. Fin. Serv. of Norwalk, Inc., 22 F.3d 647, 649 n.1 (6th Cir. 1994) (en banc) (only a "consumer" has standing to sue for violation of § 1692c); Christy v. EOS CCA, 905 F. Supp. 2d 648, 654–653 (E.D. Pa. 2012) (plaintiff was neither consumer or recipient of information from debt collector); Mantell v. Feingold & Levy, 1997 WL 45313, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 1997) (plaintiff not consumer).

417 Todd v. Collecto, Inc., 731 F.3d 734 (7th Cir. 2013) (§ 1692b(2) is privacy protection for consumer who supposedly owes debt; adult son who had been contacted for his mother's location could not obtain relief under § 1692b because protection is for consumer only).

418 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c). See also Reg F § 1006.6(c).

419 H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(d) (1976).

420 H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 804(d); H.R. 29, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(d) (1977); S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(d) (1977).

421 Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(d) (1977). Cf. S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(d) (1977).

422 See Reg. F § 1006.6(c)(1). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,759 (Nov. 30, 2020).

423 See Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012); Flores v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2015 WL 4254032 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20. 2015); Appx. E.2.2.5, infra. See also Rush v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 977 F. Supp. 2d 414 (D.N.J. 2013); Sembler v. Attention Funding Trust, 2009 WL 2883049 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 3, 2009) (claim dismissed where complaint failed to allege cease communication request sent in writing), adopted, 2009 WL 3055347 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 24, 2009); Micare v. Foster & Garbus, 132 F. Supp. 2d 77 (N.D.N.Y. 2001); S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 7, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(c), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; Clement, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 12, 1985); Miller, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 31, 1983), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. For sample cease contact letters, see § 2.4, supra.

424 Reg. F § 1006.6(c)(1). See also Litt v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 146 F. Supp. 3d 857 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (unanswered calls constituted "communications" under FDCPA where debt collector's name and telephone number appeared on caller identification display); Cerrato v. Solomon & Solomon, 909 F. Supp. 2d 139 (D. Conn. 2012) (eight unanswered telephone calls from the debt collector with caller ID displaying its name after receipt of cease letter were communications that violated § 1692c(c)).

The Official Interpretations of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) allow the consumer to notify a debt collector not only in writing, but also electronically using a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers.[425]

The collector of course is not bound by the cease communication writing prior to receiving it. FDCPA § 1692c(c) provides "If such notice from the consumer is made by mail, notification shall be complete upon receipt." Regulation F (effective November 1, 2021) clarifies for electronic communication that the consumer's electronic communication is complete upon the debt collector's receipt of that information.[426] The Regulation provides no grace period upon receipt of the stop request, and instead a collector sending a communication shortly after receipt of the written or electronic stop request will have to rely on the bona fide error defense, assuming it can show that its procedures promptly stop notification upon receipt.[427]

While oral notification is not sufficient to stop all collection contacts, Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1), as discussed at § 6.9, infra, allows the consumer to orally stop a particular mode of communication. For example, the consumer's oral statement "stop calling" is enough to stop further telephone calls.[428] The consumer can also orally say stop calls or text messages to a specific phone number while allowing calls to other numbers.

FDCPA § 1692c(c) provides rights for a "consumer." FDCPA § 1692a(3) defines "consumer" as one obligated or allegedly obligated to pay a debt. Thus, a person mistakenly being dunned for a debt or a person who is no longer obligated on a debt also has rights to send a cease communication stop collection notice.[429]

For purposes only of FDCPA § 1692c, the term "consumer" also includes the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), guardian, executor, or administrator.[430] Any such "consumer" thus has rights to notify the collector to cease communications. However, the Seventh Circuit has held that a debt collector may still communicate with the consumer's attorney, even if the attorney sends a cease communications letter.[431]

The debt collector is strictly liable for sending a request for payment after receiving a request to cease contacts.[432] Except for the bona fide error defense,[433] a collector is liable even if the employee sending the communication was unaware of the consumer's cease letter.[434]

The collector has no obligation to inform the consumer that they can request that it cease communications,[435] unless that requirement is included in an injunction or a consent decree[436] against a collector. Some state statutes also require notice to the consumer.[437]

When sending a written cease communication letter, it is prudent to send it by a time-stamped fax or by mail with return receipt requested.[438] The consumer should retain a record, such as a photocopy of the letter and stamped envelope, or a copy of the electronic cease communication notice reflecting the content and date it was sent. The cease communication notice is effective even if sent by the consumer's attorney.[439]

The cease communication notice should be sent to the collector and not the creditor. But a court has held that where the consumer sends the cease communication notice to the 425 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(c)(1)-2.

426 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(c)(1)-1.

427 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,773 (Nov. 30, 2020). See also § 12.2, infra (discussing bona fide error defense). See, e.g., Lupia v. Mericredit, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 3d 1271 (D. Colo. 2020), aff'd, 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (collection call to consumer violated § 1692c(c) even though consumer's dispute letter was not recorded in agency's system until after call was made; letter was received day before call was made; collector did not meet burden of proving it had reasonable procedures adapted to avoid phone call for bona fide error defense).

428 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,772 (Nov. 30, 2020).

429 See Isaac v. RMB, Inc., 2014 WL 3566069 (N.D. Ala. July 18, 2014) (pro se; alleged consumers awarded $2500 damages for emotional distress), aff'd, 604 Fed. Appx. 818 (11th Cir. 2015); Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2012 WL 1144239 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2012). Cf. § 4.4, supra.

430 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(d); Reg. F § 1006.6(a), discussed at § 5.10, infra.

431 See Bravo v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 812 F.3d 599 (7th Cir. 2016).

432 See Hagen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 85 F. Supp. 3d 1028 (D. Minn. 2015); Montgomery v. Shermeta, Adams & Von Allmen, P.C., 885 F. Supp. 2d 849 (W.D. Mich. 2012).

433 Smith v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992) (bona fide error defense where dunning letter sent out of its California office after receiving consumers' cease communications letter in its Ohio office). See also § 12.2, infra, discussing bona fide error defense.

434 See Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989) (since notification is effective when collector receives it, collector is liable for any communication made after that date, even if collector has no actual knowledge of request to cease communication; request had not yet been processed and noted on debtor's account). Cf. Smith v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 at 1036 (6th Cir. 1992) (dissent arguing that § 1692c(c) imposes absolute duty on collector to desist from further communication with consumer on date that collector received consumer's notice).

435 Stimpson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 944 F.3d 1190 (9th Cir. Dec. 18, 2019).

436 United States v. Utah Bur. of Collections, Inc., 15 F.T.C. Ct. Dec. 485 (D. Utah 1981) (permanent injunction; collector to send notice of a consumer's right to require collector to cease communications).

437 See § 5.8.7, infra.

438 See Abdullah v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, Inc., 2014 WL 4851760 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2014) (fact finder must resolve issue of delivery where consumer submitted evidence that she had mailed cease letter, obtaining presumption of delivery, and debt collector rebutted with evidence that it had regular procedures for logging cease letters); Nichols v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 3488365 (D. Ariz. Oct. 27, 2009) (summary judgment granted to debt collector on consumer's claim that collector failed to cease communication after he sent certified mail § 1692c(c) letter, where collector denied receiving letter and consumer did not receive return receipt; no delivery presumption for certified mail when sender does not receive requested return receipt), aff'd, 423 Fed. Appx. 744 (9th Cir. 2011; Bynum v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 850935 (N.D. Okla. Mar. 30, 2006) (no summary judgment where debt collector denied receipt of consumer's cease letter); § 2.4.2, supra.

439 See Hagen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 85 F. Supp. 3d 1028 (D. Minn. 2015).

creditor instead of the collection agency, the debt collector must honor it if it is aware of the notice.[440]

Courts have held that a consumer who has requested that a collector cease communications on a prior debt must reiterate the request if contacted by the same collector concerning a different debt.[441] But the consumer's request need not be in sophisticated language.[442]

The request to cease communications or refusal to pay should be reasonably clear.[443] One court held that a refusal to pay until the debt was "verified" permitted the debt collector to resume collections once the debt was verified.[444] Another court held that a written request for verification of the debt without a refusal to pay the debt only invoked the protections of FDCPA § 1692g, but not FDCPA § 1692c(c).[445]

5.8.3 Consumer's Subsequent Waiver of Right to Avoid Collection Contacts

After a consumer sends a cease letter, the consumer's subsequent conduct can waive the right to be free of further collection contacts. A collector can respond to a consumer's inquiry after the consumer's cease letter asking for further information about the debt[446] or for assisting in modifying the debt.[447] Where a consumer requests both cease communication and verification of the debt, the collector may provide a response with the verification information but cannot demand payment.[448] Waiver should only be found where even the least sophisticated consumer would understand that they 440 See Taufen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2014 WL 668019, at *7 (D. Minn. Feb. 19, 2014) ("a reasonable juror could conclude that Defendant, being in possession of the Account files with the 'cease and desist' code, would have known that Plaintiff had indicated that she wished the debt collector to cease all further communication").

441 Hernandez v. Scott, 2011 WL 4626244 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 3, 2011) (attorney's letter to collector requesting that communications cease was sent with regard to another debt rather than the one being collected); Udell v. Kansas Counselors, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 2d 1135 (D. Kan. 2004). See also Salazar v. MFP, Inc., 847 F. Supp. 2d 1329 (M.D. Fla. 2012) (no summary judgment where collector sent letter concerning same debt for which plaintiff had previously requested collector to cease communication, but where there were two accounts related to same debt); Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 30, 1977), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

442 See Nogali v. Transcon Fin., Inc., 2015 WL 12656934 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2015); Hilgenberg v. Elggren & Peterson, 2015 WL 4077765 (D. Utah July 6, 2015); Hair v. Lazega & Johanson L.L.C., 2014 WL 12571424 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2014); Barnes v. Seterus, Inc., 2013 WL 6834720 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 26, 2013); Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2012 WL 1144239 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2012); Bishop v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 713 F. Supp. 2d 1361 (M.D. Fla. 2010). See also Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (consumer's statement she could not take debt collection calls at work need not be in precise legal language). But cf. Sajdak v. New Penn Fin. L.L.C., 281 F. Supp. 3d 740 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 8, 2017) (notice to mortgage servicer of consumer's bankruptcy did not trigger § 1692c(c)); McCray v. Samuel I. White, P.C., 2017 WL 1196586 (D. Md. Mar. 31, 2017) (consumer's request that foreclosing entities desist from selling her home was not request to cease communication under § 1692c(c)); Shelley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4584649 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 28, 2013) (notice of bankruptcy does not meet requirements of § 1692c(c) notice to debt collector).

443 See Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah Feb. 5, 2019) (genuine issue of material fact); Flores v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2015 WL 4254032 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015) (rejecting collection agency's contention that consumer's letter stating "I will not pay this debt" was ineffective to invoke § 1692c(c) as "ambiguous on its face. The letter noted the specific nature of the dispute, and it clearly articulated the consumer's refusal to pay the entire debt"); Casas v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 249992 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2009) (debt collector violated FDCPA by continuing to demand payment of debt which consumer convincingly stated was not hers). Cf. Shrestha v. State Credit Adjustment Bur., Inc., 117 F. Supp. 2d 142 (D. Conn. 2000) (when debtor's letters asked collection agency to call and also asked collection agency to stop collection efforts, collector was not asked to cease contacts and did not violate FDCPA by calling debtor).

444 See Elwyn v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6568077 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 4, 2016).

445 See Croftcheck v. Accounts Recovery Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 1378683 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 20, 2012).

446 See Scheffler v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 902 F.3d 757, 762–763 (8th Cir. Aug. 27, 2018); Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006); Hochroth v. Ally Bank, 461 F. Supp. 3d 986, 1006 (D. Haw. 2020) (mortgage servicer could communicate with consumer, even when represented by attorney, because consumer waived any cease communications notification when consumer made multiple, voluntary and self-initiated phone calls to mortgage servicing company and transmitted letter to mortgage servicing company); Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 3d 1271 (D. Colo. 2020) (no violation of § 1692c(c) where consumer's letter refusing to pay debt expressly invited collections agency to send written confirmation of its actions to correct or rectify matter, and agency's letter was plainly responsive to consumer's request). See also Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1215057 (D. Md. 2021) (even though phone call by HOA attorney/debt collector to consumer was precipitated by consumer's letter to HOA about HOA meeting, reasonable jury could find that collector violated cease communication directive sent by consumer by steering her conversation with consumer toward debt).

447 Jay v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 8711730 (M.D. Tenn. Apr. 15, 2016) (factual question whether collector was responding to consumer's requests).

448 See Abbott v. Second Round Sub, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4296270 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2017) (where consumer's cease letter also requests verification of debt, collector was in its rights to send verification of debt and cover letter requesting additional information to assist it in investigating dispute); Crumel v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., 2015 WL 1565432 (E.D.N.C. Apr. 8, 2015); Marino v. Hoganwillig, P.L.L.C., 910 F. Supp. 2d 492 (W.D.N.Y. 2012); Cohen v. Beachside Two-I Homeowners' Ass'n, 2006 WL 1795140 (D. Minn. June 29, 2006) (collection attorneys may verify debt after cease notice and respond to settlement offer made by pro se consumer in cease letter), aff'd, 272 Fed. Appx. 534 (8th Cir. 2008); Recker v. Cent. Collection Bur., Inc., 2005 WL 2654222, at *4 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 17, 2005) ("Because verification is a statutorily required activity in order to resume collection activities, verification activities could be communications allowed implicitly under exception 1692c(c)(3)."); Johnson v. Equifax Risk Mgmt. Services, 2004 WL 540459 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 17, 2004) (consumer's written demand to collector that it verifies debt pursuant to § 1692g and otherwise cease all other communication effectively invoked § 1692c(c)'s cease communication remedy and did not improperly attempt to "have it both ways"). Cf. Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007) (when consumer's attorney requested verification and cessation of collections, verification response to attorney was not violation § 1692g, although it would have violated § 1692g if addressed to consumer).

were waiving rights to be free from collection contacts.[449] In addition, where the consumer contacts a creditor's collection attorney, that action does not waive rights to be free of contacts from the creditor's collection agency.[450] After receiving the consumer's cease letter, a consumer's subsequent contact solely asking for billing statements does not allow for further collection contacts demanding payment.[451]

5.8.4 Exceptions to Right to Cessation of Contacts

FDCPA § 1692c(c) provides three statutory exceptions to the requirement that a debt collector cease communication after the consumer's cease letter:

- To advise the consumer that the debt collector's further efforts are being terminated;[452]
- To notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor may invoke certain remedies, such as filing a lawsuit to collect on the debt; and
- To notify the consumer that it intends to invoke such specific remedies.

A debt collector cannot use these exceptions to threaten remedies it has no intention of pursuing. But if there is an intention to pursue them, courts are likely to allow the collector to provide notice of legal remedies such as a garnishment summons[453] or a collection lawsuit.[454] Less clear are collector letters seeking to compromise a claim[455] or providing notice of the acceleration of installment payments.[456] But it is clear that permissible further collector communications may not request payment.[457]

The CFPB has interpreted the written early intervention notice that Truth in Lending requires of mortgage servicers for delinquent mortgage loans to fall within the scope of the second and third statutory exceptions.[458] Truth in Lending requires mortgage servicers to give borrowers who are in default a specific form of notice informing them how to contact servicer staff for loss mitigation reviews.[459]

The Official Interpretations of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021)[460] also provide that mortgage servicers subject to the FDCPA do not have to comply with a cease request when complying with certain other mortgage servicing requirements, including requirements to provide a consumer with disclosures regarding the forced placement of hazard insurance,[461] a disclosure regarding an adjustable-rate mortgage's initial interest rate adjustment,[462] and a periodic statement for each billing cycle[463] as required by 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41. See CFPB Bulletin 2013-12 (Oct. 15, 2013) providing implementation guidance for certain mortgage servicing rules.[464]

The Federal Trade Commission in 2009 issued an advisory opinion[465] providing for a permitted debt collector contact after receipt of the consumer's cease letter. Where the consumer disputes a debt, the collector can respond to the consumer, despite a cease letter, describing the results of the collection agency's investigation of the dispute or the collector's belief that the communication is frivolous or irrelevant.[466] As discussed in § 3.4.4.3, supra, authority to issue advisory opinions was transferred from the FTC to the CFPB. The CFPB has not adopted this or other advisory opinions issued by the FTC.[467] However, as noted in § 5.8.3, supra, in specific circumstances

449 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006).

450 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006).

451 Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013).

452 See Cohen v. Beachside Two-I Homeowners' Assn., 272 Fed. Appx. 534 (8th Cir. 2008) (letter providing Cohen with a copy of satisfaction and release of lien did not violate FDCPA, because it falls squarely within statutory exception for "advis[ing] the consumer that the debt collector's further efforts are being terminated").

453 Scheffler v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 902 F.3d 757 (8th Cir. Aug. 27, 2018).

454 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c)(3). See Zand v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2013 WL 4516093 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 19, 2013) (notice of intent to file suit acceptable). See also Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) (section 1692c(c) does not stop collector from invoking legal process against consumer); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(c)-1 (restrictive definition of "communicate" not appropriate), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

455 See Lewis v. ACB Bus. Services, 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998). See also Vazquez v. Prof'l Bur. of Collections of Md., Inc., 217 F. Supp. 3d 1348 (M.D. Fla. 2016); Smith v. ARS Nat'l Serv. Inc., 102 F. Supp. 3d 1276 (M.D. Fla. 2015); Flores v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2015 WL 4254032 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015) (dismissing § 1692c(c) claim where collection agency's letter entitled "OFFER TO SETTLE AT HUGE REDUCTION!" fell within specified remedy exception of § 1692c(c)(2); "Indeed, many debtors may benefit from a final bargain offer from a collector, a last-ditch attempt to avoid litigation. Any fears of ongoing harassment are assuaged by the fact that only one final offer could be permissible under this analysis"). But see Schwarz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 1169249 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 24, 2016) (rejecting agency's argument that its subsequent communications offering payment options fell within § 1692c(c)'s specific remedies exception, distinguishing Lewis); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013) (follow-up letter came within protection of § 1692c(c)(2), since was effort to compromise claim).

456 See Graveling v. Castle Mortg. Co., 631 Fed. Appx. 690 (11th Cir. 2015) (pro se consumer).

457 See Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012) (violated § 1692c(c) by sending letters stating erroneous amount of check fees after receiving consumer's "refuse to pay" letter); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 805(c)-2, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra.

458 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(c)(2)-1. See also 81 Fed. Reg. 71,977 (Oct. 19, 2016) (CFPB Interpretive Rule); Appx. B.2.2, infra.

459 The early intervention notice is required by 12 C.F.R. § 1024.39(d)(3) and its commentary. See also National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 3.7.4 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

460 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(c)(2)-2.

461 As required by 12 C.F.R. § 1024.37.

462 As required by 12 C.F.R. § 1024.20(d).

463 As required by 12 C.F.R. § 1024.41.

464 Available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

465 Anderson, FTC Advisory Opinion (June 23, 2009).

466 Anderson, FTC Advisory Opinion (June 23, 2009).

467 See Reg. F. Appx. C (listing only one advisory opinion issued by the CFPB).

courts have allowed limited contact with consumers despite a cease communication notice.

5.8.5 Debt Referred to Another Collector After Request to Cease Collection

Where a creditor refers its claim against a consumer to a new collection agency after the consumer has sent a cease-contact letter to a prior collection agency, the creditor may violate a state unfair and deceptive acts and practices (UDAP) statute[468]—unless the particular state's UDAP statute excludes from coverage collection practices.[469] Another theory for pursuing the creditor for facilitating a subsequent debt collector's contact with the consumer may be that the creditor violated the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.[470] A consumer's claim against a creditor may be enhanced if the consumer sends a copy of the consumer's cease collection contacts letter to the creditor to avoid the creditor asserting that it was unaware of the cease-contacts letter.

5.8.7 State Requirements As to Notice to Consumer of Right to Terminate Collection Contacts

Some states such as Massachusetts, California, and Colorado have strengthened the consumer's right to request that a debt collector cease communications by requiring debt collectors to provide a state-specific notice in their debt collection letters alerting consumers of their right to terminate collection contacts under their state law.[471]

While these state laws do not provide any greater consumer protection than does the FDCPA with respect to the consumer's ability to stop all collection communications, the timely communication of the right in dunning letters informs consumers of this powerful tool when they may most need it. The required disclosure of an applicable state law regarding a consumer's ability to cease communications does not require a corresponding disclosure of rights under the FDCPA, as the FDCPA does not contain such a requirement.[472]

Collectors have responded to such state requirements by including language such as "The State of Colorado requires that we furnish Colorado residents" with notice of the right to demand a cease to collection contacts. When such a letter is sent to a non-resident of that state (in this example a non-resident of Colorado), the non-resident might believe that they do not have the right to demand a cease of collection contacts. The Seventh Circuit and other courts have found there to be no deception in such letters to non-residents.[473]

5.9 Opt-Out Notice for Electronic Communication, Reg. F § 1006.6(e)

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) addresses debt collector emails, texts, and other electronic communications to consumers. In general, except for social media messages,[474] the regulation allows for such communications with certain restrictions—such as at inconvenient times or places, while the consumer is represented by an attorney, employer-provided emails, where there is a cease communication request, and what are reasonable procedures to prevent third parties from viewing emails and text messages.[475]

Regulation F also requires the debt collector to provide notice in any electronic communication to the consumer of the right to opt out of that specific mode of electronic communication directed to that email address or telephone number for text messages, or other electronic-medium address. Reg. F § 1006.6(e) requires notice of the opt-out right for electronic communication, as discussed in this section. Reg. F § 1006.14(h), subject to some limited exceptions, prohibits 468 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 2.2.2, 6.7.5, 6.10, 6.12 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 2.3 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library; § 16.3, infra. But see Melvin v. Credit Collections, Inc., 2001 WL 34047943, at *3 (W.D. Okla. Apr. 5, 2001) ("Although some states have interpreted their respective consumer protection acts to apply to debt collection activities, there is no authority interpreting Oklahoma's statute in this manner.").

469 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.2 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

470 See also Taylor v. Mount Oak Manor Homeowners' Ass'n, 11 F. Supp. 2d 753 (D. Md. 1998) (complaint stated FDCPA claim for relief against attorneys and state claim against homeowners' association for breach of duty of fair dealing and good faith). See generally U.C.C. §§ 1-203, 2-103(b).

471 See Appx. D, infra; White v. Goodman, 200 F.3d 1016 (7th Cir. 2000) (inclusion of Colorado disclaimer in notice was not misleading under FDCPA). Accord Jackson v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2006 WL 3453180 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 28, 2006) (Colorado state-specific notifications are not so confusing as to violate FDCPA); Luna v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 357823 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 16, 2006); Morse v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 87 F. Supp. 2d 901 (D. Minn. 2000); Brown v. ACB Bus. Services, 1996 WL 469588 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 1996). Contra Scott v. Enhanced Recovery Corp., 2006 WL 1517755 (E.D.N.Y. May 31, 2006) (denying collector's motion to dismiss; whether notice was deceptive to be determined by fact-finder). Cf. Joslin v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 483117 (W.D. Mo. Feb. 5, 2016) (Massachusetts disclaimer could be read as applicable to not only Massachusetts residents); Scott v. Enhanced Recovery, 2006 WL 1517755, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. May 31, 2006).

472 Rocha v. Zwicker & Assoc., 474 F. Supp. 3d 388 (D. Mass. 2020).

473 White v. Goodman, 200 F.3d 1016 (7th Cir. 2000) (Inclusion of Colorado disclaimer in notice was not misleading under FDCPA) Accord Jackson v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2006 WL 3453180 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 28, 2006) (Colorado state-specific notifications are not so confusing as to violate FDCPA); Luna v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 357823 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 16, 2006); Morse v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 87 F. Supp. 2d 901 (D. Minn. 2000); Brown v. ACB Bus. Services, 1996 WL 469588 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 1996). Contra Scott v. Enhanced Recovery Corp., 2006 WL 1517755 (E.D.N.Y. May 31, 2006) (denying collector's motion to dismiss; whether notice was deceptive to be determined by fact-finder). But see Joslin v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 483117 (W.D. Mo. Feb. 5, 2016) (Massachusetts disclaimer could be read as applicable to not only Massachusetts residents).

474 See § 8.11, infra.

475 See §§ 5.3 to 5.8, supra, § 8.10, infra.

a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a person through a medium of communication, including electronic communication, that the person has requested the collector not to use. This prohibition is discussed at § 6.9, infra.[476]

Concerning notice of the right to opt-out of electronic communication, Reg. F requires that each email, text message, or other electronic communication addressed to a consumer must include a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable, simple, and free method to opt out of further electronic communications at that address or telephone number.[477] Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable, so that it must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated.[478]

The method must be free, but free does not literally mean free, but only that the consumer must not pay a fee to the collector. The consumer may still have to pay a fee to a third party, such as the costs of a text message if the consumer's text message plan charges for each text message. But the Reg. F supplemental information indicates "an opt-out method that requires a consumer to use certified mail (which entails the consumer arranging for a special form of delivery that is costlier than ordinary mail and generally unwarranted under the circumstances) is not reasonable and simple."[479]

The method also must be reasonable and simple. Requiring opt out by postal mail, telephone, or visiting a website without providing a link is not adequate.[480]

An example of a clear and conspicuous, reasonable and simple method of opting out of text messages to a specific phone number is a text message stating "Reply STOP to stop texts to this telephone number."[481] An example of a complying opt out of email sent to a specific email address is providing in an email a readily noticeable and legible hyperlink "Click here to opt out of further emails to this email address."[482] Another example is an email that includes readily noticeable and legible text instructions that the consumer can opt out of further emails to that address by replying with the word "stop" in the subject line.[483] The Reg. F supplemental information indicates that "The Bureau expects that most debt collectors will follow these examples when they communicate electronically with consumers."[484]

The opt out method cannot require the consumer to provide additional information beyond the opt-out preferences and the applicable email address or phone number.[485]

Although the Reg. F Official Interpretations provide examples of reasonable and simple opt-out procedures only for emails and texts, the opt-out requirement applies to any means of electronic communication. The Reg. F supplemental information clarifies:

> The language of § 1006.6(e) makes clear that it applies to all electronic communications, regardless of whether that particular form of electronic communication is specified in the rule. This includes direct messaging communications on social media and communications in an application on a website, mobile telephone, or computer. It also includes electronic communications using platforms that allow users to search by name or another identifier rather than by email address or telephone number.[486]

In opting out, the consumer does not have to use the exact terminology suggested by the collector. The Reg. F supplemental information states:

> The Bureau determines that words such as "stop," "unsubscribe," "end," "quit," or "cancel" generally express a consumer's intent to opt out. But these are not the only words that express such an intent. A consumer may respond to a debt collector's electronic communication with an email or text message that makes the consumer's desire to opt out clear without using one of these words.[487]

The request to opt-out applies to texts to a specific telephone number or emails to the specific email address. The opt-out does not apply to communications to other phone numbers or email addresses, or other forms of electronic communication, or other modes of communication from that collector. Opting out of text messages to a phone number does not opt out of collector phone calls to that same number.[488] Of course, under another Regulation F provision, the consumer can opt out of calls to the number or any other medium of collector communication simply by orally or otherwise informing the collector of that fact.[489]

According to a statement in the regulation's supplemental information, an opt out sent to one collector does not bind a subsequent collector.[490] But where the consumer opts out of a specific mode of electronic communication for one debt, it applies to any other debt being collected by the same debt collector.[491]

The collector probably can still raise the bona fide error defense if it continues to send an email or text message while still processing the consumer's request with reasonable promptness.[492] The supplemental information indicates:

> However, depending on the circumstances, a debt collector who unintentionally communicates with a consumer

476 See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,796 (Nov. 30, 2020).
477 Reg. F § 1006.6(e).
478 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-1).
479 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,794 (Nov. 30, 2020).
480 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1(ii)).
481 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1(i). See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1(i)).
482 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1(ii). See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1 (referencing § 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1(ii)).
483 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(e)-1(iii).
484 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,794 (Nov. 30, 2020).
485 Reg. F § 1006.6(e).
486 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,795 (Nov. 30, 2020).
487 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,796 (Nov. 30, 2020).
488 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,795 (Nov. 30, 2020).
489 See Reg. F § 1006.14(h), discussed at § 6.9, infra.
490 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,795, 76,796 (Nov. 30, 2020).
491 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,795 (Nov. 30, 2020).
492 See § 12.2, infra, discussing the bona fide error defense.

electronically after receiving a consumer's request to opt out but before processing the request may have a bona fide error defense to civil liability under FDCPA section 813(c). For example, if a debt collector who schedules an email to be sent to a consumer later receives an opt-out request from the consumer but sends the previously scheduled email to the consumer before the request can be processed (notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures to avoid such an error), the debt collector may have a bona fide error defense to civil liability under FDCPA section 813(c).[493]

5.10 Definition of Consumer for Purposes of FDCPA § 1692c under § 1692c(d)

FDCPA § 1692c(d) and Reg. F § 1006.6(a) define the term "consumer" to include additional parties that are not covered under the definition of consumer in FDCPA § 1692a(3).[494] For purposes of FDCPA § 1692c and Reg. F § 1006.6 only, the term "consumer" includes the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), legal guardian, executor, or administrator.[495] A debt collector may not communicate, however, with the parents of a non-minor consumer unless the child gives specific consent, even where the parents have continued to assume overall financial responsibility.[496] When the person is deemed to be a minor is a matter of each state's law.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) also includes within FDCPA § 1692c and Reg. F § 1006.6 the spouse of a deceased consumer,[497] the parent of a deceased minor[498] and certain individuals who have been transferred property secured by a mortgage (such as where ownership is transferred on the borrower's death or divorce or as a gift to the owner's children) as "consumers."[499] The Official Interpretations also include an expansive definition of an executor or administrator.[500]

As a result, these individuals have the same rights as a person allegedly owing on the debt, but only for purposes of FDCPA § 1692c, and not for purposes of other FDCPA provisions. For example under FDCPA § 1692c(a), these individuals cannot be contacted at unusual or inconvenient times or places, contacted if known to be represented by an attorney, or contacted at their workplace when the employer prohibits such contacts.[501] Under FDCPA § 1692c(c), these individuals can send cease communication notices.[502] However, contacting such individuals will not be a violation of FDCPA § 1692c(b), since they are "consumers" for that provision, and not third parties.[503]

493 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,795 (Nov. 30, 2020).

494 See § 4.4, supra (discussing definition of consumer in § 1692a(3)).

495 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(d); Reg. F § 1006.6(a).

496 See Fava v. RRI, Inc., 1997 WL 205336 (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 24, 1997) (alleged consent did not meet statutory requirement that "the consumer's consent for a debt collector to speak to a third party 'be given directly to the debt collector'"); Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 22, 1990), discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Estrella v. G L Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2010 WL 679067 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2010) (allegation that defendant violated § 1692b(2) by calling plaintiff's mother "on more than one occasion" and "stating that Plaintiff owes a debt" stated claim).

497 Reg. F Official interpretations§ 6(a)(1)-1. See also FTC, Statement of Policy Regarding Communications in Connection with the Collection of Decedents' Debts (July 27, 2011), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

498 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(a)(2)-1. See also FTC, Statement of Policy Regarding Communications in Connection with the Collection of Decedents' Debts (July 27, 2011), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

499 Reg. F § 1006.6(a)(5). The precise definition of when such a transferee is a consumer is determined by whether the person is a confirmed successor in interest as defined by Regulation X, 12 C.F.R. § 1024.31, or Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.2(a)(27)(ii).

500 "The terms executor or administrator include the personal representative of the consumer's estate. A personal representative is any person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate. Persons with such authority may include personal representatives under the informal probate and summary administration procedures of many States, persons appointed as universal successors, persons who sign declarations or affidavits to effectuate the transfer of estate assets, and persons who dispose of the deceased consumer's financial assets or other assets of monetary value extrajudicially." Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(a)(4)-1.

501 See §§ 5.4 to 5.6, supra.

502 See § 5.8, supra.

503 See § 5.7, supra.

Chapter 6 Harassing, Oppressive, or Abusive Conduct; FDCPA § 1692d

6.1 Introduction

FDCPA § 1692d provides a general prohibition on harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct by debt collectors as well as enumerating six specific examples of prohibited conduct. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates the general prohibition[1] and the six specific examples.[2] Regulation F also adds an additional example of prohibited conduct[3] and adds significant provisions related to frequency limits on telephone calls and conversations.[4]

This chapter first describes the general prohibition provided by FDCPA § 1692d at § 6.2, infra, discusses each of the six examples of prohibited conduct in the FDCPA at §§ 6.3 to 6.8, infra, and then discusses the additional example of prohibited conduct added by Regulation F at § 6.9, infra. New regulations related to call frequency are discussed at § 6.7.2, infra.

6.2 General Prohibition of Harassing, Oppressive, or Abusive Conduct

6.2.1 General Prohibition and Relation to Specific Prohibitions

> A debt collector may not engage in any conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section: [followed by six enumerated provisions][5]

In FDCPA § 1692d, Congress created a general, open-ended prohibition of harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct in recognition of its inability to foresee every conceivable debt collection method. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) generally restated the statute at section 1006.14(a). According to a Senate report: "this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed."[6]

Conduct can violate this general standard even when it falls outside the six specific examples listed in the provision's subsections (1) through (6) of the Act and the additional example provided by Reg. F § 1006.14(h).[7] As stated in the Regulation F Official Interpretations:

> The general prohibition covers the specific conduct described in § 1006.14(b) through (h), as well as any conduct by the debt collector that is not specifically prohibited by § 1006.14(b) through (h) but the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt.[8]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations also clarify that violations of the general prohibition can occur regardless of the communication media that the debt collector uses.[9] For example, the Official Interpretations explain that a debt collector that sends "numerous, unsolicited text messages per day for several consecutive days," but does not communicate

1 Regulation F (12 C.F.R. Part 1006, hereinafter "Reg. F") § 1006.14(a).
2 Reg. F §§ 1006.14(b) to (g).
3 Reg. F § 1006.14(h).
4 Reg. F § 1006.14(b).
5 15 U.S.C. § 1692d.
6 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted at 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 533 (6th Cir. 2014); Appx. E.2.3, infra.
7 See, e.g., Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507, 1516 (9th Cir. 1994) (consumer stated claim even though "conduct alleged . . . does not fall neatly within" examples specified in § 1692d; alleged that collector improperly threatened to garnish wages and continued to call employer after being asked not to call); Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168, 1178 (11th Cir. 1985) ("§ 1692d is explicitly not limited to the conduct proscribed by subsections (1)–(6)"); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivables Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (motion to dismiss defeated; complaint stated claim for violation of § 1692d even though conduct not specifically listed; plaintiff alleged she was told she had written bad check, was about to be sued on it, and that she could not be sent written validation of debt, which court inferred to be untrue); Riley v. Giguiere, 631 F. Supp. 2d 1295, 1309 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (jury could find violation of § 1692d for wrongly "filing an abstract of judgment and causing it to be recorded and filing an opposition to plaintiff's motion to set aside the default," even though conduct not listed in subsections (1) to (6)); Cirkot v. Diversified Sys., Inc., 839 F. Supp. 941, 947 (D. Conn. 1993) (collector's handwritten note saying "My special agents will remain in your area to collect. Believe me." clearly violated § 1692d, even though conduct was not among examples listed in subsections (1) to (6)); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980, 981–982 (N.D. Ill. 1979) ("Plaintiff does not allege conduct which falls within one of the specific prohibitions contained in § 1692d, but we find that defendant's letter to plaintiff does violate this general standard."); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806-1 ("Prohibited actions are not limited to the six subsections listed as examples of activities that violate this provision."), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.
8 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-1. See also H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 13 (1977), available as companion material to this treatise ("This section provides a general rule prohibiting any debt collector from harassing or intimidating any person in connection with the collection of any debt or the threat or attempt to do so. Six examples of what constitutes harassment or intimidation are enumerated. These examples do not limit the general application of this rule against harassment or intimidation.").
9 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-1 ("Such conduct can occur regardless of the communication media the debt collector uses, including in-person interactions, telephone calls, audio recordings, paper documents, mail, email, text messages, social media, or other electronic media, even if not specifically addressed by § 1006.14(b) through (h).").

or attempt to communicate via other communication media, would likely have a natural consequence of harassing, oppressing, or abusing the consumer, and therefore violate the general prohibition, even though the debt collector's conduct does not violate the specific prohibitions in Reg. F. § 1006.14(b) through (h).[10]

Moreover, the Regulation F Official Interpretations also clarify that a violation of the general prohibition may be the result of the "cumulative effect of the debt collector's conduct through any communication medium the debt collector uses, including in-person interactions, telephone calls, audio recordings, paper documents, mail, email, text messages, social media, or other electronic media."[11] In other words, conduct that would not violate either the general or specific prohibitions on its own can still violate the general prohibition when "evaluated cumulatively with other conduct."[12] For example, where a debt collector places seven unanswered telephone calls in seven days and also sends multiple additional unsolicited emails to the consumer over that seven day period, the CFPB explains that the debt collector has likely violated the general prohibition, because the cumulative effect of the calls and text messages is likely harassment, even though neither the number of calls nor the number of emails would violate the general or specific prohibitions on their own.[13]

Separately, the CFPB explained in its discussion of Regulation F that:

> [Section] 1006.14(a) applies even if a consumer does not opt out of receiving electronic debt collection communications or communication attempts pursuant to the instructions in § 1006.6(e) or exercise the right to request that the debt collector stop using a particular communication medium under § 1006.14(h).[14]

In other words, debt collectors can still be found in violation of the general prohibition, even if the consumer did not specifically notify the debt collector that it should stop communication through a particular communication medium.

While the general prohibition found in FDCPA § 1692d is not limited to subsections (1) through (6) and Reg. F § 1006.14(h),[15] evidence of violation of a specific prohibition can be indicative of violation of the general prohibition.[16]

Generally, consumer litigants should allege, where applicable, a violation of one of the more specific prohibitions, because their specificity helps courts find a violation if the conduct falls within the specific provision. Conversely, it is also prudent to allege a violation of the general standard in case a court may find the conduct outside the scope of the specific provisions pleaded, or find that the cumulative effective of the conduct violates the general prohibition as described in Regulation F Official Interpretations 14(a)-2.

It is also prudent to allege violations of other FDCPA provisions, such as section 1692e (deception)[17] and section 1692f (unfairness),[18] since section 1692d violations can also violate these other provisions,[19] and a court may find a violation of these other sections even when not finding a section 1692d violation.[20] In addition, a consumer subject to egregious debt collection misconduct should also consider a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress or invasion of privacy, particularly when those claims may provide punitive damages.[21]

6.2.2 FDCPA § 1692d Coverage

While most FDCPA provisions protect "consumers" ("any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt"),[22] section 1692d protects "any person."[23] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines "person" to include

10 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-1(i).
11 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2.
12 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2.
13 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2(i).
14 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,801 (Nov. 30, 2020).
15 See § 6.9, infra.
16 See Penny v. Williams & Fudge, Inc., 840 F. Supp. 2d 1314, 1320 (M.D. Fla. 2012) (rejecting defendant's contention "that the Court erred in allowing evidence of violations of specific sections to be considered by the jury with respect to the general claim that Defendant violated the 'catch all' provision of Section 1692d," following consumer's successful jury verdict (emphasis in original)).
17 See Ch. 7, infra.
18 See Ch. 8, infra.
19 See Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507, 1516 (9th Cir. 1994) ("it is not unusual for an action to violate more than one FDCPA provision"; citing 53 Fed. Reg. at 50,109).
20 See, e.g., Finch v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) (dismissing § 1692d claim concerning filing lawsuit; not § 1692d violation, but stated claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f); Zuniga v. Jacobs, 2020 WL 168106 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 13, 2020) (mere threat of taking legal action not § 1692(d) violation, but stated § 1692e(5) claim); Newman v. Encore Capital Grp., 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (dismissing § 1692d claim, but not §§ 1692e and 1692f claims involving debt buyer's robosigned/fraudulently notarized statement of ownership with its state court debt collection suit); Williams v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8316935 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017) (falsely threatening litigation does not violate § 1692d, but plaintiff stated § 1692e(5) and (10) claims); Winehouse v. GC Services L.P., 2017 WL 2455075 (E.D.N.Y. June 6, 2017) (leaving one message on answering machine stated claim for violation of §§ 1692d(6) and 1692e(11), but not § 1692d); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441, at *13 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (litigation abuses did not violate § 1692d, but stated claim for §§ 1692e and 1692f); Ruvalcaba v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7178855 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 9, 2016) (mortgage bills could be misleading, but no § 1692d violation); Reed v. EOS CCA, 2016 WL 1639121 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016) (summary judgment for consumer under §§ 1692e and 1692f, but not § 1692d); Leahy-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (billing for discharged debt not abusive, but may violate §§ 1692c(a)(2) and 1692e).
21 See §§ 15.2, 15.3, infra.
22 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3). See also § 4.4, supra.

A provision similar to this was present in each of the bills leading to the Act. The provision in the initial bill expressly covered "implicit" threats, but protected harm only to the "person." H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 802(1) (1975). Later provisions were identical to the one in the Act except that "threats" were not expressly covered, e.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(1) (1976); S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(1) (1977), until the Senate subcommittee included them. Senate Subcomm. Print No. 1 at § 806(1).

23 15 U.S.C. § 1692d. See also Reg. F § 1006.14(a).

"natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies."[24] Thus, FDCPA § 1692d has a broad application, including those not allegedly obligated for a debt, such as friends, neighbors, fellow employees, family members, and persons mistakenly believed to be the consumer.[25]

Unlike certain FDCPA provisions, there is no requirement that the conduct involve a communication or other conduct directed to a person, only that "the natural consequence" of the conduct is to harass, oppress, or abuse a person. But the conduct must be by a debt collector and the conduct must be "in connection with debt collection."[26] Debt collector is defined at § 4.7, supra, and "connection with collection of a debt" at § 4.3, supra.

6.2.3 Harass, Oppress, or Abuse Defined

FDCPA § 1692d prohibits "conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person."[27] FDCPA § 1692d's subsections (1) through (6) and Reg. F § 1006.14(h) provide a non-exclusive list examples of conduct that violates section 1692d,[28] but neither the FDCPA nor Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) define the terms "harass," "oppress," or "abuse."

At the time the Act was enacted, a Congressman stated that the dictionary should be used to define these and other terms in the Act.[29] According to one popular dictionary, the term "harass" means "to annoy persistently."[30] "Oppress" means "to crush or burden by abuse of power or authority," and "to burden spiritually or mentally, weigh heavily upon."[31] The term "abuse" means "to put to a wrong or improper use," "to use or treat so as to injure or damage," and "to attack in words."[32]

Context is also important. One judge noted, "Statements made and language used in a telephone contact can be and often are more oppressive than the same communication made in a face to face situation."[33]

6.2.4 Least Sophisticated and Susceptible Consumer Standards

As explained in § 3.2.1.3, supra, courts generally use the "least sophisticated consumer" standard when evaluating FDCPA claims under section 1692e and some other sections of the FDCPA.[34] The Eleventh Circuit and certain district courts in other circuits instead use an analogous "more susceptible" consumer standard for FDCPA § 1692d claims.[35] As the Eleventh Circuit explained in Jeter v. Credit Bureau, Inc.:[36]

> [T]he consumer protective purposes of the FDCPA require us to adopt an analogous standard for violations of § 1692d. Thus, we hold that claims under § 1692d should be viewed from the perspective of a consumer whose circumstances makes him relatively more susceptible to harassment, oppression, or abuse.

In applying either of these standards, the court does not consider whether the particular plaintiff feels harassed, oppressed, or abused, but whether the natural consequence of the conduct would harass, oppress, or abuse a susceptible consumer.[37] Nor 24 Reg. F § 1006.2(k), discussed at § 4.10, supra. See also 1 U.S.C. 1 (defining person as including "corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies, as well as individuals").

25 See Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (son's nest egg taken from joint account with father for the father's old debt; son protected); Cable v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2012 WL 5966542 (M.D. Pa. Nov. 29, 2012); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989) (debtor's executrix had claim for harassment and abuse she suffered due to collection letters to debtor). See also § 11.4.3, infra. But cf. Kleczy v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 486 N.E.2d 204 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984) (consumer lacks standing to recover for alleged abusive phone calls received by his spouse).

26 See Cox v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2019 WL 10248775, at *4–5 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2019) (animating purpose of collector's statement that consumer should "get the fuck out" of her office was to get consumer to leave, not pay, and therefore the statement was not made "in connection with the collection of a debt").

27 15 U.S.C. § 1692d. See also Reg. F § 1006.14(a).

28 See § 6.2.1, supra.

29 122 Cong. Rec. H7792 (daily ed. July 28, 1976) (remarks of Rep. Wylie) ("[w]e have talked about threats and harassment in the bill. They are not necessarily words of vagueness. All we have to do is go to the dictionary to find out that 'harass' means to worry and impede by repeated raids; exhaust, fatigue, to annoy continuously. Harass is to harass in a manner to injure, grieve or afflict; to cause to suffer because of belief; to annoy with persistent or urgent approaches, to pester"); Rozga, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 5, 1978); Kolarov, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 6, 1977).

30 Merriam-Webster.com (2021), https://www.merriam-webster.com.

31 Merriam-Webster.com (2021), https://www.merriam-webster.com.

32 Merriam-Webster.com (2021), https://www.merriam-webster.com.

33 Bingham v. Collection Bur., Inc., 505 F. Supp. 864, 873 (D.N.D. 1981).

34 As discussed in § 3.2.1.2, supra, some courts use an "unsophisticated consumer" standard instead of the "least sophisticated consumer standard." We use least sophisticated consumer here to refer to both standards.

35 See, e.g., Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1305 (11th Cir. 2015); Hancock v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2015 WL 12532470, at *4 (S.D. Cal. June 23, 2015); Woods v. Oxford Law, L.L.C., 2015 WL 778778 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 24, 2015); Johnson v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 867 F. Supp. 2d 766, 779 (E.D.N.C. 2011) (citing Jeter); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1110 (C.D. Cal. 2005); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Companies, L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158, 1168 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (equating least sophisticated consumer and more susceptible consumer standards); Bryant v. Bonded Account Serv./Check Recovery, Inc., 208 F.R.D. 251, 255 (D. Minn. 2000) (following Jeter); Dorsey v. Morgan, 760 F. Supp. 509, 515 (D. Md. 1991) (quoting Jeter). Cf. Brown v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 748 F. Supp. 2d 847, 852 (W.D. Tenn. 2010) (equating least sophisticated consumer and more susceptible consumer standards; citing Jeter); Bieber v. Associated Collection Services, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 1410, 1416 (D. Kan. 1986) (citing Jeter).

36 760 F.2d 1168, 1179 (11th Cir. 1985).

37 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168,1179 (11th Cir. 1985); Healey v. Trans Union L.L.C., 2011 WL 1900149, at *7 (W.D. Wash. May 18, 2011) ("subjective feeling of harassment is not actionable under the FDCPA"); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980, 982 (N.D. Ill. 1979) ("actual effect on the recipient is irrelevant"). See also Owens v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2020 WL 1888857, at *11 is there a requirement that the debt collector intend or even know of such consequence, as long as the conduct's natural consequence would be to harass, oppress, or abuse.[38]

6.2.5 Abusive Language and Repetitive Calling

FDCPA § 1692d(2) and Reg. F § 1006.14(d) (effective November 30, 2021) prohibit the use of obscene or profane language or language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the hearer or reader.[39] Language not meeting this standard can still violate FDCPA § 1692d and Reg. F § 1006.14(a)'s general prohibition of conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse.

Racial slurs, belligerent threats, and terms like liar, deadbeat, and crook may all violate the general prohibition.[40] FDCPA § 1692d was violated by a letter that "implies that plaintiff removes her head when she receives letters from the defendant, that she ignores her mail and her bills, and lacks the common sense to handle her financial matters properly."[41]

Rude and obnoxious language can be a violation,[42] such as where a collector told a woman that she should not have children if she could not afford them: "any remark of that tenor in a telephonic collection contact is egregious and . . . the remark was harassment."[43]

Threatening to charge a late fee, despite knowing the fee was unlawful, also was found "a good candidate" for a FDCPA § 1692d violation.[44] Threatening litigation over payment for an unconscionable contract after the consumer has informed the collector that they would not pay the debt violates the Act.[45]

Not every threat[46] or rude comment[47] is actionable. A single letter containing no threats or profane language did not violate FDCPA § 1692d.[48] Neither did asking the consumers whether they were married and how many dependents they had.[49] No FDCPA § 1692d violation was found by a letter warning that a collection lawsuit "may cause you embarrassment, inconvenience and further expense."[50] A court even held no FDCPA § 1692d violation where the collector said "that they were going to get their money one way or another; . . . yell[ing] that Georgia is a garnishable state, . . . ask[ing] what was her problem now because she was making the same salary when she was paying her bills" and hanged up on her.[51]

Calling consumers at their place of employment despite prior warnings that they could not accept such calls can violate FDCPA § 1692d.[52] But sending monthly billing statements regarding a bankruptcy-discharged debt did not constitute harassment.[53]

Repetitive calling can violate FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b) if done with an intent to annoy, abuse, or harass, but the same conduct could violate the FDCPA § 1692d general prohibition, which does not require intent, but only the natural consequence that it annoy, abuse, or harass. Section 6.7.3, infra, considers whether such a general FDCPA § 1692d claim can proceed without a showing of intent. In addition, Regulation F establishes a call frequency standard, where a collector exceeding that standard is considered to be presumed to be calling so frequently with an intent to annoy, abuse, or harass.[54]

6.2.6 Contacting Third Parties

While other FDCPA provisions more specifically regulate a collector's third-party communications,[55] such communications also may implicate the general prohibition in section 1692d and Reg. F § 1006.14(a). The following conduct may violate FDCPA § 1692d:

- Harassing and abusive telephone calls to the consumer's relatives, including the use of racial slurs, belligerent threats, and terms like liar, deadbeat, and crook;[56]

(W.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2020) (if homeowners "actually felt threatened and embarrassed" by placement of door hangers by property inspector such was not the "natural consequence" of conduct described).

38 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985).

39 See § 6.4, infra.

40 United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370, 375–376 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd as modified, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

41 Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218, 1221 (D. Or. 1981).

42 Sparks v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., 641 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (S.D. Ala. 2008).

43 Bingham v. Collection Bur., Inc., 505 F. Supp. 864, 874 (D.N.D. 1981).

44 Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769, 778 (7th Cir. 2007).

45 Antkowiak v. TaxMasters, 779 F. Supp. 2d 434 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 17, 2011), vacated on other grounds, 455 Fed. Appx. 156 (3d Cir. 2011).

46 See Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 967 F. Supp. 2d 470 (D. Mass. 2013) (mere threat of litigation not abusive); Dorsey v. Morgan, 760 F. Supp. 509 (D. Md. 1991) (attorney's claim that he would seek costs and attorney fees if legal action is filed was neither false nor oppressive).

47 See Gallagher v. Gurstel, Staloch & Chargo, P.A., 645 F. Supp. 2d 795 (D. Minn. 2009) (single laugh in phone call did not violate § 1692d).

48 Jennings v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions L.L.C., 441 F. Supp. 3d 106 (D. Md. 2020).

49 See Hoover v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 888 F. Supp. 2d 589 (E.D. Pa. 2012).

50 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 at 1179 (11th Cir. 1985). See also Zuniga v. Jacobs, 2020 WL 168106 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 13, 2020) (mere threat of taking legal action did not rise to level of § 1692(d) violation); Williams v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8316935 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017) (falsely threatening litigation not harassing, oppressive, or abusive means of debt collection).

51 Thomas v. LDG Fin. Services, Inc., 463 F. Supp. 2d 1370, 1373 (N.D. Ga. 2006).

52 See, e.g., Pittman v. J.J. Mac Intyre Co., 969 F. Supp. 609 (D. Nev. 1997) (calling at work despite prior warnings that consumer could not take calls stated claim for violation of § 1692d).

53 See Leahy-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (but may violate §§ 1692c(a)(2) and 1692e).

54 See § 6.7.2, infra.

55 See Ch. 5, supra.

56 United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370, 375–376 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd as modified, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

- Numerous calls to a non-debtor wife, mother-in-law, and daughter, and various threats that eventually led the wife to pay a debt she did not owe;[57]
- Thirty-three calls in one month to the debtor and his wife; threats to call his employer, neighbors, and other family; continuing to call after being told that the debtor would not pay and his wife said she did not owe the debt and was sick.[58]

But not every third-party contact, even ones violating other FDCPA provisions, violates section 1692d.[59]

6.2.7 Legal Proceedings and Postjudgment Conduct

Litigation misconduct is within the FDCPA's scope,[60] but consumer litigants are often unsuccessful in challenging such conduct under section 1692d,[61] and are more likely to succeed alleging violations of section 1692e (deception) or section 1692f (unfairness).[62] Nevertheless, litigation conduct can in some cases be egregious enough to violate FDCPA § 1692d, such as where the consumer alleged that a debt buyer filed a "bogus" lawsuit to collect a debt that the plaintiff did not owe, with no intention of proving the case.[63]

Filing a suit on a debt where the collector knows the debt had been discharged in bankruptcy can also violate FDCPA § 1692d.[64] A section 1692d claim was also stated where a collector intentionally waited until the day of the hearing, after the consumer was prepared and ready to appear, to request a continuance to procure a witness it had no intention of procuring.[65]

As with litigation misconduct, claims under FDCPA §§ 1692e or 1692f are more likely to succeed for suits based on improper conduct in the context of postjudgment remedies, but with the right facts a section 1692d claim can proceed. For example, a court found that the consumer stated a section 1692d claim where a collector pursued judgment to confirm an arbitration award after being told the consumer had not been notified of the arbitration and the debt was the result of identity theft.[66]

57 Russell v. Goldman Roth Acquisitions, L.L.C., 847 F. Supp. 2d 994, 1003 (W.D. Mich. 2012). See also Sparks v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 641 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (S.D. Ala. 2008).

58 Winberry v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 697 F. Supp. 2d 1279 (M.D. Ala. 2010). See also Swearingen v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 892 F. Supp. 2d 987 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (§ 1692d claim stated where collector repeatedly called non-debtor husband's cell phone, even after he informed representatives that it was his personal cell phone, that his wife could not be reached by calling it, he requested that collector provide him with an address for him to request that calls stop to no avail, and collector used "extremely loud buzzing sound" in some phone calls with him).

59 Davis. v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond P.C., 687 Fed. Appx. 140 (3d Cir. 2017) (mailing sealed envelopes intended for consumer to two wrong addresses); Pearce v. Rapid Check Collection, 738 F. Supp. 334 (D.S.D. 1990) (letter to consumer's credit union threatening suit to collect bad check, but no other threats).

60 See § 4.3.3, supra, § 7.4.10, infra.

61 See, e.g., Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012) (suing person found not liable on debt); Gionis v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007) (claiming attorney fees to which not entitled); Harvey v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 453 F.3d 324, 330–331 (6th Cir. 2006) (filing of debt collection lawsuit without immediate means of proving debt); Brake v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 504 F. Supp. 3d 103, 112–113 (E.D.N.Y. 2020) (consumer wrongfully sued twice); Finch v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) ("filing of a lawsuit to collect a debt—even if the lawsuit is meritless—is not properly understood as 'conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person'"); Cheslek v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2017 WL 7370983 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 22, 2017) (false affidavit); Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2017) (filing lawsuit without immediate means to prove case); Newman v. Encore Capital Grp., 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (debt buyer's robosigned/fraudulently notarized statement of ownership); Delia v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 2379819 (M.D. Fla. June 1, 2017) (failing to revert title to homeowner after homeowner prevailed in foreclosure action); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441, at *13 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (false affidavit of service, seeking payments already paid, and attorney fees not owed); Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (landlord's attorney procured default judgment after tenant's attorney had been assured that, if tenant vacated residence, landlord would dismiss unlawful detainer action); May v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2015 WL 4506688 (E.D. Mo. July 24, 2015) (collection agency collecting interest without disclosing that interest might accrue); Thompson v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 12681653 (N.D. Ala. July 17, 2015) (debt was "out of statute"); Beeler-Lopez v. Dodeka, L.L.C., 711 F. Supp. 2d 679 (E.D. Tex. 2010) (bringing collection suit in forum violating § 1692*i*); Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (affidavit misrepresentation); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) (lulling consumer into believing that he need not file answer to state court complaint, and then procuring default judgment against him).

62 See Finch v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) (filing meritless lawsuit did not violate § 1692d, but stated claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f); Newman v. Encore Capital Grp., 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (dismissing § 1692d claim, but not §§ 1692e and 1692f claims involving debt buyer's robosigned/fraudulently notarized statement of ownership); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441, at *13 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (false affidavit of service, seeking payments already paid, and attorney fees not owed not a 1692d violation, but stated claim under §§ 1692e and 1692f); Thompson v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 12681653 (N.D. Ala. July 17, 2015) (allegation that debt was "out of statute" stated claim under §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(10), and 1692f, but not under § 1692d); Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (affidavit misrepresentation violated §§ 1692e(2) and 1692e(12), but not § 1692d); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) (lulling consumer into believing that he need not file answer to state court complaint, and then procuring default judgment against him was deceptive and unfair, but not abusive).

63 See Woychesin v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5893815 (N.D. Ala. Oct. 5, 2020). See also Dial v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 751690 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 23, 2015) (knowingly filing lawsuit that was baseless at the time (and where, even if it was meritorious, debt buyer had no intention of proving case); Hamilton v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5084234 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 27, 2015); Taylor v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4670314 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 6, 2015).

64 In re Gunter, 334 B.R. 900 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2005).

65 McClellan v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2021 WL 1060559 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 19, 2021).

66 Eads v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 538 F. Supp. 2d 981 (W.D. Tex. 2008).

But the Eleventh Circuit found that a collection lawyer's sworn filing opposing the consumer's claim of exemption from wage garnishment did not violate FDCPA § 1692d, because it is not enough that the collector cause "embarrassment, inconvenience, and further expense . . . Rather, the debt collector's conduct must manifest "a tone of intimidation . . . and no such tone emanates from Appellees' [debt collector's] sworn reply here."[67]

The Tenth Circuit even found no abuse when an unemployed consumer was arrested pursuant to a bench warrant for failing to appear at a hearing in aid of execution and his bail was paid to the judgment creditor. The hearing was the fifth requested in nine months, and the previous four had been dismissed because his unemployment benefits were exempt, but the debt collector had not acted unlawfully.[68]

6.3 Use or Threat of Use of Violence or Criminal Means; FDCPA § 1692d(1)

(1) The use or threat of use of violence or other criminal means to harm the physical person, reputation, or property or any person.[69]

The threat or use of violence or criminal means to harm the person physically, or harm the person's reputation or property is actionable under FDCPA § 1692d(1). Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at Reg. F § 1006.14(c).

Since the prohibition includes the threat or use of "criminal means," this provision provides a private cause of action and federal jurisdiction for actual or threatened violations of federal, state, and local criminal laws (many of which are seldom enforced) where the criminal violation harms or could harm the person physically or the person's reputation or property, as long as the conduct occurs in connection with the collection of a debt.

For example, FDCPA § 1692d(1) should apply to threats or violations of federal criminal laws prohibiting misuse of the mails[70] or telephone,[71] collection of illegal charges,[72] or violations of the criminal provisions of the Consumer Credit Protection Act.[73] State criminal laws may also provide the basis for an FDCPA § 1692d(1) claim.[74] A collector who threatens to visit the consumer personally might be implying the use of violence, which can be criminal.[75]

FDCPA § 1692d applies to conduct against "any person," so conduct actionable under section 1692d(1) does not have to be directed at the individual allegedly owing the debt.[76] It can apply to conduct threatening harm or harming the consumer's children, friends, and other third parties. The language limiting the section to conduct that harms or threatens to harm the "physical" person might exclude threats to inflict psychological harm from coverage, but a threat of physical harm that causes the victim emotional distress should be actionable.[77]

6.4 Obscene, Profane, or Abusive Language; FDCPA § 1692d(2)

(2) The use of obscene or profane language or language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the hearer or reader.[78]

FDCPA § 1692d(2) has two prohibitions—the use of obscene or profane language and any language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the person hearing or reading the language—as long as either communication is by a collector in connection with collection of a debt. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.14(d).

During the legislative process, this provision underwent only minor alterations.[79] The prohibition against obscene language was dropped, then reinstated.[80] One member of Congress stated that he considered the hypothetical question, "Why the hell don't you pay your debts?" to be profane or abusive.[81]

Because this prohibition directly challenges the content of speech, it may raise First Amendment challenges. But the provision should be found within the commercial speech standards allowed by the First Amendment.[82]

The Eleventh Circuit, examined the provision's restriction on obscene and profane language:

67 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1305 (11th Cir. 2015). See also Martinez v. Eltman Law, P.C., 444 F. Supp. 3d 748, 755 (N.D. Tex. 2020) (garnishing wrong person not § 1692d violation).

68 Davis v. Nebraska Furniture Mart, Inc., 567 Fed. Appx. 640 (10th Cir. 2014).

69 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(1). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(c); Appx. E.2.3.1, infra.

70 See § 14.1, infra.

71 See § 14.3, infra.

72 See § 14.5, infra.

73 E.g., 15 U.S.C. §§ 1611, 1681q.

74 See § 16.6, infra.

75 Erickson v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2011 WL 1869044, at *8 (D. Minn. May 16, 2011) ("No reasonable juror could conclude that asking or encouraging [the debtor's son] to come to where Defendant was located to engage in an altercation was not a threat of violence"); Bell, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 10, 1978). See also Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979); Louisiana State Bar v. Harrington, 571 So. 2d 151 (La. 1990); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(1)-1 (implied threats), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But cf. Mkhitaryan v. U.S. Bancorp, 2012 WL 6204840 (D. Nev. Dec. 12, 2012) (repossession agents who allegedly engaged in unlawful breach of peace repossession of plaintiff's vehicle were subject to § 1692f(6), but not to § 1692d(1) and (2)).

76 See § 6.2.2, supra.

77 See § 11.8.2, supra.

78 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(2). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(d); § 6.2, supra; Appx. E.2.3.1, infra.

79 Compare H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(2) (1976), and S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(2) (1977), with Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(2) (1977).

80 Id.

81 122 Cong. Rec. H7,792 (daily ed. July 27, 1976) (remarks of Rep. Bauman). But cf. Kern, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 14, 1984) (statement that consumer should "[c]ontact the creditor now or be prepared for the consequences" did not violate § 1692d).

82 See § 3.3, supra (discussing constitutionality of FDCPA; collecting cases bringing challenges under First Amendment).

> [I]t is clear that, when read in context, subsection (2) was meant to deter offensive language which is at least akin to profanity or obscenity. Such offensive language might encompass name-calling, racial or ethnic slurs, and other derogatory remarks which are similar in their offensiveness to obscene or profane remarks. This is in keeping with one of the purposes of the FDCPA "[t]hat every individual, whether or not he owes the debt, has a right to be treated in a reasonable or civil manner."[83]

The Seventh Circuit considered a case where the collector left a message with the consumer Amanda's coworker to "tell Amanda to stop being such a [expletive] bitch."[84] In an attempt to sidestep what would otherwise be a clear violation, the collector argued that the message "was not spoken in connection with a debt collection nor was it meant to abuse the hearer or reader." The Seventh Circuit stated that "[w]e need not examine the varying meanings of the words employed to determine that, in the context used, they were abusive as a matter of law. Unequivocally they were."[85]

Less clear is the scope of the provision's second prohibition—language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the person hearing or reading the language. One court found a violation when the collector accused the consumer of lying about his ability to repay the debt.[86]

Another found that a "reasonable jury might conclude that a statement by a debt collector that it could call as much as it wished . . . where the debt collector had placed numerous calls to the person, had the natural consequence of abusing the hearer."[87] A key factor is how the language will affect the hearer.[88] But courts may require more than rudeness, bad manners, and obstinacy to violate the provision.[89] A warning that a collection lawsuit may lead to embarrassment, inconvenience, property lien, and garnishment was a true statement and not a FDCPA § 1692d(2) violation.[90]

Proving that a collector actually used the profane, obscene, or abusive language may sometimes be challenging.[91] The language will often only be spoken and out of the presence of any witnesses. Who the court believes will be a matter of the witnesses' credibility. Proof is easier, of course, if the violating language has been saved on the consumers' voicemail or if the collector records its employees' calls.[92] While Regulation F does not require debt collectors to record their calls, those who do must retain the call recordings for three years after the date of the call.[93]

6.5 Publishing Lists of Debtors Who Allegedly Refuse to Pay; FDCPA § 1692d(3)

> (3) The publication of a list of consumers who allegedly refuse to pay debts, except to a consumer reporting agency or to persons meeting the requirements of section 1681a(f)[94] or 1681b(3)[95] of this title.[96]

83 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985) (§ 1692d(2) claim rejected), citing 123 Cong. Rec. 10241 (1977) (statement of Representative Annuzio, Chairperson of Subcommittee which sponsored legislation).

84 Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769, 773 (7th Cir. 2003).

85 Id. at 774. See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Williams, Scott & Assoc., 2015 WL 12856779 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 4, 2015) (§ 1692d violated where collector used profanity), aff'd, 679 Fed. Appx. 836 (11th Cir. 2017); Smith v. ProCollect, Inc., 2011 WL 1375667 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 12, 2011) (material dispute over whether profane language, including "bitch," was used); Stuart v. AR Res., Inc., 2011 WL 904167 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (allegation that defendants used rude, profane, and abusive language during repeated calls sufficient; no need to detail type of profanity); Iruegas v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1171088 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 22, 2010) (allegation that collector used profane and abusive language was sufficient); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370, 376 (N.D. Tex. 1986) (violated § 1692d(2) "by using obscene and profane language in collection calls, including the terms 'god-damn liar, low-down son of a bitch, shit, the judge doesn't give a fuck about your complaint, hell, shit, and asshole'"), aff'd as modified, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

86 Woods v. Oxford Law, L.L.C., 2015 WL 778778 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 24, 2015). See also Hart v. Universal Fid. L.P., 2007 WL 294241 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 26, 2007) ("called plaintiff a 'thief' . . . told plaintiff to 'get a job'" stated claim).

87 Tedeschi v. Kason Credit Corp., 2014 WL 1491173, at *5 (D. Conn. Apr. 15, 2014).

88 Strom v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 1233118, at *8 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2011) (question of fact whether calls allegedly causing stress and seizures violated ban on language, natural consequence of which is to abuse hearer or reader).

89 Toney v. Keil, 2014 WL 4800275 (D. Colo. Sept. 26, 2014) (use of language that is merely testy, smart-alecky, or rude does not constitute violation of § 1692d); Gnoinska v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2012 WL 5382180 (D. Minn. Nov. 1, 2012); Monahan v. NRA Grp. L.L.C., 2011 WL 3901877 (D. Conn. Sept. 6, 2011) (statements such as: "activity is going to keep on coming, that's what we do;" "[we will] just call and call until she can pick up;" and "further collections will continue" did not violate § 1692d(2)); Bassett v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 715 F. Supp. 2d 803 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (acceptable to call consumer liar and laugh at him); Unterreiner v. Stoneleigh Recovery Assoc., 2010 WL 2523257 (N.D. Ill. June 17, 2010) ("scream[ing]" at debtor, telling her "she owed 'all kinds of money,'" and asking "how could you go and max out a card like that?" insufficient to state claim); Seals v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2002 WL 32099632 (N.D. W. Va. Aug. 19, 2002) (pro se suit generally alleging belittling language did not state claim), aff'd without op., 2002 WL 31856721 (4th Cir. Dec. 23, 2002).

90 Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 441 Fed. Appx. 712 (11th Cir. 2011).

91 See, e.g., Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218, 1221 (D. Or. 1981) ("Plaintiff has not met her burden of proving that such phone calls were made by the defendant."). See also Lynch v. Nelson Watson & Assoc., 2011 WL 2472588 (D. Kan. June 21, 2011) (collector subpoenaed consumer's phone records which revealed no call to collector as alleged).

92 See § 11.5.2, infra (discussing call recording).

93 Reg. F § 1006.100(b).

94 Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) § 603(f), 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(f). See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

95 FCRA § 604(3), 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(3) (1976). This section was renumbered as Section 604(a)(3), 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3). Federal Trade Commission, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 8 n.1 (May 2013). See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

96 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(3). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(e).

FDCPA § 1692d(3) prohibits the publication of shame lists while allowing lawful reporting to consumer reporting agencies. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.14(e).

Each of the major bills leading to the Act contained prohibitions similar to FDCPA § 1692d(3).[97] The Senate added the exception regarding consumer reporting agencies and 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681a and 1681b.

"Section 1681a(f) of this title" is 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(f), a Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) provision defining "consumer reporting agency." Section 1681b(3) has been renumbered since the FDCPA's enactment and is now 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3). This FCRA section lists persons to whom a consumer reporting agency may furnish a consumer report.

FDCPA § 1692d(3) outlaws, among other acts, posting "dead beat lists" or "shame lists" in the window of a collection agency or publishing such lists in local newspapers.[98] But the prohibition has much broader application. The subsection prohibits publishing any list of allegedly delinquent consumers except to a consumer reporting agency[99] or persons to which a consumer reporting agency may furnish a consumer report pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3). For example, it prohibits a collector from publishing to other time share owners a list of time share owners who are delinquent on their obligations to the time share community.[100]

Although a creditor can meet the FCRA § 1681b(a)(3) permissible use requirements for a particular consumer under proper circumstances, guidance from the FTC staff has stated that a debt collector's publication of a list of debtors generally to subscribing creditors should violate FDCPA § 1692d(3).[101] But the FTC staff believes that it was permissible to give a list of judgment debtors to an investigator for locating the debtors because FDCPA § 1692c(b) has an exception allowing communication with third parties "as reasonably necessary to effectuate a postjudgment judicial remedy."[102]

Publishing a list of debtors may not violate FDCPA § 1692d(3) if the consumers' identities are not revealed on the list. A list of bad check writers may not violate the provision where the list only identifies license numbers and the first three letters of the consumer's name, the list is not viewable by the public, but only by certain merchants, and the identity of an individual on the list is only provided to a person with a legitimate business need.[103] FTC staff have also stated that newspaper advertisements offering rewards for the return of an identified leased car does not violate this prohibition, at least as long as the advertisements do not identify the lessee's name.[104]

Section 11.15.7, infra, discusses the application to the publication of shame lists of the Supreme Court's 2016 and 2021 decisions on federal court constitutional standing in Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins[105] and TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez.[106]

6.6 Advertising a Debt for Sale to Coerce Payment; FDCPA § 1692d(4)

(4) The advertisement for sale of any debt to coerce payment of the debt.[107]

FDCPA § 1692d(f) and Reg. F § 1006.14(f) (effective November 30, 2021) prohibit advertising of a list of accounts for sale, since identification of a consumer as having an account for sale could cause the consumer shame and embarrassment. A possible application of this provision involves a foreclosure notice that provides information about the consumer's delinquency beyond that required by state law. While the consumer in one case alleged this violated FDCPA § 1692c(b) (communication with third parties) and FDCPA § 1692d(4), the court's rejection of a motion to dismiss mentioned only section 1692c(b).[108]

6.7 Repeated or Continuous Telephone Calls; FDCPA § 1692d(5)

6.7.1 Overview

(5) Causing a telephone to ring or engaging any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with

97 E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. §§ 802(2), 802(4) (1975); H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(3) (1976).

98 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, 7, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Appx. E.2.3.5, infra.

99 See Slimm v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2013 WL 1867035 (D.N.J. May 2, 2013) (reporting to credit bureaus does not violate first sentence of § 1692d as it permitted by § 1692d(3)).

100 See Lapan v. Greenspoon Marder P.A., 2018 WL 1033224 (D. Vt. Feb. 22, 2018) (denying dismissal of claim law firm violated FDCPA in course of pursuing non-judicial foreclosure on Las Vegas timeshare by disclosing details of claimed debt to third parties).

101 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-3 ("A debt collector may not distribute a list of alleged debtors to its creditor subscribers."), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. Cathcart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 24, 1981); Woosley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 30, 1978); Dean, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 30, 1978). See also Rummel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 16, 1978) (form "amounts to a prejudgment employer contact and is prohibited under [§ 1692c(b)] as well as violating [§ 1692d(3)]").

102 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

103 Page v. Checkrite, Ltd., 1984 WL 1052036 (D. Neb. Apr. 2, 1984); Fleming, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 1, 1982). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(4)-4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Campbell v. Thompson, 1990 WL 71348 (N.D. Ala. May 23, 1990) (list of bad check writer's names and addresses acceptable with encoded reasons for dishonor).

104 Farmer, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 26, 1989).

105 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

106 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

107 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(4). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(f).

The House bills contained similar language to this section; the major Senate bills contained identical language. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 802(5) (1975) (prohibiting threat to advertise as well); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(4) (1976).

108 See Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017).

intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number.[109]

FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1) (effective November 30, 2021) limit a collector's right to call "any person at the called number."[110] The provision applies to "any person,"[111] whether that person is the consumer[112] or any other person, including, for example, a family member or a third party at a number not belonging to the debtor.[113] Calls to any location or telephone number are covered under FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1). For example, calls to the consumer at work may violate this protection.[114]

Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1) differs from FDCPA § 1692d(5) because it states that debt collectors may not "place telephone calls," while section 1692d(5) prohibits "[c]ausing a telephone to ring"[115]—including, for example, redialing after a consumer has hung up the telephone.[116] The CFPB's supplemental information states that the Regulation F prohibition on placing telephone calls applies "even if a debt collector's telephone call did not cause a traditional ring, as long as the telephone call connected to the dialed number."[117] "Placing a telephone call" includes conveying a ringless voicemail, but does not include sending an electronic message (e.g., a text message or an email) that may be received on a mobile telephone.[118] However, as discussed in § 6.2.1, supra, an excessive number of electronic messages can violate the general prohibition in FDCPA § 1692d and Reg. F. § 1006.14(a), either on their own or cumulatively with telephone calls.

Unlike any other FDCPA § 1692d prohibition, section 1692d(5) requires intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number. The intent requirement and how the intent requirement relates to the Regulation F presumptions related to call frequency are discussed at § 6.7.3, infra.

Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) creates standards related to call frequency.[119] A collector complying with those standards is presumed to comply with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).[120] Such a collector also complies with Reg. F. § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA § 1692d with respect to the frequency of its telephone calls.[121]

Debt collectors may argue that their telephone logs refute that repeated calls were made, while the consumer's evidence is based on a vague recollection, not specifying dates and times.[122] This defense may not be successful.[123] A consumer's phone records can be used to demonstrate the number and frequency of incoming collection calls. Debt collectors' logs can be unreliable,[124] as can be demonstrated by subpoenaing the debt collector's telephone records from its telephone carrier.[125] Collection agencies also frequently retain audio recordings of collection calls.[126] Regulation F's record retention requirements for audio recordings and other records is discussed at § 11.5.4.3, infra.

109 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(5). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).

While not found in the final bill, several bills leading to the Act restricted collector contacts to a specific number of telephone calls, such as two calls per week or one to three calls per month at work. E.g., H.R. 5294, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. §§ 804(a)(3), 804(b) (1977) (two calls per week and three per month at work permitted, unless creditor has consumer's daytime home phone number or consumer requests not to be called at work); H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. §§ 804(a)(3), 804(4) (1976) (two calls per week or one call at work, or two calls a month in limited circumstances); S. 918, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. §§ 805(a)(3), 805(b) (1977) (maximum two contacts in seven days and one contact at work if convenient).

Most of these bills also contained a provision quite similar to the current language. E.g., H.R. 11969, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(6) (1976) (prohibited "harassing or threatening phone calls or visits" and "calling . . . repeatedly or constantly"); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 805(6) (1976).

110 See also S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 7, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(5), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

111 The term "person" is defined at § 1006.2(k) to include "natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies." See § 4.10, supra.

112 See § 4.4, supra.

113 See, e.g., Kane v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 6018403 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 7, 2011) (wrong number).

114 See Andrews v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 3424900 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 9, 2017).

115 See Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 414 Fed. Appx. 230, at *3 (11th Cir. Feb. 11, 2011) (most of 200–300 calls not answered); Rigby v. CrossCheck Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1492893, at *6 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 27, 2020) (although 76 calls yielded only 8 actual conversations, question for jury, regardless of call-to-conversation ratio); Gross v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2011 WL 379167 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 2, 2011); Clark v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2005 WL 1586862, at *4 (D. Or. June 30, 2005) (denying summary judgment to collector where it had called multiple times without leaving messages); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2005) (content and context of series of six telephone messages allowed question to go to jury). But see Pugliese v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 2632562, at *10 (E.D. Mich. June 29, 2010) (although over 300 calls, one or two unanswered calls a day in unsuccessful effort to reach debtor is not violation if unaccompanied by any threatening messages).

116 See, e.g., Bassett v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 715 F. Supp. 2d 803 (N.D. Ill. 2010); Atchoo v. Redline Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 1416738 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 5, 2010); Lovelace v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 3333019 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2007) (collection notes stated "pick up/hang up-multiple times"); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Grp., Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (debt buyer violated § 1692d(5) by repeatedly calling to collect paid debt after consumer had hung up phone).

117 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,810 (Nov. 30, 2020).

118 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)-1.

119 See § 6.7.2, infra.

120 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 1006.14(b)(2)-1.

121 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 1006.14(b)(1)-1.

122 But see Burke v. Coachella Valley Collections Services, 2011 WL 13217709 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 25, 2011) (consumer's allegations of inconvenient calls to her workplace after agency was told not to call there did not need to provide evidentiary details as to exact time or number of calls).

123 See Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2016 WL 4249491 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2016); Krapf v. Nationwide Credit Inc., 2010 WL 2025323 (C.D. Cal. May 21, 2010).

124 See, e.g., Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 4059645 (D.N.J. July 27, 2016).

125 Cf. Casey v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 415310 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 29, 2010) (telephone company records showed 171 attempted phone calls but did not conclusively establish how many times phone rang).

126 See § 1.5.3, supra.

6.7.2 Call and Conversation Frequency Limits Under Regulation F

6.7.2.1 Regulation F's Presumptions As to Call and Conversation Frequency

Regulation F § 1006.14(b)(2) (effective November 30, 2021) states that a debt collector is presumed to comply with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1)'s prohibition on repeated or continued calls if the collector:

1. Places a call to a particular person in connection with a particular debt no more than seven times within seven consecutive days[127] (called the call frequency prong); and
2. If the collector reaches the consumer and has a telephone conversation with the consumer about a particular debt, the collector does not place another call to the consumer about the particular debt for seven consecutive days (called the conversation frequency prong).[128]

For the presumption of compliance to apply, the collector must comply with both prongs of the requirement.[129] The date of the telephone conversation is the first day of the seven-consecutive-day period.[130] If the collector instead does not comply with both of these two frequency standards, the collector is presumed to violate FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).[131] Compliance with only one prong can still lead to a presumption of a violation.

For the purpose of Reg. F § 1006.14(b), the term "particular debt" means "each of a consumer's debts in collection."[132] However, for student loan debts, "the term particular debt means all student loan debts that a consumer owes or allegedly owes that were serviced under a single account number at the time the debts were obtained by a debt collector."[133] Application of call and conversation frequency presumptions in situations where the collector is collecting multiple accounts for the same consumer is discussed at § 6.7.2.7, infra.

In finalizing Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the CFPB chose not to adopt bright-line frequency limits, instead adopting "a rebuttable presumption that a debt collector has either complied with or violated the prohibition in § 1006.14(b)(1) regarding repeated or continuous telephone calls and telephone conversations."[134]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide examples of circumstances where the debt collector complies with Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) and is thus presumed to comply with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1)'s prohibition on repeated or continued calls.[135] One example involves a collector complying with call frequency requirements when attempting contact the consumer.[136] This example involves the collector leaving a limited-content message[137] for the consumer, which counts as one of the seven calls placed in the seven-day period. Another example involves the consumer contacting the collector, and the collector complying with conversation frequency limits after that consumer-initiated conversation.[138] The last example illustrates compliance where the collector calls attempting to communicate with a third party to obtain location information.[139] Rebutting the presumption of compliance where the collector has complied with Reg. F § 1006.14(b) is discussed at § 6.7.2.2, infra.

The Reg. F Official Interpretations also provide examples of circumstances where the debt collector does not comply with Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2), and is thus presumed to violate FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1)'s prohibition on repeated or continued calls.[140] The first example involves a collector that places eight calls in a seven day period, including one call where the collector left a limited-content message.[141]

127 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A).

128 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B). See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-1(ii) (providing examples regarding engaging in telephone conversation in connection with collection of particular debt).

129 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1.

130 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1.

131 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(ii).

132 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(4).

133 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(4).

134 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,810 (Nov. 30, 2020).

135 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1.

136 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(i) ("On Wednesday, April 1, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a credit card debt by placing a telephone call and leaving a limited-content message. Between Thursday, April 2, and Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector places six more telephone calls to the consumer about the debt, all of which go unanswered. As of Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector has placed seven telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of the credit card debt within the period of seven consecutive days that started on Wednesday, April 1. Assume the debt collector does not place any additional telephone calls about the debt until Wednesday, April 8.").

137 Limited-content messages are defined at Reg. F § 1006.2(j). See § 4.9, supra.

138 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(ii) ("On Thursday, August 13, a consumer places a telephone call to, and initiates a telephone conversation with, a debt collector regarding a particular debt. Assume that the debt collector does not place a telephone call to the consumer in connection with the collection of that debt again prior to Thursday, August 20.").

139 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(iii) ("On Tuesday, October 6, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a particular third party for the purpose of acquiring location information about a consumer by placing a telephone call to that third party. The call is unanswered. The debt collector places up to six more unanswered telephone calls to that third party for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer through Monday, October 12."). See also Reg. F § 1006.10(c), discussed at § 5.2.10, supra.

140 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-1.

141 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-1(i) ("On Wednesday, April 1, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a mortgage debt by placing a telephone call and leaving a limited-content message. On each of the next three business days (i.e., on Thursday, April 2, Friday, April 3, and Monday, April 6), the debt collector places two additional telephone calls to the consumer about the debt, all of which go unanswered. On Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector places an additional telephone call to the consumer about the debt. The debt collector has placed a total of eight telephone calls to the consumer about the debt during the seven-day period starting Wednesday, April 1. None of the calls was subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3).").

The second example involves phone calls placed to the consumer within seven days of the collector's conversation with the consumer.[142] Rebutting the presumption of violation where the collector has not complied with Reg. F § 1006.14(b) is discussed at § 6.7.2.3, infra.

6.7.2.2 Rebutting the Presumption of Compliance

As discussed in § 6.7.2.1, supra, a debt collector that complies with Regulation F § 1006.14(b)(2) (effective November 30, 2021) is presumed to comply with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1)'s prohibition on repeated or continued calls. To rebut the presumption of compliance, the person called must prove that a debt collector whose calls were within the Reg. F § 1006.14(b) frequency limits "nevertheless placed a telephone call or engaged a person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number."[143]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide a non-exhaustive list of four factors that may rebut the presumption of compliance, considered either individually or in combination with one another or other non-specified factors.[144] "The factors may be viewed in light of any other relevant facts and circumstances and therefore may apply to varying degrees."[145] In weighing these factors, "it is assumed that debt collectors intend the natural consequence of their actions."[146]

These four factors are:

1. The frequency and pattern of telephone calls the debt collector places to a person, including the intervals between them, such as whether the debt collector placed telephone calls to a person in rapid succession (e.g., two unanswered telephone calls to the same telephone number within five minutes) or in a highly concentrated manner (e.g., seven telephone calls to the same telephone number within one day).[147]
2. The frequency and pattern of any voicemails that the debt collector leaves for a person, including the intervals between them, such as where the debt collector left voicemails for a person in rapid succession (e.g., two voicemails within five minutes left at the same telephone number) or in a highly concentrated manner (e.g., seven voicemails left at the same telephone number within one day).[148]
3. The content of a person's prior communications with the debt collector, such as where the person previously informed the debt collector that the person did not wish to be contacted again about the particular debt, that the person was refusing to pay the particular debt, that the person did not owe the particular debt, or that the person has sent a general cease communication notification or the consumer had requested that the debt collector not communicate with the consumer by telephone calls. The amount of time elapsed since any such prior communications also may be relevant to this factor.[149]
4. The debt collector's conduct in prior communications or attempts to communicate with the person, such as where the debt collector used obscene, profane, or otherwise abusive language or called at an inconvenient time or place). The amount of time elapsed since any such prior communications or attempts to communicate also may be relevant to this factor.[150]

In a subsequent FAQ, the CFPB added to the first factor:

> It may also be relevant if the debt collector concentrates telephone calls on days that may be less convenient for the consumer (such as Sundays or holidays). Application of this factor is not limited to rapid succession or highly concentrated calling, however, and is dependent on all of the relevant facts and circumstances that may indicate an intent on the part of the debt collector to harass, annoy, or abuse the consumer.[151]

In the same FAQ, the CFPB also added to the fourth factor where attempts to communicate "used or threatened to use violence or other criminal means to harm the person, or called at an inconvenient time or place."[152]

In addition, in the supplemental information on this Rule F provision, the CFPB stated:

> [E]ven a small number of debt collection calls may have the natural consequence of causing a consumer to experience harassment, oppression, or abuse, and therefore, assuming the debt collector is aware of this effect, the debt collector's

142 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-1(ii) ("On Tuesday, August 11, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a credit card debt by placing a telephone call to the consumer that the consumer does not answer. On Friday, August 14, the debt collector again places a telephone call to the consumer and has a telephone conversation with the consumer in connection with the collection of the debt. Subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3), the debt collector is presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) if the debt collector places a telephone call to the consumer in connection with the collection of that debt again prior to Friday, August 21.").

143 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2.

144 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2.

145 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2.

146 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2.

147 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2(i).

148 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2(ii).

149 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2(iii).

150 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-2(iv). The supplemental information to Regulation F elaborates on this: "if a debt collector previously used obscene language or threatened violence during a debt collection telephone call, or called at an inconvenient place or time, and thereby violated another rule provision (and the FDCPA itself), then the person receiving the subsequent telephone calls may be more likely to find they are annoying, harassing, or abusive. The Bureau also believes that by placing the subsequent telephone calls, it generally would be more likely that the debt collector intended to annoy, harass, or abuse the person." 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,815 (Nov. 30, 2020).

151 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #1, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

152 See, e.g., Id.

placement of even a small number of such calls to that consumer may indicate that the debt collector has the requisite intent to annoy, abuse, or harass.[153]

6.7.2.3 Rebutting the Presumption of Violation

As discussed in § 6.7.2.1, supra, a debt collector that does not comply with Regulation F § 1006.14(b)(2) (effective November 30, 2021) is presumed to violate FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1)'s prohibition on repeated or continued calls. However, a collector violating the Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) call frequency limits can still rebut the presumption that it violated FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1). According to the Reg. F Official Interpretations, the collector will have to show that it "did not place a telephone call or engage any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number."[154] "For purposes of determining whether the presumption of a violation has been rebutted, it is assumed that debt collectors intend the natural consequence of their actions."[155]

The Interpretations provide a non-exhaustive list of four factors that may rebut the presumption of a violation, that may be considered either individually or in combination with one another (or other non-specified factors).[156] "The factors may be viewed in light of any other relevant facts and circumstances and therefore may apply to varying degrees."[157]

These four factors are:

1. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call to comply with, or as required by, applicable law, such as where a call is made to inform the consumer of available loss mitigation options in compliance with Regulation X, 12 C.F.R. § 1024.39(a).[158]
2. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call that was directly related to active litigation involving the collection of a particular debt, such as to complete a court-ordered communication with the consumer about the debt, or as part of negotiations to settle active debt collection litigation regarding the debt.[159]
3. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call in response to a consumer's request for additional information, such as where in one telephone conversation the consumer asked the debt collector for more information about the debt amount, but the consumer could not talk at that moment. The consumer ended the telephone call before the debt collector could seek prior consent under § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) to call back with the requested information.[160]
4. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call to convey information to the consumer that, as shown through evidence, would provide the consumer with an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect relating to the collection of the particular debt, where the negative effect was not in the debt collector's control, and where time was of the essence.[161]

The Official Interpretations provide two examples of where the fourth factor described above does apply:

- Toward the end of lengthy telephonic settlement discussions, the call dropped, and the collector called back to complete the conversation. This provided the consumer an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect that was not in the debt collector's control (i.e., having to repeat a substantive conversation with a potentially different representative of the debt collector) and where time was of the essence (i.e., to prevent the delay of settlement negotiations by seven days).[162]
- The consumer had previously entered into a payment plan with the debt collector where only the creditor may approve waivers of late fees. The debt collector placed a telephone call to the consumer to remind the consumer that a late fee would be applied unless payment was made by the next day. The collector placed the telephone call to alert the consumer to the pending penalty, giving the consumer an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect that was not in the debt collector's control and where time was of the essence.[163]

The Official Interpretations also provide one example of where the fourth factor described above does not apply: The debt collector placed a telephone call to the consumer to offer the consumer a "one-time only" discount on the debt payment expiring the next day when, in fact, the collector could offer a similar discount for an additional period. Because the negative effect on the consumer was in the debt collector's control, the discount offer is not a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.[164]

Factors that might rebut the presumption of a violation are different from the list of phone calls in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(3)[165] that are definitively excluded from telephone call frequencies. As the CFPB explains in the supplemental information:

153 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,811 (Nov. 30, 2020).
154 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2.
155 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2.
156 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2.
157 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2.
158 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(i). The supplemental information to this factor though notes "the Bureau understands that legally required communications infrequently are delivered over the telephone, in contrast to by mail or other means." 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,816 (Nov. 30, 2020).
159 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(ii). But the CFPB notes: "However, the debt collector must comply with the prohibition on communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer represented by an attorney with regard to the specific debt." See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
160 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(iii).
161 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(iv).
162 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(iv)(A).
163 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(iv)(B).
164 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(ii)-2(iv)(C).
165 See § 6.7.2.6, infra.

> While the Bureau believes that telephone calls placed under these four circumstances generally would not reflect an intent on the part of the debt collector to harass, annoy, or abuse the consumer, it is possible that there could be factual circumstances where such a telephone call is placed with that intent. Therefore, the Bureau is including such telephone calls within the rebuttable presumption rather than excluding them from the telephone call frequencies altogether under final § 1006.14(b)(3).[166]

6.7.2.4 Limits on Regulation F's Safe Harbor for Call Frequency

A collector following the Regulation F § 1006.14(b)(2) (effective November 30, 2021) frequency limits creates a presumption for compliance with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1), but the debt collector's conduct can still violate other aspects of FDCPA § 1692d or Reg. F. § 1006.14 if the natural consequence of another aspect of the debt collector's telephone calls, unrelated to frequency, is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt.[167] For example, if one of the calls results in the collector leaving a voicemail that contains obscene language, although there is no frequency violation, there can still be a Reg. F § 1006.14(a) and (d) violation and an FDCPA § 1692d(2) violation.[168]

In addition, frequency of calls, even though within Regulation F's frequency limits, can still contribute to a finding of a FDCPA § 1692d or Reg. F § 1006.14 violation. "Depending on the facts and circumstances, conduct that on its own would violate neither the general prohibition in § 1006.14(a), nor any specific prohibition in § 1006.14(b) through (h), nonetheless may violate § 1006.14(a) when such conduct is evaluated cumulatively with other conduct."[169] For example, according to the Reg. F Official Interpretations, even though seven calls in a week is presumed not to violate Reg. F § 1006.14(b), the cumulative effect of the collector placing those calls plus sending a number of unsolicited emails is likely lead to a section 1692d and Reg. F § 1006.14(a) violation.[170] The CFPB has stated: "However, a debt collector's conduct using any media, such as in-person interactions, telephone calls, audio recordings, paper documents, mail, email, text messages, and social media, including the cumulative effect of the debt collector's conduct across multiple media types, may still violate the general prohibition against harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct."[171]

6.7.2.5 Prior Consent to Additional Calls

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), telephone calls do not count toward the frequency limits discussed in § 6.7.2.1, supra, where the person has given prior consent directly to the debt collector[172] and the call is placed within a period no longer than seven consecutive days from the day of consent, with the day of consent being the first day.[173] Once the debt collector obtains prior consent, no calls made will count toward the frequency limits during that seven day period unless consent expires early.[174] Consent expires after seven days even if the consumer expresses a willingness to consent for a longer period of time.[175]

Consent can expire early if: "(1) the person consented to the additional telephone calls for a shorter time period and such time period has ended; (2) the person revokes such prior consent; or (3) the debt collector has a telephone conversation with the person regarding the particular debt."[176] If the seven days have expired, the consent is no longer applicable, and the collector would have to obtain additional prior consent directly from the consumer.[177]

Prior consent cannot be obtained during a call that would otherwise violate the frequency requirement, but must be obtained prior to that call.[178] The consent must be given directly to the collector and not to the creditor.[179] Nor can consent be obtained by a medium of communication that the person, pursuant to Reg. F § 1006.14(h), has requested that the debt collector not use with the person.[180] Nor can the consent be though a communication in violation of Reg. F § 1006.6(b)—at an inconvenient time or place, with a consumer represented by an attorney, or at the consumer's place of employment, if the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication.[181]

6.7.2.6 When Does a Call Count Toward the Frequency Limits

One counts the frequency limits differently under the call frequency prong than the conversation frequency prong.[182] The first call counting toward the conversation frequency prong includes not only calls the collector initiates where there is a conversation, but also where the consumer initiated the call and there is a conversation. Then a second collector call within seven days would violate the standard. On the other hand, in 166 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,816, n.436 (Nov. 30, 2020).

167 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(1)-1.
168 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(1)-2.
169 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2.
170 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(a)-2(i).
171 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #3, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
172 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-1 referencing Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i) (providing guidance about giving "prior consent directly to a debt collector").
173 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(3)(i).
174 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-2.
175 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Excluded Calls #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
176 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-2.
177 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-3(iii).
178 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-1 referencing Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-1.
179 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-1 referencing Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(4)(i)-2.
180 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(i)-1.
181 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1.
182 See § 6.7.2.1, supra (discussing two prongs).

counting for purposes of the call frequency prong, one does not count the calls that the consumer initiates to the collector.[183]

The call frequency prong is based on the number of calls to a person, and not the number of calls to each phone number where a person has multiple phone numbers. Thus, the CFPB has stated:

> For example, if a debt collector has eight different telephone numbers associated with a consumer and places one unanswered call to each of the telephone numbers about the same debt within seven consecutive days, the debt collector is presumed to violate the "call frequency prong" of the presumptions related to telephone call frequency.[184]

Under Regulation F § 1006.14(b)(2) (effective November 30, 2021), "placing a telephone call" includes conveying a ringless voicemail, but does not include sending an electronic message (e.g., a text message or an email) that may be received on a mobile telephone.[185] As a result, conveying a ringless voicemail counts to call frequency limits, but electronic messages do not. Limited-content messages[186] also count to call frequency limits.[187] Telephone calls to the wrong person do not count as calls to the intended person, although they do count as calls to wrong person.[188]

Calls that do not connect to the dialed number do not count toward the frequency limits.[189] Regulation F's Official Interpretations explain that:

> A debt collector's telephone call does not connect to the dialed number if, for example, [1] the debt collector receives a busy signal or [2] an indication that the dialed number is not in service.[190]

Additionally, Regulation F's Official Interpretations provide the following examples indicating that a collector's call has connected to the dialed number:

> [1] the telephone call is answered, even if it subsequently drops; [2] if the telephone call causes a telephone to ring at the dialed number but no one answers it; or [3] if the telephone call is connected to a voicemail or other recorded message, even if it does not cause a telephone to ring and even if the debt collector is unable to leave a voicemail.[191]

Other examples of a call being connected include where the telephone call causes a telephone to ring at the dialed number, but the call does not connect to a voicemail, or where the telephone call causes a telephone to ring at the dialed number, but the debt collector hangs up before anyone answers the call, or where the call connects to a voicemail.[192] A limited-content message[193] is a voicemail message and counts toward the call frequency limit as a connected call.[194] Connected calls count toward the call frequency unless an exclusion in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(3) applies.

Not counting toward frequency limits are calls placed to the consumer's attorney, a consumer reporting agency (if otherwise permitted by law), the creditor, the creditor's attorney, or the debt collector's attorney.[195] The limits, however, apply to calls to any other person, and not just to the consumer. For example, the limits apply where a collector seeks location information from a third party.[196]

As discussed in § 6.7.2.5, supra, calls placed with prior consumer consent to the debt collector do not count toward the call frequency limits, in some circumstances.

6.7.2.7 Counting Call Frequency When the Collector Calls About Multiple Debts

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the frequency limits in section 1006.14(b)(2) apply to each particular debt—meaning "each of a consumer's debts in collection."[197] This is true even when a collector has multiple accounts in collection for the same consumer.[198] Student loans are treated differently, as discussed below.

If a debt collector places a telephone call to a person and initiates a conversation or leaves a voicemail covering more than one particular debt, the call counts as a telephone call in connection with the collection of each debt mentioned in the call.[199] The same applies if the consumer either initiated the call or initiated the discussion of a debt or debts—the call counts toward the frequency limit for each debt that the consumer or collector mentions in the call.[200] Then, if within the next seven days there is a conversation about either debt, then the standard is violated.[201]

If a debt collector places a telephone call to a person, but neither initiates a conversation about a particular debt, nor leaves a voicemail that refers to a particular debt, or if the debt collector's telephone call is unanswered, the debt collector counts the telephone call as a telephone call in connection with the collection of at least one particular debt for purposes

183 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

184 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

185 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)-1.

186 Limited-content messages are defined at Reg. F § 1006.2(j). See § 4.9, supra.

187 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(i).

188 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-3.

189 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(3)(ii).

190 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(ii)-1.

191 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(3)(ii)-1.

192 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Excluded Calls #3, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

193 Reg. F § 1006.2(j) (defining limited-content messages). See § 4.9, supra.

194 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Excluded Calls #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

195 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(3)(iii).

196 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(2)(i)-1(iii). See also Reg. F § 1006.10(c), discussed at § 5.2.10, supra.

197 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(4).

198 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-1(i).

199 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-1(i). See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-2(iv).

200 Reg. F Official Interpretations §§ 14(b)(4)-1(ii), -2(vi).

201 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #6, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

of the call frequency prong.[202] The same applies if there is a voicemail[203] or telephone conversation, but no particular debt is mentioned.[204] The same applies even if the collector intends to discuss multiple debts, but the call is unanswered or debts are not discussed.[205] For example, if a collector intends to seek collection of three different debts and twenty-one calls go unanswered within a seven day period, this complies with the frequency standards.[206]

An exception is made though for student loans. All student loan debts that a consumer owes or allegedly owes that are serviced under a single account number at the time the debts were obtained by a debt collector are considered one debt, so that calls concerning any of them count to the frequency limits for all of them.[207] The regulation's supplemental information states:

> Because Federal and private student loans, and loans originated by different lenders, would not be serviced under the same account number at the time the debts were obtained by a debt collector, a debt collector would not be required to treat those student loan debts as a single debt.[208]

The language in the section specifies that the relevant question is whether the loans are under a single account number at the time the debts were obtained by "a" debt collector, not just the current collector.[209] However, creditors may simply choose to separate all student loans into separate accounts before placing the accounts with any debt collectors to maximize the number of permissible calls.

6.7.2.8 State or Local Law Limitations on Call Frequency

Some state and local jurisdictions have their own call or communication frequency limits. Massachusetts,[210] Washington State,[211] and New York City[212] have restrictions on the number of collection calls or a general restriction on the number of collection communications that are lower than those in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2). In 2021, Washington D.C. also enacted a temporary provision[213] restricting telephone calls that was also lower than the limits in Regulation F.[214] Since the FDCPA does not preempt state debt collection laws that provide additional consumer protection,[215] debt collectors must comply with the laws providing more consumer protections in these jurisdictions.[216]

West Virginia also has a restriction on collection calls, but its limits are quite high.[217] To the extent that West Virginia's law would provide less protection than Regulation F, debt collectors would still be required to comply with Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2).[218]

6.7.2.9 Frequency Standard Prior to Regulation F Standards

Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), courts found that the point at which telephone calls become so frequent as to violate FDCPA § 1692d(5) depends on the circumstances.[219] FTC interpretations do not provide a numerical test,[220] and only point to extremes—a call on the day before and the day after a promised payment would not violate the provision, but six phone calls in an hour would.[221] Before Regulation F, courts also refused to define a bright line for the

202 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-1(i).
203 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-2(ii).
204 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-1(ii).
205 Reg. F Official Interpretations §§ 14(b)(4)-2(i), (v).
206 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(b)(4)-2(i).
207 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(4). See also Reg. F Official Interpretations §§ 14(b)(4)-2(vii).
208 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,821, 76,822 (Nov. 30, 2020).
209 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,824 (Nov. 30, 2020).
210 940 Code Mass. Regs. § 7.04(1)(f) (unfair or deceptive act or practice for creditors to "[i]nitiat[e] a communication with any debtor via telephone, either in person or via text messaging or recorded audio message, in excess of two such communications in each seven-day period to either the debtor's residence, cellular telephone, or other telephone number provided by the debtor as his or her personal telephone number and two such communications in each 30-day period other than at a debtor's residence, cellular telephone, or other telephone number provided by the debtor as his or her personal telephone number, for each debt"); 209 Code Mass. Regs. § 18.14(1)(d) (without prior consent of the consumer, the debt collector may not "engage[] any consumer in communication via telephone or via text messaging, initiated by the debt collector, in excess of two such communications in each seven-day period to a consumer's residence or cellular telephone and two such communications in each 30-day period other than at a consumer's residence, or cellular telephone for each debt").
211 Wash. Rev. Code § 19.16.250(13)(a), (b) ("A communication shall be presumed to have been made for the purposes of harassment" if the debtor is contacted more than once per week at work or the debtor or spouse are contacted more than three times per week in "any form, manner, or place").
212 New York City, N.Y., Rules, tit. 6, § 5-77(b)(1)(iv) (generally prohibits calling more than twice during seven-day period).
213 As of September 29, 2021, B24-0347: Protecting Consumers from Unjust Debt Collection Practices Emergency Amendment Act of 2021 expires on November 30, 2021.
214 D.C. Code § 28-3814(d)(4) (generally prohibits "making in excess of 3 phone calls, inclusive of all phone numbers and accounts the creditor or debt collector has for the consumer, in any 7-day period").
215 15 U.S.C. § 1692n; Reg. F § 1006.104. See § 11.16.1, infra.
216 See, e.g., CFPB, FAQ, Telephone Call Frequency: Rebutting the Presumptions #8, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
217 W. Va. Code Ann. § 46A-2-125(d) ("Calling any person more than thirty times per week or engaging any person in telephone conversation more than ten times per week" violates prohibition on oppression or abuse).
218 15 U.S.C. § 1692n; Reg. F § 1006.104. See § 11.16.1, infra.
219 Kuntz v. Rodenburg L.L.P., 838 F.3d 923, 926 (8th Cir. 2016) ("turns on evidence regarding the volume, frequency, pattern, or substance of the phone calls); Hicks v. Am.'s Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 816 F. Supp. 2d 509, 515 (N.D. Ohio 2011) ("The court concludes that the number of calls is not totally dispositive in this case. Rather, the nature, extent, and context of the calls are also important").
220 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 806(5)-1 ("'Continuously' means making a series of telephone calls, one right after the other. 'Repeatedly' means calling with excessive frequency under the circumstances."), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.
221 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 18, 1978).

number of calls[222] and little pattern is to be found in court decisions[223] other than that a small number of calls without other factors did not state a FDCPA § 1692d(5) claim.[224]

Before Regulation F, factors leading a court to find a violation included:

- The number of calls per day;[225]
- The total number of calls made over a period of time;[226]
- Whether the calls were answered;[227]
- Whether the consumer told the collector to stop;[228] and
- Whether the consumer told the collector that they did not owe the debt.[229]

Ultimately, decisions were usually for the fact finder.[230]

Best practice pre-Regulation F was to plead and present evidence displaying as many of these factors as possible,[231]

222 Davis v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 3d 217, 228 (D. Mass. 2014); Crockett v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 929 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1032 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Durthaler v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 854 F. Supp. 2d 485, 489 (S.D. Ohio 2012); Hicks v. Am.'s Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 816 F. Supp. 2d 509, 515 (N.D. Ohio 2011); Valentine & Kebartas, Inc. v. Lenahan, 801 S.E.2d 431, 442 (W. Va. 2017).

223 See Haysbert v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 890297, at *13 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2016) (discussing Cal. state debt collection practices act and observing "Whether a particular volume or pattern [of calls] leads to liability, however, is not a straightforward question, and courts have been inconsistent in applying the standards."); Scheiner v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 12103069, at *5 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 5, 2013) ("Courts have come to seemingly inconsistent conclusions regarding whether summary judgment is appropriate on § 1692d(5) claims."); Arteaga v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 733 F. Supp. 2d 1218, 1227 (E.D. Cal. 2010) ("Court opinions differ . . . as to the amount or pattern of calls sufficient to raise a triable issue of fact regarding the intent to annoy, harass, or oppress.").

224 Bonanno v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3219517 (M.D. Fla. July 28, 2017) (complaint alleged only servicer made "multiple calls" to consumer; this could mean "as few as two"), Ebanks v. Old Republic Equity Credit Services, Inc., 2016 WL 9526336 (M.D. Fla. July 29, 2016) (at most, five calls); Miller v. Cain, 2015 WL 222434 (W.D. La. Jan. 14, 2015) (single unanswered call to consumer's cell phone while at work); Saltzman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 3190359 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2009) (one or two non-threatening calls per day).

225 See, e.g., Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Williams, Scott & Assoc., 2015 WL 12856779 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 4, 2015) (ten times daily), aff'd, 679 Fed. Appx. 836 (11th Cir. 2017); Light v. Seterus, Inc., 337 F. Supp. 3d 1210, 1215 (S.D. Fla. 2018) (plaintiff alleged multiple calls "in a campaign designed to apply maximum psychological stress," with examples; plaintiff "sufficiently alleged a pattern and frequency of calls from which a jury could easily infer an intent to harass"); Brown v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 131 F. Supp. 3d 1332 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (four calls in one day, two made after consumer had already hung up); Davis v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 3d 217, 228 (D. Mass. 2014) ("Sixty calls over . . . about three months is not insignificant in volume, and on multiple days, defendant called plaintiff as many as three or four times); Webb v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., L.L.C., 2012 WL 2359434, at *3 (D. Kan. June 20, 2012) (six calls per day); Kuhn v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443 (D. Nev. 1994) (six calls to consumer's workplace within twenty-four minutes). But see Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 441 Fed. Appx. 712, 718 (11th Cir. 2011) (five calls, including one successful contact and two voicemail messages did not amount to repeated or continuous attempts to annoy).

226 See, e.g., Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 414 Fed. Appx. 230, 233 (11th Cir. 2011) (300 calls over 2.5 years); Palmer v. Simon's Agency, Inc., 2020 WL 1332829 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2020) (thirty calls over a three- to four-week period); Sussman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 928 F. Supp. 2d 784 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (50 calls over three months); Hoover v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 888 F. Supp. 2d 589, 598–599 (E.D. Pa. 2012) (more than ten calls per week for eleven weeks); Winberry v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 697 F. Supp. 2d 1279 (M.D. Ala. 2010) (33 calls in a month); Harrison v. Fed. Pac. Credit Co., L.L.C., 2006 WL 276605 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 3, 2006) (for fifteen months defendant placed weekly calls); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Companies, L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (200 calls during nineteen-month period).

227 See, e.g., Tucker v. CBE Grp., Inc., 710 F. Supp. 2d 1301, 1305 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (summary judgment for collector; never spoke to consumer, who neither told defendant it had wrong number, nor requested end to calls; 57 calls, no more than 7 per day, 6 voice mail messages, but never called back on same day after leaving message); Saltzman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 3190359, at *7 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2009) (summary judgment for collector; court estimated 1:5 ratio of actual conversations to calls attempted). See also Reed v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 702 Fed. Appx. 239, 241 (5th Cir. 2017) ("approximately 14 phone calls—six of which were not answered and about the same amount were answered but the person answering hung up—over five weeks likewise did not violate the FDCPA."). But see Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 414 Fed. Appx. 230, 234 (11th Cir. 2011) ("We reject Franklin's contention that its telephone calls were not harassing because Meadows did not answer them. The plain language of § 1692d prohibits 'causing a telephone to ring . . . with intent to annoy, abuse or harass any person at the called number.' The statute itself recognizes that answering the phone is not necessary for there to be harassment.").

228 Zurich Am. Ins. Co. v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 990 F.3d 1073, 1082 (7th Cir. 2021) (intent inferred from debt collector's persistence in face of consumer's requests for calls to stop); Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 414 Fed. Appx. 230, 233 (11th Cir. 2011); Martinez v. Alltran Fin. L.P., 2020 WL 1677403 (D. Ariz. Apr. 6, 2020) (claim stated for debt collector's continued calls after being asked to stop); Parente v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1182714 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 12, 2020) (multiple calls after she requested that calls cease); Jones v. Sw. Credit Sys., 2017 WL 4736790, at *3 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 18, 2017) ("Though Defendant is correct that calls to a debtor after he verbally requests that they cease do not automatically trigger a violation of § 1692d(5), there still may be a finding of an intent to annoy when examining the frequency of the calls."); Davis v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 3d 217, 228 (D. Mass. 2014); Sussman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 928 F. Supp. 2d 784 (S.D.N.Y. 2013); Winberry v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 697 F. Supp. 2d 1279 (M.D. Ala. 2010); McGrady v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 40 F. Supp. 2d 1323 (M.D. Ala. 1998) (numerous phone calls including to mother and employer after being told to stop). But see Chapin v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 2020 WL 1898340 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 11, 2020) (thirty-eight calls over five-month period did not raise genuine issue of fact regarding intent where debt collector never called after marking "wrong number" in its records, and where plaintiff alleged that she asked at least twenty times for calls to stop, but also acknowledged she often did not know who was calling repeatedly).

229 Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 414 Fed. Appx. 230, 234–235 (11th Cir. 2011); McCaskill v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 3d 1281 (M.D. Fla. 2016). Compare Merchant v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 440 F. Supp. 3d 1369 (N.D. Ga. 2020) (consumer confirmed to collector that he owed debt, and when representative told him calls would continue, even if VA was ultimately going to pay debt, he said "yeah, that's fine").

230 See § 6.7.3, infra (establishing intent under § 1692d(5)).

231 See Aguirre v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 4065245 (C.D. Cal. July 2, 2015); Tamayo v. Am. Coradious Int'l, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6887869 (D.N.J. Dec. 28, 2011).

but the consumer's pleading did not need to provide precise details.[232]

Prior to Regulation F, courts were frequently unaffected by whether the calls involved the collector seeking multiple debts or only one from the same consumer.[233] In determining whether the number of calls was excessive, courts have considered calls made outside the statute of limitations as evidence showing that calls made within the limitations period are part of a pattern of repeated or continuous calls with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass.[234]

6.7.3 Establishing Intent to Annoy, Abuse, or Harass

FDCPA § 1692d(5)[235] is the only section 1692d subsection that requires proof of intent. The repeated calls must be made "with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass."

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) creates a presumption that, absent exceptions discussed in §§ 6.7.2.5 and 6.7.2.6, supra, calls exceeding the call and contact frequency standards set in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) violate the prohibition on repeated or continuous telephone contact in FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).[236] Once the presumption of a violation is established, the debt collector has the burden of rebutting the presumption of violation as described in § 6.7.2.3, supra. To do so, the debt collector would need to show that despite violating the frequency standards it "nevertheless did not place a telephone call or engage any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number."[237]

Conversely, complying with the contact frequency standards in in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) creates a presumption of compliance with FDCPA § 1692d(5) and Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).[238] In order to rebut the presumption of compliance as described in § 6.7.2.2, supra, the consumer or other person must show that, despite complying with the frequency standards, the debt collector "nevertheless placed a telephone call or engaged a person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number."[239]

Prior to Regulation F, intent was generally a question for the fact finder,[240] although summary judgment was still possible for the collector where the number of calls was minimal,[241] or for the consumer where the number of calls was extreme.[242]

Prior to Regulation F, proving the collector's intent directly was difficult, but courts would infer intent from the nature, pattern, content, or frequency of debt collection calls, as well as the place to which they are made.[243]

232 Gilmore v. USCB Corp., 2017 WL 5230922 (M.D. Ga. Nov. 9, 2017) (Twombly did not require exact number of calls or explanation of how calls constituted harassment); Burke v. Coachella Valley Collections Services, 2011 WL 13217709 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 25, 2011) (consumer's allegations of inconvenient calls to her workplace after agency was told not to call there did not need to provide evidentiary details as to exact time or number of calls).

233 Crockett v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 929 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1032 (N.D. Cal. 2013).

234 See Dore v. Five Lakes Agency, Inc., 2015 WL 4113203 at n.10 (N.D. Ill. July 8, 2015); Pittman v. J.J. Mac Intyre Co., 969 F. Supp. 609 (D. Nev. 1997). See also § 12.3.3.3, infra.

235 See also Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).

236 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(ii).

237 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,816 (Nov. 30, 2020).

238 Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2)(i).

239 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,814 (Nov. 30, 2020).

240 See, e.g., Light v. Seterus, Inc., 337 F. Supp. 3d 1210, 1215 (S.D. Fla. 2018) (plaintiff alleged multiple calls "in a campaign designed to apply maximum psychological stress," with examples; held plaintiff "sufficiently alleged a pattern and frequency of calls from which a jury could easily infer an intent to harass"); Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2018 WL 3546193, at *6 (D.N.J. July 23, 2018) (collecting cases); Wright v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 227 F. Supp. 3d 1207, 1213 (D. Kan. 2016) ("Where there is some evidence that the defendant continued to call the plaintiff after being asked to stop, the question of whether the conduct constitutes an intent to harass, in violation of § 1692d(5), is one for a jury."); Swearingen v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 892 F. Supp. 2d 987, 992 (N.D. Ill. 2012); Hendricks, 891 F. Supp. 2d 892, 896 (N.D. Ill. 2012); Holland v. Bur. of Collection Recovery, 801 F. Supp. 2d 1340, 1342–1343 (M.D. Fla. 2011); Valentine & Kebartas, Inc. v. Lenahan, 801 S.E.2d 431, 442 (W. Va. 2017) ("Accordingly, it is obvious that such an issue is exclusively one for the trier of fact—in this case, the trial court").

241 See, e.g., Grimsley v. Palm Beach Credit Adjusters, Inc., 691 Fed. Appx. 576 (11th Cir. 2017) (called four times in two weeks); Kuntz v. Rodenburg L.L.P., 838 F.3d 923, 926 (8th Cir. 2016) ("may be resolved as a matter of law when the summary judgment record establishes that no reasonable jury could find the requisite level of harassment"); Merchant v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 440 F. Supp. 3d 1369 (N.D. Ga. 2020) (collector called average of once a month and didn't call in middle of night, contact his relatives, or use profane language to threaten him); Benson v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2019 WL 4040135, at *4 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 27, 2019) (nine calls made in eight months, spaced no less than six days apart); Dore v. Five Lakes Agency, Inc., 2015 WL 4113203 (N.D. Ill. July 8, 2015) (average of two calls per month without any allegation of hostile or vexations conduct and no request to stop).

242 See, e.g., Kuhn v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443, 1453 (D. Nev. 1994) (summary judgment for consumer where collector called her at her job six times within twenty-four minutes, including two calls after she had hung-up on collector).

243 Light v. Seterus, Inc., 337 F. Supp. 3d 1210, 1215 (S.D. Fla. 2018) (plaintiff alleged multiple calls "in a campaign designed to apply maximum psychological stress," with examples; held plaintiff "sufficiently alleged a pattern and frequency of calls from which a jury could easily infer an intent to harass"); Crockett v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 929 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1032 (N.D. Cal. 2013) ("intent may be inferred from circumstantial evidence such as the nature, pattern, and frequency of debt collection calls"); Neu v. Genpact Services, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1773822, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2013) (surveying case law); Durthaler v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 854 F. Supp. 2d 485, 489 (S.D. Ohio 2012) ("Courts consider whether the nature of telephone calls, including their frequency, substance, or the place to which they are made, provides grounds to infer a debt collector's intent to annoy, abuse, or harass without any other evidence of the debt collector's motive in calling."); Brown v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 748 F. Supp. 2d 847, 852 (W.D. Tenn. 2010) ("The nature of telephone calls, including their frequency, substance, or the place to which they are made, provides grounds to infer a debt collector's intent to annoy, abuse, or harass without any other evidence of the debt collector's motive in calling.").

There was no bright-line rule regarding how many calls showed intent to annoy, abuse, or harass.[244]

But courts often found intent where calls continued after the consumer asked that calls be stopped or where the called person informed the collector that it was the wrong number.[245]

Intent is not an element under the general FDCPA § 1692d prohibition of "conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person." Thus, the question is raised whether plaintiff can prevail on a claim based on unwanted phone calls under the general FDCPA § 1692d prohibition, where the consumer need not show intent, but only that the natural consequence of repeated calls is to harass, oppress, or abuse, without showing the intent required under FDCPA § 1692d(5). The Official Interpretations of Regulation F explain that a debt collection that complies with FDCPA § 1692d(5)[246] also complies with section 1692d[247] "with respect to the frequency of its telephone calls" although the debt collector could still violate FDCPA § 1692d for other reasons "unrelated to frequency."[248]

Prior to Regulation F, some courts allowed a consumer to allege violations of both provisions as alternative theories, and recover under the general prohibition even when intent could not be established.[249] But other courts treated any claim under the general prohibition for repeated calls as actually a claim under FDCPA § 1692d(5), requiring intent.[250]

6.8 Meaningful Disclosure of Caller's Identity; FDCPA § 1692d(6)

(6) Except as provided in section 1692b of this title, the placement of telephone calls without meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity.[251]

FDCPA § 1692d(6) and Regulation F § 1006.14(g) (effective November 30, 2021) require collectors to identify themselves in a meaningful way when they call a person, except as provided in section 1692b, which states that when a collector seeks a debtor's location information from someone other than the debtor, the collector must "identify himself, state that he is confirming or correcting location information concerning the consumer, and, only if expressly requested, identify his employer."[252]

Because the FDCPA § 1692b exception applies to "any person other than the consumer," collectors cannot take advantage of the exception by claiming they are only seeking location information when they reach the consumer—that is the person that owes or allegedly owes the debt.[253] Moreover, FDCPA § 1692d applies to calls to "any person," so that when a collector calls the wrong person, such as a person subsequently assigned the debtor's old number, the called person can have a claim under section 1692d(6) if the collector does not provide proper identification.[254]

Nevertheless, FDCPA § 1692d(6) refers to "the placement of telephone calls" in the plural, so that some courts have given the debt collector a free pass to make one call without 244 Davis v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 3d 217, 228 (D. Mass. 2014); Crockett v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 929 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1032 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Pace v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 872 F. Supp. 2d 861, 865 (W.D. Mo. 2012), aff'd, 512 Fed. Appx. 643 (8th Cir. 2013); Durthaler v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 854 F. Supp. 2d 485, 489 (S.D. Ohio 2012); Arteaga v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 733 F. Supp. 2d 1218, 1227 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

245 Zurich Am. Ins. Co. v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 990 F.3d 1073, 1082 (7th Cir. 2021) (district court did not err in inferring intent to "annoy or harass" from debt collector's persistence in face of consumer's requests for calls to stop); Rigby v. CrossCheck Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1492893, at *6 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 27, 2020) (numerous and persistent phone calls, even after consumer asked for calls to stop); Hollis v. LVNV Funding, 2019 WL 1091336, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019) ("Defendant continued calling her multiple times per week, and sometimes on multiple occasions in a single day, for more than a year after she requested they stop is sufficient to infer an intent to harass"); Hendricks v. CBE Grp., Inc., 891 F. Supp. 2d 892, 896 (N.D. Ill. 2012) ("where a plaintiff has shown that he asked the collection agency to stop calling or has informed the collection agency that it has the wrong number, and the collection agency nevertheless continued to call the plaintiff, courts have found intent"); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Companies, L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158, 1168 (N.D. Cal. 2002) ("on some days there were multiple calls made after voice contact in which the Plaintiff requested no further calls be made."). See also Hicks v. Am.'s Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 816 F. Supp. 2d 509, 515 (N.D. Ohio 2011) ("Defendant continued to call Plaintiffs on a daily basis, often twice a day, despite being advised that Plaintiffs were represented by a debt management company"). Compare Stinson v. Receivables Mgmt. Bur. Inc., 2013 WL 1278966 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 26, 2013) (no intent, where despite high volume of calls, consumer never asked that collector stop them or indicated that collector was calling wrong person).

246 See also Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1).

247 See also Reg. F § 1006.14(a).

248 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 1006.14(b)(1)-1.

249 See, e.g., Jones v. Seas & Assoc., 2016 WL 4146192, at *5 (W.D. Tenn. Aug. 3, 2016) (refusing to dismiss concurrent § 1692d and § 1692d(5) claims based on same facts; citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2)-(3) and case law); Harris v. Stellar Recovery, 2015 WL 4041719, at *6 (D. Utah July 1, 2015) (plaintiff alleged violation of § 1692d(5); but even if unable to prove requisite intent, claim may survive under general proscription of § 1692d; subsection (5) is only "one example of behavior that violates 1692d"); Kromelbein v. Envision Payment Solutions, Inc., 2013 WL 3947109 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2013) (denying defense motions for summary judgment on § 1692d and § 1692d(5) claims based on same phone calls; noting that intent not required for § 1692d and issue of fact existed regarding intent for § 1692d(5) claim).

250 See, e.g., Muzyka v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2019 WL 2869114, at *4 n.3 (E.D. Cal. July 3, 2019) (quoting Hollis and collecting cases); Hollis v. LVNV Funding, 2019 WL 1091336, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019); Stirling v. Genpact Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 952310, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 19, 2012).

251 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(6). See also Reg. F § 1006.14(g).

252 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(1); Reg. F § 1006.10(b). See also Sclafani v. BC Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 4116471 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 18, 2010) (collector calling under § 1692b could leave just her individual name without giving her employer's name).

253 Thomas v. Everest Receivable Services, Inc., 2020 WL 6276033, at *2 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 10, 2020) (collector could have asked who collector was speaking to when it reached the debtor); Hultman v. Prof'l Choice Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 2963869 (D. Neb. June 9, 2017) (rejecting argument that collector did not know it had reached debtor when it was debtor's number).

254 Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015); Kane v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 6018403 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 7, 2011).

providing a meaningful identification.[255] But collectors will often make multiple calls to a consumer, and then it is prudent to allege the collector's failure to identify itself in all of these calls. Since the provision refers to "meaningful" disclosure, if the debt collector provided any sort of identifying information, then it is prudent to specify as precisely as possible the facts showing that the identification was not meaningful.[256]

When a collector calls repeatedly, the consumer answers, and the collector then hangs up without providing identification, this can violate FDCPA § 1692d(6).[257] On the other hand, unanswered calls where no message is left on voice mail are unlikely to violate FDCPA § 1692d(6), particularly where the caller ID is not deceptive.[258]

Regulation F's Official Interpretations state that a voicemail that qualifies as a limited-content message, as defined at Ref. F § 1006.2(j),[259] does not violate FDCPA § 1692d(6)'s meaningful disclosure requirement.[260] However, voicemail messages that do not comply with Reg. F 1006.2(j) can still violate the FDCPA, including section 1692d(6).[261] When collectors do leave a voice mail message, they cannot excuse their lack of identification by arguing that if a third party heard the message with the collector's identity, that would violate FDCPA § 1692c(b) (third party contact). This issue is examined at § 5.7.8, supra.

Callers must identify the collection agency making the call and the nature of its business, if not apparent from the collection agency's name.[262] That the collector sent a prior letter identifying the collector is not a defense where a subsequent voice mail only identifies the collector by its phone number.[263] But the Third Circuit found no violation where the caller identified the employer and nature of the call, but abbreviated the name of the employer.[264] Where the call properly identified the caller and the nature of the call, courts do not require that the caller ID displayed on the consumer's phone also identify the caller.[265]

Despite the provision requiring identification of the "caller," the Eleventh Circuit does not require disclosure of 255 See Pisarz v. GC Services L.P., 2017 WL 1102636 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2017); Pollock v. GC Services L.P., 2014 WL 7140046 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 12, 2014); Brailey v. F.H. Cann & Assoc., 2014 WL 7639909 (W.D. La Dec. 5, 2014); Hagler v. Credit World Serv., 2014 WL 4954595 (D. Kan. Oct. 1, 2014); Sanford v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 3798285, at *19 (E.D. Mich. July 22, 2013); Jordan v. ER Solutions, Inc., 900 F. Supp. 2d 1323 (S.D. Fla. 2012); Thorne v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 3108662 (S.D. Fla. July 24, 2012); Garza v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3527072 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 15, 2012); Sampaio v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 8731170 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 6. 2009).

256 See Davis v. Bonewicz, 2011 WL 5827796 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 18, 2011) (plaintiff's general allegation that debt collector left voicemail messages without meaningful disclosure of identity was dismissed); Evangelista v. Regent Asset Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 4531340 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 29, 2011) (allegations did not contain sufficient factual specificity so as to warrant entry of default judgment, since complaint failed to specify content of one or more of the voicemail messages left on plaintiff's answering machine by debt collector).

257 Sussman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 928 F. Supp. 2d 784 (S.D.N.Y. 2013); Langdon v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2010 WL 3341860, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 24, 2010).

258 Kuberski v. Cred X Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2943726 (D. Colo. July 2, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 2936421 (D. Colo. July 19, 2012).

259 See § 4.9, supra.

260 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-3.

261 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(j)-1.

262 Second Circuit: See, e.g., Ostrander v. Accelerated Receivables, 2009 WL 909646, at *6 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2009) (message stated only person's name to contact and a telephone number).

Fourth Circuit: See, e.g., Woods v. Oxford Law, L.L.C., 2015 WL 778778, at *8 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 24, 2015) (allegation that caller failed to state company name or purpose of call was sufficient for default judgment).

Fifth Circuit: See, e.g., Campos v. Tolteca Enterprises, Inc., 2015 WL 4078134, at *2 (W.D. Tex. July 6, 2015) (call violated § 1692d(6); "caller provided her name, [company]'s name, and a phone number, but did not say anything about the nature of the call itself"; quoting Baker v. Allstate Fin. Services, with approval).

Sixth Circuit: See, e.g., Crain v. Pinnacle Fin. Grp. of MN, Inc., 2007 WL 3408540, at *5 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 14, 2007) ("Plaintiff asserts (1) '[t]hey would not tell me their names of where they were from and (2)[w]hen I told them to stop calling that is when profane language was used.' These allegations, if true, state clear violations of Section 1692d(6) and (2), respectively.").

Seventh Circuit: See, e.g., Mino v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2013 WL 4039453, at *2 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 7, 2013) ("only requires the debt collector inform the debtor 1) of the name of the debt collection company, and 2) that the purpose of the telephone call was for the collection of the debt").

Eighth Circuit: See, e.g., Baker v. Allstate Fin. Services, Inc., 554 F. Supp. 2d 945, 949–950 (D. Minn. 2008) (message stated caller's name and collector's name, but not nature of business or purpose of call); Knoll v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 502 F. Supp. 2d 943, 946 (D. Minn. 2007) ("§ 1692d(6) does not prohibit a debt collection agency employee from using an alias during a telephone call, as long as the employee accurately discloses the name of the debt collection agency and explains the nature of its business").

Ninth Circuit: See, e.g., Kersten v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2015 WL 105797 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 2015); Moritz v. Daniel N. Gordon, P.C., 895 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1104 (W.D. Wash. 2012); Wood v. GC Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 995207, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2012); Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1438763 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069, 1075 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (violation where message stated only caller's name, not debt collection agency's name or purpose of call); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1112 (C.D. Cal. 2005).

Tenth Circuit: See, e.g., Rhodes v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 6472112 (D. Colo. Oct. 31, 2016) (callers name not enough, but must disclose identity of employer); Rhodes v. Olson Assoc., 83 F. Supp. 3d 1096, 1109–1110 (D. Colo. 2015) (caller and company name not enough if name not sufficient to indicate debt collection purpose).

Eleventh Circuit: See, e.g., Hart v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 871 F.3d 1255, 1260 (11th Cir. 2017); Dauval v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2013 WL 9921550 (M.D. Fla. June 27, 2013); Frazier v. Absolute Collection Serv., Inc., 767 F. Supp. 2d 1354, 1364 (N.D. Ga. 2011); Valencia v. Affiliated Grp., Inc., 2008 WL 4372895, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 24, 2008) (did not disclose nature of business).

263 See Garo v. Glob. Credit & Collection Corp., 2011 WL 251450 (D. Ariz. Jan. 26, 2011).

264 Levins v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp. L.L.C., 902 F.3d 274 (3d Cir. 2018). Cf. Hutton v. C.B. Accounts, Inc., 2010 WL 5463108 (C.D. Ill. Dec. 29, 2010) (class inappropriate where some consumers would have recognized debt collector by its initials in messages).

265 Bryan v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 141703, at *3 (W.D.N.C. Jan. 14, 2021); Scheffler v. Integrity Fin. Partners, Inc., 2013 WL 9768539 (D. Minn. Oct. 28, 2013).

the employee's name, only the employer.[266] When the caller discloses their name, it may be an alias.[267] Regulation F states that the use of aliases is not prohibited under the regulations implementing FDCPA § 1692e as long as the employee "uses the assumed name consistently and . . . the debt collector can readily identify any employee using an assumed name."[268] The obligation is not only on the employee, but also on the employer to have a system in place that can effectively and readily identify the employee based on the alias.[269]

Regulation F does not directly address the use of aliases in the context of FDCPA § 1692d(6)'s "meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity" requirement. However, the FTC Staff Commentary previously addressed the use of aliases in the context of FDCPA § 1692d(6), concluding that "meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity" is satisfied if the alias "permits identification of the debt collector (i.e., where he uses the alias consistently, and his true identity can be ascertained by the employer)."[270]

Prior to the implementation of Regulation F, many courts found no FDCPA § 1692d(6) violation where the caller uses an alias, as long as the caller also identifies the employer and the nature of the call,[271] and especially if the collection employee may be identified through the collector's employer.[272]

6.9 Prohibited Communication Media; Reg. F § 1006.14(h)

In connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a person through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person.[273]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) adds an additional example of conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. Regulation F § 1006.14(h) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a person through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person.[274] The supplemental information explains "Once a person has requested that a debt collector not use a specific medium of communication to communicate with that person, the Bureau believes that the natural consequence of further communications or attempts to communicate from the debt collector to that person using that same medium likely is harassment, oppression, or abuse of that person."[275]

Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) refers to a "person" requesting the collector not use a medium of communication, so that the provision is not limited to a consumer as defined at Reg. F § 1006.6(c).[276] The term "person" is defined at Reg. F § 1006.2(k) to include "natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies."[277]

Regulation F's Official Interpretations explain that medium of communication includes "any oral, written, electronic, or other medium."[278] As examples, the Official Interpretations specify that "a communication may occur in person or by telephone, audio recording, paper document, mail, email, text message, social media, or other electronic media."[279]

Additionally, Regulation F's Official Interpretations explain that:

> Within a medium of communication, a person may request that a debt collector not use a specific address or telephone number. For example, if a person has two mobile telephone numbers, the person may request that the debt collector not use one or both mobile telephone numbers.[280]

If a consumer opts out of communications with a specific phone number or email address, this does not apply to communications to different email addresses or phone numbers.[281]

The request to stop using a means of communication need not be in writing.[282] The CFPB's supplemental information

266 Hart v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 871 F.3d 1255, 1259–1260 (11th Cir. 2017). See also Mino v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2013 WL 4039453, at *2 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 7, 2013) (caller's name not required; "Other courts have suggested that a debt collector employee must give his or her personal name, but those courts have not been faced with the issue of whether the omission of the personal name alone is sufficient to warrant § 1692d(6) relief.").

267 See, e.g., Arslan v. Florida First Fed. Grp., 1995 WL 731175 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 5, 1995).

268 Reg. F § 1006.18(f). See § 7.2.14.3, infra.

269 See § 7.2.14.3, infra.

270 FTC Official Staff Commentary §806(6)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra; discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

271 See Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 796 F. Supp. 2d 1335, 1339 (M.D. Fla. 2011), aff'd, 432 Fed. Appx. 918 (11th Cir. 2011) (no discussion of aliases); Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932 (D. Ariz. 2003); Youngblood v. GC Services L.P., 186 F. Supp. 2d 695 (W.D. Tex. 2002); Wright v. Credit Bur., Inc., 548 F. Supp. 591 (N.D. Ga. 1982), modified on other grounds, 555 F. Supp. 1005 (N.D. Ga. 1983); Kleczy v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 486 N.E.2d 204 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984). Cf. United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987) (modified order so that "No provision in said judgment shall be construed to prevent Central Adjustment Bureau, Inc. or its co-defendants from using assumed names in order to gather information relative to debtors"). But see Arslan v. Florida First Fed. Grp., 1995 WL 731175 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 5, 1995).

272 See Johnson v. NCB Collection Services, 799 F. Supp. 1298 (D. Conn. 1992).

273 Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1).

274 Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1).

275 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,825 (Nov. 30, 2020).

276 See § 4.4, supra.

277 See § 4.10, supra.

278 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-1 referencing Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-1.

279 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-1 referencing Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-1.

280 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-2.

281 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-3(ii).

282 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-3(i) (providing an example where consumer "tells" debt collector to stop calling).

states that, unlike a request to cease all communications under FDCPA § 1692c(c),[283] a "writing requirement is not necessary or warranted in the context of Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1), which provides a person with the opportunity to make a narrower request regarding communication media."[284] When a person responds to a collector's telephone call by stating "stop calling," the regulation prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the person through telephone calls.[285]

Regulation F Official Interpretations clarify that "[t]he debt collector may ask follow-up questions regarding preferred communication media to clarify statements by the person."[286]

The CFPB's supplemental information notes that "final rule does not specify the period of time afforded a debt collector to update its systems to reflect a person's request under § 1006.14(h)(1)," but that in some circumstances a bona fide error defense may be available if:

> [N]otwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error, a debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with a person through a medium of communication after the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium but before the debt collector has implemented the person's request.[287]

The CFPB's supplemental information also explains that Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) does not require a debt collector to transfer a request not to communicate with a particular consumer through a particular medium to a creditor or subsequent debt collector.[288] As a result, the consumer would need to renew such requests with each subsequent debt collector.[289]

Notably, unlike the presumption of compliance in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(2) with the prohibition on repeated or continuous telephone calls in Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(1),[290] the prohibition in Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(1) is not limited to "collection of a particular debt."[291] As a result, a debt collector should apply a request not to communicate through a particular medium of communication broadly to all of the accounts that debt collector is attempting to collect from the requesting consumer. Indeed, Regulation F Official Interpretations explain that:

> Section 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of any debt through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person.[292]

There are three exceptions to the requirement that the collector not use a particular medium of communication. First, if a person opts out of receiving electronic communications, the collector can still send electronic confirmation of the request and the collector can indicate it will honor the request, but the confirmation can contain no other information.[293] Second, where a person requests that the collector not use a medium of communication, and the person later initiates contact using that same medium, the collector can reply using that same medium, but only once for each communication initiated by the person.[294]

Third, the collector can still use the means of communication the person requested the collector not use if that means is otherwise required by applicable law.[295] The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide an example. Assume a debt collector is also a mortgage servicer subject to the Truth in Lending Regulation Z requirement that is send periodic statement regarding a residential mortgage loan.[296] Also assume the mortgage loan borrower has not consented to receive statements electronically in accordance with Regulation Z.[297] Even if the person tells the debt collector to stop mailing letters, the collector can still mail the person periodic statements, because the periodic statements are required by applicable law.[298]

283 See § 5.8, supra.
284 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,826 (Nov. 30, 2020).
285 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-3(i).
286 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-1.
287 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,826 (Nov. 30, 2020).
288 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,826 (Nov. 30, 2020).
289 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,826 (Nov. 30, 2020).
290 See § 6.7.2, supra.
291 See Reg. F § 1006.14(b)(4) ("For purposes of this paragraph (b), particular debt means each of a consumer's debts in collection.").
292 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(1)-1 (emphasis added).
293 Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(2)(i).
294 Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(2)(ii).
295 Reg. F § 1006.14(h)(2)(iii).
296 Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41.
297 Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41(c).
298 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 14(h)(2)-1. See also Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(c)(2)-1, -2, discussed at § 5.8.4, supra.

Chapter 7 FDCPA § 1692e: False, Deceptive, or Misleading

7.1 Introduction

This chapter discusses the specific requirements the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) imposes on debt collectors under section 1692e—including section 1692e's general prohibition of false, deceptive, or misleading representations, as well as the sixteen enumerated protections that proscribe a broad range of deceptive debt collector misconduct. Section 1692e may contain the most litigated provisions of the FDCPA. The chapter also considers Regulation F[1] (effective November 30, 2021) provisions related to FDCPA § 1692e.

Section 7.3, infra, considers general topics applicable to FDCPA § 1692e, while § 7.2, infra, examines the sixteen specific provisions. Section 7.4, infra, then examines all of these principles' application to a number of selected topics, such as claims relating to a collector's lawsuit to collect on the debt, collection on a time-barred debt, and misrepresentations in settlement offers.

Chapter 3, supra, also discusses important issues that often arise in connection with FDCPA § 1692e claims:

- The Act should be construed to protect the least sophisticated consumers;[2]
- The interaction of the FDCPA with state law;[3]
- Waiver of FDCPA protections is disfavored;[4]
- The FDCPA is a strict liability statute;[5]
- The FDCPA should be liberally interpreted to meet its remedial purposes;[6] and
- Even debtors who have mismanaged their affairs deserve to be treated in a reasonable and civil manner.[7]

The Supreme Court has held that any consumer claim in federal court (thus including a FDCPA § 1692e claim) must have Article III standing. This issue is discussed in detail at § 11.15, infra, with particular application to FDCPA § 1692e at § 11.15.4, infra.

7.2 The Sixteen Enumerated FDCPA § 1692e Prohibitions

7.2.1 False Implication of Government Affiliation, FDCPA § 1692e(1)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(1) The false representation or implication that the debt collector is vouched for, bonded by, or affiliated with the United States or any State, including the use of any badge, uniform, or facsimile thereof.[8]

FDCPA § 1692e(1) prohibits misrepresentation of a del collector's connection with the government. It is closely relate to FDCPA § 1692e(9), which prohibits misrepresenting a del collector's authority, and FDCPA § 1692e(13), which prohibit distributing or using simulated government documents.[9]

FDCPA § 1692e(1) is intended, among other things, to pro hibit a collector from impersonating a government official, such as a law enforcement officer.[11] For example, collector may not use off-duty uniformed police officers to collec debts. It was also found to be a violation for collector employ ees to claim they are officers or investigators before threaten ing criminal charges.[12] A collector using a telephone caller II that states the caller is a police department is actionable.[13]

Misrepresentations of government affiliation or approva also violate FDCPA § 1692e(1). The Seventh Circuit found violation had been stated where a collector's letters said: "W provided the systems used by a major branch of the federal gov ernment and various state governments. . . . You must surel know the problems you will face later if you do not pay."[14]

1 12 C.F.R. Part 1006.
2 See § 3.2.1, supra.
3 See § 3.2.2, supra; § 11.16.1, infra.
4 See § 3.2.3, supra.
5 See § 3.2.4, supra.
6 See § 3.2.5, supra.
7 See § 3.2.6, supra.
8 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(1). Each major bill leading to the Act contained provision similar in substance to this section. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94 Cong., 1st Sess. (1975). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(i).
9 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(9), discussed at § 7.2.9, infra; 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(1 discussed at § 7.2.13, infra.
10 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, 8, reprinted in 19 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.
11 122 Cong. Rec. H7787, H7789 (daily ed. July 27, 1976) (remarks Rep. Annunzio); 113 Cong. Rec. H2922 (daily ed. Apr. 4, 197 (remarks of Rep. Annunzio). See also FTC Official Staff Commenta § 807(1), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, sup.
12 FTC v. Fed. Check Processing, Inc., 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N Apr. 13, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 5940485 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 201 But cf. Chesworth, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 16, 1997) (na "Law Enforcement Systems" not deceptive where collection age collecting overdue parking fines).
13 See Aurandt v. Brown, 2017 WL 1215451 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2017).
14 Gammon v. GC Services, 27 F.3d 1254, 1257 (7th Cir. 1994). See FTC v. Williams, Scott & Assoc., 2015 WL 12856779 (N.D. Ga. No 2015), aff'd on other grounds, 2017 WL 540996 (11th Cir. Feb. 2017) (granting FTC summary judgment where collectors misre sented they were affiliated with government entities, including enforcement agencies). But see Sullivan v. Credit Control Serv Inc., 745 F. Supp. 2d 2 (D. Mass. 2010) (use of name "Govern Employees Insurance Company" did not falsely represent that deb lector was vouched for or affiliated with government).

The use of "Federal" in a debt collector's name has been found to be a FDCPA § 1692e(1) violation.[15] Use of a state name in the collector's name without explanatory language can also be a violation (e.g. "Maryland Collection Service," "Credit Bureau of Connecticut").[16] However, use of the word "state" in the collector's name, such as in "State Collection Service," will not necessarily violate the FDCPA.[17]

Symbols can violate FDCPA § 1692e(1). The FTC Commentary provides examples—"[f]or example, a collection letter depicting a police badge, a judge, or the scales of justice, normally violates this section."[18]

FDCPA § 1692e(1) prohibits the false representation of government affiliation. If the affiliation is accurate, there is no violation. The U.S. Supreme Court found no FDCPA § 1692e violation where the state had required special counsel collecting state debts to use state letterhead. "Special counsel create no false impression in doing just what they have been instructed to do."[19]

Similarly, where a collection agency was hired by the district attorney to help collect bad checks, there was no FDCPA § 1692e(1) violation where the district attorney authorized the collector to send letters in the name of the district attorney.[20] Also, a licensed collection agency can represent itself as licensed by the state.[21]

7.2.2 Debt's Character, Amount, Status; Collector Services or Compensation, FDCPA § 1692e(2)

7.2.2.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(2) The false representation of—
(A) the character, amount, or legal status of any debt; or[22]
(B) any services rendered or compensation which may be lawfully received by any debt collector for the collection of a debt.[23]

FDCPA § 1692e(2) prohibits "false" representations, while section 1692e generally prohibits "false, deceptive, or misleading" representations, and section 1692e(10) prohibits "any false representation or deceptive means." Where a court would limit the reach of FDCPA § 1692e(2) because the provision applies only to "false" but not deceptive claims,[24] a claim might instead be brought under section 1692e or 1692e(10).

This section focuses on inaccurate or false representations of the amount owing or that any amount is owed at all, including misrepresentations concerning the current balance, interest charges, interest and fees that will accrue in the future, collection costs and other fees, attorney fees, and special penalties for writing an insufficient funds check. The section also considers other deception relating to the debt's character or legal status, and the collector's services.

Particularly where there are inaccurate statements as to the amount due, collectors may claim they are only passing on information they received from the creditor. While the consumer bears the burden of proving that the stated amount of the debt is false,[25] there is no requirement that the consumer

15 FTC v. Fed. Check Processing, Inc., 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 13, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 5940485 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2016); Adams v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1992 WL 131121 (N.D. Ohio May 21, 1992) (used "federal" in collector's letterhead, surrounded with icons resembling great seal of U.S.). See also United States Ass'n of Credit Bureaus v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 299 F.2d 220 (7th Cir. 1962) (deceptive under FTC Act to use name, "USA of CB"). But see Cook v. Fed. Credit Corp., 2008 WL 11515166 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 7, 2008) (consumer did not offer any evidence that he was deceived into believing that Federal Credit was arm of federal government or acting on its behalf); Pache Mgmt. Co. v. Lusk, 1997 WL 254096 (Ohio Ct. App. May 15, 1997) (use of word "federal" in debt collector's name, when communications stated prominently that collector was private corporation, did not unlawfully imply affiliation with government).

16 See Crouch, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 10, 1996). See also Slough v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 396 F.2d 870 (5th Cir. 1968) (use of name "State Credit Control Board" a deceptive practice under FTC Act); Bennett v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 200 F.2d 362 (D.C. Cir. 1952) (deceptive under FTC Act to use name "Washington Service Bureau," with Washington, D.C. address, and official-sounding title, "disbursement officer"). But see Molesky v. State Collection & Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5746835 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 30, 2015) (the word "State" in collection agency's name did not violate FDCPA); Osborn v. Ekpsz, L.L.C., 821 F. Supp. 2d 859 (S.D. Tex. 2011) (least sophisticated consumer would not see official court status in collection letter with centered letterhead, a bar code, and the collector name of Texas Final Judgments, L.L.C.).

17 Born v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 2518135 (E.D. Wash. June 18, 2019).

18 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(1)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also United States Ass'n of Credit Bureaus v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 299 F.2d 220 (7th Cir. 1962) (deceptive under FTC Act to use insignias of American Eagle and red, white, and blue shield with stars in its collection letters); Adams v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1992 WL 131121 (N.D. Ohio May 21, 1992) (used "federal" in collector's letterhead, surrounded with icons resembling great seal of U.S.).

19 Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 317, 326, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016). See also Bednarski v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 3581140 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 2017) (no § 1692e(1) violation where signature block indicated that the lawyer was an "Attorney for the United States," when attorney was representing the United States).

20 See Landfried v. Spokane County, 2011 WL 1584328 (E.D. Wash. Apr. 27, 2011).

21 Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992).

22 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(2)(A). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(2)(i).

23 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(2)(B). The major bills, e.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(7) (1975) and H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(2)(B) (1976), leading to the FDCPA contained provisions similar to those in the final version of this section, except that later Senate bill added the term "lawfully." S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(2)(B) (1977). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(2)(ii).

24 Hahn v. Triumph P'ships L.L.C., 557 F.3d 755, 757 (7th Cir. 2009); Heffington v. Gordon, Aylworth & Tami, P.C., 2018 WL 3763799, at *3 (D. Or. Aug. 8, 2018).

25 E.g., Glover v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 629 Fed. Appx. 331 (3d Cir. 2015); De La Torre v. Legal Recovery Law Office, 2015 WL 574629 prove that the collector intentionally misstated the amount.[26] Instead, as described at § 7.2.2.2, infra, the FDCPA is a strict liability statute, and lack of intent is not a defense unless the collector can prove all of the elements of the bona fide error defense.

Nor is it a defense that a stated amount due is a mere estimate, at least where the communication did not represent that the amount was an estimate.[27] Another possible collector defense is that the mistake is not material. Materiality is examined at § 7.3.9, supra.

Misstatements of an amount or other violations of FDCPA § 1692e(2) apply to statements made in litigation and not just in collection communications.[28] It is no defense that the complaint seeking an amount not owed "was merely an aspirational request to the state court, not a representation of the legal status of the debt."[29] The result may be different where the debt collector had a reasonable basis for the requested amount, even though the court ruled for the consumer.[30]

7.2.2.2 Strict Liability

A common debt collector claim is that its FDCPA § 1692e(2) violation was unintentional, that the collector was relying on the creditor's information, or otherwise simply made a mistake. But, unless the bona fide error defense applies,[31] a collector is strictly liable for misstating the amount of a debt, even if that is unintentional.[32] This is in keeping with the general notion that the FDCPA is a strict liability statute.[33]

Some courts hold that a FDCPA § 1692e(2) claim fails if the collector was relying on information from the creditor.[34] But this result is justified only if the bona fide error defense applies, requiring both "that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error."[35]

The FDCPA § 1692g verification provision is a separate requirement from FDCPA § 1692e(2) and requires the debt collector to verify the debt with the creditor only when the consumer requests verification.[36] This requirement does not give a collector permission to rely without question on the creditor's initial statement to the collector of the debt or eliminate the requirement that, like all representations to the consumer, the initial communication about the debt not be deceptive in violation of FDCPA § 1692e(2).[37]

7.2.2.3 Demanding Payment When No Debt Is Owed

There are a number of reasons why a collector's claim that a debt is due may not be correct, such as the debt was paid in full

(S.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2015); Kasalo v. NCSPLUS Inc., 2011 WL 4686436 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 2011) (but consumer failed to prove an error).

26 See § 7.3.5.1, supra.

27 McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014). Cf. Francis v. General Revenue Corp., 2020 WL 4586392, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 10, 2020) (where collection letter represented collection fee as definite when it was not, the lack of disclosure rendered letter deceptive to the least sophisticated consumer).

28 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995); Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. Sept. 21, 2016); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009); DeWolf v. Samaritan Hosp., 2018 WL 3862679 at *3 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2018); § 7.3.7, supra.

29 Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 770 F.3d 443, 451 (6th Cir. 2014); Stubbs v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2015 WL 135131 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2015); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 7, 2013).

30 See Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 932–933 (8th Cir. 2016) ("Although we have concluded that PRA cannot collect the disputed interest on interest under Missouri law, the claim for that amount in the [state court] petition was not prohibited by the FDCPA as it was a statement directed to the court, and it was a good faith legal position on a point of unsettled Missouri law.").

31 See § 12.2, infra.

32 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 174 (3d Cir. 2015), abrogated on other grounds by Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263, 1273 (11th Cir. 2011); Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 383 Fed. Appx. 877 (11th Cir. 2010) (conflicting statements of the debt balance); Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 480 F.3d 493 (7th Cir. 2007); Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991, 995 (7th Cir. 2003); Gearing v. Check Brokerage Corp., 233 F.3d 469, 472 (7th Cir. 2000); Hylton v. Amerifinancial Solutions, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6044734 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 19, 2018); Brandt v. Columbia Credit Services, Inc., 2018 WL 1757114 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 12, 2018); DeWolf v. Samaritan Hosp., 2018 WL 3862679 at 3 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2018) (amount sought in collection lawsuit); Bell v. Northland Group, 2018 WL 1792368 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 16, 2018) (creditor had settled debt years earlier); Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2015); Wyant v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3446633 (W.D. La. June 10, 2014), aff'd in relevant part, 2014 WL 4146351 (W.D. La. Aug. 19, 2014);. Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014); Lee v. Kucker & Bruh, L.L.P., 958 F. Supp. 2d 524 (S.D.N.Y. 2013); Lee v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 846 F. Supp. 2d 716 (S.D. Tex. 2011); Prince v. U.S. Bancorp, 2010 WL 3385396 (D. Nev. Aug. 25, 2010); Whitaker v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2265057 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 6, 2007). See also § 3.2.4, supra.

33 See § 3.2.4, supra.

34 See Solomon v. Baer & Timberlake, P.C., 504 Fed. Appx. 702, 705 (10th Cir. 2012); Chrisp v. Prof'l Choice Recovery, Inc., 2016 WL 6237220 (D. Neb. Jan. 28, 2016); Lauer v. Credit Control Serv., 2015 WL 5714261 (D. Utah Sept. 29, 2015). Cf. Jenkins v. Heintz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997) (confusing decision about whether court views unintentional violation not actionable or whether that is an element of the bona fide error defense).

35 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). See § 12.2, infra.

36 See § 9.11.3, infra.

37 Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 383 Fed. Appx. 877 (11th Cir. 2010) (conflicting statements of the debt balance); Bell v. Northland Group, 2018 WL 1792368 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 16, 2018); Whitaker v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2265057 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 6, 2007). But see Hubbard v. Nat'l Bond & Collection Assoc., Inc., 126 B.R. 422 (D. Del. 1991), aff'd without op., 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991) (§ 1692g is grounds for excusing unintentional error relating to bankruptcy automatic stay).

(either voluntarily or by garnishment[38]), settled,[39] discharged in bankruptcy, void as usurious,[40] never due in the first place,[41] fictitious,[42] paid for by medical insurance,[43] etc. Similarly, the collector may improperly seek payment from an unobligated relative,[44] a person with a similar name to the individual owing the debt,[45] or an identity theft victim.[46] These consumer defenses are examined at NCLC's Collection Actions §§ 5.2, 5.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

When the debt is not owed, this can violate FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) either as a false representation of the amount due or of the debt's character or legal status.[47] Some decisions find it a representation regarding the amount due,[48] and others the debt's characteristics or legal status,[49] and yet others just cite to FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) generally,[50] or indicate it is both a misrepresentation of the amount due and the debt's legal status.[51] A prudent plaintiff will allege a violation of the debt's character, legal status, and amount due.

Some courts hold that it is not a FDCPA § 1692e(2) violation merely to seek to collect on a debt not owed. Instead, the consumer must point to some misrepresentation by the collector as to the status or amount of the debt.[52] But collecting on a debt should be seen as an implied representation that the debt is owed, which representation is false if the debt is not owed.

Collection of a time-barred debt presents special issues. Except in Mississippi, North Carolina (for accounts held by debt buyers), and Wisconsin,[53] running of the statute of limitations does not extinguish a debt, but instead typically provides an affirmative legal defense in court.[54] Thus a demand for payment of a time-barred debt might not violate FDCPA

38 Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011) (defendants misrepresented amount and legal status of debt by garnishing plaintiff's wages a second time, falsely representing debt as no debt was legally owed). See also In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 137 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020) (loan servicer not entitled to collect taxes it was never owed from plaintiffs).

39 Diaz v. Resurgent Capital Services L.P., 2013 WL 22215 (D. Mass. Jan. 2, 2013); Fetters v. Paragon Way, Inc., 2010 WL 5174989. (M.D. Pa. Dec. 15, 2010); Losure v. Capital One Services, 2006 WL 166520 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006).

40 Nance v. Ulferts, 282 F. Supp. 2d 912 (N.D. Ind. 2003) (attempt to collect usurious, illegal check charges). See also Dunn v. Global Tr. Mgmt., L.L.C., 506 F. Supp. 3d 1214 (M.D. Fla. 2020) (denying motion to dismiss where consumer alleged that debt buyer knowingly misrepresented validity of debts it knew were usurious and unenforceable, thereby violating both state and federal collection statutes).

41 Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009) (consumer billed for lawn services after cancelling service), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009). See also Transamerica Fin. Services, Inc. v. Sykes, 171 F.3d 553 (7th Cir. 1999) (question of whether underlying debt was valid (consumer claimed it was forgery) would arise under § 1692e, which consumer did not plead).

42 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Swatsworth, 2018 WL 4016312 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 22, 2018) (debt buyer portfolio was largely fictitious).

43 Weathers v. Gem City Account Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 3210985 (C.D. Ill. Aug. 13, 2010) (stating claim for violating § 1692e(2)(A); complaint alleging that defendant attempted to collect medical debt in violation of applicable federal and state Medicaid law).

44 See Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 2000 WL 825721 (10th Cir. June 26, 2000) (check writer's mother); Hennings v. Alltran Fin., L.P., 2017 WL 2312909 (E.D. Wis. May 26, 2017) (ex-husband); Stuart v. AR Res., Inc., 2011 WL 904167 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (unobligated relative); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (unobligated spouse); Erickson v. Johnson, 2006 WL 453201 (D. Minn. Feb. 22, 2006) (unobligated spouse); Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 4, 1992) (unobligated spouse); Robinson v. Credit Serv. Co., 1991 WL 186665 (D.N.J. Sept. 16, 1991) (parent for emancipated child).

45 See Ali v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 4760284 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2018); Scott v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 139 F. Supp. 3d 956 (S.D. Iowa 2015); Heathman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 755674 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2013); Johnson v. Bullhead Inv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 118274 (M.D.N.C. Jan. 11, 2010); Beattie v. D.M. Collections, Inc., 764 F. Supp. 383 (D. Del. 1991); Covarrubias v. Zee Law Group, 2017 WL 6570281 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 22, 2017) (debtor's father misidentified and treated as the debtor).

46 Osborn v. J.R.S.-I., Inc., 949 F. Supp. 2d 807 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (deceptive to describe identity theft victim as responsible for the debt); Diaz v. Resurgent Capital Services L.P., 2013 WL 22215 (D. Mass. Jan. 2, 2013); Erickson v. Johnson, 2006 WL 453201 (D. Minn. Feb. 22, 2006).

47 Vangorden v. Second Round, L.P., 897 F.3d 433, 437 (2d Cir. 2018) (debt had been settled with the creditor); Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 2006 WL 752953 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 16, 2006) (debt discharged in bankruptcy; however, bona fide error defense attached due to reasonable procedures in place to prevent error), aff'd, 480 F.3d 493 (7th Cir. Mar. 13, 2007). See also Brake v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 504 F. Supp. 3d 103 (E.D.N.Y. 2020); Persilver v. Merchants Credit Corp., 2020 WL 4582188 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 10, 2020).

48 Schore v. Renton Collections, Inc., 2018 WL 2018417 (W.D. Wash. May 1, 2018) (summary judgment entered for consumer against collection agency that violated §§ 1692e and 1692f in continued attempts to collect medical debt that was paid).

49 Kottler v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., Inc., 847 Fed. Appx. 542, 544 (11th Cir. 2021) (affirming summary judgment for consumer on § 1692e(2)(A) claim where defendant 's letter stated she was responsible for paying medical bills owed by her employer for work-related accident); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah 2019) (medical debt collector repeatedly attempted to collect money from the patient on debts that she did not owe, due to workers' compensation coverage).

50 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Swatsworth, 2018 WL 4016312 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 22, 2018) (fictitious debts); Castellanos v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 3d 1301 (S.D. Fla. 2017) (debt already settled); Johnson v. Superior Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2010 WL 11619042 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 31, 2010) (contacted wrong person).

51 Kuberski v. Cred X Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2943726 (D. Colo. July 2, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 2936421 (D. Colo. July 19, 2012) (debt that had in fact been previously paid in full).

52 See Williams v. Computer Credit, Inc., 2018 WL 5707185 (E.D. La. Nov. 1, 2018) (finding various misrepresentations to be properly alleged).

53 Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-3(1) ("The completion of the period of limitation prescribed to bar any action, shall defeat and extinguish the right as well as the remedy."); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(4) ("No collection agency shall collect or attempt to collect any debt by use of any unfair practices. Such practices include, but are not limited to, the following: . . . (4) When the collection agency is a debt buyer or is acting on behalf of a debt buyer, bringing suit or initiating an arbitration proceeding against the debtor or otherwise attempting to collect on a debt when the collection agency knows, or reasonably should know, that such collection is barred by the applicable statute of limitations."); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 893.05 ("When the period within which an action may be commenced on a Wisconsin cause of action has expired, the right is extinguished as well as the remedy.").

54 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

§ 1692e(2), but the demand can be actionable if it misrepresents that the debt is legally enforceable or otherwise misrepresents the debt's status or characteristics. The collection of time-barred debts is generally examined at § 7.4.9, infra.

It is deceptive to seek to collect on a debt after the collector's lawsuit is dismissed with prejudice.[55] It can be deceptive to seek payment on a debt discharged in bankruptcy or when the automatic stay is in effect.[56]

Even where one debt is owed to a collector, it can be deceptive to imply that there are additional debts owed to the collector when that is not the case. Thus, a statement "You may have more accounts in our office" could be a FDCPA § 1692e violation, if false.[57]

7.2.2.4 Misrepresentations As to the Total Amount Due

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides detailed regulations about the amount and itemization of debts that must be provided to consumers as part of the validation information.[58] When considering a FDCPA § 1692e(2) claim based on misrepresentations as to the total amount due, plaintiffs should consider whether the collector complied with these regulations in the validation notice or mirrored these required disclosures or model language[59] in other communications.

The remainder of this section discusses case law prior to Regulation F's effective date, which should be considered in light of these new regulations.

It is deceptive to indicate the total amount due as being a dollar amount including only the principal balance, and stating only that there is additional interest and fees, without specifying the amount of the interest and fees.[60] It may also be deceptive to indicate that an amount sought consists solely of principal when the amount actually includes interest or fees.[61]

Where a collector agrees to settle a debt for a lower amount, later correspondence indicating the pre-settlement amount due is deceptive because the consumer can be confused as to the amount needed to repay the debt. Even though the amount stated as due might be technically accurate, the consumer can satisfy the debt by paying the lower amount.[62] It can also be deceptive to demand payment of a materially inflated sum that fails to take into account a loan modification agreement.[63]

It is deceptive to include in the overdue dollar amount additional payments that will not be due until the future.[64] Conversely, where interest continues to accrue, it is deceptive to communicate an amount due that is over a month stale, so the amount due at the time of the communication is actually higher.[65] Where a court judgment against a consumer specifies a dollar amount, it is deceptive for a collector to seek a larger amount postjudgment.[66]

Where a collector is slow to credit a consumer's payment, the collector may then assess interest charges on an amount higher than actually owed. Particularly if this is in violation of state or federal law, the addition of this interest can be a FDCPA § 1692e(2) violation for misrepresenting the amount due to which interest should be applied.[67] Similarly, it is deceptive to seek payment on the original amount due without adjusting that amount sought to reflect consumer payments or other credits.[68] The same is the case where a collector fails to credit a payment at all or fails to credit a consumer for 55 See Alarcon v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2019 WL 1577744, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2019) ("where a debt has been reduced to judgment in favor of the debtor—whether by judgment following trial or voluntary dismissal—the debt is extinguished under California law, and a subsequent attempt to collect on that extinguished debt is a plausible basis for an FDCPA claim").

56 See, e.g., Houser v. LTD Fin. Services L.P., 512 F.3d 746 (S.D. Tex. 2021). See Chapter 13, infra, for a discussion of the interrelationship between bankruptcy and the FDCPA.

57 See Ghulyani v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 6503849 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 2015).

58 See § 9.4.7, infra.

59 See § 9.5.2, infra (discussing the model validation notice).

60 See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. June 5, 2000); Farmer v. Buffaloe & Assoc., P.L.C., 2012 WL 6045976 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 5, 2012) (only stated principal due and not interest or other fees); Bell v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 370 F. Supp. 2d 805 (S.D. Ind. May 6, 2005). Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

61 See Howard v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 978653, at *6 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2020) (statement was false, and even it were not, the least sophisticated debtor could have been misled; "The proofs of claim stated that the entire amount owed was principal and even the least sophisticated debtor is aware of the possibility of owing interest on a debt. The proofs of claim as filed could affect the least sophisticated debtor's reasoning regarding the debt and mislead the debtor about the nature and amount of the debt."). But see Hahn v. Triumph P'ships L.L.C., 557 F.3d 755, 757 (7th Cir. 2009) (upholding dismissal on ground that it was not material to a consumer who doesn't contest owing the amount claimed that the principal balance includes past interest charges added to principal, rather than breaking out the past due interest as a separate line item). Cf. § 9.4.7, infra (discussing Regulation F itemization requirements for the validation information).

62 See Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016).

63 See Macholtz v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 499 F. Supp. 3d 434 (W.D. Mich. 2020).

64 Grant-Fletcher v. McMullen & Drury, P.A., 2013 WL 4051890 (D. Md. Aug. 8, 2013) (future homeowner association assessments); Melillo v. Shendell & Assoc., P.A., 2012 WL 253205 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (same).

65 Gesten v. Phelan Hallinan, P.L.C., 57 F. Supp. 3d 1381 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (mortgage loan). Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F requirements that the validation information include the current amount of the debt).

66 Taylor v. Heath W. Williams, L.L.C., 510 F. Supp. 2d 1206 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

67 See Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 WL 22232801 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2003) (state law required crediting of payments on day they are received).

68 Strasers v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2012 WL 405454 (E.D. Wash. Feb. 8, 2012), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 500 Fed. Appx. 682 (9th Cir. 2012). See also Finch v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) (failure to credit multiple money order rent payments); Guevara v. Constar Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3001390 (M.D. Pa. June 4, 2020); Zuniga v. Jacobs, 2020 WL 168106, at *12 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 13, 2020).

surplus escrow payments.[69] It is deceptive to seek repayment of amounts as paid for property taxes and insurance where the collector never made those payments.[70]

It can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to demand inconsistent amounts for the same debt.[71] It can also be confusing in the same communication to demand different amounts, even where one amount was for a particular debt and the other for all debts from the consumer that the collector was collecting on.[72] Just as confusing can be demands with different due dates for the same debt.[73] Of course, communications can have differing balances listed if there is a good reason to do so and if the difference is clearly explained,[74] or if the different amounts over time just result from accruing interest charges[75] or a co-obligor making payments.[76]

Where an obligation is not yet accelerated, then only the past due payments are due, and it can be deceptive to seek the full, accelerated balance instead of the amounts overdue.[77] It is also confusing to demand one amount representing a number of different debt obligations without itemizing the amount due for each obligation.[78] Also deceptive is an itemization of the amount due that makes no sense and does not explain how the total due is computed.[79] It is deceptive to threaten that suit will 69 Traut v. Quantum Servicing Corp., 2016 WL 8844254, at *4 (D. Mass. Aug. 4, 2016) (servicer "purportedly failed to acknowledge the payments made under the forbearance agreement despite its receipt of the monies"); Gritters v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 7451682 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 31, 2014) (surplus escrow); Garcia v. Pharia, L.L.C., 2012 WL 12892731 (N.D. Tex. July 6, 2012) (failure to credit payments); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2006 WL 3498292 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 1, 2006) (duns misstated that she was two months behind).

70 See Langley v. Statebridge Co., L.L.C., 2014 WL 7336787 (D.N.J. Dec. 22, 2014).

71 See Williams v. Columbia Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1063330 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 19, 2021) (alleging that collector reported debt and sent consumer letter and documentation with contradictory information as to amount allegedly owed); Bazan v. Hammerman & Hultgren P.C., 2020 WL 5439517, at *2 (D. Ariz. Sept. 10, 2020) (least sophisticated debtor "would need to calculate the sum independently" and "would be unsure of the debt amount and might reasonably reach at least three different balance figures, two of which are inaccurate"); Hall v. Cent. Research, Inc., 2020 WL 1434456 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 24, 2020) (current balance of $26,664.17 was contradicted by the sum of the individual components of the debt, $26,577.89); Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019) (amounts demanded related to foreclosure were inconsistent with stated terms of mortgage); Leib v. Thompson, Dunlap & Heydinger, Ltd., 2019 WL 358904 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 29, 2019) (October 2016 Notice demanded payment of $962.53 and December 2016 Notice demanded payment of $782.02); Rodriguez v. Codilis & Assoc., 2018 WL 1565596 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2018); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017) (loan servicer violated § 1692e(2)(A) by sending two letters on the same date with different balances in contrast to its affidavit stating that no post-foreclosure balance was due); Dawson v. Genesis Credit Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5668073 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 27, 2017); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (representing different amount in a letter and then claiming higher amount in collection lawsuit); Thebert v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 3581322 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 18, 2017); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff P.C., 2017 WL 1230847 (D. Conn. Mar. 30, 2017) ("charge off balance" of $633.94, and a "current balance" of $565.46); Gonzales v. Stillman Law Office, 2015 WL 4903344 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 17, 2015) (different amount in the complaint, a letter, and a proposed consent order); Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2015) (creditor stated varying amounts and collector sought yet another amount); Thomas v. Loomis-Therrien, 2014 WL 5335913 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2014); Devlin v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2012 WL 4469139 (D. Mass. Sept. 25, 2012); Morgan v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 12883327 (E.D. Tenn. Oct. 31, 2012); Suquilanda v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 2011 WL 4344044 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 8, 2011). But see Kleinman v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2020 WL 705169, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 12, 2020) (finding that, given "the format of the table, the wording of the table's column headings, the express instructions in the body of the letter, and the lack of certain additional variables that could possibly confuse a reader," collection letter was not misleading even though "total due as of charge-off" was $168.39 more than current "total due").

72 Machnik v. RSI Enters., Inc., 2017 WL 4351859 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 29, 2017); Loreaux v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., 2014 WL 6685469 (D.N.J. Nov. 26, 2014) (correspondence referenced two amounts—$191.57 as the amount "due" and $130.00 as the amount "owed"—stated a plausible FDCPA claim). But cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Reg. F Official Interpretation § 34(c)(2)(ix)-2 stating that "[a] debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice complies with § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) by disclosing on the validation notice a single cumulative figure that is the sum of the current amount of all the debts.").

73 Richard v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 4349082 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 29, 2017) (mortgage servicer violated § 1692e(2)(A) with two conflicting payment dates would leave consumer not knowing which date the payment was due).

74 See Guevara v. Summit Mortg. 2018 WL 1089535 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 28, 2018) (discrepancy between figures stated by servicer and collection attorney arose because one was payoff figure and one was cure figure). Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Reg. F Official Interpretation § 34(c)(2)(viii)-4 stating that "[a] debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice complies with § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) by disclosing either a single, cumulative itemization on the validation notice or a separate itemization of each debt on a separate page or pages provided in the same communication as the validation notice.").

75 Meier v. Law Offices of Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2011 WL 2039113 (W.D. Pa. May 5, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2036693 (W.D. Pa. May 24, 2011); Sambor v. Omnia Credit Services, 183 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (D. Haw. 2002).

76 See Matray v. DBF Collection Corp., 2011 WL 2417151 (D.N.J. June 13, 2011).

77 Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2013). See also Harrison v. NBD Inc., 968 F. Supp. 837 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (confusing to include a balance due that would apply only if the consumer continued staying in school and that would be due on completion if no payments were made and was not the amount overdue at that date).

78 See Deporter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon County, 2015 WL 1932336 (D. Colo. Apr. 28, 2015); Smith v. Am. Revenue Corp., 2005 WL 1162906 (N.D. Ind. May 16, 2005) (demanding payment of lump-sum for "various accounts" was confusing where there were fourteen accounts in varying amounts). But cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Reg. F Official Interpretation § 34(c)(2)(viii)-4 stating that "[a] debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice complies with § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) by disclosing either a single, cumulative itemization on the validation notice or a separate itemization of each debt on a separate page or pages provided in the same communication as the validation notice.").

79 See Meola v. Asset Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4660373 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2018) (same dollar amount listed as the principal balance prior to interest accrual, the amount interest accrued, result not only in attorney fees and costs being added to the amount of the debt, but also the judgment amount being added to the debt, in effect doubling the debt.[80]

Initial amounts owed for health care are often adjusted as insurers or other parties pay some of the amount owed or the provider reduces the amount based on the consumer's financial situation. Thus, it is deceptive for a collector to represent that such reduction in the amount owed will not occur when the collector has no information in that regard as to the particular debt.[81]

7.2.2.5 Misrepresentations As to Interest Charges

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides detailed regulations about the amount and itemization of debts that must be provided to consumers as part of the validation information.[82] When considering a FDCPA § 1692e(2) claim based on misrepresentations as to interest charges, plaintiffs should consider whether the collector complied with these regulations in the validation notice or mirrored these required disclosures or model language[83] in other communications.

The remainder of this section discusses case law prior to Regulation F's effective date, which should be considered in light of these new regulations.

This subsection considers the misrepresentation as to interest charges generally. The next subsection considers the related issue of a collector's statement of the current balance where interest charges will continue to accrue or a statement that interest charges will accrue when they will not.[84] FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) prohibits misrepresentation of the amount of the debt, which includes misrepresentation of the amount of interest charges. Courts generally hold that FDCPA § 1692e does not require a separate itemization of interest.[85]

Where a consumer's payment is timely, it can be a FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) violation to seek interest as if the payment was not made.[86] A statement of the amount due can be deceptive where it includes only the principal due and not the interest or other charges due.[87]

FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) is also violated where a collector claims interest charges not provided for in the contract or provided for by state law.[88] Often medical debt, collections on bad checks, and certain other forms of consumer debt do not provide for contractual interest, and then the collector must justify an interest charge based on state law allowing for prejudgment interest. FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) is thus actionable where the collector misapplies the authority to compute prejudgment interest.[89] Fees and charges on insufficient funds checks are often closely regulated by state law, and a collector can only seek interest on such a debt as consistent with that law.[90] Where prejudgment interest can be awarded only by a court, it is deceptive to seek it prior to the judgment.[91] FDCPA and the total amount due); Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (same dollar amount stated for interest for each of two debts and the same dollar amount for the total interest of the two debts). See also Madorskaya v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2020 WL 423408 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 27, 2020) (letter included correct statement of consumer's balance, but also implied that interest and fees could be accruing as it listed non-zero amount of interest accrued since charge-off); Leitner v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 3489482 (E.D.N.Y. June. 26, 2020) (denying motion to dismiss where collection letter contained non-zero amount after line item for "non-interest charges and fees accrued since charge off," and failed to explain whether amount was one-time occurrence or recurring). Cf. § 9.4.7, infra (discussing Reg. F itemization requirements for validation information).

80 Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997).

81 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012) (collector based her statement on her general experience about insurance claims, had no particular information to support statement, and statement was meant to coax consumer into paying bill).

82 See § 9.4.7, infra.

83 See § 9.5.2, infra (discussing the model validation notice).

84 See § 7.2.2.6, infra.

85 Hahn v. Triumph P'ships L.L.C., 557 F.3d 755, 756–757 (7th Cir. 2009); Yavorka v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 5747832 (W.D. Pa. Sept. 25, 2020); Day v. NCB Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2018 WL 4777405 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 3, 2018); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 6557558 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 22, 2017); Humphreys v. Budget Rent-a-Car Sys. Inc., 2017 WL 6497285 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 19, 2017); Moran v. Greene & Cooper Attorneys L.L.P., 43 F. Supp. 3d 907, 914–915 (S.D. Ind. 2014) ("A debt collector need not 'itemize' the debt, so long as its statement of the total is clear and accurate"). But see Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3446886 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2017) (§ 1692e(2)(A) violation where no explanation on amount due on complicated variable rate mortgage). But cf. § 9.4.7.3, infra (discussing the Reg. F requirement that the validation information include an itemization of interest since the itemization date).

86 Eisenberg v. Shendell & Assoc., P.A., 2011 WL 1233253 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 31, 2011).

87 See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. June 5, 2000); Farmer v. Buffaloe & Assoc., P.L.C., 2012 WL 6045976 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 5, 2012) (only stated principal due and not interest or other fees); Bell v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 370 F. Supp. 2d 805 (S.D. Ind. May 6, 2005). Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Reg. F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

88 Eul v. Transworld Sys., 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017) (collected interest in excess of state law limits on private student loans); Hanson v. JQD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3404945 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2014).

89 See, e.g., Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. 2016) (Missouri statutory prejudgment interest cannot be compounded by being assessed on already accrued contractual interest); Knepp v. Huffman, 2018 WL 4680020 (N.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2018) (collection letter stating that legal interest "will accrue" but applicable state statute allowed prejudgment interest to be awarded only after judgment); Galdamez v. I.Q. Data Int'l, Inc., 170 F. Supp. 3d 890 (E.D. Va. 2016) (added unauthorized prejudgment interest to contested balance on their apartment lease without any basis in law or contract); Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014). Cf. Aker v. Americollect, Inc., 854 F.3d 397 (7th Cir. 2017) (no violation where seeking prejudgment interest was found lawful).

90 Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007).

91 Fulk v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 55 F. Supp. 3d 967 (E.D. Ky. 2014) (debt buyer reported a balance including statutory prejudgment interest prior to a prerequisite judgment); Adams v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (prejudgment interest in excess of legal rate).

§ 1692e(2)(A) may also be violated if undifferentiated prejudgment interest is included in the lump sum demanded in a small claims complaint.[92]

Where a collector relies on contractual authority to charge interest, it can be a FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) violation to seek a greater amount than allowed by the contract.[93] To justify charging interest at a contract rate, the collector must produce evidence of the contract and the contract rate, something debt buyers often cannot produce.[94] Failure to do so will result in the finding of a violation.[95]

It can also be a violation to seek contractual interest greater than allowed by state law. See NCLC's Consumer Credit Regulation (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, to ascertain whether contractual interest is allowed by state law and whether federal law preempts the application of that state law.

One issue that has been raised in a number of FDCPA cases is whether a debt buyer can seek new interest charges after the originating creditor charged off the debt and stopped seeking new interest charges before selling the debt to the debt buyer. Refer to other NCLC treatises as to the current law on whether the creditor has waived interest charges, the effect of this on a debt buyer's ability to assess new interest charges, whether a debt buyer can assess charges in excess of the state usury limit based on the originating bank's ability to do so, and whether the debt buyer can do so at either the contract rate or the rate specified by state law for prejudgment interest.[96]

If interest charges assessed by the debt buyer are unauthorized, then there should be a FDCPA § 1692e(2)(a) violation.[97] The same is the case where a collector seeks to collect interest charges that were waived by the originating creditor.[98]

Sometimes debt buyers disclose the amount due by separately stating the balance when the debt buyer purchased the debt and "interest" that represents only the debt buyer's new interest charges. The Seventh Circuit has found that this is not deceptive even when the balance includes but does not mention interest assessed by the originating creditor.[99] But it is deceptive to seek to avoid usury limits by labeling interest charges as service fees.[100]

7.2.2.6 Misrepresentations As to Accruing Interest and Fees

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides detailed regulations about the amount and itemization of debts that must be provided to consumers as part of the validation information.[101] When considering a FDCPA § 1692e(2) claim based on misrepresentations as to accruing interest and fees, plaintiffs should consider whether the collector complied with these regulations in the validation notice or mirrored these required disclosures or model language[102] in other communications. Note in particular § 9.4.7.4, infra, which discusses the required disclosure of the current amount due in the validation information, the lack of a dynamic balance disclosure, and when it is permissible to include optional disclosures in validation notices.

The remainder of this section discusses case law prior to Regulation F's effective date, which should be considered in light of these new regulations.

Prior to Regulation F, some courts found that communicating a debt's current balance could be misleading if the consumer did not understand that the balance would continue to increase over time as interest or other charges continue to accrue.[103]

92 Lannan v. Levy & White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77, 92 (D. Mass. 2016).

93 See Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3446886 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2017); Munoz v. Pipestone Fin., L.L.C., 2006 WL 2786911 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2006) (contract did not permit adding unaccrued interest or future attorney fees).

94 See § 1.4.7.3, supra (discussing account information available to debt buyers).

95 Reed v. EOS CCA, 2016 WL 1639121 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016) (cell phone contract); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002).

96 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 5.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation §§ 7.5.4, 7.7, 7.8.2.2 (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

97 Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014).

98 Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019). See also Tabiti v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1382235, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2019) (plain language of purchase agreement did not transfer to debt buyer the right to collect post-charge-off interest, and even if it did, creditor waived the right to collect post-charge-off interest and debt buyer was bound by that waiver).

99 Wahl v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc.,556 F.3d 643 (7th Cir. 2009); Hahn v. Triumph P'ships L.L.C., 557 F.3d 755 (7th Cir. 2009). Cf. § 9.4.7.3, infra (discussing the requirement in Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) that the validation information include an itemization of interest since the itemization date).

100 Grace v. LVNV Funding, Inc., 2014 WL 2167487 (W.D. Ky. May 23, 2014) (8% medical "service charge" was disguised interest and exceeded state's statutory rate).

101 See § 9.4.7, infra.

102 See § 9.5.2, infra (discussing the model validation notice).

103 Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72 (2d Cir. 2016); Spuhler v. State Collection Services, Inc., 2018 WL 3651356 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 1, 2018); Roth v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 2018 WL 718402 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 5, 2018); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 6557558 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 22, 2017); Thomas v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 5714722 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 27, 2017); Pimentel v. Nationwide Credit Inc., 2017 WL 5633310 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 13, 2017); Gill v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2015 WL 2128465 (D. Colo. May 5, 2015) (communication specified "total due" instead of current balance and did not specify the due date); Murr v. Tarpon Fin. Corp., 2014 WL 546690 (E.D. Tenn. 2014) (§ 1692g(a)(1) violation); Marucci v. Cawley & Bergmann, L.L.P., 66 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2014); Michalek v. ARS Nat'l Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 6180498 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 13, 2011). Cf. Newman v. Ormond, 396 Fed. Appx. 636 (11th Cir. 2010) (no violation where expressly stated that amount of debt might vary daily based on additional interest, late charges, and collection costs); Taylor v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004) (no violation where indicated balance might increase). But see Bazile v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 2019 WL 652421, at *5 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 15, 2019) ("the FDCPA does not require that the debt collector tell the debtor whether the balance is or is not accruing interest or late fees"), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 983 F.3d 274 (7th Cir. 2020); Schaefer v. ARM Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 2847768 (D. Mass. July 19, 2011).

FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1) requires that the collector, in its initial communication or within five days, disclose the amount of the debt.[104] FDCPA §§ 1692e(2)(a) and 1692g(a)(1) are distinct requirements.[105] Section 1692g(a)(1) requires disclosure of the "amount of the debt," while section 1692e(2)(a) prohibits the collector from misleading the consumer as to the amount of the debt.

The Seventh Circuit, in Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., found a FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1) violation in a somewhat different situation, where the collector disclosed only the unpaid principal and did not disclose the unpaid interest or fees, and so did not disclose the total amount due.[106] Cognizant of the problem of a balance that will continue to grow, the Miller court offered a safe harbor that required the total amount due (including unpaid interest and fees as of that date) and additional language as to future assessment of fees and interest:

> As of the date of this letter, you owe $___ [the exact amount due]. Because of interest, late charges, and other charges that may vary from day to day, the amount due on the day you pay may be greater. Hence, if you pay the amount shown above, an adjustment may be necessary after we receive your check, in which event we will inform you before depositing the check for collection. For further information, write the undersigned or call 1-800-[phone number].[107]

The Seventh Circuit found that this language also may be sufficient to comply with FDCPA § 1692e if the facts as to the debt are consistent with that safe harbor language.[108]

The Second Circuit suggests there will not be a FDCPA § 1692e violation if, consistent with the nature of the debt, a communication "either accurately informs the consumer that the amount of the debt stated in the letter will increase over time, or clearly states that the holder of the debt will accept payment of the amount set forth in full satisfaction of the debt if payment is made by a specified date."[109] While not requiring any specific language,[110] the Second Circuit indicates the Miller safe harbor language may be sufficient.[111]

The Second Circuit also suggests as an example of safe harbor language it finds preferable to the Miller language: "As of today, [date], you owe $——. This amount consists of a principal of $——, accrued interest of $——, and fees of $——. This balance will continue to accrue interest after [date] at a rate of $—— per [day/week/month/year]."[112] Despite the Second Circuit preferring the more detailed breakdown in the latter language, a later Second Circuit decision finds the Miller safe harbor language sufficient and that the collector need not also provide a breakdown of current principal, interest, and fees or explain how the future interest and other charges will be computed.[113]

But cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing the fact that, under Regulation F, the validation information does not require any kind of dynamic balance disclosure).

104 See also § 9.4.7, infra (discussing required validation information under Regulation F related to the amount and itemization of debts).

105 Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72 (2d Cir. 2016).

106 Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. June 5, 2000). See also § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

107 Id. at 876.

108 Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 880 F.3d 362, 367 at 368 (7th Cir. 2018). Cf. Hoffman v. Keith D. Weiner & Assoc. Co., L.P.A., 2019 WL 1746353 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 18, 2019) (use of safe harbor language did not immunize collector from liability; speculative possibility that collector could eventually be entitled to collect postjudgment interest did not render statement accurate and not misleading). Cf. § 9.6.2, infra (discussing the use of safe harbors as optional validation information in accordance with Regulation F, including a discussion of when such disclosures are permissible).

109 Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72 (2d Cir. 2016). See also Cortez v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 999 F.3d 151, 155 (2d Cir. 2021) (collection letter extending offer to settle debt in full did not also have to advise consumer that debt was still accruing interest and fees; where Avila held only that debt collector must "either" disclose that interest and fees continue to accrue "or" offer to extinguish debt in exchange for specified payment, "either disclosure option alone dispels the risk of a collection notice misleading a debtor about the effect paying the specified amount would have on the outstanding debt"); Seeger v. Ross & Assoc., 2019 WL 5695944 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 6, 2019) (letter failed to include any safe harbor language at all); Kraus v. Prof'l Bur. of Collections, Inc., 817 F.3d 72, 77 (E.D.N.Y. 2017) (applying Avila safe harbor because the letter clearly stated that the holder of the debt would accept payment of the amount set forth in full satisfaction of the debt if payment was made by a specific date). But cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided, the lack of a required dynamic balance disclosure, and when such optional disclosures are permissible in the validation information).

110 See, e.g., Heffington v. Gordon, Aylworth & Tami, P.C., 2018 WL 3763799, at *4 (D. Or. Aug. 8, 2018) ("interest may continue to accrue" may not have been the most informative or conclusive, but it would not mislead or deceive even the least sophisticated consumer).

111 Kolbasyuk v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 918 F.3d 236 (2d Cir. 2019); Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72 (2d Cir. 2016). See also Timoshenko v. Mullooly, Jeffrey, Rooney & Flynn, L.L.P., 2018 WL 1582220 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2018) (use of Miller safe harbor language sufficient). Cf. § 9.6.2, infra (discussing the use of safe harbors as optional validation information in accordance with Regulation F, including a discussion of when such disclosures are permissible).

112 Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72 (2d Cir. 2016) (suggesting language found in Jones Midland Funding, L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 393, 397 n.7 (D. Conn. 2010)). Cf. § 9.4.7, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirements for itemization of the debt); § 9.6.2, infra (discussing the use of safe harbors as optional validation information in accordance with Regulation F, including a discussion of when such disclosures are permissible).

113 Kolbasyuk v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 918 F.3d 236 (2d Cir. 2019); Taubenfliegel v. EGS Fin. Care, Inc., 764 Fed. Appx. 76 (2d Cir. 2019) (rejecting § 1692g(a)(1) claim). See also Heffington v. Gordon, Aylworth & Tami, P.C., 2018 WL 3763799 (D. Or. Aug. 8, 2018). Cf. § 9.6.2, infra (discussing the use of safe harbors as optional validation information in accordance with Regulation F, including a discussion of when such disclosures are permissible). But cf. § 9.4.7, infra (discussing required validation information under Regulation F related to the amount and itemization of debts).

On the other hand, the Second Circuit has also ruled that a statement that the total amount due may include estimated fees and costs is inadequate. "There is no clarity as to whether new fees and costs are accruing or as to the basis for those fees and costs."[114] Another court also found not sufficient "Your account balance may be periodically increased due to the addition of accrued interest or other changes if so provided in your agreement with your original creditor." This does not tell the consumer whether it will, in fact, increase.[115]

It may be sufficient to disclose that payment of a fixed amount by a certain date will discharge the debt.[116] But it can be a violation to state only that payment of a fixed amount by a certain date will bring one's account current and stop collections since this could be interpreted as only stopping collections and not fully discharging the debt if additional charges accrue.[117]

No special language is required where the debt balance does not continue to change as of the date of the collector's communication.[118] Just disclosure of the amount due is sufficient. On the other hand, it can be deceptive for a collector to imply that the debt will increase over time if that is not the case.[119] Not only does use of the safe harbor language in this situation not protect the collector,[120] but its use can be deceptive.[121] The Seventh Circuit found it was a misrepresentation to tell the consumer to call to obtain the most current balance where the balance would not change.[122] A debt collector deviates from safe harbor language by adding "confusing other information."[123]

Similarly, the Seventh Circuit found deceptive use of its own Miller safe harbor language, "Because of interest, late charges, and other charges that may vary from day to day, the amount due on the day you pay may be greater," where further late charges were prohibited by Wisconsin law.[124] This was the case even though interest charges could continue to accrue.

But where the contract permitted it, the Seventh Circuit found no deception in the statement "if applicable, your account may have or will accrue interest at a rate specified in your contractual agreement with the original creditor," even where the creditor voluntarily did not assess such interest.[125] Similarly, the Fifth Circuit found no violation in a collection letter stating "in the event there is interest or other charges accruing on your account, the amount due may be greater than the amount shown" because such conditional language merely "expresses a common-sense truism about borrowing and lending, and does not imply that interest or other charges may actually accrue on the debtor's account."[126]

Referencing the amount of the debt as the "Balance Due" and itemization of that balance without explicitly indicating whether interest or other charges could accrue does not necessarily violate FDCPA § 1692e, as the term "Balance Due" does not falsely imply that the debt is, or could be, increasing.[127]

---

114 Carlin v. Davidson Fink L.L.P., 852 F.3d 207, 217 (2d Cir. 2017) (finding violation of § 1692g(a)(1)). Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

115 Balke v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 2634653 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2017). But cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided, the lack of a required dynamic balance disclosure, and when such optional disclosures are permissible in the validation information).

116 Cf. § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

117 Balke v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 2634653 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2017).

118 Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 886 F.3d 212 (2d Cir. 2018); Derosa v. CAC Fin. Corp., 740 Fed. Appx. 742 (2d Cir. 2018). See also Hopkins v. Collecto, Inc., 994 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 2021) (letter itemizing $0.00 in interest and fees on consumer's static debt did not violate § 1692e); Solares v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2019 WL 7405495, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 3, 2019), adopted, 2020 WL 32463 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 2, 2020); Gissendaner v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2018 WL 6418184 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 6, 2018); Johnson v. Alltran Educ., L.P., 2018 WL 2096374 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2018); Spurlock v. Receivables Mgmt. Partners, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1992580 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 27, 2018) (no obligation for collector to inform consumer that if it were to file a lawsuit against her, it would seek prejudgment interest, court costs and/or other statutory penalties); Holly v. Cooling & Winter, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186734 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 18, 2017) (no requirement to inform consumer that postjudgment interest was waived).

119 See, e.g., Smith v. Johnson Mark L.L.C., 2021 WL 66297 (D. Utah. Jan. 7, 2021) (implication that charges will accrue when they will not); Thomas v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 5714722 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 27, 2017) ("current balance" suggested accruing charges); Bledsoe v. Prof'l Fin. Co., 2016 WL 1267811 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 30, 2016); Safdieh v. P & B Capital Group, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2226203 (D.N.J. May 12, 2015); Reeseg v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2015 WL 4525869 (D.N.J. July 27, 2015). See also Hassine v. Simon's Agency, Inc., 2020 WL 3481815, at *3 (D.N.J. June. 26, 2020) (collection letter falsely stated that interest and other fees may accrue); Beauchamp v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2011 WL 891320 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 14, 2011) (because collector provided that outstanding balance might increase, least sophisticated consumer could reasonably conclude that she must pay balance stated in letter immediately or possibly owe larger amount).

120 See, e.g., Bledsoe v. Prof'l Fin. Co., 2016 WL 1267811 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 30, 2016); Reeseg v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2015 WL 4525869 (D.N.J. July 27, 2015); Safdieh v. P & B Capital Group, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2226203 (D.N.J. May 12, 2015).

121 Medzhidzade v. Kirschenbaum & Phillips, P.C., 2018 WL 2093116 (E.D.N.Y. May 3, 2018) (Miller safe harbor language deceptive where collector did not establish right to charge future interest); Hovermale v. Immediate Credit Recovery Inc., 2016 WL 4157160 (D.N.J. Aug. 4, 2016) (could not lawfully assess late charges). See also Nolan v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 2018 WL 1903147 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 23, 2018); Polak v. Kirschenbaum & Phillips, P.C., 2018 WL 1189337 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 1187400 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2018); DeFrancesco v. Veripro Solutions Inc., 2015 WL 179376 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 14, 2015).

122 Chuway v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 362 F.3d 944 (7th Cir. 2004).

123 Id. See also Lopez-Gordillo v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2019 WL 527627 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2019).

124 Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 880 F.3d 362, 367 at 368 (7th Cir. 2018).

125 Taylor v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 365 F.3d 572, 574 (7th Cir. 2004).

126 Salinas v. R.A. Rogers, Inc., 952 F.3d 680 (5th Cir. 2020).

127 Nagan v. Optio Solutions, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5061838, at *4–5 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 27, 2020) ("The itemization of the debt contained in the letter was articulated in the same way it was received from the creditor. The letter is not false, deceptive, or misleading, as the only

7.2.2.7 Misrepresentation of Collection Costs, Other Compensation, and Fees

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides detailed regulations about the amount and itemization of debts that must be provided to consumers as part of the validation information.[128] When considering a FDCPA § 1692e(2) claim based on misrepresentations of fees, plaintiffs should consider whether the collector complied with these regulations in the validation notice or mirrored these required disclosures or model language[129] in other communications.

The remainder of this section discusses case law prior to Regulation F's effective date, which should be considered in light of these new regulations.

A false representation of the debt amount, prohibited by FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A), can apply where the amount sought involves collection costs or other fees. In addition, FDCPA § 1692e(2)(B) prohibits false representations concerning "compensation which may be lawfully received by any debt collector for the collection of a debt," so that provision also applies to collection costs and certain related fees. Misrepresentation of collection costs, of course, also can violate FDCPA §§ 1692e and 1692e(10).

In addition, the same practice can violate FDCPA § 1692f(1) that prohibits "[t]he collection of any amount (including any interest, fee, charge, or expense incidental to the principal obligation) unless such amount is expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt or permitted by law." The FDCPA § 1692f(1) provision is examined at § 8.3, infra. This subsection considers any misrepresentation of collector compensation that is found to be deceptive under FDCPA §§ 1692e, 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(2)(B), or 1692e(10).

This section, though, is not a comprehensive discussion of when, under state law and a consumer's contract, collection costs and other related fees are allowed. For such a discussion, see NCLC's Collection Actions § 6.6 (5th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

A closely related issue is whether it is deceptive for a collection attorney to seek attorney fees prior to filing a collection lawsuit. This issue is examined in the next subsection.[130]

There is no FDCPA § 1692e violation when a collector seeks collection costs that are reasonable and authorized by contract[131] or by state law,[132] but otherwise seeking such costs is deceptive.[133] Even where collection costs are authorized by contract, there can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation where the costs are excessive[134] or not as provided for under the contract.[135]

Where a contract provides for the actual costs of collection, it can be deceptive to seek a flat percentage fee.[136] Even where authorized and reasonable, it can be deceptive to misrepresent the collection cost as being for another purpose[137] or where the amount demanded was based on a percentage of the total debt, so that the itemized collection costs were not accurate as the full amount had not been collected as of that date.[138]

Courts have ruled that it is deceptive to seek collection costs or other obscure charges not separately itemized.[139] The Seventh Circuit has found this to be the case for attorney reasonable interpretation of the letter is that it states the itemized amount of the debt that was owed."). Cf. Degroot v. Client Services, Inc., 977 F.3d 656 (7th Cir. 2020) (no § 1692e violation where collection letter stated "Please note that no interest will be added to your account balance through the course of Client Services, Inc. collection efforts concerning your account."); § 9.4.7.4, infra (discussing Regulation F validation information requirement to disclose the current amount of the debt as of the date when the validation information is provided).

128 See § 9.4.7, infra.

129 See § 9.5.2, infra (discussing the model validation notice).

130 § 7.2.2.8, infra.

131 Shapiro v. Riddle & Assoc., 351 F.3d 63 (2d Cir. 2003); Zelner v. ATG Credit, L.L.C., 2019 WL 556737, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 12, 2019) (medical patient agreement may have authorized collection fee). See also Bjornsdotter v. Suttell & Hammer, P.S., 2020 WL 1049906, at *3 (D. Or. Mar. 4, 2020) (where contract authorized $65 process service fee, but court awarded $45, there was no FDCPA violation, as collector "had a good-faith basis for seeking $65").

132 Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2009 WL 3416114 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2009) (California homeowner association statute allows for collection costs). Cf. Van Hoven v. Buckles & Buckles, P.L.C., 947 F.3d 889 (6th Cir. 2020) (seeking "current" garnishment costs did not violate § 1692e because debt collector made reasonable interpretation at time of what was permissible under Michigan rules).

133 See Breckenridge v. Vargo, 225 F. Supp. 3d 1216 (D. Colo. 2016) (collection fee inconsistent with federal student loan regulations); Hanson v. JQD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3404945 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2014); Agostino v. Quest Diagnostics, Inc., 2011 WL 5410667 (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2011); Seeger v. AFNI, Inc., 2007 WL 1598618 (E.D. Wis. June 1, 2007); Adams v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (collection fees in violation of Connecticut law); Teemogonwuno v. Todd, Bremer & Larsen, Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21720 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 1991) (non-legal expenses are not recoverable as collection costs under Georgia law).

134 See Fonseca v. Focus Fin. Services, 2016 WL 4146663, at *7 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 1, 2016) ("it would be unreasonable for a patient to expect that a late charge of 10% and a collection fee of 35% would be added to one overdue balance" where hospital registration form generally authorized payment of collection fees).

135 See Means v. Intelligent Bus. Solutions, Ltd., 2016 WL 1030072 (D. Nev. Mar. 10, 2016) (collection costs sought do not appear to equal the 30% stated in the contract).

136 Bradley v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 739 F.3d 606 (11th Cir. 2014) (collection cost that is a flat one-third of debt is not consistent with contract that provides for payment of actual collection costs); Kojetin v. CU Recovery, Inc., 212 F.3d 1318 (8th Cir. 2000) (flat percentage not actual costs).

137 See Tesora v. Lyons, Doughty, Veldhuis, P.C., 2017 WL 3207060 (D.N.J. July 28, 2017) ($35 collection fee was misrepresented as part of the amount to satisfy the judgment).

138 Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 207 F. Supp. 3d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2016); Hernandez v. Miracle Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 6328216 (D.N.J. Dec. 13, 2011). See also Gathuru v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 623 F. Supp. 2d 113 (D. Mass. 2009) (including collector's contingency fee in amount due was misrepresentation because fee was not yet due).

139 Cf. § 9.4.7.3, infra (discussing Regulation F itemization requirements for the validation information, including itemization of "fees").

fees,[140] and other courts apply this principle to collection costs.[141]

Unless the costs or fees at issue are authorized by contract or state law, it is deceptive to seek not just collection costs, but service fees, late fees, or any other fees.[142] This includes payment processing fees claimed to process for the consumer's credit card or other payment on the debt, where such a fee is not authorized by the contract or by law.[143] It is deceptive to seek fees for services that were never performed, such as fees for title searches or service of process.[144] It is also deceptive to hide questionable fees under vague terminology.[145]

7.2.2.8 Attorney Fees and Court Costs

False representations related to attorney fees are actionable not only under FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) concerning the debt amount, but also under FDCPA § 1692e(2)(B) concerning "compensation which may be lawfully received by any debt collector for the collection of a debt."[146] Misrepresentation as to attorney fees can also violate FDCPA §§ 1692e and 1692e(10).

Whether and when a collector can recover attorney fees after prevailing in a collection lawsuit is examined at NCLC's Collection Actions §§ 6.2 through 6.5.[147] This subsection considers whether it is a FDCPA §§ 1692e, 1692e(2), or 1692e(10) violation to seek attorney fees not yet awarded, not yet incurred, or not available under the contract or state law.

Where state law is not clear as to whether the collector's attorney fee representation is correct, a prudent approach is to first obtain a state court ruling on the matter, rather than asking a federal court to do so as a matter of first impression. A federal court may be reluctant to do so.[148]

---

140 Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 565 (7th Cir. 2004).

141 See Vogel v. McCarthy, Burgess, & Wolff, Inc., 2018 WL 3729329 at 3 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 2018); Patel v. Seterus, Inc., 2015 WL 13547010 (M.D. Fla. June 19, 2015); Richard v. Oak Tree Grp., Inc., 614 F. Supp. 2d 814, 821–822 (W.D. Mich. 2008) (applying Fields to collection fees not separately itemized); Dowdy v. Solutia Healthcare TAS, Inc., 2006 WL 3545047, at *8–9 (M.D. Tenn. Dec. 8, 2006) (same). See also Hackler v. Tolteca Enters., Inc., 2019 WL 6727874 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 11, 2019).

142 See Reichenbach v. Hayes, Johnson & Conley, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4511698 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2019) (late fees not authorized by law or homeowner association declaration); Dawson v. Genesis Credit Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5668073 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 27, 2017) (fees, such as for painting the rental apartment and not returning a parking permit, not authorized under the lease); Jackson v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4347382 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 29, 2017) (issue whether mortgage allowed the servicer to charge late fees after acceleration of the debt); Doskocz v. Ass'n Lien Services, 2016 WL 7425922 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2016) (homeowner association fees and costs that state law prohibited); Hanson v. JQD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3404945 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2014) (homeowner association fees); Grady v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 929928 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 2012) (unauthorized fees); Eisenberg v. Shendell & Assoc., P.A., 2011 WL 1233253 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 31, 2011) (seeks $125 late fee where governing statute limited the late fee to $6.25); Russo v. Puckett & Redford, P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 3837529 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 17, 2009) (service-fee for unregistered process server); Piscatelli v. Universal Adjustment Services, Inc., Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) ¶ 96,337 (D. Conn. 1985) (added 25% collection fee where state statute limited fees to 15%). See also Muhammad v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1259353 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss where court could not make a determination as to whether plaintiff still had a right to reinstate after the alleged acceleration at the time she received the letters and whether defendant was contractually authorized to collect the late fees in question); Diaz v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 2018 WL 4681013 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2018) (not clear from language in mortgage whether late charges could be imposed on loan that had been accelerated).

143 McLain v. Head Mercantile Co., 2017 WL 3710073 (M.D. La. Aug. 28, 2017) ($2 convenience fee for phone payments was not authorized by contract or law); Thomas v. Youderian, 232 F. Supp. 3d 656 (D.N.J. 2017) (fee not authorized by contract or state law); Fuentes v. AR Res., Inc., 2017 WL 1197814 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2017) (misrepresented that the $5 payment processing fee was permissible); Simmet v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2016 WL 11002359 (C.D. Cal. July 7, 2016) ($4 surcharge for online payment was violation where not authorized by contract or state law); Wittman v. CBI, Inc., 2016 WL 3093427 (D. Mont. June 1, 2016) (2.5% transaction fee for use of debit or credit card in payment of the debt); Liable v. Rockport Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 4771664 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 12, 2015) (factual issue remained whether agency received compensation from fee); Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 1543215 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015) (collection agency's charge of $5 processing fee for credit card payment not authorized by contract or law); Quinteros v. MBI Assoc., Inc. 999 F. Supp. 2d 434 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) ($5 processing fee for any payments made via credit card contravening a state prohibition); Longo v. Law Offices of Gerald E. Moore & Assoc., 2005 WL 8153247 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 2005), rev'd. on other grounds, 2008 WL 4425444, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2008) (fee was not authorized by contract or law). But see Lee v. Main Accounts, Inc., 1997 WL 618803 (6th Cir. Oct. 6, 1997) (statement that payment by credit card required 5% additional charge not deceptive, as fee was pass-through charge by payment service); Sanders v. LoanCare L.L.C., 2019 WL 441964 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2019) (convenience fee for credit card payment allowed where it was clear to consumer that he could avoid fee by not paying by credit card); Weast v. Rockport Fin., L.L.C., 115 F. Supp. 3d 1018 (E.D. Mo. July 17, 2015) (same); Shami v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., 914 F. Supp. 2d 353, 357 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (fee for making online payment was paid directly to payment processor).

144 See Hedayati v. Perry Law Firm, APLC, 2018 WL 3155186 (C.D. Cal. May 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 3129803 (C.D. Cal. June 25, 2018) (collector assessed $75 fee for title search that was not done); Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7243100 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 15, 2016) (service of process that never occurred).

145 Cortellessa v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept 1, 2016) (corporate advance not sufficient to describe various add-on fees); Manrique v. Wells Fargo Bank, 116 F. Supp. 3d 1320 (S.D. Fla. 2015) (labeling 22 unnecessary property inspection fees as "MISC THIRD PARTY RECOVERABLE"); Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 640 F Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (failing to disclose what "additional client charges" of $78.50 included). Cf. Leitner v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 3489482, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. June 26, 2020) (itemization showed "mysterious term" of "non-interest charges and fees").

146 See Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (§ 1692e(2)(B) claim where nonlawyer filed eviction complaint seeking attorney fees where state law prohibits such fees to nonlawyers); Brooks v. Auto Sales & Services Inc., 2001 WL 686950 (S.D. Ind. June 15, 2001) (§ 1692e(2)(B) claim that attorney fees must be reasonable under state law); Strange v. Wexler, 796 F. Supp. 1117 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (§ 1692e(2)(B) claim).

147 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

148 See Montclair v. L.O.I., Inc., 2007 WL 2493091 (9th Cir. Sept. 4, 2007); Robey v. Shapiro, Marianos & Cejda, L.L.C., 434 F.3d 1208 (10th Cir. 2006) (attorney fee was authorized by state law); Olvera v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 431 F.3d 285 (7th Cir. 2005) (debt buyer did not charge interest exceeding state limitations); Bird v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2013 WL 2316601 (E.D.N.Y. May 28, 2013) (prejudgment interest that

Where a collector seeks attorney fees, there may be a FDCPA § 1692e violation when there are no grounds to seek those fees under the contract or pursuant to state law.[149] The same is the case where state law restricts the ability to recover attorney fees[150] or the collector does not comply with state requirements to recover fees.[151] Where state law allows a collector prevailing under certain causes of action to recover fees, but not under other causes of action, it is deceptive to sue under a cause of action allowing for fees when that cause of action is inapplicable to the case.[152]

Where fees are allowed for a collector only after prevailing in a collection action, it may be deceptive to claim attorney fees are owed before the collector obtains a judgment.[153] That the attorney fee amount sought is based on the contingency recovery agreement between the collection attorney and creditor has no bearing on the amount the consumer must pay as reasonable fees.[154] And if attorney fees can be charged the consumer even prior to a court award, it can be deceptive to include in the dollar balance an amount for attorney fees without separately itemizing those fees.[155]

In addition, a debt collector seeking attorney fees pursuant to a contract must be able to produce that contract[156] and the consumer must be a party to that contract.[157] The contract must provide for attorney fees for the attorney work actually performed. Where the contract calls for attorney fees when a vehicle is repossessed, this may not authorize fees in a later deficiency action.[158] Where the contract provides for recovery of the actual cost of the attorney's time, it can be deceptive to instead seek recovery based on a percentage of the debt.[159] It can be deceptive to seek attorney fees preemptively where the contract provides that such fees can be charged only as a loan "matures" and is placed with an attorney for collection.[160] It can also be a FDCPA § 1692e(2) violation to seek unreason-could not have been included prior to suit); Munoz v. Pipestone Fin., L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 2d 1076 (D. Minn. 2007); Harper v. Collection Bur., Inc., 2007 WL 4287293 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 4, 2007) (state court suit did not amount to self-adjudication of attorney fees that could be sought); Winn v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 974099 (D. Ariz. Mar. 30, 2007) (request for $2486.42 attorney fees not deceptive; credit card agreement authorized reasonable attorney fees). See also Kasalo v. Monco Law Offices, S.C., 2009 WL 4639720 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 7, 2009) (internet gambling debt was not void under state law).

149 Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012); Gionis v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 405 F. Supp. 2d 856 (S.D. Ohio 2005) (attorney fees not permitted by Ohio law), aff'd, 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007); Reichert v. Nat'l Credit Sys., 2005 WL 5549677 (D. Ariz. Mar. 31, 2005).

150 Salvati v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 575 Fed. Appx. 49 (3d Cir. 2014); Maronyan v. Fin. Credit Network Inc., 2017 WL 57835 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2017) (seeking attorney fees greater than state statutory maximum); Moxley v. Pfundstein, 2012 WL 4848973 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 11, 2012) (collection suit requested attorney fee award when state law prohibited it); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (Ohio prohibits attorney fees in collection of consumer debt).

151 See Eger v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2015 WL 3915776 (D. Minn. June 25, 2015) (added to judgment amount payments attorney made to garnishees to process garnishments without following state procedures allowing for such fee recovery as part of the judgment).

152 See Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 612251, at *10 (D. Neb. Feb. 2, 2016) ("Misrepresenting the nature of a debtor's debts as debts for materials or services rendered in state collection suits, rather than actions on accounts, in order to deceive state courts and debtors and collect impermissible attorney fees and prejudgment interest is a violation of the FDCPA.").

153 McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 893 F.3d 680, 684 (9th Cir. 2018) (seeking as part of writ of garnishment); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015) (did not state amount for fees was estimate); McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014); Veach v. Sheeks, 316 F.3d 690 (7th Cir. 2003); Banks v. Kottemann Law Firm, 2021 WL 1200090, at *16 (M.D. La. Mar. 30, 2021) (where letter sought to collect amount that "will be owed" rather than amount that may be owed after judicial proceedings, it was "reasonable to conclude that such a mischaracterization created a false sense of urgency"); Reichenbach v. Hayes, Johnson & Conley, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4511698 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2019) (defendants requested payment for unincurred attorney fees); Jackson v. Sagal, 370 F. Supp. 3d 592 (D. Md. 2019) (collector violated FDCPA where it maintained that it incurs a $50 minimum fee "at the time the case is assigned"); VonGermeten v. Planet Home Lending, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1298564 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 21, 2019) (alleging that defendant violated FDCPA by including attorney fees in mortgage statements that were not authorized by mortgage agreement); Park v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3912356 (D.S.C. Aug. 14, 2018) (summary judgment to homeowners where collector prematurely sought attorney fees; recovery of fees only permitted if collector prevails or there is a judgment on its claims); Aubrey v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3912353 (D.S.C. Aug. 14, 2018); Carney v. Russel P. Goldman, P.C., 2018 WL 2441766 (D.N.J. May 30, 2018); Durham v. Makower, Abbate & Assoc., 2016 WL 7116596 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 7, 2016) (future costs for attorney fees that they did not yet owe); Sunga v. Broome, 2010 WL 3198925 (E.D. Va. Aug. 12, 2010); Pettway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005); Reichert v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2005 WL 5549677 (D. Ariz. Mar. 31, 2005) (adding attorney fees to account before suit when contract provided for fees to "prevailing party"); Tyrell v. Robert Kaye & Assoc., 2004 WL 7346589 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 10, 2004); Blum v. Fisher & Fisher, 961 F. Supp. 1218 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (questions of fact remained where collection attorney's letter that stated consumer owed attorney fees when none would be due unless foreclosure judgment was obtained). See also Stanley v. Stupar, Schuster & Cooper, 136 F. Supp. 2d 957 (E.D. Wis. 2001). Compare Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 565 (7th Cir. 2004) (no deception to seek fees if authorized for work before file suit); Allison v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3826674 (D.S.C. Aug. 10, 2018), order clarified on reconsideration, 2018 WL 5122207 (D.S.C. Oct. 22, 2018) (adding attorney fees to amount sought not premature just because client had not yet paid attorney for the fees incurred, as long as the work had been incurred); Whaley v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2003 WL 22232911 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003) (collection-attorney fees in Illinois not limited to after a court action).

154 Carney v. Russel P. Goldman, P.C., 2018 WL 2441766 (D.N.J. May 30, 2018); Munoz v. Pipestone Fin., L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 2d 1076 (D. Minn. 2007).

155 Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 565 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Richard v. Oak Tree Grp., Inc., 614 F. Supp. 2d 814, 821–822 (W.D. Mich. 2008) (applying Fields to collection fees not separately itemized); Dowdy v. Solutia Healthcare TAS, Inc., 2006 WL 3545047, at *8–9 (M.D. Tenn. Dec. 8, 2006) (same).

156 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

157 Erickson v. Johnson, 2006 WL 453201 (D. Minn. Feb. 22, 2006) (credit card agreement's attorney fee clause inapplicable to nonparty).

158 Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004).

159 See Kojetin v. CU Recovery, Inc., 212 F.3d 1318 (8th Cir. 2000).

160 See Walker v. Hill, 2021 WL 1062238, at *15 (E.D. Va. Mar. 19, 2021).

able attorney fees.[161] Seeking an amount before the attorney work is complete can produce an unreasonable amount.[162] The amount sought can be unreasonable where it is more than the collection attorneys billed their client.[163]

It can be deceptive to obscure the fact that attorney fees are being sought by labeling them as something else.[164] Also actionable is threatening the consumer with "a fortune in legal fees" where state law limited them to $300.[165] Where a collection attorney can recover from the consumer fees for post-judgment work, it can still be a FDCPA § 1692e(2) violation to represent that those fees are part of the judgment debt—they are a separate obligation not yet reduced to a judgment.[166] It is also deceptive to lump in with a particular amount due attorney fees owed over a different matter.[167]

Demands for court costs follow similar rules as for attorney fees. A collector should not demand court costs not authorized by law or the contract[168] or that are not otherwise owed.[169] It can be deceptive to demand court costs in a dollar amount before the court has awarded them[170] or before required state procedures have been met to seek those costs.[171]

7.2.2.9 Penalties and Charges for Dishonored Checks

In consumer transactions, the dollar amount of an insufficient funds check is likely to be small, making it impractical to expend significant resources collecting such bad check amounts. In response, collectors may threaten penalties under state bad check laws in the hope that such threats in a letter will result in payment. Collectors may also attempt to increase their recoveries by seeking to collect additional amounts that may or may not be allowed under state law and the contract. Another NCLC treatise considers consumer and collector rights concerning collections of insufficient funds checks.[172] This section considers when such collection efforts run afoul of FDCPA § 1692e.

While many states have bad check statutes providing special penalties (e.g., treble damages, costs, attorney fees, other charges) where a consumer writes an insufficient funds check under certain circumstances, those penalties must be awarded by a court. It is deceptive to represent that the consumer owes those amounts before a court so rules, such as including those amounts in the amount due.[173] It is also deceptive to threaten penalties that are not available under the bad check law (such as attorney fees when the amount owed is under a certain dollar threshold for allowing such fees).[174]

Where a state bad check statute does not apply to postdated checks, it is deceptive for a collector collecting on a payday loan to threaten remedies under that statute.[175] In some states, 161 Brooks v. Auto Sales & Services Inc., 2001 WL 686950 (S.D. Ind. June 15, 2001).

162 Gonzalez v. Codilis & Assoc., P.C., 2004 WL 719264 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004).

163 McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2012).

164 Wilson v. Trott Law, P.C., 118 F. Supp. 3d 953 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (attorney fees labeled as "corporate advances"); Dougherty v. Wells Fargo Home Loans, Inc., 425 F. Supp. 2d 599 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (recoverable corporate advances); Porter v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 2003 WL 21210115 (N.D. Ill. May 21, 2003) (demand for attorney fees under heading "recoverable corporate advances" when document also had heading "legal fees" reading zero).

165 Pacheco v. Joseph McMahon Corp., 698 F. Supp. 2d 291 (D. Conn. 2010).

166 Campion v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 2000 WL 33255504 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 2, 2000).

167 Menashe v. Baum, 2011 WL 4553097 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2011).

168 Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017) (filing fees); Doskocz v. Ass'n Lien Services, 2016 WL 7425922 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2016) (collection agency that was attempting to collect homeowner associations fees and costs that state law prohibited); Oberg v. Blatt, 2015 WL 9478213 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 29, 2015) (court filing and service); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 293 F.R.D. 410 (W.D.N.Y. 2013) (court costs).

169 See Shula v. Lawent, 359 F 3d 489 (7th Cir. 2004) (demanded costs that were not awarded). See also Jackson v. Sagal, 370 F. Supp. 3d 592, 602 (D. Md. 2019) (collector's statement that consumer would incur costs and expenses was false, deceptive, or misleading, since she "could avoid costs altogether by proceeding pro se or with the aid of pro bono counsel and by utilizing any number of free legal resources to eliminate court costs" or agreed to pre-trial settlement).

170 See Veach v. Sheeks 316 F.3d 690, 693 (7th Cir. 2003) (including court costs in the balance before suit deceptive); Francis v. General Revenue Corp., 2020 WL 4586392 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 10, 2020) (failure to disclose contingent nature of collection cost was deceptive); Anda v. Roosen Varchetti & Olivier, P.L.L.C., 2016 WL 7157414 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 31, 2016) (garnishment filing fees that had not been adjudicated as costs); Cohn v. New Century Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 4016993 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2016) (filing and service costs that state court had not yet awarded); In re FDCPA Cognate Cases, 2016 WL 1273349 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2016) (claiming costs that were not due in garnishment action until garnishing party prevailed); Champion v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2013 WL 8699367 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 15, 2013) (included court costs, although no judgment had entered).

171 Hawksley v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 63033 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 5, 2017) (lien recording fee).

172 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

173 Veach v. Sheeks, 316 F.3d 690, 693 (7th Cir. 2003); Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871 (8th Cir. 2000) (Minnesota statute allowed penalty "up to" $100); Eaton v. Credit Bur., Inc., 2007 WL 2781844 (D.N.D. Sept. 21, 2007) (attempting to collect statutory dishonored check civil penalties not assessed by court); Brumbelow v. Law Offices of Bennett & Deloney, P.C., 2005 WL 1566689 (D. Utah June 21, 2005) (Georgia check collection statute); Goins v. JBC & Assoc., P.C., 2004 WL 2063562 (D. Conn. Sept. 3, 2004) (check collector's pre-suit demand for maximum civil penalty that court might award in future collection suit deceptive); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997) (check service charge over $15 only available where collector brings lawsuit).

174 Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871 (8th Cir. 2000) (Minnesota bad check statute); Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (seeking fees without complying with requirements of bad check statute); Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (fees over $25 requires certified letter to the consumer); Thinesen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 2346991 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2005). See also Imperial Merchant Services, Inc. v. Hunt, 212 P.3d 736 (Cal. 2009) (prejudgment interest could not be added to statutory dishonored check charge).

175 Nance v. Ulferts, 282 F. Supp. 2d 912 (N.D. Ind. 2003); Jones v. Kunin, 2000 WL 34402017 (S.D. Ill. May 1, 2000).

special penalties for submitting a dishonored check can be awarded only to the payee or only certain other parties, and not to the collector or a debt buyer. A collector that is not one of those parties but threatens such penalties violates FDCPA § 1692e.[176] Where a state shoplifting statute does not apply to writing an insufficient funds check, it is deceptive to threaten remedies under that statute.[177]

Collectors may also attempt to collect service charges even when not authorized by a bad check statute, claiming they are allowed by a contract provision. But it is deceptive to seek such a service charge not authorized by contract.[178] Posting a sign in the merchant's store notifying customers of the fee may not be sufficient to provide authorization, making the demand for the fee deceptive.[179] Even if a bad check fee is included in a contract, the fee may be void if it does not constitute reasonable liquidated damages, and then seeking such fee can be deceptive.[180] Collectors may argue that the fees are incidental damages that are collectible under UCC Articles 2 and 3, but courts often find that the collector does not meet the requirements of those UCC provisions.[181]

7.2.2.10 Misrepresentation of Collector Services

FDCPA § 1692e(2)(B) prohibits a collector's false representations to the consumer as to the extent of collection services it is authorized to perform. Where a debt collector's contract with a creditor is limited to mailing a series of dunning letters (called "flat-rate" collecting), it can be deceptive to represent to a consumer that it will take additional collection actions.[182]

The same practice can violate FDCPA § 1692j(a),[183] providing: "It is unlawful to design, compile, and furnish any form knowing that such form would be used to create the false belief in a consumer that a person other than the creditor of such consumer is participating in the collection of or in an attempt to collect a debt . . ."[184] Where a collection attorney lends its name to a form letter, but is not otherwise involved with the account, this can also violate FDCPA § 1692e(3), falsely implying that a communication comes from an attorney.[185] This provision is examined at § 7.2.3, infra.

7.2.2.11 Other Misrepresentation of Debt's Character or Legal Status

FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) prohibits false statements as to a debt's character or legal status. It can thus be deceptive to collect on a debt while not owning the debt or collecting for someone who does not own the debt, such as where ownership has not yet transferred.[186] After ownership is transferred to a debt buyer, it is similarly deceptive to collect while claiming that the original creditor owns the debt[187] or misstating that the debt buyer is a holder in due course.[188] A debt's legal status is also misrepresented where the collector misrepresents that it has the right to file suit on a debt.[189]

It can be actionable under FDCPA § 1692e to describe a debt as owed to "multiple creditors" or "other creditors" while collecting for only one creditor, even if there are multiple accounts overdue with that one creditor.[190] It is also deceptive to seek collection of multiple debts from multiple creditors without identifying the multiple creditors.[191] Misidentifying the identity of the original creditor[192] or the entity that is 176 See Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012) (California bad check statute); Gearing v. Check Brokerage Corp., 233 F.3d 469 (7th Cir. 2000) (Illinois bad check statute); Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007).

177 Scott v. Riddle, 2000 WL 33980013 (D. Utah Dec. 4, 2000).

178 See Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997) (check service charge inconsistent with state law); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983).

179 Wegmans Food Mkts., Inc. v. Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) ($5 service charge for dishonored check without showing more of contractual basis than posted notice in store). See also Still v. JBC Assoc., 2005 WL 1334715 (D.N.J. June 3, 2005) (not known if consumer had seen notice of returned check fee posted in store).

180 Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001).

181 See Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005); Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (UCC provisions do not apply to assignee); State ex rel. Hatch v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2006 WL 1388453 (Minn. Dist. Ct. Apr. 13, 2006). But see Freyermuth v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 248 F.3d 767 (8th Cir. 2001) (service charge on checks was permitted by UCC art. 2 as incidental damages).

182 See Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

183 See Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

184 § 10.4.1, infra.

185 See Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

186 See Wallace v. Washington Mut. Bank, F.A., 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012) (consumer stated an FDCPA claim where a party filed a judicial foreclosure more than a month before that party was assigned the note and mortgage); Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012) (foreclosure law firm's listing a bank in its letter to consumer as creditor, when it was to be, but not at time, creditor, false and "a serious matter"); Flores v. Collection Consultants, 2015 WL 12791370 (C.D. Cal. June 2, 2015) (failure to list identity of "other creditors" could frustrate consumer's ability to choose intelligently how to respond to letter). See also Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2009 WL 3064865 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2009) (defendant misrepresented identity of current owner of the debt, aff'd on other grounds, 383 Fed. Appx. 877 (11th Cir. 2010).

187 See Nottingham v. Houston Hosps., Inc., 2018 WL 4604023 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2018).

188 Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio 2004).

189 See Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665 (E.D. Wis. 2018) (failed to provide state-mandated right to cure, so no right to sue on debt).

190 Gibson v. Creditors' Serv. of Ind., Inc., 2015 WL 12559887 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 23, 2015).

191 See Deporter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon County, 2015 WL 1932336 (D. Colo. Apr. 28, 2015).

192 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 755 F.3d 1109 (9th Cir. 2014), as amended on denial of reh'g and reh'g en banc (Oct. 31, 2014) (false identification of original creditor in dunning letter). See also Sturm v. Alpha Recovery Corp., 2020 WL 1140425 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2020) (if consumer could show that debt buyer was not proper assignee, then letter would include false representation regarding legal status of debt). Cf. Stewart v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2020 WL 433888, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 28, 2020) (where January 2017 collection letter indicated that Freddie Mac was "the current creditor to whom the debt is owed" but servicing the loan as the entity that owns the loan[193] can also violate FDCPA § 1692e.

It can be deceptive to state that prompt payment will result in the collector waiving additional collection fees or interest, where such additional amounts could not be charged in any event.[194] Making false statements about the underlying sales transaction that would conflict with a consumer's valid defenses to a debt can also violate FDCPA § 1692e.[195] Also deceptive can be representing that insurance would not cover an obligation when not based on information about the consumer's actual insurance coverage, thus seeking to have a consumer make payments that might not be owed.[196]

Misrepresentations that relate to credit reporting may also violate the Act. A statement that a debt would remain on the consumer's credit report until it was paid is a materially false representation because by law, the debt remains on credit reports for only seven years.[197] It is a material violation for a debt collector to continue to report a "judgment" to consumer reporting agencies after knowing that there was no judgment.[198] The use of a different account number for what is actually a second collection attempt on an already reported delinquent debt, without making any clarification to a consumer reporting agency, may violate FDCPA § 1692e(2)(a).[199]

FDCPA § 1692e(2)(a) relates to misrepresentations concerning the characteristics or legal status of the debt. Thus, courts have found that it does not apply to misrepresentations concerning the collector, such as a collector's Better Business Bureau rating.[200] Of course, the same misrepresentation may be actionable under other FDCPA provisions.

April 2017 letter indicated the "Present Creditor" was Chase, and the collector did not explain this contradiction or clarify the relationship between the two entities, an unsophisticated consumer could be confused and concerned that two entities were seeking to collect on a single debt).

193 Suquilanda v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 2011 WL 4344044 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 8, 2011).

194 See Franklin v. Nat'l Credit Audit Corp., 2018 WL 1155973 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 22, 2018).

195 See Panzer v. Alternative Claims Mgmt., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3771251 (S.D.N.Y. July 8, 2016) (false representation that rental car did not have a leak when it left repair shop).

196 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012) (collector had no specific information to support statement that the consumer's insurance would not provide coverage).

197 See Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 176 F. Supp. 3d 1054 (D. Colo. 2016); CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores (July 10, 2013), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

198 See Johnson v. Columbia Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2021 WL 796332 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 2, 2021).

199 See Reyes v. IC Sys., Inc., 470 F. Supp. 3d 190, 193 (D. Conn. 2020) (denying motion to dismiss § 1692e, e(2)(A), and e(10) claim where collector did not tell credit reporting agency that it was second collector for debt already reported by previous collector).

200 See Strobel v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2014 WL 507510, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 6, 2014). See also Bryan v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 4326041 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2017).

7.2.3 Falsely Implying Person Is an Attorney or That Communication Comes from an Attorney, FDCPA § 1692e(3)

7.2.3.1 Generally

> A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:
>
> ***
>
> (3) The false representation or implication that any individual is an attorney or that any communication is from an attorney.[201]

This section focuses on two different FDCPA § 1692e(3) violations. Section 7.2.3.2, infra, considers where a non-attorney impersonates an attorney. Section 7.2.3.3, infra, analyzes the application of FDCPA § 1692e(3) where an attorney essentially lends its letterhead to a collector. While doing so generally is viewed as a FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation,[202] a body of law has developed indicating that, in some situations, the letter can avoid a violation by disclosing that an attorney has not reviewed the letter.[203] Attorneys sometimes also argue that the letter does not indicate it is from an attorney.[204]

Where there is a FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation, both the collection attorney and the collection agency can be liable. Interestingly, where the originating creditor sends out the letter on attorney letterhead, this may subject the creditor to FDCPA coverage and then liability under section 1692e(3).[205]

7.2.3.2 Non-Attorneys Impersonating Attorneys

FDCPA § 1692e(3) prohibits a debt collector from even indirectly impersonating an attorney.[206] Non-attorney collection agencies can violate FDCPA § 1692e(3) by using a name that implies they are attorneys, such as "Lawyers Collection

201 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(3). Each of the major bills leading to the FDCPA contained a provision similar to this section. E.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(3) (1976). The Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee added the word "implication" and the last clause to the subsection. Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(3) (1977). The statute defines communication as the "conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium." 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(iii).

202 See § 7.2.3.3.1, infra.

203 See § 7.2.3.3.3, infra.

204 See § 7.2.3.3.2, infra.

205 See § 7.2.3.3.4, infra.

206 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; 123 Cong. Rec. H29222 (daily ed. Apr. 4, 1977) (remarks of Rep. Annunzio).

Services,"[207] or by creating a fake law firm website.[208] It can also be a FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation where a non-attorney collection agency's phone calls have a caller ID of "law office."[209] An actionable impersonation of an attorney can involve a non-attorney performing functions only an attorney can perform,[210] or that an attorney routinely performs.[211]

The FTC Staff Commentary states that it is a FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation for a collector to use the label "Pre-Legal Department" where the collector lacks a legal department.[212] Some debt collection agencies have "legal departments" where no employee is an attorney, and the department's supervisor is a non-attorney, but where the employees place accounts out to contract attorneys around the country, provide documents for litigation, and act as witnesses where required. A collection agency that sends out collection letters under the name "legal department" with no attorney involvement may be impersonating an attorney. Where a federal court had dismissed such a FDCPA § 1692e(3) claim, the Third Circuit sent the case back to determine whether the least sophisticated consumer would find the name deceptive.[213]

A court has found it unlikely the title "senior litigation associate" will deceive even an unsophisticated consumer into believing the individual is an attorney.[214] Nor did a court find that letters sent as "The Collection Firm of Franklin Collection Service, Inc." violated FDCPA § 1692e(3); use of the word "firm" does not imply law firm;[215] neither does use of the word "Associates" in a collection agency's name.[216] A court has ruled that a collection agency name Biehl and Biehl, Inc. does not imply it is a law firm just because law firms often have multiple names of individuals in their firm name.[217] A letter does not indicate it is from an attorney where the letter states it is from a collection agency and makes reference to the agency's legal department and in-house attorney.[218]

7.2.3.3 Attorney Letters Without Attorney Review of the Account

7.2.3.3.1 Introduction

With the possible exception where the attorney clearly discloses it has not reviewed the consumer's account,[219] FDCPA § 1692e(3) is violated where a collection letter is on an attorney's letterhead or is signed by an attorney, but the attorney has not meaningfully reviewed the account. The Second, Third, Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Circuits have all reached this conclusion—that mass-produced letters on an attorney's letterhead or over the attorney's signature violate FDCPA § 1692e(3) where the attorney does not review the consumer's file.[220] (Some of these cases note that the attorney acknowledged neither reviewing the files nor reading each letter being mailed.[221]) Federal courts in other circuits reach the same 207 Challed, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 16, 1994). See also United States v. Commercial Recovery Sys, Inc., 179 F. Supp. 3d 728 (E.D. Tex. 2016).

208 See Leonard v. John Doe Corp., 2020 WL 3642562 (S.D. Ohio July 6, 2020).

209 Crespo v. Valentine & Kebartas, Inc., 2010 WL 11597922 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 21, 2010).

210 See Jacquez v. Diem Corp., 2003 WL 25548423 (D. Ariz. Feb. 20, 2003) (non-attorney applied for writ of garnishment, where attorney is required to sign the document); Marchant v. U.S. Collections West, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1001 (D. Ariz. 1998) (same).

211 Brannigan v. Harrison, 2018 WL 1942520 (D.N.J. Apr. 24, 2018) (question for jury where non-attorney answered call to law firm, described nature of potential collection lawsuit and referred to "we"); Brown v. Transurban USA, Inc., 144 F. Supp. 3d 809 (E.D. Va. 2015) (appearing at the courthouse and negotiating with the consumer and giving the appearance of being an attorney). See also United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986) (collector impersonated attorney by referring to himself as "consumer law expert" and representing that he "knew the law"), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

212 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(3)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Krisor, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 5, 1983).

213 Rosenau v. Unifund Corp., 539 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2008). See also United States v. Commercial Recovery Sys, Inc., 179 F. Supp. 3d 728 (E.D. Tex. 2016). But see Pollak v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 285 F. Supp. 3d 812, 839 (D.N.J. 2018) (debt buyer did not violate § 1692e(3) by referencing its "Litigation Department" in its collection letters because the letter included a disclaimer of lawyer noninvolvement on the front of the letter); Leblanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, G.P., 552 F. Supp. 2d 1327 (M.D. Fla. May 8, 2008) ("Legal Department" did not imply attorney involvement when viewed as a whole with the rest of the letter).

214 Tromba v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 323 F. Supp. 2d 424 (E.D.N.Y. 2004).

215 Winans v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 3942073 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 16, 2018; Bradley v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc. 2013 WL 1346714 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 28, 2013).

216 Zaborac v. Phillips and Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 330 F. Supp. 2d 962 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

217 Sulaiman v. Biehl & Biehl, Inc., 2016 WL 5720476 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2016).

218 See Medley v. Kentucky Accounts Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5471029 (E.D. Ky. Oct. 28, 2014).

219 See § 7.2.3.3.3, infra.

220 Lesher v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 650 F.3d 993 (3d Cir. 2011); Gonzalez v. Kay, 577 F.3d 600 (5th Cir. 2009); Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433 (6th Cir. 2008); Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292, 304 (2d Cir. 2003) (finding that "merely being told by a client that a debt is overdue is not enough" to satisfy the requirement of meaningful attorney involvement); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623, 638 (7th Cir. 2002) ("[The attorney] knew nothing about the debtor and her potential liability beyond what [the creditor] had conveyed to him; and [the creditor] provided [the attorney] only the bare information that [he] required in order to complete the blanks in his form letter."); Boyd v. Wexler, 275 F.3d 642 (7th Cir. 2001); Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 229 (7th Cir. 1996); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314 (2d Cir. 1993). See also Vincent v. The Money Store, 736 F.3d 88 (2d Cir. 2013); Young v. Citicorp Retail Services, 1998 WL 537530 (2d Cir. June 29, 1998); Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 4905806 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 20, 2020); Gibbons v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 5720750, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 31, 2018); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017).

221 Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433 (6th Cir. 2008) (attorney acknowledged that while he drafted the form collection letter, he neither reviewed the file nor the specific letter in this case); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1320 (2d Cir. 1993) (impression that letters were from an attorney was "false and misleading because in fact [the attorney] did not review each debtor's file; he conclusion.[222] The same approach has been applied to the filing of collection lawsuits where an attorney did not review the complaints.[223]

It is no defense that the lawyer owns the collection agency[224] or discloses that it is acting as a debt collection agency. One can be both an attorney and a debt collector.[225] It is also no defense to say that there can be no FDCPA § 1692e(3) liability if the debt collector later commences a lawsuit.[226]

The fact finder may give little credence to an affidavit from the attorney attesting that they had reviewed each file where over ten thousand letters were mailed in a week on the attorney's signature.[227] Evidence of the lack of involvement of an attorney is the sheer number of letters sent out on the firm's letterhead or collection lawsuits filed in a given period.[228]

Summary judgment for the consumer was also granted where the collection attorney claimed he used software to evaluate large numbers of accounts quickly. This was found not to demonstrate the sort of independent analysis and professional opinion that must occur when a debt collector represents that an attorney has reviewed a debt.[229]

A lawyer's cursory review is not enough.[230] It is not enough that an attorney drafted the form letter and letters were sent out pursuant to the attorney's standing instructions.[231]

The Seventh Circuit has set a standard that the collection attorney make a "considered, professional judgment" that individual consumers were delinquent and were candidates for legal action or that the dunning letter should be sent to them.[232] A court has described the required attorney review—it "need not be lengthy, but it must permit the attorney to form a professional opinion about whether the debt is potentially viable, barred by the statute of limitations, uncollectable due to the debtor's bankruptcy, and to evaluate similar legal considerations."[233]

The Seventh Circuit indicates these factors show a lack of attorney involvement:

- The creditor, not the attorney decides which consumers receive letters;
- The creditor does not provide sufficient account information for the lawyer to reach an independent, professional judgment about liability and collectability;
- The use of the same form letter in every case and the large number of accounts receiving the letter;
- The lawyer refers responses to the letter back to the creditor and has no authority to negotiate payments or settle the debt;
- The collection lawyer's low flat fee per letter suggests the lawyer is not paid for legal judgment but rather for the value of a lawyer letterhead;
- The collection lawyer was not authorized to file suit for the creditor.[234]

The consumer should produce some evidence of lack of attorney review. Where the attorney claims to review the file did not determine when particular letters should be sent; he did not approve the sending of particular letters based upon the recommendations of others; and he did not see particular letters before they were sent—indeed, he did not even know the identities of the persons to whom the letters were issued. In short, the fact that Jackson played virtually no day-to-day role in the debt collection process supports the conclusion that the collection letters were not 'from' [the attorney] in any meaningful sense of that word.").

222 Nepomuceno v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2014 WL 2711828 (S.D. Cal. June 16, 2014); Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 967 F. Supp. 2d 470 (D. Mass. 2013), aff'd, 766 F.3d 98 (1st Cir. 2014); Martinez v. Johnson, 2013 WL 1031363 (D. Utah Mar. 14, 2013); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012); Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. 2011); Palmer v. Stassinos, 2009 WL 86705 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2009); Dunn v. Derrick E. McGavic, P.C., 653 F. Supp. 2d 1109, 1114 (D. Or. 2009); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. 1995); Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Services, 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994); Masuda v. Thomas Richards & Co., 759 F. Supp. 1456 (C.D. Cal 1991). See also Walsh v. Jon B. Sage, P.A., 2006 WL 8431662 (S.D. Fla. May 17, 2006).

223 See § 7.4.10.4.1, infra.

224 Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 229 (7th Cir. 1996).

225 See also Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 967 F. Supp. 2d 470 (D. Mass. 2013), aff'd, 766 F.3d 98 (1st Cir. 2014).

226 Hochhauser v. Grossman & Karaszewski, P.L.L.C., 2020 WL 2042390, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 28, 2020) (lawsuit had no bearing on the question of whether there was attorney involvement at the time the letter was sent).

227 Boyd v. Wexler, 275 F.3d 642 (7th Cir. 2001). See also Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003); Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019).

228 See Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86, 100 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (where collection records show no attorney involvement other than signing court papers at high volume, there was no meaningful attorney involvement; collection attorney and his partner signed 211 collection letters on the same day they signed the plaintiff's letter and issued over 3000 letters in that month, leaving little time for legal review, and "debt collection letters and litigation documents were regularly mass-produced at UCS by non-lawyers at the push of a button").

229 Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008). See also Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003).

230 Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2016 WL 3958608 (E.D. Mo July 22, 2016) (consumer's assertion that an attorney making a meaningful review of the verification letter would have noticed that supporting documents did not support amount of debt being pursued sufficed to deny motion to dismiss).

231 Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. 2011); Masuda v. Thomas Richards & Co., 759 F. Supp. 1456 (C.D. Cal. 1991).

232 Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

233 Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008). See also Navarro v. Eskanos & Adler, 2007 WL 549904 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 20, 2007). But see Rossi v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2020 WL 2527176, at *10–11 (W.D. Wis. May 18, 2020) (granting summary judgment for law firm where attorney who spent fewer than six minutes reviewing case was "professionally involved" in preparing state court collection complaint, and stating that "the court of appeals has not imposed a minimum time requirement on reviewing debt collection cases and it has not held that lawyers who perform routine, high-volume work are necessarily liars").

234 Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

and the consumer provides no contrary evidence, the FDCPA § 1692e(3) claim is likely to fail.[235]

On the other hand, no evidence may be required of the lack of attorney involvement where the letter itself is contradictory in that regard. A FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation was found where the letter indicated that if payment was not received an attorney would review the account, and also stated that an attorney had reviewed the account using computer software.[236]

In an unsuccessful case brought by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau against a large collection law firm, the federal court sets out in detail the various procedures at the law firm, including the extent of attorney involvement prior to and after form letters are sent.[237] Collection law firms may model their future claims of attorney involvement on the claims made by the law firm in this case.

Despite the CFPB's introduction of survey evidence, the court found that any deception by the collection letters themselves was not material in that the deception did not affect consumer behavior. Perhaps the court was influenced to rule against the CFPB by the fact that the CFPB Director bring ing the action previously was the Ohio Attorney General and had required the defendant to put the Ohio Attorney General's name on collection letters that the defendant sent for the State of Ohio.

7.2.3.3.2 Does a letter indicate it is from an attorney?

Not every form letter suggests it is from an attorney, and lawyers may defend a FDCPA § 1692e(3) claim by arguing that the letter does not indicate it is from an attorney. This argument will not get the collector far if there is the mention of "attorney," "law offices," "law firm" or the like on the letterhead, in the signature block, or in the address where payment should be made.[238]

Nor is it a defense that the person signing a letter on law firm letterhead is not an attorney and not listed on the letterhead as one of the attorneys in the firm. A court found that the presence of a list of attorneys on the letterhead was further evidence that the letter indicated to unsophisticated consumers that it was from an attorney.[239]

Even if a letter does not indicate in any direct way that it is from a law firm, it can indirectly indicate it is from a law firm. In one case, the letter indicated only that it was from a "Professional Corporation" with the name "Trott & Trott, P.C.," but elsewhere the firm branded itself publicly as the largest foreclosure law firm in the United States. A consumer could easily learn this, so the court concluded that the letter indicated it was from a law firm.[240]

On the other hand, a court found no violation where the only indication that a letter was from an attorney was "esq." after the sender's name in the signature block.[241] Another court found that a required legal form filled out by a creditor does not indicate it is from an attorney even though the form lists the name of the creditor's law firm if the matter proceeds to litigation.[242]

7.2.3.3.3 Where lawyer letter discloses attorney has not reviewed the account

The Second Circuit, in Greco v. Trauner, Cohen & Thomas,[243] provided an exception that allowed a lawyer to mass mail duns without any evaluation of the accounts. The letter stated: "At this time, no attorney with this firm has personally reviewed the particular circumstances of your account." The Second Circuit found this disclosure prevented a FDCPA § 1692e(3) violation "so long as that letter includes disclaimers that should make clear even to the 'least sophisticated consumer' that the law firm or attorney sending the letter is not, at the time of the letter's transmission, acting as an attorney." Greco also noted that there was no lawyer signature, only use of a law firm letterhead.

The Greco approach has been followed by the D.C. Circuit,[244] and by a number of federal district courts.[245] While 235 Thebert v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 3581322, at *11 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 18, 2017) ("Thebert essentially speculates about Potestivo's inner workings without any factual allegations about the law firm's debt-collection process."); Napolitano v. Ragan & Ragan, 2017 WL 3535025 (D.N.J. Aug. 17, 2017); Barata v. Nudelman, Klemm & Golub, P.C., 2015 WL 733628 (D.N.J. Feb. 19, 2015); Cook v. Petrocchi, 2010 WL 11520221 (D. Minn. Dec. 2, 2010), aff'd, 455 Fed. Appx. 707 (8th Cir. 2012).

236 Sparkman v. Zwicker & Assoc., 374 F. Supp. 2d 293, 302 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

237 CFPB v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2018 WL 3575882 (N.D. Ohio July 25, 2018). But see Bitzko v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2019 WL 4602329, at *6 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 2019) (concluding that "the procedural and legal differences between the current case and Consumer Financial render it unhelpful to Defendant"; no evidence that an attorney personally reviewed or exercised professional judgment with respect to plaintiff's file before letter was sent); Gibbons v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2018 WL 5720750 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 31, 2018).

238 See Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 439 (6th Cir. 2008).

239 Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017).

240 Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 198 F. Supp. 3d 794, 805 (E.D. Mich. 2016). But see Daniels v. Solomon & Solomon P.C., 751 Fed. Appx. 254 (3d Cir. 2018) (no violation where letterhead only said Solomon & Solomon where letter stated it was from a debt collector and did not include lawyer's signature).

241 See Rumpler v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 219 F. Supp. 2d 251 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

242 See Johnson v. Williams, 2017 WL 8217626, at *3 (N.D. Ga. July 24, 2017).

243 412 F.3d 360 (2d Cir. 2005). See also Wendel v. Mullooly, Jeffrey, Rooney & Flynn, L.L.P., 689 Fed. Appx. 45 (2d Cir. 2017); Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., L.L.C., 644 Fed. Appx. 19 (2d Cir. 2016).

244 Jones v. Dufek, 830 F.3d 523 (D.C. Cir. 2016).

245 Spurgeon v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 2015 WL 1246157 (D. Neb. Mar. 17, 2015); McGhee v. Buffaloe & Assoc., P.L.C., 2014 WL 1333730 (E.D. Tenn. Apr. 2, 2014); Derry v. Buffalo & Assoc., P.L.C., 2013 WL 3865242 (E.D. Tenn. July 25, 2013); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3834008 (E.D. Tenn. July 23, 2013); Grant-Fletcher v. Brachfeld Law Group, P.C., 2012 WL 2523094 (D. Md. June 28, 2012); Michael v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 825 F. Supp. 2d 913 (N.D. Ohio 2011); Taylor v. Pinnacle Credit Services, most cases involve letters on attorney letterhead, courts have applied the same principle to telephone calls.[246]

Since Greco, though, courts often take a more nuanced approach. The Fifth Circuit in Gonzalez v. Kay[247] held that a jury could find a debt collection letter on law firm's letterhead to deceptively imply that a lawyer was involved where the Greco disclaimer was not conspicuous. In Greco, the disclaimer was on the front of the letter. In Kay, the disclaimer was on the letter's back following other disclaimers in complex legal language.

The Third Circuit went one step further than Kay, holding deceptive as a matter of law a letter on law firm letterhead without attorney involvement despite a Greco disclaimer on the letter's back.[248] While not ruling out the possibility that a non-deceptive letter without attorney involvement could be drafted on law firm letterhead, the court held that it was inherently deceptive to have such contradictory messages in one letter—on the front that the law firm had been retained to collect the debt and on the back that no one in the firm had looked at the account.[249]

Courts also find the threat of immediate litigation overshadows any Greco disclaimer.[250] A New Jersey federal court has suggested that the disclaimer is inconsistent with New Jersey lawyer ethics rulings.[251] But there is also a trend to uphold a Greco warning where it is clear and conspicuous, such as where a letter on law firm letterhead is not signed by an attorney and the disclaimer is on the letter's front in bold, normal-size print, and set apart in a separate paragraph.[252]

7.2.3.3.4 Creditor liability for letters on attorney letterhead

FDCPA § 1692a(6) provides that the FDCPA applies to a creditor that uses a name other than its own, so as to indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect the debt owed the creditor.[253] Where in fact the creditor sends out a collection letter that is on law firm letterhead, does the FDCPA then apply to the creditor and has the creditor violated section 1692e(3)?

The Second Circuit has held that "[w]here a creditor, in the process of collecting its own debts, hires a third party for the express purpose of representing to its debtors that the third party is collecting the creditor's debts, and the third party engages in no bona fide efforts to collect those debts, the false name exception exposes the creditor to FDCPA liability."[254] In that case, the creditor had an arrangement to send out letters on law firm letterhead and the court found a triable issue of fact regarding whether the law firm's role was so "tangential" as to permit a jury to conclude that it was a mere "conduit" for the creditor's attempt to collect the debt. In that event, the creditor would be subject to the FDCPA and liable under section 1692e.

7.2.4 Claims That Nonpayment Will Result in Arrest, Garnishment, or Property Seizure, FDCPA § 1692e(4) and e(5)

7.2.4.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(4) The representation or implication that nonpayment of any debt will result in the arrest or imprisonment of any person or the seizure, garnishment, attachment, or sale of any property or wages of any person unless such action is lawful and the debt collector or creditor intends to take such action.[255]

L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303430 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2011); Walsh v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 2010 WL 5394624 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2010).

246 See Bard v. Law Offices of Harold E. Scherr, P.C., 2014 WL 2610894 (E.D.N.Y. June 6, 2014) (voicemail must not misrepresent the extent to which an attorney has become involved).

247 577 F.3d 600 (5th Cir. 2009). See also Brazier v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 2009 WL 764161 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2009).

248 Lesher v. Law Offices Of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 650 F.3d 993 (3d Cir. 2011).

249 See also Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 30 F. Supp. 3d 283 (D.N.J. 2014); Johnson v. Law Offices of Farrell & Seldin, 2013 WL 12136584 (D.N.M. Mar. 29, 2013) (question of fact whether conflicting messages were deceptive); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012) (same); Brazier v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 2009 WL 764161 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2009) (question of fact whether contradictory messages were deceptive). But see Daniels v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2017 WL 3675400 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 25, 2017) (no contradiction between letter and disclaimer).

250 Nepomuceno v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2014 WL 2711828 (S.D. Cal. June 16, 2014); Martinez v. Johnson, 2013 WL 1031363 (D. Utah Mar. 14, 2013); Dunn v. Derrick E. McGavic, P.C., 653 F. Supp. 2d 1109, 1114 (D. Or. 2009). Cf. Murphy v. Bronson, Cawley, & Bergmann, L.L.P., 2011 WL 2413447 (S.D. Cal. June 13, 2011) (no violation where no threat of litigation).

251 See Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 30 F. Supp. 3d 283 (D.N.J. 2014). But see Eddis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 664812 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2012).

252 See Powell v. Aldous & Assoc., 762 Fed. Appx. 127 (3d Cir. 2019). See also Bencosme v. Stillman Law Office, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1955826 (D.N.J. Apr. 23, 2020) (prominent location on front page and in separate paragraph with same font as other paragraphs); Hamilton v. LLM Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 589869 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 11, 2016) (bold lettering in the middle of the page); Davis v. Lyons, Doughty & Veldhuis, P.A., 855 F. Supp. 2d 279 (D. Del. 2012) (disclosure on the front, in the middle of the page in a separate paragraph); Eddis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 664812 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2012) (front of letter in normal text size).

253 See § 4.7.4, supra.

254 Vincent v. Money Store, 736 F.3d 88 (2d Cir. 2013). See also Young v. Citicorp Retail Services, 1998 WL 537530 (2d Cir. June 29, 1998) (creditor liable where mailed letters with attorney letterhead despite no attorney review); Taylor v. Perrin, Landry, deLaunay & Durand, 103 F.3d 1232 (5th Cir. 1997) (same).

255 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(4). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(3).

The first House bill contained a similar provision and the present form appeared in every major bill that followed. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(6) (1975); H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess.

(5) The threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken.[256]

FDCPA § 1692e(4) protects consumers from false threats if they fail to pay—for example, that the consumer will be arrested, that their wages will be garnished, their bank accounts seized, or their property attached and sold. The provision applies not just to explicit threats, but also to veiled false threats implying such consequences of nonpayment.[257]

There is surprisingly little FDCPA caselaw on section 1692e(4), in large part because the same conduct can be challenged under other FDCPA provisions, including the general section 1692e prohibition on deception and sections 1692e(2),[258] 1692e(5),[259] and 1692e(10).[260] In fact, FDCPA § 1692e(4) can be viewed as a subset of FDCPA § 1692e(5), which prohibits threats to take unlawful actions or actions that are not intended.[261] FDCPA § 1692e(4) prohibits only certain threats to take unlawful actions or actions that are not intended.[262]

Section 7.2.4.2, infra, will consider threats as to arrest, garnishment or property seizure, whether brought under FDCPA § 1692e(4) or (5). Additional information though may be found in the subsequent discussion of FDCPA § 1692e(5) as to when a representation is a veiled threat, proving a threat is illegal, and proving that a collector does not intend to carry out a threat.[263]

FDCPA § 1692e(4) states explicitly that a threat is prohibited either if the threatened action is unlawful or if it is unintended. Even if a debt collector intends, for example, to seize the consumer's property, the threat to do so is a violation if the action is unlawful. Similarly, even if arrest for writing an insufficient funds check may in certain circumstances be lawful, it is a violation to make that threat if the collector does not intend to take that action.

7.2.4.2 Threats of Arrest

A consumer cannot be arrested for nonpayment of civil debt with certain limited exceptions involving writing an insufficient funds check, hiding collateral, not returning rented or leased property, and not submitting postjudgment to a debtor's examination.[264] Almost any other threat or implied threat of arrest should violate FDCPA § 1692e(4)[265] The consumer need not show that the debt collector had no intent to follow through with seeking the consumer's arrest.[266] Even where an arrest is possible, there may a violation if there was no intent to do so.[267]

In limited circumstances, there can be criminal liability where a consumer writes an insufficient funds check. Nevertheless, a threat to seek the consumer's arrest for nonpayment of a debt involving an insufficient funds check violates FDCPA § 1692e(4), even if lawful, if there is no intent to follow through with that threat,[268] for example where the threat is made before an individual assessment of the consumer's criminal liability.[269] Collectors rarely refer matters for criminal prosecution and, moreover, the fact that the district attorney rarely if ever pursues such referrals is an indication the collector has no intent that there would be a criminal prosecution for a particular threatened consumer.[270]

A state's fraudulent check statute may not apply to postdated checks related to payday loans, so threats to enforce that statute as to a bounced check for a payday loan should be a violation.[271] Arrest for writing an insufficient funds check can also be unlawful because that crime under state law has a number of other elements that may not apply—e.g., the consumer's § 806(5) (1967). See also S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

256 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(5). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(1).

257 See Weiss v. Collection Ctr., Inc., 667 N.W.2d 567 (N.D. 2003) (consumer may interpret statement that debt collector had sought information from motor vehicle department regarding his vehicle as threat to repossess it).

258 See § 7.2.2, supra.

259 See § 7.2.5, infra.

260 See § 7.2.10, infra.

261 See, e.g., Sanchez v. Law Office of Lance E. Armo, 2021 WL 1214559 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2021) (allegations that collection attorneys represented that they could evict tenant if she failed to pay alleged debt that did not exist, and that they made false and deceptive statements regarding conduct that was not intended to be taken were sufficient to establish violation of § 1692e(4) and (5)), adopted, 2021 WL 2292779 (E.D. Cal. June 4, 2021).

262 See, e.g., Laporte v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 2814184, at *6 (W.D. Va. May 29, 2020) (Writ of Garnishment did not constitute a violation of § 1692e(4), because it was not a communication threatening the use of garnishment in the event of nonpayment, but rather a notice indicating that garnishment processes had started due to nonpayment).

263 See § 7.2.5, infra.

264 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 16 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

265 See Stafford v. MST Fin. Solutions, Inc., 2020 WL 1033542 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 3, 2020); Grimm v. GPG Processing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3821788 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 15, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 4220903 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 5, 2019); Anderson v. E. Asset Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2141664 (N.D. Tex. May 16, 2019); Aitken v. Debt Mgmt. Partners, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1810345 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 17, 2015); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 2013 WL 5423800 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 25, 2013); Ortega v. Griggs & Assoc. L.L.C., 2012 WL 2913202 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. Sept. 30, 2005); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

266 Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 2013 WL 5423800 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 25, 2013).

267 Flores v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2007 WL 433239 (D. Or. Jan. 31, 2007) (threatening jail for consumer failing to attend a debtor's exam).

268 See Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010); Davis v. Commercial Check Control, Inc., 1999 WL 89556 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 1999); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983) (threatened arrest on bad check charges; never sought criminal complaints). See also Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (no intent to prosecute bad check).

269 Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 210 F. Supp. 2d 907 (W.D. Mich. 2002); Davis v. Commercial Check Control, Inc., 1999 WL 89556 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 1999); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983).

270 Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 210 F. Supp. 2d 907 (W.D. Mich. 2002); Davis v. Commercial Check Control, Inc., 1999 WL 89556 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 1999).

271 Jones v. Kunin, 2000 WL 34402017 (S.D. Ill. May 1, 2000).

intent, that the complainant is the check payee, that the action is not time-barred, etc.[272] Note that the FDCPA does not apply to an entity that, under the supervision of the state or a district attorney, operates a pre-trial check diversion program.[273]

7.2.4.3 Threats Involving Postjudgment Remedies

With the exception of student loans,[274] nonpayment of a consumer debt cannot result in wage garnishment until the creditor has obtained a court judgment. A court order is also a requirement for seizures of bank accounts or other property, except where property is pledged as collateral or seized pursuant to a banker's right of setoff. Unless there is a court judgment against the consumer or the threat clearly discloses that a precondition to seizure or garnishment is a collection lawsuit filed against the consumer where the court rules for the collector, any threat to garnish wages or a bank account or seize property can violate FDCPA § 1692e(4).[275]

It is also deceptive to threaten that property will be seized immediately upon commencement of a lawsuit, instead of after a judgment for the collector.[276] A statement that is interpreted as a threat that postjudgment remedies will necessarily follow filing of a suit ignores the potential of the consumer raising defenses in the suit, so it can be a threat to seek postjudgment remedies even when not prevailing in the collection lawsuit.[277]

Even after a court judgment is obtained on a debt, it can be a FDCPA § 1692e(4) violation to threaten to seize property if there is no intent to do so.

There can be no intent to garnish wages within ten days where the collector has not yet filed suit against the consumer.[278] Moreover, where a collector does not intend to sue, it certainly does not intend to resort to postjudgment remedies.[279] Threats that a collector has already begun the process of seizing property postjudgment can lead to a finding that there is no intent to seize the property if such initial steps have not in fact begun.[280]

A collector's statement such as that they will contact a spouse's "employer to verify that he is still working and look into me if I am working because they can garnish our wages to pay back the debt" will violate FDCPA § 1692e(4) if the collector does not intend to pursue garnishment.[281] Moreover, federal law protects 75% or more of a consumer's wages from garnishment and state law may offer even greater protections,[282] so that a representation of an intent to garnish all or 75% of a consumer's wages should violate FDCPA § 1692e(4).[283]

The United States can administratively garnish student loan debtors' wages without a court judgment. But there could be a FDCPA § 1692e(4) or (5) violation where a collector threatens administrative garnishment where the United States only garnished 12% of accounts the collector referred to it.[284]

Similarly, threats to seize the consumer's property prior to obtaining a court judgment violates FDCPA § 1692e(4).[285] Because some of the consumer's property will be exempt from seizure, it is also a violation to threaten to seize all of a consumer's property.[286]

---

272 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (threat of unlawful action because limitations period had run).

273 15 U.S.C. § 1692p. See § 4.8.11, supra.

274 But see Kort v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 2001 WL 881449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2001) (claim stated where student loan collector's letter plausibly suggested to consumer that garnishment could be initiated with less than thirty-day notice required by applicable federal regulations).

275 See Thomas v. LDG Fin. Services, Inc., 463 F. Supp. 2d 1370 (N.D. Ga. 2006) (left for jury to determine if threat to garnish without judgment); Schimmel v. Slaughter, 975 F. Supp. 1357 (M.D. Ga. 1997) (§ 1692e(10) violated where attorney letter suggested that wage garnishment would inevitably follow filing of a collection lawsuit); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990) (represented that the mere filing of a lawsuit would result in seizure of property).

276 Dutton v. Wolhar, 809 F. Supp. 1130 (D. Del. 1992) (language "once judgment is obtained" falsely represented collector's ability to secure judgment), aff'd, 5 F.3d 649 (3d Cir. 1993); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983). Cf. Winans v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 3942073 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 16, 2018) (no impermissible threat of "imminent asset seizure" where two unchecked checkboxes labeled "Employment Verified" and "Assets Located" and elsewhere letter asks for payment to stop further procedures). But cf. Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000) (debt collector's threat of seizure or garnishment within five days of notice to consumer, contrary to state five-day waiting period violated § 1692e(2)(A) but not § 1692e(4) where there was evidence of collector's intent to seize consumer's property).

277 See Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993). But see Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015 (9th Cir. 2012) (lawsuit could result in judgment not the same as would result in judgment).

278 Terry v. C & D Complete Bus. Solutions, 2011 WL 144920 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 18, 2011).

279 See In re Cambron, 2007 WL 4287376 (M.D. Ala. Dec. 5, 2007).

280 Weiss v. Collection Ctr., Inc., 667 N.W.2d 567 (N.D. 2003).

281 See Skinner v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 2012 WL 6554530, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2012). Accord Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Fed. Check Processing, Inc., 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 13, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2016) (misrepresenting that nonpayment would result in garnishment of consumer's wages where collector did not pursue garnishments); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983).

282 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 14.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

283 Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993) (threatening that all wages would be garnished). See also Seabrook v. Onondaga Bur. of Med. Economics, Inc., 705 F. Supp. 81 (N.D.N.Y. 1989) (threat to garnish 10% of consumer's wages was per se violation of § 1692e(5) because of failure to disclose exemption of first $100.50 in weekly earnings); Bieber v. Associated Collection Services, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 1410 (D. Kan. 1986) (false representation that 75% of wages would be garnished was excused as bona fide error).

284 Lucero v. The CBE Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3894043 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2010).

285 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Fed. Check Processing, Inc., 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 13, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 5956073 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2016) (misrepresenting that nonpayment would result in seizure of consumer's property).

286 See Young v. Dey, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21484 (D. Conn. July 5, 1994) (issue of fact as to whether debt collector's threat of attachment, without disclosing relevant property exemptions, was misleading).

As with collection lawsuits, just because a collector's attempt to use postjudgment remedies is ultimately unsuccessful does not make the attempt an action that cannot legally be taken.[287] But threatening or seizing wages or assets in violation of federal or state law is a violation.[288]

The same is the case where a debt collector pursues postjudgment remedies knowing that the underlying judgment has been vacated[289] or that the judgment is void (such as where there was sewer service).[290] It should also be unlawful to pursue postjudgment remedies after the debt has been paid,[291] discharged in bankruptcy,[292] or the parties reached a settlement to prevent those remedies and the consumer complied with their obligations under the settlement.[293]

Threatening to seize wages or assets while knowing that they are protected by state or federal exemptions or do not belong to the debtor is also a threat of an unlawful action.[294] So are threats to employ postjudgment remedies that involve military servicemembers without complying with the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act and related state requirements.[295] It can also be a FDCPA § 1692e(4) or (5) violation to send the consumer a notice that the consumer's house has been foreclosed upon and sold when that is not the case.[296]

7.2.5 Threatening Unlawful or Unintended Lawsuits, Other Actions, FDCPA § 1692e(5)

7.2.5.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(5) The threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken.[297]

FDCPA § 1692e(5) prohibits a collector from threatening to take either an unlawful action or an action it does not intend to take. The "or" means that a threat to take an unlawful action is actionable even if the collector intends to take it. Also, a threat to take even a legal action is actionable if the collector does not intend to take it. FDCPA § 1692e(5) often overlaps with section 1692e(2) (prohibiting misrepresentation of a debt's legal status),[298] section 1692e(4) (prohibiting specific threats),[299] section 1692e(10) (prohibiting false representations 287 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015).

288 See Baltazar v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2018 WL 3941943 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 4781143 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2018) (§ 1692e(5) claim stated where collection attorneys initiated garnishment on bank branch in New York in violation of New York's rules providing that New York courts had no jurisdiction over account in bank's New Jersey branch); New v. Gemini Capital Group, 859 F. Supp. 2d 990 (S.D. Iowa 2012) (garnishment unconstitutional).

289 Mateer v. Ross, Suchoff, Egert, Hankin, Maidenbaum & Mazel, P.C., 1997 WL 171011 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 1997).

290 Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201 (E.D.N.Y. 2019).

291 Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011).

292 Contreras v. United States Dep't of Veterans Affairs (In re Contreras), 2007 WL 273128 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 26, 2007).

293 Moore v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 2009 WL 1873654 (E.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009). See also Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994) (consumers' allegations that debt collector agreed to payment schedule and then demanded increased payments and filed wage garnishment without contacting consumer's attorney as promised were sufficient to state claim under § 1692e(5)).

294 See Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Services, Inc., 2018 WL 715359, at *6 (D. Nev. Feb. 5, 2018) (stating § 1692e(5) claim where the debt collector's execution on the debtor's wife's bank account was possibly illegal as the collector had already received payment for the debt); Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (threat to seize home despite homestead exemption; while defendant did not contest that homestead exemption was applicable, court did not specify whether defendant knew of such applicability prior to making threat to foreclose); Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993) (threat to seize all wages and property; no indication in case that collector knew that some funds were protected against garnishment under state law); Seabrook v. Onondaga Bur. of Med. Economics, Inc., 705 F. Supp. 81, 85 (N.D.N.Y. 1989) (failing to disclose exemption of first $100.50 in weekly disposable earnings; "OMBE did not proffer any evidence to establish that it knew the amount of plaintiff's weekly disposable earnings, so that it would have been justified in threatening to garnish plaintiff's gross weekly wages in an amount up to 10%. Consequently, because the May 18, 1988, letter did not accurately reflect the state of New York garnishment law at the time it was sent, the court finds that that letter violated § 1692e(5)."). See also Duby v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2005 WL 8177397, at *2 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2005) (denying motion to dismiss where court did not know "whether . . . plaintiff's accounts contained, in whole or in part, social security funds that were exempt from garnishment; what knowledge defendant had about the exempt status of any or all funds in those accounts at the time garnishment was threatened or attempted; and what communications between the parties took place prior to the attempt to garnish funds"), adopted, 2005 WL 8177396 (D. Or. Sept. 7, 2005); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2000 WL 1470213 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 29, 2000) (granting class certification to persons sent letters threatening wage garnishment, normally not available in Pennsylvania; no indication in case that collector knew that wages were largely protected against garnishment under state law). But cf. Gates v. MCT Group, Inc., 678 Fed. Appx. 539, 540 (9th Cir. 2017) (affirming dismissal of § 1692e(5) claim because "least sophisticated debtor" who received Notice of Levy would not have viewed notice as threat to levy Social Security benefits, where document informed her that those benefits were exempt and instructed her as to process for claiming an exemption).

295 See Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (violating state garnishment statute by failing to file military service affidavit also violated §§ 1692e(5), 1692e(10), particularly since debtor was deployed in Middle East at time).

296 Friello v. Bank of N.Y., 2012 WL 4892856 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 15, 2012).

297 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(5). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(1).

Every major bill, e.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(5) (1976), S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(5) (1977), contained language identical to this section, except the initial House bill which contained a different version, H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(6) (1975).

298 See § 7.2.2, supra.

299 See § 7.2.4, supra.

and deceptive means),[300] and the general deception prohibition found in section 1692e.[301]

Some threats are clear and then the only issue is whether the threatened action is either illegal or not intended. Whether the consumer is misled by the threats should be irrelevant as long as they are either illegal or not intended to be carried out. The Eleventh Circuit has ruled that it is a per se FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation if the collector made threats to take an action it did not intend to take, whether or not the consumer is deceived by these threats. The only issue is whether the collector intended to follow through with the threat.[302]

More often, a debt collector's threats are veiled, implied, or ambiguous. In that case, the question of whether the representation is a threat to take a particular action is to be judged by the least sophisticated consumer standard.[303] The question is whether such a consumer would perceive the statement as a threat to take a certain action.

7.2.5.2 Veiled, Implied, or Ambiguous Threats

7.2.5.2.1 Introduction

Debt collector threats often are veiled, implied, or ambiguous, but representations are still actionable under FDCPA § 1692e(5) if the least sophisticated consumer would view them as threats to take illegal actions or actions that the collector does not intend to take.[304] Where a representation has two meanings, only one of which would violate FDCPA § 1692e(5), the representation can be seen as a violation.[305]

Even though a collector only states it will "consider" further action, this can be a threat of imminent action, for example if the collector states it will consider further action if payment is not made within five days.[306] The Ninth Circuit found a threat to investigate a consumer's employment was a veiled threat to contact the consumer's employer about the debt, which would be unlawful as a prohibited third-party contact.[307] The Seventh Circuit held that a privacy notice stating that the collector can share the consumer's information with third parties was a prohibited threat to share information with third parties, even though the notice states "to the extent permitted by law."[308] A letter promising a costly and long personal asset search could be viewed as a threat that the consumer would bear the cost of the investigation.[309]

A debt collector's statement about the "importance of preserving a good credit record" could be seen as a threat to report the debt to a consumer reporting agency.[310] A letter stating that an investigation may be conducted to determine what further action to take is a threat to put the consumer's assets in jeopardy.[311]

300 § 7.2.10, infra.

301 See § 7.3, infra.

302 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168, 1175 (11th Cir. 1985).

303 See § 7.2.4, supra.

304 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199–1201 (11th Cir. 2010); Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009); Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450 (3d Cir. Sept. 29, 2006); United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Bentley v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., 6 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1993) (implied that legal proceedings were authorized and imminent when they were not); Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., Inc., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988); Murray v. Hunter Warfield, Inc., 2021 WL 268382, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 27, 2021) ("reasonable interpretation of the letter is that it is implicitly threatening litigation to coerce Plaintiff to pay the debt"); Gartrell v. J.J. Marshall & Assoc., Inc., 2020 WL 3250219, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2020) (reasonable juror could conclude that the letter conveyed a "thinly-veiled" threat of some "approaching menace"), adopted, 2020 WL 3250037 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2020); Williams v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8316935 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017); Talamor v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 3712186 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 10, 2017); United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 820 F. Supp. 228 (D. Md. 1993), aff'd, 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Henderson v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1989 WL 78235 (W.D.N.Y. July 13, 1989).

305 Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450 (3d Cir. Sept. 29, 2006). But see Goswami v. Am. Collections Enter., Inc., 377 F.3d 488, 495 (5th Cir. 2004) (reference to an "amnesty period" for payment did not imply that nonpayment would result in criminal prosecution).

306 Bloodworth v. United Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 1453520 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 12, 2016) (collecting cases interpreting "consider").

307 Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988). See also Sherman v. Fin. Credit, L.L.C., 2003 WL 1732601 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 2003) (mere mention of employer survived motion to dismiss even though argument was "a stretch"); Raimondi v. McAllister & Assoc., Inc., 50 F. Supp. 2d 825 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (investigate finances through employer); Henderson v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1989 WL 78235 (W.D.N.Y. July 13, 1989) (just mentioning the employer's name is enough to imply an unlawful contact with the employer); United States v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17964 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 11, 1982) (letter sent to servicemember pretended it was supposed to be sent to servicemember's commanding officer); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979) investigator call on employer); Fierst, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 19, 1979) (right to ask for personal information from third parties implies more than just location information).

308 Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009) (notice sent with debt collection letter and mentioned information obtained while collecting debt). See also Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2013) (privacy notice that collector shares certain nonpublic information with third parties); Smith v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1675078 (E.D. Pa. June 12, 2009) (privacy notice that indicated sharing information with third parties even with language "We do not disclose the information we collect about you to anyone, except as permitted by law"); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007). But see Carlvin v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 635151 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2017) (§ 1692e(5) did not apply because privacy notice not sent with collection letter and not mentioning collection was not a communication within FDCPA's scope).

309 See Elmore v. Northeast Florida Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 4480419 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2011).

310 See Diena v. Certified Credit & Collection Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 570247 (D.N.J. Feb. 11, 2015). See also Reitz v. Credit Sys. of Fox Valley, Inc., 2020 WL 4753842 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 17, 2020) (collection letter stating "Avoid errors and protect your CREDIT RECORD" could be understood as implied threat to report debt to credit reporting agency even though there was no intent to do so).

311 In re Cambron, 2007 WL 4287376, at *7 (M.D. Ala. Dec. 5, 2007) ("MDS suggested that investigation into available sources in order to locate assets would be undertaken, and that collection efforts against assets would be taken, unless the Cambrons paid the debts, when MDS had no intention of doing so").

7.2.5.2.2 Implied threats to sue

The Third Circuit finds that a letter indicating that the collector "could" refer a debt to an attorney and "could" institute suit could be found to be a violation as implying to a least sophisticated consumer that suit would be instituted.[312] A statement can be viewed as a threat of litigation where it warns that if payment is not made immediately, the consumer "may" be subject to court costs and attorney fees.[313] The FTC Commentary states that a "debt collector may state that certain action is possible, if it is true that such action is legal and is frequently taken by the collector or creditor with respect to similar debts; however, if the debt collector has reason to know there are facts that make the action unlikely in the particular case, a statement that the action was possible would be misleading."[314]

But other courts find no threat from communications that the collector can or may sue.[315] Some courts require that the threat communicate that a lawsuit is not merely a possibility, but that a decision to pursue legal action is either imminent or has already been made. These courts find litigation threats can be found in indirect or oblique statements, provided that they imply legal action is underway or contemplated in the near future.[316] Other courts find this standard too restrictive.[317]

Even just a statement that non-payment will be costly for the consumer can be seen as a threat of litigation.[318] A threat of litigation can be found where the collector states that it will assume the consumer is not going to pay without legal action and will act accordingly.[319] A threat of litigation can be found by the phrase "voluntary resolution is doubtful.[320] The same is the case with a phrase "may exercise various options to enforce collections."[321]

The threat to turn a matter over to an attorney can be viewed as a threat to institute a collection lawsuit.[322] "A debt collector's statement that legal action has been recommended is a representation that legal action may be taken, since such a recommendation implies that the creditor will act on it at least some of the time."[323]

312 Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450 (3d Cir. Sept. 29, 2006). See also LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199–1201 (11th Cir. 2010) (for jury to decide if conditional statement was a threat of suit); Williams v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8316935 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017) (stating "we may refer this matter to an attorney" and stating "If suit is filed"); Feuerstack v. Weiner, 2014 WL 3619675 (D.N.J. July 22, 2014) (attorney letter with legal caption and indicate suit may be filed); Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008); Khon v. Paul Michael Mktg. Serv., 2006 WL 3065588 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 27, 2006) (if payment not received, creditor will have to choose whether or not to take legal action); Uyeda v. J.A. Cambece Law Office, P.C., 2005 WL 1168421 (N.D. Cal. May 16, 2005) (equivocal language can constitute an impermissible threat); Kapeluschnik v. Leschack & Grodensky, P.C., 1999 WL 33973360 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 26, 1999) ("legal action may become necessary" was threat of suit; consumer failed to prove it was false); Lamb v. M&M Assoc., Inc., 1998 WL 34288694 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 1998) (could be sued); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997) ("other actions . . . may be considered" may threaten suit); Vaughn v. CSC Credit Services, 1995 WL 51402 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 1995) (mag. judge) ("could" be turned over to credit reporting agency was threat to do so); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994) (possible legal action); Lambert v. Nat'l Credit Bur., Inc., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18623 (D. Or. Apr. 24, 1981) (if there is a suit there will be extra costs for the consumer).

313 Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008); Failla v. Cohen, 2005 WL 3032560 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2005) ("[w]e may proceed with suit against you without waiting 30 days if so requested by our client").

314 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

315 Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., L.L.C., 644 Fed. Appx. 19 (2d Cir. 2016); Muharemovic v. Client Services, Inc., 2017 WL 6316827 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 11, 2017) (no threat that consumer will be sued where indicated that referral would be made to attorney and settlement would avoid potential legal action, but indicating that no decision has been made); Stockman v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2017 WL 2798403, at *4 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2017) (mere mention of a potential future legal action not sufficient; "there must be something to suggest that such litigation is imminent or that the decision to sue has already been made"); Matuszczak v. Miramed Revenue Group L.L.C., 2017 WL 5467117 (N.D. Ind. Nov. 13, 2017) (no threat of a lawsuit where said could refer the debt to an attorney); Cokeley v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 5341919 (D. Kan. Oct. 21, 2014); Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2013); Ruiz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 33016 (N.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2012) (considering forwarding account to an attorney not a threat to sue); Sherry v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2011 WL 13177236 (D. Neb. Mar. 22, 2011) (no threat of lawsuit found where stated "Capitol One Bank (USA), N.A. has not yet made a decision to file a lawsuit"; letter also stated: "If we cannot get this matter resolved soon and your account charges off, Capital One Bank (USA), N.A. may be forced to take legal action"); Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997); Lee v. CBC Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21993 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 1996) ("may" or "might" not enough to imply legal action).

316 Jenkins v. Union Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1120 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

317 See Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 2017 WL 1326312 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 10, 2017) (collecting cases).

318 See Sweeney v. D.C. Credit Services, Inc., 2007 WL 981919 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2007).

319 Bakewell v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 2007 WL 951764 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 28, 2007).

320 Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 2017 WL 1326312 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 10, 2017).

321 Koval v. Harris & Harris, Ltd., 2017 WL 1321152 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 5, 2017); Cuenca v. Harris & Harris, Ltd., 2017 WL 1196922 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017).

322 United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Janti v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3058260 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2010); Lovelace v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 3333019 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2007) (refer to attorney for "resolution"); Arellano v. Etan Indus., 1998 WL 911729 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 23, 1998); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-6 (reference to an attorney may mislead the debtor as to the likelihood or imminence of legal action), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. Cf. Talamor v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 3712186 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 10, 2017) (while threat to turn matter over to attorney could imply that collection action would be filed, consumer failed to submit evidence that there was no intent to file suit).

323 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-6, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But see Owsley v. Coldata, Inc., 104 Fed. Appx. 994 (5th Cir. 2004) (account was "scheduled to be returned to [her] creditor who may . . . secure advice of counsel" not threat of imminent suit); Zilbert v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 8236354 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 13, 2017) (no threat of legal action where collection agency letter said would where would send consumer's account to law firm for review by an attorney to consider possible legal options).

The Second Circuit found this language, although vague, a sufficient threat to initiate a collection lawsuit: "48 hour notice" and "Notice is Hereby Given That This Item Has Already Been Referred For Collection Action," "We Will At Any Time After 48 Hours Take Action As Necessary And Appropriate To Secure Payment In Full," and "Pay This Amount Now If Action Is To Be Stopped."[324] The demand for payment within five days with a threat of a collection action can be interpreted that the collection action will be brought immediately after five days.[325]

An expression of urgency and the suggestion of a lawsuit can be seen as a threat of an immediate collection lawsuit.[326] A sense of urgency, combined with indication that other remedies have been exhausted also can make the threat of further proceedings to be a threat of an imminent lawsuit.[327] That the account is currently being reviewed for legal action can be seen as a threat of immediate legal action.[328] An attempt to settle the debt out of court before proceeding with collection procedures can be taken as a threat of a lawsuit.[329]

While a letter advising the consumer to consult with an attorney about the collector's remedies and the consumer's defenses might not be a threat to sue, adding the statement that the debt would be pursued to a conclusion can make the statement a threat to sue.[330] Where a letter starts by offering the consumer a settlement to resolve the matter and them immediately advises the consumer to contact their attorney regarding the collection agency's "potential remedies" and the consumer's "defenses," such terms, in combination, could communicate the message to the consumer that if they does not pay then they will be sued.[331] A threat to file a collection lawsuit is implied in a "final notice" from a law firm that the debt had to be paid or the law firm would have no choice "except to take further action in the matter as may be necessary."[332]

The terminology in a threat can imply the threat of a lawsuit, such as using words like "plaintiff and "damages and costs"[333] or the letter using a legal caption.[334] An attorney's letter stating that garnishment was available "after judgment was obtained" could convey to the least sophisticated consumer the impression that a judgment was a virtual certainty, and therefore was deceptive.[335]

Language from a collection agency that may not appear to a consumer to be threatening a lawsuit may appear to be doing so when coming from a law firm.[336] A collection letter on a lawyer's letterhead adds to the impression that litigation may be imminent[337] particularly where the letter includes a legal caption and indicates litigation may result.[338]

A court found a law firm's letter to be threatening litigation where it requested payment so that further action by the office could be avoided.[339] The fact that a letter is from an attorney, combined with a sense of urgency and a threat of an unspecified action, can be seen as a threat of litigation.[340] An attorney statement that it was hired to proceed against the consumer also could be seen as a threat of suit.[341]

But not every letter from an attorney implies the threat of litigation.[342] Letters on attorney letterhead were not found to be threats of suit where they stated "act now to resolve the

---

324 Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 2018 WL 3014422 (W.D. Tex. May 15, 2018). But see Guzman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 861914 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 8, 2021) (distinguishing Pipiles; no violation where defendant merely reported to CRA that debt was "[s]eriously past due date" and had been "assigned" to attorney, collection agency, or creditors internal collection department, but did not threaten that they would do anything about it and did not set a deadline for consumer to respond).

325 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985). See also Edwards v. Nat'l Bus. Factors, Inc., 897 F. Supp. 455 (D. Nev. 1995) (threat of "action" by attorney "without further notice").

326 Bankston v. Phycom Corp., 2007 WL 4170627 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2007).

327 Bandas v. United Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5191844 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 8, 2017).

328 Dewees v. Legal Servicing, 506 F. Supp. 2d 128 (E.D.N.Y. 2007). But see Laster v. Cole, 2000 WL 306848 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 20, 2000) (payment not received within seven days would make litigation recommendation).

329 Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982).

330 Huling v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4803196 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 13, 2016).

331 Soyinka v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 472 F. Supp. 3d 463, 467 (N.D. Ill. 2020). See also Lee v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2020 WL 6870823 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 23, 2020).

332 Phillips v. Stokes & McAtee, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22731 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 8, 1992). But see Williams v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 765574 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 27, 2021) (no violation where letter referenced "possible civil action," as this language was not threatening, and statement that agency "may be instructed to take further action" was also not threatening).

333 Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989).

334 See Feuerstack v. Weiner, 2014 WL 3619675 (D.N.J. July 22, 2014); Finch v. Silverstein, 1996 WL 467251 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 13, 1996).

335 Schimmel v. Slaughter, 975 F. Supp. 1357 (M.D. Ga. 1997). But see Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015 (9th Cir. 2012) (different result where letter only said could result in postjudgment remedies).

336 Gervais v. Riddle & Assoc., P.C., 363 F. Supp. 2d 345 (D. Conn. 2005), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 479 F. Supp. 2d 270 (D. Conn. 2007); Francis v. Snyder, 389 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2005).

337 See § 16.5.3, infra.

338 Feuerstack v. Weiner, 2014 WL 3619675 (D.N.J. July 22, 2014).

339 Canlas v. Eskanos & Adler, P.C., 2005 WL 1630014 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2005).

340 Francis v. Snyder, 389 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2005).

341 Kaminsky v. Nat'l Bur. Collection Corp., 2008 WL 11330728 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 19, 2008).

342 See Powell v. Aldous & Assoc., 762 Fed. Appx. 127 (3d Cir. 2019) (that letter from law firm and contained legal language was not enough); Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 644 Fed. Appx. 19 (2d Cir. 2016); Rueda v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2018 WL 4777561 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 3, 2018) (law firm's statement that its client "may consider additional remedies to collect the debt" not threat to sue); Aker v. Bureaus Inv. Group Portfolio No. 15 L.L.C., 2014 WL 4815366 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2014) (lawyer's mention of "remedies" not a threat of litigation); Nichols v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 760 F. Supp. 2d 275 (N.D.N.Y. 2011) (letter sent by out-of-state law firm on firm's letterhead not threat of imminent litigation where letter advised that firm was representing creditor, that no attorney had yet personally reviewed debtor's account, but noted that creditor could consider additional remedies to recover balance due); Kapeluschnik v. Leschack & Grodensky, P.C., 1999 WL 33973360 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 26, 1999) ("more than the fact that a collection letter is from an attorney" is required to find that threat of litigation); Veillard v. Mednick, 24 F. Supp. 2d 863 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (dun on problem[343] or "may consider additional remedies to recover the balance due"[344] or would take "appropriate action" or "action as necessary."[345]

Neither does every letter from a collection agency threaten legal action.[346] A court may find a collection agency indicating that it would investigate available options did not imply a threat to sue.[347]

7.2.5.3 Threats to Take Actions Not Intended to Be Taken

7.2.5.3.1 Introduction

A threat, explicit or implied, is actionable under FDCPA § 1692e(5) if either the threat is unlawful or the collector does not intend to take the threatened action. If there is no intent to act on a threat, the threat need not be to take an unlawful action. FDCPA § 1692e(5) applies to a threat to take any action, as long as the consumer can convince the court that the collector does not intend to take the action.

The consumer bears the burden of proving the lack of intent to take the action and must be prepared with some evidence to rebut an assertion that the debt collector intended to take the action.[348] But the collector's own self-serving affidavit of its intent is not dispositive.[349]

While FDCPA § 1692e(5) prohibits the collector threatening an action it does not intend to take, the Third Circuit has indicated it is enough to show that the threat is an action the collector is unlikely to take.[350] Since proof of the collector's state of mind may be difficult, this is a more manageable standard than proof that there was 100% no intent to take the action.

A common collector technique is to display a false sense of urgency. This can show that there is no intent to take an action where the collector threatens the action if the consumer does not respond immediately, but the collector does not take the action despite the consumer's lack of immediate response.[351] A statement that a demand is final can be deceptive where it is not in fact a final demand, but the collector continues to send other "final" demands.[352] The same is the case with a letter that states there will be no more extensions of time.[353]

There is no intent to follow through with a threatened action if the action has already taken place. For example, there is no intent to send a matter to a collection agency where that has already happened.[354]

7.2.5.3.2 Proving lack of intent to sue

Proof of the lack of intent to sue is often dependent on the precise meaning of the collector's implied threat as it would be understood by the least sophisticated consumer. For example, if the threat can be characterized as one to file suit immediately, the passage of time without such a suit may be convincing as to the collector's intent to file suit immediately.[355] This is attorney's letterhead not, by itself, threat of legal action); Sturdevant v. Jolas, P.C., 942 F. Supp. 426 (W.D. Wis. 1996).

343 Daniels v. Solomon, 2017 WL 3675400 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 25, 2017).

344 Walsh v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 2010 WL 5394624 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2010). See also Covington v. Franklin Collection Services, Inc., 2016 WL 4159731 (D. Kan. Aug. 5, 2016).

345 Walsh v. Jon B. Sage, P.A., 2007 WL 9698323 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 12, 2007).

346 Winans v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 3942073 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 16, 2018) ("we seldom resort to litigation" found not to be a threat of litigation).

347 Williams v. Northwest Collectors, Inc., 2018 WL 6505431 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2018). See also Scavone v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2020 WL 589641 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 2020) (no violation where letter stated that creditor may forward account to one of its attorneys for review), adopted, 2020 WL 372785 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 23, 2020).

348 E.g., Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 441 Fed. Appx. 712 (11th Cir. 2011); Cox v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2019 WL 10248775, at *5 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2019) (consumer's "speculation" that collector "had to know" about plan to dismiss collection action did not overcome collector's assertion that it could have brought such action); Pierson v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 957 (E.D. Tenn. 2013) (debt collector testified that it was his intent is to sue on every account assigned); Mullen v. Compton, 2013 WL 3367080 (S.D. Ohio July 5, 2013); Matray v. DBF Collection Corp., 2011 WL 2417151 (D.N.J. June 13, 2011); Leone v. Ashwood Fin., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); Baptist v. Global Holding and Inv. Co., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1989450 (E.D.N.Y. July 9, 2007); Prewitt v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2007 WL 841778 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2007); Bystrom v. Burgess Law Office, 2007 WL 5329352 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 20, 2007). See also Little v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 548 Fed. Appx. 514 (10th Cir. 2013); Malowney v. Bush/Ross, 2010 WL 3340493 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 25, 2010) (collection attorneys intended suit).

349 Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985).

350 Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450, 455 (3d Cir. 2010).

351 See Diena v. MCS Claim Services, Inc., 2014 WL 5358995 (D.N.J. Oct. 20, 2014) (threatened to recommend to its client that further action be taken when no recommendation intended); Walsh v. Jon B. Sage, P.A., 2007 WL 9698323 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 12, 2007) ("Failing to receive a satisfactory response from you within forty-eight (48) hours of your receipt of this letter, we shall have no alternative but to take the appropriate action. . . .").

352 See Marino v. Hoganwillig, P.L.L.C., 910 F. Supp. 2d 492 (W.D.N.Y. 2012); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994) ("final demand" in first of many letters).

353 Provo v. Rady Children's Hosp. San Diego, 2015 WL 3648845 (S.D. Cal. June 11, 2015).

354 Berndt v. Fairfield Resorts, Inc., 337 F. Supp. 2d 1120 (W.D. Wis. 2004).

355 See Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985); Beeler v. C.S.D., L.L.C., 2012 WL 2045863 (D. Md. June 5, 2012); Drennan v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 950 F. Supp. 858 (N.D. Ill. 1996); Tsenes v. Trans-Continental Credit & Collection Corp., 892 F. Supp. 461 (E.D.N.Y. 1995); Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993); Graziano v. Harrison, 763 F. Supp. 1269 (D.N.J. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991); Florence v. Nat'l Sys., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20344 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 14, 1983); Lambert v. Nat'l Credit Bur., Inc., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18623 (D. Or. Apr. 24, 1981) (no intent to file suit immediately after 48 hours); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997). See also Zarate v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 3448165 (N.D. Ill. June 24, 2020) (even if consumer interpreted letter as containing even an indirect threat of litigation, letter must indicate that legal action is underway or contemplated in near future in order to be actionable; in this case, litigation was not underway or imminent); Rosenberg v. Client Services, 2020 WL 2732017 (S.D.N.Y. May 26, 2020) (plaintiff failed plausibly to allege that collector made threat of imminent legal action).

the case even if suit is eventually filed, as long as the threat is interpreted to mean that the collector will sue immediately.[356]

A threat to sue immediately also can be shown to be deceptive where the procedures to determine whether a suit should be filed have not been performed.[357] An experienced foreclosure attorney can have no intent to foreclose within a threatened ten days where state law first requires a thirty -day notice prior to initiating a foreclosure.[358]

On the other hand, it may be more difficult to persuade a court that the action was not intended to be taken where the threat is interpreted as an open-ended threat to sue. The mere passage of time without suit might not show an intent not to sue,[359] particularly where changed circumstances changed the collector's intent.[360]

Similarly, if the threat can be characterized as the collector threatening to initiate suit itself or as determining whether an attorney should initiate suit, lack or intent can be shown by the collector not having an internal procedure to get authorization to file suit or its admitted recognition of the impracticality of doing so due to the small amounts at issue,[361] lack of authority to proceed from the creditor[362] or by the lack of legal authority under state law.[363] The collector may be engaged in the unauthorized practice of law if it recommends to the creditor that the creditor should sue on the debt.[364]

A contract between the collection agency and creditor may spell out whether the collection agency has authority to initiate a suit, refer the matter to an attorney, or otherwise make a determination that a lawsuit be filed. It can be deceptive where a collector threatens suit but has no authority to initiate suit.[365] Similarly, there may be no intent to sue if the creditor has guidelines as to under what circumstances the creditor will authorize suit, and it can be shown that the consumer's debt does not meet those criteria,[366] or that procedures were never followed to determine if a suit was possible under those guidelines.[367]

On the other hand, a more vague threat to sue might be more credible if interpreted to mean that the collector would refer the matter to a party who could initiate suit[368] or that suit is one of the possible outcomes of nonpayment.

Lack of intent to pursue suit can be established where the collector never pursues lawsuits or never sues in the locality

356 Bond v. Ideal Collection Services, Inc., 2018 WL 7351699, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 29, 2018) (threatened suit if no payment within ten days but took action a year later); Piccinetti v. Clayton, Myrick, McClanahan & Coulter, P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 3879085 (D.N.J. Sept. 5, 2017) (§ 1692e(5) claim stated where letter expressed intent to sue after ten days but suit filed nine months later); Mills v. Turner, 2017 WL 3670967 (D. Mass. Aug. 25, 2017) (violating § 1692e(5) where four letters threatened litigation if payment was not received within ten days ("the next . . . correspondence you will receive will be a Summons and Complaint") but suit was not brought until a year later); Russell v. SN Servicing Corp., 2017 WL 1449211 (N.D. W. Va. Apr. 21, 2017) (no suit filed months after fifteen-day deadline threat); Kaplan v. Law Offices of Timothy Baxter & Assoc., P.C., 2013 WL 2947369 (E.D. Mich. June 14, 2013) (suit not filed until after FDCPA claim brought); Dewees v. Legal Servicing, 506 F. Supp. 2d 128 (E.D.N.Y. 2007); Oglesby v. Rotche, 1993 WL 460841 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 1993) (threat of suit within five days not filed for two months). See also Osterloh, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 13, 1979).

357 See Trans World Accounts, Inc. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 594 F.2d 212 (9th Cir. 1979) (applying FTC Act); Pizzimenti v. Southern, 2011 WL 2182893 (W.D. Ark. June 6, 2011).

358 Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989).

359 Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 441 Fed. Appx. 712 (11th Cir. 2011); Oatman v. Augusta Collection Agency, Inc., 2020 WL 1916173 (S.D. Ga. Apr. 20, 2020); Bytwerk v. Mary Jane Elliott, P.C. 2013 WL 150461 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 14, 2013) (failure to sue within eight months of the collection letter, in and of itself, is not sufficient to create an issue of fact for trial); Hegwood v. Lighthouse Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2012 WL 693658 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 1, 2012) (consumer produced no evidence other than that no suit had been filed to date and failed to allege no intent to sue); Phipps v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2010 WL 1433168 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 5, 2010). But see Lovelace v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 3333019 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2007) (after general threat to sue, may show intent not to sue by fact that no suit filed even six months later).

360 Medley v. Kentucky Accounts Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5471029 (E.D. Ky. Oct. 28, 2014); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (collection suit blocked by consumer's bankruptcy).

361 United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996). See also, Bentley v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., 6 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1993) (implied that legal proceedings were authorized and imminent when they were not for a variety of reasons, including lack of authority by the creditor and lack of attorneys admitted in the state); Leone v. Ashwood Fin., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); United States v. ACB Sales & Serv., Inc., 590 F. Supp. 561 (D. Ariz. 1984) (lack of intent inferred from failure of collector's employee to seek authorization to sue); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-6 ("Lack of intent may be inferred when . . . the debt collector is unable to take the action because the creditor has not authorized him to do so"), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Ellis v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 701 F. Supp. 2d 215 (N.D.N.Y. 2010) (allegation that creditor has not authorized suit); Malowney v. Zacur, Graham & Costis, P.A., 2011 WL 1655572 (M.D. Fla. May 2, 2011) (same); Rosa v. Gaynor, 784 F. Supp. 1 (D. Conn. 1989).

362 Bentley v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., 6 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1993) (implied that legal proceedings were authorized and imminent when they were not).

363 Vaile v. Nat'l Credit Works, Inc., 2012 WL 1520120 (D. Ariz. Mar. 26, 2012) (collector as non-attorney could not bring action), adopted, 2012 WL 1520115 (D. Ariz. May 1, 2012); Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997) (non-lawyer collector may not file suit); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994) (no licensed attorney who could file suit).

364 Weinstein, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 14, 1980).

365 See Bentley v. Great Lakes Collection Bur., 6 F.3d 60, 62–63 (2d Cir. 1993).

366 See also Irwin v. Mascott, 186 F.R.D. 567 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (could show intent not to sue class members who did not meet creditor's criteria); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 863 F. Supp. 76 (D. Conn. 1994).

367 See Paul v. Metro Area Collections, Inc., 2011 WL 2270515 (D. Or. May 4, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2261301 (D. Or. June 8, 2011); United States v. ACB Sales & Serv., Inc., 590 F. Supp. 561 (D. Ariz. 1984).

368 See Cook v. Petrocchi, 2010 WL 11520221 (D. Minn. Dec. 2, 2010), aff'd, 455 Fed. Appx. 707 (8th Cir. 2012) (out-of-state attorneys could associate with local counsel); O'Connor v. Check Rite, 973 F. Supp. 1010 (D. Colo. 1997) (lawsuit will be handled by attorney within consumer's state); Sturdevant v. Jolas, P.C., 942 F. Supp. 426 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (demand letter signed by out-of-state attorney acceptable as local counsel could be retained).

where the consumer lives.[369] Some states have electronic dockets that can help expose some of a collector's litigation policies in some courts, and this information may be useful to prove FDCPA claims that a debt collector does not sue in the state or does not sue for small amounts.[370]

Where an attorney letter threatens suit, a lack of an intent to sue can be shown by the fact that the attorney on the collection letter is not admitted to practice in the state and has made no arrangements to refer cases to a local attorney.[371] Lack of intent can be found where the amount of the debt is so small as to make a lawsuit impractical.[372] The FTC Staff Commentary states that "[l]ack of intent may be inferred when the amount of the debt is so small as to make the action totally unfeasible."[373] Nevertheless, courts may require proof of a formal policy of not suing for debts under a certain dollar amount, and not just evidence that no suits have been filed for small amounts.[374]

Where a consumer alleges that the collector's statements should be interpreted as making illegal threats as to postjudgment remedies, the collector may respond that it should not be so characterized and that the collector never sues. This should be an admission that when the collector threatens suit it does not intend to take that action.[375]

Characterizing a threat as implying an intent to try a collection action to completion should be distinguished from a threat to file a complaint against the consumer. The Eighth Circuit has held that there could be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation where the collector requested a continuance on the day of the trial because it had no intent to actually try the case.[376] But other courts find no violation where the threat is to initiate suit, and the collector intends to (or actually does) initiate suit, but has no intent to try the case if the consumer contests the matter.[377]

7.2.5.3.3 Proving lack of intent to take other actions

Threatening arrest, garnishment, or seizure of assets without an intent to do so is a violation of both FDCPA § 1692e(4) and (5). Threats to take these actions are examined at § 7.2.4.2, supra, as part of the discussion of FDCPA § 1692e(4).

A lack of intent to carry out a threat to contact a military servicemember's commander about the servicemember's debt was found where the debt collector never contacted 369 See United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Bandas v. United Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5191844 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 8, 2017); United States v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 179 F. Supp. 3d 728 (E.D. Tex. 2016); Lucero v. The CBE Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3894043 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2010) (creditor initiated lawsuits against only 2% of accounts that debt collector referred to creditor); United States v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17964 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 11, 1982) (does not file suit in 99% of cases). See also Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 2018 WL 3014422 (W.D. Tex. May 15, 2018) (collector never suing on debts points to a violation, but collector could seek to prove that creditor files collection suits when case referred back to creditor); Antkowiak v. TaxMasters, 779 F. Supp. 2d 434 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 17, 2011), vacated on other grounds, 455 Fed. Appx. 156 (3d Cir. Dec. 22, 2011); Irwin v. Mascott, 186 F.R.D. 567 (N.D. Cal. 1999); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986) (collector "can" sue on small amounts threat of suit), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987); Lipsett, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 1, 1987). But see Adams v. Applied Bus. Services, 2019 WL 7820431 (E.D. Va. Sept. 4, 2019) (even though law firm had not filed suit on behalf of collector for four years, law firm did have power to file suit and could potentially have done so); Sherrell v. L&P Fin. Adjusters Inc., 2018 WL 3753359, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2018) (collector showed evidence of past suits and consumer's case of lack of intent to sue was pure speculation; even if plaintiff were correct that defendant had not sued consumers in the past and did not intend to sue her now, her "bare allegations" were " insufficient to plausibly infer intent": "Simply because something has not happened in the past does not mean Lou Harris did not intend for it to happen here."); Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997) (creditor sued sometimes and litigation had not been ruled out, though probability of suit was low).

370 Currently, the Westlaw path for the database is Databases-Public Records-Filings or Litigation-Dockets. Copies of judgments themselves also are available from an 800-number. Identify yourself as a Westlaw user if appropriate.

371 Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995).

372 See Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989) (collector testified took no action on debts under $150). But see Tipping-Lipshie v. Riddle, 2000 WL 33963916 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 2, 2000) ($128 claim; firm introduced evidence that it had sued for less); Riveria v. MAB Collections, Inc., 682 F. Supp. 174 (W.D.N.Y. 1988) (statement that collector would advise creditor that legal action may be necessary on $112 debt not deceptive).

373 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-6, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

374 Baptist v. Global Holding and Inv. Co., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1989450 (E.D.N.Y. July 9, 2007) (small amount not conclusive); Leone v. Ashwood Fin., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (denying summary judgment as lawyer was reconsidering his options on small claims); Spira v. Ashwood Fin., Inc., 371 F. Supp. 2d 232 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (although never in past collected on small debts, considering doing so in this case); Unger v. Nat'l Revenue Group, Ltd., 2000 WL 1897346 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 8, 2000) (that collector had not filed suit in last year for less than $300 does not mean it would not do so).

375 Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio 2001). See also Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (debt collector admits it did not intend to file suit); Morgan v. Credit Adjustment Bd., Inc., 999 F. Supp. 803 (E.D. Va. 1998) (same).

376 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 695 (8th Cir. 2017). See also Mason v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2017 WL 6994577, at *33 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017), adopted as modified on other grounds, 2017 WL 8186866 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2017); Lott v. Vial Fotheringham, L.L.P., 2016 WL 4479536 (D. Or. Aug. 23, 2016) (law firm had scheduled foreclosure sale, but cancelled it, did not reschedule sale for later date, continued to threaten foreclosure, but took no affirmative steps to follow through).

377 St. John v. Cach, L.L.C., 822 F.3d 388 (7th Cir. 2016) (filing of a complaint is not an implied threat to pursue the case through trial and consumer never showed an intent not to do so at time complaint was filed); Hackett v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2019 WL 1902750 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019); Gordon v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3545119, at *1, 2 (E.D. Mich. July 24, 2018) (§ 1692e(5) does not prohibit a debt buyer from filing a collection lawsuit without intending to go to trial); Garcia v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 3218665 (D.N.J. June 29, 2018) (no violation where filed lawsuit without intent to try case, but never threatened to try case); Atwood v. Selip & Stylianou, L.L.P., 2017 WL 5515851 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 8, 2017).

commanders.[378] There was no intent to conduct a thorough investigation of the consumer where the collector did not even check the consumer's credit report.[379]

The exact language of the threat can also be important. A statement that the collector is going to investigate the consumer's bank accounts might not be deceptive. But a statement that the collector is going to search all of the consumer's assets can be found to be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation because the search is unlikely to actually be intended.[380]

It is also a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation to threaten to report information to a consumer reporting agency (CRA) where there is no intent to do so.[381] Where a collection agency has a policy of waiting sixty days before reporting adverse information about a debt to a CRA, a threat to do so immediately is a threat to take action it does not intend to take.[382] If a collector does not have a relationship with a CRA allowing it to report consumer debts, then the threat to do so is one with no intent to follow through. For example, a collector had no intent to report information to a CRA where the collector urged payment so it could "update the credit bureau," when the agency would only inform the creditor, who may or may not report that to the reporting agency.[383]

When a collector forgives principal (not interest or fees), this may be taxable income to the consumer, and the creditor must report the forgiven amount to the IRS and the consumer on IRS Form 1099-C.[384] Not only are there exceptions to the general rule that the reported income is taxable (for example, insolvency, bankruptcy, disputed debt), but a form 1099-C need not be sent to the consumer when the amount of principal forgiven is under $600 and in a number of other situations. As a result, a threat that the collector must or will submit to the IRS a Form 1099-C may be made with no intent to do so because the amount of forgiven principal is under $600 or because other exceptions apply.[385]

The scheduling of postjudgment "depositions" in aid of execution of judgment has been found to violate FDCPA § 1692e where there is no indication that the collector intends to take a deposition that would comport with the procedural rules and formalities associated with all other depositions.[386] Where a collector has a policy of requesting a continuance to procure a witness during the state court collection proceeding despite never actually intending to procure a witness, such conduct has been found to violate FDCPA § 1692e.[387]

7.2.5.4 Threats to Take or the Taking of Unlawful Actions

7.2.5.4.1 Introduction

FDCPA § 1692e(5) prohibits threats to take unlawful actions, but some courts have held that the provision applies also to illegal attempts to collect a debt, at least where the attempt results in an ongoing threat of seizure of the consumer's property or assets.[388] Other courts rule that FDCPA

378 United States v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17964 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 11, 1982).

379 Beasley v. Collectors Training Inst., 1999 WL 675196 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 1999).

380 Davis v. Commercial Check Control, Inc., 1999 WL 89556 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 1999) (question for jury).

381 See Draper v. Complete Payment Recovery Services, Inc., 2014 WL 5032340 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 8, 2014); Uyeda v. J.A. Cambece Law Office, P.C., 2005 WL 1168421 (N.D. Cal. May 16, 2005); Epps v. Etan Industr., 1998 WL 851488 (N.D. Ill. Dec, 1998); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-6, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Hanrahan v. Statewide Collection, Inc., 2020 WL 7643127 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2020) (threat to report judgment).

382 See Creighton v. Emporia Credit Serv., Inc., 981 F. Supp. 411 (E.D. Va. 1997).

383 See Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 2017 WL 2404952 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 2017).

384 See § 11.14.2.5, infra.

385 See Balon v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 264 F. Supp. 3d 597 (M.D. Pa. 2017) (granting summary judgment for consumer on § 1692e(10) claim where the collection agency used a false representation by invoking the IRS $600 discharge of debt rules to collect the debt when the agency offered forgiveness of less than $160); Carlvin v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 635151 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2017); Kaff v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2015 WL 12660327 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015) (denying collection agency's motion to dismiss where agency's letter stated "American Express is required to file a form 1099C with the Internal Revenue Service for any cancelled debt of $600 or more," but failed to disclose exceptions, including exception for amounts other than principal); Good v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 55 F. Supp. 3d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (denying the collection agency's motion to dismiss where the dunning letters stated that creditor was "required to file a form 1099C for any cancelled debt of $600 or more," but omitted the seven IRS exceptions); Wideman v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2009 WL 1292830 (W.D. Pa. May 7, 2009) (consumer alleges collector did not intend to file Form 1099-C); Wagner v. Client Services, Inc., 2009 WL 839073 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 26, 2009) (collector failed to show that plaintiff was not exempt from reporting requirement).

386 Barenbaum v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4305761, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 10, 2019) ("least sophisticated debtor—and indeed, debtors of significantly greater sophistication—would read the Notice to say that HHL intended to conduct a deposition when at most HHL sought only an informal conversation regarding the debtor's ability to satisfy his or her debt").

387 See McClellan v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2021 WL 1060559, at *2 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 19, 2021).

388 Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014) (filing a lawsuit seeking to collect illegal interest is a threat to collect such interest); Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp.,762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014) (filing and maintaining an illegal judgment lien); Poirier v. Alco Collections, Inc., 107 F.3d 347 (5th Cir. 1997) (filing a collection lawsuit without authority); Baltazar v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2018 WL 3941943 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 4781143 (Sept. 30, 2018) (improperly seeking a freeze on the consumer's bank account); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (despite bankruptcy stay, pursued collection action); Scott v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 139 F. Supp. 3d 956 (S.D. Iowa 2015) (garnishment of the wrong person's wages); Carrero v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6433214 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2014); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (unregistered debt collector seeking garnishment orders); Smith v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1045 (E.D. Tenn. 2012) (bringing collection lawsuits without authority to do so); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719, 730 (D. Md. 2011) (filing collection lawsuit without authority to do so); Harrington v. CACV, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (fraudulent motion for a default); Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235, 1247 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (to rule otherwise "would provide more protection to debt collectors who violate the law

§ 1692e(5) applies only to threats and not to the taking of illegal action.[389] When a claim involves an illegal action, it is safer to allege, in addition to a FDCPA § 1692e(5) claim, violations of other provisions found in sections 1692d, e, and f.[390]

Not every violation of federal or state law is actionable under FDCPA § 1692e(5).[391] Nevertheless, if the activity does not violate section 1692e(5), it may still violate other FDCPA provisions.[392]

7.2.5.4.2 Threats to unlawfully file a collection lawsuit

A common debt collector threat is to sue the consumer for the debt. There is no violation of FDCPA § 1692e(5) if the collector both intends to pursue that option and that option is lawful. Section 7.2.5.3.2, supra, examines proving whether the threat is intended.

That a collector does not prevail in a debt collection suit against a consumer does not necessarily make the suit unlawful.[393] But there are a number of situations where it is unlawful to bring a collection lawsuit, and threats to do so violate FDCPA § 1692e(5).

When a consumer seeks verification of a debt, the collector must cease collection efforts (including filing a lawsuit) until it responds to the verification request.[394] Until the collector provides that verification, any threats to sue are unlawful.[395]

Similarly either where a consumer is complying with a loan modification or where federal regulations prohibit foreclosure during a pending loan modification, it can be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation to threaten foreclosure.[396] There can be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation where a threat to foreclose is made prior to all the preconditions of state law have been satisfied to allow the collector to foreclose, such as providing notice of the right to cure or the delinquency being over a certain dollar amount.[397]

Serving a legally defective summons and thereby threatening to pursue a default judgment on that summons can violate FDCPA § 1692e(5).[398] It can also be deceptive to sue someone without attaching an affidavit regarding military service, particularly where the defendant was on active duty.[399]

It should be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation to threaten to sue or sue a consumer where the collector knows or should have known that the consumer was not legally liable on the debt.[400] than to those who merely threaten or pretend to do so"); Marchant v. U.S. Collections W., Inc. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1001, 1006 (D. Ariz. 1998) ("To argue that a collection agency can avoid the strictures of the FDCPA simply by acting where it has no legal authority, as opposed to threatening to act where it has no legal authority, would defy the very purposes of the section, one of which is to prevent 'use of . . . false . . . means in connection with the collection of any debt.' 15 U.S.C. § 1692e.").

---

389 E.g., Cordeiro v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3404742 (D.R.I. June 19, 2020) (debt collector did not threaten to file an eviction action, but actually did so); Hayes v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2018 WL 4616309 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2018) (collection calls which continued over consumer's protestations); VanHuss v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornik, 2017 WL 1379402 (W.D. Wis. Apr. 14, 2017); Taylor v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4670314 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 6, 2015); Vanhuss v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 127 F. Supp. 3d 980 (W.D. Wis. 2015); Dial v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 751690 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 23, 2015); Townsend v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 535 B.R. 415 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (filing of proofs of claim without state license); Thompson v. CACH, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5420137 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 24, 2014); Dicesari v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 2012 WL 4108944 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 18, 2012); Fick v. Am. Acceptance Co., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1074288 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 28, 2012); Cox v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 726 F. Supp. 2d 659 (N.D. Tex. 2010); Meroney v. Pharia, L.L.C., 688 F. Supp. 2d 550, 554 (N.D. Tex. 2009); Cohen v. Beachside Two-I Homeowners' Ass'n, 2006 WL 1795140 (D. Minn. June 29, 2006) (even if legally required notice about foreclosure filed on land record contained improper amount for fees, it was not "threat"), aff'd, 272 Fed. Appx. 534 (8th Cir. 2008); Delawder v. Platinum Fin. Services Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 942, 948 (S.D. Ohio 2005); In re Ramirez, 2014 WL 2522148, at *9 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. June 4, 2014).

390 See Alexander v. Absolute Resolutions Corp., 2019 WL 1938811, at *5 (W.D. Ark. May 1, 2019) ("Once it is remembered that § 1692e(5)'s prohibition on threats of illegal action is simply but one example from a non-exhaustive list of potential types of deceptive debt-collection practices, it seems apparent that § 1692e's general prohibition on false, deceptive, or misleading debt-collection practices might apply to the actual undertaking of illegal actions, and that § 1692e(5) is simply there to clarify for the reader that it is also prohibited even to threaten such undertakings without actually following through on those threats." (emphasis in original)).

391 See Carlson v. First Revenue Assurance, 359 F.3d 1015, 1018 (8th Cir. 2004) ("even if FRA was violating Minnesota law by not having the Seattle lockbox licensed (and we have concluded that it was not), that violation would not constitute a false or misleading representation").

392 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015) (consumer's allegation that the foreclosure attorney listed as due attorney fees not incurred stated a claim under §§ 1692e(2)(A) and (10) and 1692f(1) as the contract provided for fees incurred, but not under § 1692e(5), as the stated fees were a reasonable estimate of the amount that would be incurred). See also Tekkoc v. Paula G., 2018 WL 11275903 (D.N.J. Apr. 6, 2018) (§ 1692e(5) is narrower than general prohibitions of § 1692e and e(10), so statement that does not rise to level of § 1692e(5) "threat" may still be misleading or deceptive for purposes of § 1692e or e(10)).

393 See Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 296, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) ("we do not see how the fact that a lawsuit turns out ultimately to be unsuccessful could, by itself, make the bringing of it an 'action that cannot legally be taken'").

394 15 U.S.C. § 1692g. See § 9.8, infra.

395 Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009). See also Graziano v. Harrison, 763 F. Supp. 1269 (D.N.J. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991).

396 Finley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1705802 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 9, 2018) (threatened foreclosure that was not available because parties' loan modification agreement was valid defense to foreclosure proceedings).

397 Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989) (deceptive threat to proceed with suit within one week where consumer had thirty-day right to cure); Hanson v. JQD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3404945 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2014); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Me. 2002).

398 See Wiley v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 780763 (D. Minn. Mar. 1, 2021).

399 See Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (W.D. Wash. 2006). For a discussion of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, see National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

400 See Lombana v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 3999366 (C.D. Cal. June 29, 2015) (state law prohibited deficiency after foreclosure); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2006 WL 3498292 (S.D. Ohio

It may be a violation to threaten to sue if the consumer did not make larger payments than a settlement agreement called for.[401] It can also be unlawful for a collector to file a second lawsuit on the same debt.[402]

In some states, a debt buyer must be licensed or registered either as a debt collector or otherwise, and state law may provide that it is unlawful for an unlicensed or unregistered debt buyer to bring a collection action in the state courts.[403] Where this is the case—the debt buyer's failure to be licensed or registered prevents it from bringing lawsuits in the state's courts—a threat of a lawsuit by the debt buyer, its collection agency, or its collection attorney is a threat of an unlawful action.[404] If state law prohibits a collection agency from suing in its own name or requires a written assignment from the creditor before the collection agency can sue on a debt (which the collector does not have), it is a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation to threaten that the collection agency will sue.[405] Unlicensed debt collection is discussed in more detail at § 7.4.13, infra.

There may be no FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation if there is no threat or no actual taking of an unlawful action, such as where a communication is merely informational that a certain amount is owed and does not threaten the consumer with suit or any other unlawful action.[406] The FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation is not that the collector is unlicensed; courts often find that the lack of a license is not a per se section 1692e(5) violation.[407] Instead, it is that under state law the lack of a proper license makes the threatened action unlawful.[408] Of course, even if being unlicensed is not a per se violation under FDCPA § 1692e(5), it can be a violation under another section 1692e provision to misrepresent oneself as licensed when one is not.[409]

State law may also limit a collection attorney's right to sue in a state's courts, such as where the attorney is not licensed as a debt collector[410] or is not admitted to the state's bar.[411] A court may find that an out-of-state attorney's threat that suit will be filed is not a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation because the attorney can hire local counsel to file the suit.[412] But it would be a violation if the implication is that the out-of-state attorney is threatening to file the action themself.[413]

Similarly, state provisions on the unauthorized practice of law or other state statutes may prevent debt collection agencies

---

Dec. 1, 2006) (mortgage servicer's records showed that consumer was one month's payment behind; stating that she was two months behind, threatening foreclosure violated § 1692e(5)); Carroll v. Butterfield Health Care, Inc., 2003 WL 22462604 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 29, 2003) (collection suit against relative based on relative's guarantee of payment to nursing home, which is prohibited by Medicaid Act); Beattie v. D.M. Collections, Inc., 754 F. Supp. 383 (D. Del. 1991) (consumer was not the obligor). See also Harrington v. CAC, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. Aug. 30, 2007) (violating § 1692e(5) where debt collector's filing of improper motion for default in collection matter alleging that consumer had failed to respond to discovery when he had done so constituted threat to take action that cannot legally be taken).

401 Martinez v. Express Recovery Services, Inc., 2012 WL 1850948 (D. Utah May 21, 2012).

402 See Donley v. Nordic Props., Inc., 2003 WL 22282523 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2003).

403 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

404 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199–1201 (11th Cir. 2010); Buhler v. BCG Equities, L.L.C., 2020 WL 888733 (D. Utah Feb. 24, 2020); Altenburg v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 2733803 (D. Md. June 26, 2017) (unlicensed debt buyer's collection agency initiated foreclosure proceedings); Carrero v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6433214 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2014); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (seeking writ of garnishment); Smith v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1045 (E.D. Tenn. 2012); Fiorenzano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2562415 (D.R.I. June 29, 2012); Thomas v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 2730787 (D. Md. July 12, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 3567043 (D. Md. Aug. 10, 2011); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011); Goray v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007). See also Lopez v. Law Offices of Faloni & Assoc., 2016 WL 4820629 (D.N.J. Sept. 14, 2016); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4010257 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 5, 2013); Robinson v. Sherman Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1249567 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 27, 2013); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010) (§ 1692f violation). But see Townsend v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 535 B.R. 415 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (filing of proofs of claim in bankruptcy without state license not unlawful); Scheible v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 2015 WL 6828753 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 6, 2015) (no licensure required for filing bankruptcy proof of claim).

405 Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-7, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

406 Wade v. Regional Credit Ass'n, 87 F.3d 1098 (9th Cir. 1996); ValleCastro v. Tobin, Melien & Marohn, 2015 WL 6478412 (D. Conn. Oct. 27, 2015); Thibodeau v. Credit Adjustment Bur., 2006 WL 3498159 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2006); Ferguson v. Credit Mgmt. Control, Inc., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (M.D. Fla. 2001).

407 Carlson v. First Revenue Assurance, 359 F.3d 1015 (8th Cir. 2004); Reyes v. Manchester Gardens Condo., 2020 WL 3791964 (D. Md. July. 7, 2020); Kuhn v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2015 WL 1505648 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2015); Cox v. Sherman Capital L.L.C., 2014 WL 1328147 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2014) (violations of the Indiana licensing law cannot form the basis of an FDCPA claim); Skinner v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 876 F. Supp. 2d 473 (D.N.J. 2012); James v. Merchants & Prof'ls, Inc., 2010 WL 785803 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 8, 2010); Ferguson v. Credit Mgmt. Control, Inc., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (M.D. Fla. 2001).

408 See, e.g., Garner v. Asset Mgmt. Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 6398112 (D. Utah Dec. 20, 2011) (unlicensed activity not per se a § 1692e violation, but if unlicensed collector threatens suit it would be a violation because a person cannot lawfully attempt to collect a debt in Utah unless that person is registered and bonded). See also Buhler v. BCG Equities, L.L.C., 2020 WL 888733 (D. Utah Feb. 24, 2020).

409 See § 7.4.13, infra.

410 See Scott v. J. Anthony Cambece Law Office, P.C., 600 F. Supp. 2d 479 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); Goins v. JBC & Assoc., 352 F. Supp. 2d 262 (D. Conn. 2005).

411 See also Chulsky v. Hudson Law Offices, P.C., 777 F. Supp. 2d 823 (D.N.J. 2011) (state law violation, operating a debt collection business under auspices of law office, may form basis for a claim under § 1692e). But see Sturdevant v. Jolas, P.C., 942 F. Supp. 426 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (demand letter signed by out-of-state attorney not § 1692e(5) violation as local counsel could have been retained).

412 Sturdevant v. Jolas, P.C., 942 F. Supp. 426 (W.D. Wis. 1996).

413 Allen v. Silverman Theologou, L.L.P., 2015 WL 2129698 (D. Md. May 6, 2015); Richardson v. Rosenberg & Assoc. L.L.C., 2014 WL 823655 (D. Md. Feb. 27, 2014) (threat of foreclosure); Ademiluyi v. PennyMac Mortg. Inv. Tr. Holdings I, L.L.C., 929 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2013) (threat of foreclosure); Goins v. JBC & Assoc., 352 F. Supp. 2d 262 (D. Conn. 2005).

from controlling the creditor's litigation or suing in their own name (even through their own attorney) on debts owned by the creditor. It has been held to be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation for the collection agency to take such actions.[414]

7.2.5.4.3 Threats to take other unlawful actions

Threats to take unlawful postjudgment creditor remedies (garnishment, levy, etc.) are actionable under both FDCPA § 1692e(4) and (5). They are analyzed at § 7.2.4.3, supra.

FDCPA § 1692c(b) prohibits almost all debt collector contacts with third parties discussing the consumer's debt.[415] As a result, a debt collector's threat to contact employers, neighbors, other creditors, or other third parties about a debt likely violates FDCPA § 1692e(5).[416]

FDCPA § 1692e(8) prohibits supplying a consumer reporting agency (CRA) with information which the collector should know is false. Thus, it is a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation to threaten to do so.[417] Once a homeowner disputes the amount due on a mortgage loan with a qualified written request, the mortgage loan servicer cannot make an adverse credit report for sixty days. If the mortgage servicer is a debt collector, then the threat to do so thus is a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation.[418] Similarly, when a consumer seeks verification of a debt, the collector cannot report adverse information on the debt to a reporting agency until it has verified the debt.[419] The threat to report the information immediately before the verification is unlawful.[420]

Other threats to take unlawful actions could involve prejudgment threats to intercept wages or otherwise garnish assets where such prejudgment action is not authorized by state law.[421] Although federal student loan debt can sometimes lead to permissible prejudgment wage garnishment, a collector cannot threaten such garnishment where federal law provides garnishment is not permitted in the student's particular situation.[422]

A threat that an insufficient check payment will result in treble damages if not paid within ten days is a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation where state law only provides for treble damages after thirty days.[423] Also actionable is a threat that failure to supply the consumer's tax identification number would subject the debtor to an IRS penalty.[424]

There can be a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation where a collector threatens to collect amounts not owed or recoverable.[425]

414 See Poirier v. Alco Collections, Inc., 107 F.3d 347 (5th Cir. 1997) (filing suit in assignee's own name where assignee did not have ownership of the debt constituted unauthorized practice of law and therefore action that could not legally be taken in violation of e(5)); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (suit without proper registration of fictitious name); Jones v. Vest, 2000 WL 33797103 (E.D. Va. Nov. 7, 2000); Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Services, Inc., 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994); Kolker v. Sanchez, 1991 WL 11691589 (D.N.M. Dec. 10, 1991); Kolker v. Duke City Collection Agency, 750 F. Supp. 468 (D.N.M. 1990). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-7, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But see McMinn v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 867335 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 2, 2015) (under California law an attorney employee of a collection agency can represent the debt owner in court in an action brought in the debt owner's name); Metz v. HCSC—Credit & Collections, 1985 WL 3368 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 29, 1985) (threat to recommend that creditor file suit was not threat to engage in unauthorized practice of law).

415 See § 5.7, supra.

416 Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009) (privacy notice that could contact third parties); Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv. 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988) (threat to contact employer); Waddell v. Capital Accounts, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5792865, at *3 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 5, 2019) (threat to call employer); Velez v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2016 WL 1730721 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2016) (threat to report to IRS waived portion of debt as income to consumer); Basinger-Lopez v. Tracy Paul & Assoc., 2009 WL 1948832 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2009) (threats to embarrass plaintiff by disclosing debt to her family, neighbors, and employer); Raimondi v. McAllister & Assoc., Inc., 50 F. Supp. 2d 825 (N.D. Ill. 1999) ("will investigate your financial situation through . . . employers"); Beasley v. Collectors Training Inst., 1999 WL 675196 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 1999) (threats to contact creditors and to review past and present employment); Holt v. Wexler, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8785 (N.D. Ill. May 28, 1999) (debt collector implied it could freely contact any employer, neighbor, and relative); Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 4, 1992) (employer); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983) (employer); United States v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17964 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 11, 1982) (pretending that it is contacting servicemember's commanding officer); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979) (employers and neighbors); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(5)-7, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Weiss, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 17, 1986).

417 Casey v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 415310 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 29, 2010). The threat also violates § 1692e(8)

418 Richard v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 4349082 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 29, 2017).

419 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b).

420 See Creighton v. Emporia Credit Serv., Inc., 981 F. Supp. 411 (E.D. Va. 1997). See also Vaughn v. CSC Credit Services, 1995 WL 51402 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 1995) (recommendations of Magistrate Judge) (collection letter's threat implied that immediate credit report would be made regardless of whether debt was disputed); Florence v. Nat'l Sys., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20344 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 14, 1983) (threats of damage to credit rating and reputation if consumer made no response in five days were deceptive during thirty-day period for requesting verification).

421 Picht v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 236 F.3d 446 (8th Cir. 2001) (threats of prejudgment garnishment where state law did not allow for it); Ortega v. Griggs & Assoc. L.L.C., 2012 WL 2913202 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012) (paycheck would be intercepted).

422 See Kort v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 2001 WL 881449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2001) (student loan collector required borrower to provide written proof of entitlement for exemption from garnishment, while applicable federal regulations require granting exemption without such written proof).

423 Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995).

424 See Kuehn v. Cadle Co., 335 Fed. Appx. 827 (11th Cir. 2009).

425 Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012) (attorney fees; § 1692e(10) violation); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Gionis v. Javitch, Block, Rathbone, L.L.P., 2007 WL 1654357 (6th Cir. June 6, 2007) (submitting affidavit in collection suit stating that parties' contract permitted award of attorney fees "to the extent permitted by applicable law" where applicable law did not permit recovery of such fees); Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871 (8th Cir. 2002) (seeking penalty, attorney fees and interest not authorized); Finley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1705802 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 9, 2018) (threatening to collect amounts resulting from Ocwen's failure

A demand for a dollar amount can be deceptive where the amount includes attorney fees, court costs, or other amounts that can only be awarded by a court after a judgment.[426] It may also be a violation to threaten collection activity regarding a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy.[427] It may be a violation to threaten any kind of collection effort if the debt collector is not properly licensed and thus should not engage in debt collection.[428] On the other hand, courts may find that not every violation of a statutory provision creates a FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation.[429]

A collector's threat that a homeowner's mortgage loan could be accelerated and the property could be sold at a foreclosure sale before doing so would be permissible under state law may constitute a violation of FDCPA § 1692e(5),[430] as may the act of threatening and scheduling a foreclosure sale before a loss mitigation application is resolved.[431]

7.2.6 False Implications As to a Debt Transfer, FDCPA § 1692e(6)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(6) The false representation or implication that a sale, referral, or other transfer of any interest in a debt shall cause the consumer to—

(A) lose any claim or defense to payment of the debt; or

(B) become subject to any practice prohibited by this subchapter.[432]

Court decisions rarely address FDCPA § 1692e(6). This section is closely related to FDCPA § 1692e(12), which prohibits false representations that an account has been turned over to innocent purchasers for value.[433]

FDCPA § 1692e(6) indicates that a debt collector cannot falsely represent or imply that if the debt is transferred to another debt collector, referred to a collection attorney or a repossession agency, or sold to a debt buyer, the consumer will be worse off—that the transfer will either eliminate consumer claims or defenses or that the debt buyer or other collection agency is more likely to engage in conduct that violates the FDCPA. The FTC has stated that the provision also prohibits debt collector misrepresentations that the debt would be sent back to the creditor, which, not being covered by the FDCPA, will take actions that otherwise would violate the FDCPA.[434]

Sale of a debt will rarely cut off a consumer's defenses on the debt—this is the case only if a transferee can claim the rights of a holder in due course, which does not apply to most consumer debt obligations.[435] Transfers of a credit sale obligation may not even eliminate the consumer's right to bring affirmative claims against the transferee that the consumer has against the credit-seller, because of the operation of the FTC Holder Notice.[436]

An allegation that a collector falsely stated that a homeowner's property was sold to an entity that had the right to to abide by the terms of a loan modification); Captain v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 636 F. Supp. 2d 791 (S.D. Ind. 2009) (unauthorized $15 per day fee); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (unauthorized attorney fees). But cf. Barany-Snyder v. Weiner, 539 F.3d 327 (6th Cir. 2008) (no violation where contract attached to complaint in collection suit contained illegal provision purporting to permit recovery of reasonable attorney fees since collector never sought fees).

---

426 Veach v. Sheeks, 316 F.3d 690 (7th Cir. 2003) (demanding treble damages, court costs, or attorney fees, which could not be obtained until judgment). See also Lannan v. Levy & White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77, 92 (D. Mass. 2016) (§ 1692e(2) violation found for demanding prejudgment interest in complaint).

427 Garfield v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 202 Fed. Appx. 123 (7th Cir. Oct. 16, 2006); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003); Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987) (threatening to withhold school transcript where student loan discharged in bankruptcy). But see Sutton v. Law Offices of Alexander L. Lawrence, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22761 (D. Del. June 17, 1992) (collection letter did not violate § 1692e(5) where debt collector was unaware of bankruptcy stay); Hubbard v. Nat'l Bond & Collection Assoc., Inc., 126 B.R. 422 (D. Del. 1991) (same), aff'd without op., 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991).

428 Veras v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1050512 (D.N.J. Mar. 17, 2014); Gaetano v. Payco, Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1404 (D. Conn. 1990). See also St. Denis v. New Horizon Credit, Inc., 2006 WL 1965779 (D. Conn. July 12, 2006); § 7.2.5.4.2, supra; § 7.4.13, infra.

429 Gomez v. Oxford Law, L.L.C., 2015 WL 58766 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 5, 2015) (no § 1692e(5) violation where agency's voicemail failed to identify caller at beginning of message, as TCPA requires), aff'd, 657 Fed. Appx. 141 (3d Cir. 2016).

430 See Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128 (D. Md. July 18, 2019). See also Peebles v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4464126 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 18, 2019). See § 7.4.11.2, infra.

431 Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128, at *5 (D. Md. July 18, 2019) ("Because RESPA prohibits a foreclosure sale before such an application has been denied and all appeal rights exhausted, the scheduling of this sale could constitute a debt collector's 'threat' to take an action ' that cannot legally be taken' in violation of § 1692e(5)."). See § 7.4.11.2, infra.

432 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(6). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(v).

"Subchapter" refers to the FDCPA. Provisions similar to this section were included in each major bill leading to Act; the words "implication" and "claim" were added late in the legislative process by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Compare H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. §§ 802(6), 802(7) (1975), with Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(6) (1977).

433 See § 7.2.12, infra.

434 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(6)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

435 See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending § 10.7 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

436 FTC Trade Regulation Rule on Preservation of Consumers' Claims and Defenses, 16 C.F.R. § 433; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 4 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

foreclose the redemption of her property plausibly qualifies as a false statement about the transfer of interest in a debt (namely, a municipal lien) within the meaning of FDCPA § 1692e(6).[437]

FDCPA § 1692e(6)(B) is ambiguous. Does the subsection require that the threat is that the consumer may be subject to a practice the FDCPA lists as prohibited, or must the person who would engage in the practice also be covered under the FDCPA? In the latter interpretation, the provision would not apply if the threat related to actions a creditor might take. The FTC Commentary takes the former position, so that even a collector's threat of a referral back to a creditor would be covered.[438] Even if this section is construed otherwise, the general prohibitions of deception[439] or the general prohibition of abusive collection tactics[440] may serve to prohibit this practice.

7.2.7 Misrepresenting Consumer Engaged in a Crime, Other Misconduct, FDCPA § 1692e(7)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(7) The false representation or implication that the consumer committed any crime or other conduct in order to disgrace the consumer.[441]

FDCPA § 1692e(7) has some overlap with section 1692e(4) that prohibits unintended or illegal threats to arrest the consumer.[442] FDCPA § 1692e(7) is violated where a debt collector misrepresents that a "criminal case" is pending against the consumer or that the consumer will be arrested for failure to pay the debt.[443] The provision also applies to a statement that it was a crime merely to write a dishonored check,[444] because criminal bad check laws usually have other prerequisites—for example, the consumer's specific intent to write a check not covered by sufficient funds[445] or that the merchant, not the collector, initiate the criminal complaint.[446]

The provision's very language prohibits not only falsely implying the consumer has committed a crime, but falsely representing that the consumer has engaged in any other conduct that would disgrace the consumer.[447] Collectors thus cannot represent or imply that the consumer has engaged in conduct that shames or humiliates the consumer, such as calling into question the consumer's honesty,[448] or accusing the consumer of fraud,[449] or of disregarding all good business practices.[450]

The collector's misrepresentation must be made "in order to disgrace the consumer." This can be viewed as describing the types of other representations of consumer conduct besides criminal conduct to which the provision applies. Even if the phrase requires a showing of the collector's motive to disgrace the consumer, this should not be difficult to infer from the nature of the misrepresentation. It is safest to allege and seek to support this motive.[451] In any event, FDCPA § 1692e

437 Flowers v. Baltax, 2017, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3501584, at *6 (D. Md. Aug. 1, 2019).

438 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(6)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

439 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692e and 1692e(10); § 7.2.10, § 7.3, infra.

440 15 U.S.C. § 1692d; § 6.2, supra.

441 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(7). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(iv).

This provision was included in each major bill leading to the Act. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 802(8) (1975).

442 See § 7.2.4, supra.

443 See Hebert v. Allegiant Capital Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6974390, at *1 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 20, 2019) (alleging that collection agency falsely stated consumer had committed a crime); Anderson v. E. Asset Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2141664 (N.D. Tex. May 16, 2019) (alleging that collection agency informed a third party of the debt and falsely suggested consumer could be arrested for nonpayment); Ortega v. Griggs & Assoc., 2012 WL 2913202 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012) (criminal case pending); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986) (false representation that debtor would be arrested or jailed), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987). See also Georgopulous v. PPM Capital, Inc., 2019 WL 6065617, at *5 (D. Colo. Oct. 21, 2019) (recommending entry of default judgment for consumer on § 1692e(7) claim alleging that the debt collector demanded the consumer pay the debt or "face criminal charges for defrauding a financial institution"), adopted, 2019 WL 6053333 (D. Colo. Nov. 15, 2019).

444 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(7)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also In re Accelerated Recovery Sys., Inc., 431 B.R. 138 (W.D. Va. 2010) ("if we file warrants, it will be a felony"); Ransom v. Telecredit Serv. Corp., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22738 (D. Md. Feb. 5, 1992). Rummel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 16, 1978).

445 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (regarding limitations on prosecution for dishonored checks).

446 Prof'l Check Serv., Inc. v. Dutton, 560 So. 2d 755 (Ala. 1990).

447 See McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls, Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 763 (7th Cir. 2006); Selig v. Niagara Recovery Solutions Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4283926, at *4 (E.D. Va. July 27, 2020) (collection agency's voicemail messages warning consumer about missed court appearance "would make the least sophisticated consumer wonder whether he committed a crime by failing to pay the debt").

448 See McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls, Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 763 (7th Cir. 2006) (calling into question debtor's honesty and good intentions simply because check was dishonored; nonpayment of debt does not mean that debtor is dishonest).

449 Skinner v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 2012 WL 6554530, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2012) (stating claim where consumer, whose house was sold at foreclosure, was told she was "stealing" from lender when she pointed out that there was no claim for deficiency under Cal. law); Guidry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 2, 1979). See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(7)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Pauly v. GC Services, L.P., 2007 WL 1350449 (D. Neb. Apr. 11, 2007) (stating claim where complaint alleged violation of §§ 1692d and 1692e where defendant collector telephoned plaintiff, who is mother of alleged debtor, and stated that her daughter had "committed a federal fraud" and that defendant's legal department was going to prosecute her daughter).

450 Florence v. Nat'l Sys., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20344 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 14, 1983).

451 See Pache Mgmt. Co. v. Lusk, 1997 WL 254096 (Ohio Ct. App. May 15, 1997) (pro se debtor did not present evidence that statement was made to "disgrace" consumer).

and 1692e(10) prohibit deceptive representations even if not intended to disgrace the consumer.

FDCPA § 1692e(7) provides that it protects "the consumer" and thus does not protect collector misrepresentations aimed at third parties.[452] Other FDCPA provisions protect third parties.[453]

7.2.8 Disclosure of Consumer's Dispute; Communicating or Threatening to Communicate False Credit Information, FDCPA § 1692e(8)

7.2.8.1 Generally

> A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:
>
> ***
>
> (8) Communicating or threatening to communicate to any person credit information which is known or which should be known to be false, including the failure to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed.[454]

FDCPA § 1692e(8)'s most common application is to the actual reporting of false information to a CRA or other entity, or the failure to properly report to a CRA or the creditor that the consumer disputes the debt, as discussed respectively in §§ 7.2.8.3 and 7.2.8.4, infra. Nevertheless, FDCPA § 1692e(8) also applies to threats to report false credit information. A prime example is a collector's threat to report to a CRA the consumer's failure to pay a debt that the collector knows or should know is not owed or is not owed in that amount.[455] Section 7.2.8.2, infra, addresses such threats.

Note that Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) prohibits so-called "passive collections" or "parking" a debt on a credit report.[456] Both terms refer to the practice of a debt collector furnishing to a consumer reporting agency (CRA), information regarding a debt before communicating with the consumer about the debt.

7.2.8.2 Threats Aimed at the Consumer

FDCPA § 1692e(8) prohibits in connection with collection of a debt threatening to communicate to any person credit information that the debt collector knows or should know to be false. The threat might be to communicate false credit information to the creditor, a government agency, a neighbor, an employer, or any other person. Many false threats relate to communication with consumer reporting agencies (CRAs). As one court has stated: "The Court has learned, through its work on countless FDCPA cases, that threatening to report and reporting debts to CRAs is one of the most commonly-used arrows in the debt collector's quiver,"[457] although not all such threats are false.

A consumer's credit report and credit score is a key determinative for access to credit, home mortgages, and even residential rentals, banking, insurance and employment.[458] The threat to report false information to a CRA is a powerful one.

FDCPA § 1692e(8) prohibits threats to communicate false credit information, and therefore does not apply to a debt collector's threats to report accurate credit information unless the collector does not intend to do so or is legally prohibited from doing so. In such a situation, FDCPA § 1692e(5) should apply, since it prohibits "the threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken."

Claims based on misrepresentations as to the extent of continued non-payment's negative impact on a credit rating or misrepresentations as to the positive impact of a payment or settlement on a credit rating are more appropriately brought under FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) (false representation of the character, amount, or legal status of any debt), FDCPA § 1692e(10) ("use of any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt"), or FDCPA § 1692e generally (false, deceptive, or misleading representations).

7.2.8.3 Reporting False Information to CRAs and Others

FDCPA § 1692e(8) offers consumers a powerful remedy where a debt collector furnishes false credit information to a CRA. Creditors and other furnishers of information to a CRA are not liable under the Fair Credit Reporting Act for furnishing false credit information or failing to disclose the consumer's dispute unless they fail to properly perform a reinvestigation when requested to do so by the CRA.[459]

FDCPA § 1692e(8) makes debt collectors liable immediately for furnishing false credit information they know or 452 See Toney v. Keil, 2014 WL 4800275 (D. Colo. Sept. 26, 2014).

453 See, e.g., § 4.4, supra.

454 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(2).

A provision similar to this section was contained in each major bill leading to the Act. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. §§ 802(9), 802(12) (1975); H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(7) (1976).

455 See, e.g., Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 763 F.3d 385 (4th Cir. 2014) (debt already paid in full); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *7 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (debt already paid); Sunga v. Broome, 2010 WL 3198925 (E.D. Va. Aug. 12, 2010) (false condominium assessments); Merchants & Med. Credit Corp., Inc., 2010 WL 2613086 (E.D. Mich. June 28, 2010) (consumer alleging debt not owed); Iruegas v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1171088 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 22, 2010) (threatening to collect amount not owed). See also Mayall v. The Randall Firm, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4696283, at *5 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2019) (medical debt not owed because bill had been waived).

456 Reg. F § 1006.30(a). See § 8.12, infra.

457 Edeh v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 748 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1035 (D. Minn. 2010), aff'd on other grounds, 413 Fed. Appx. 925 (8th Cir. 2011).

458 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

459 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

should know is false, including the failure to disclose the consumer's dispute. This subsection considers a debt collector's reporting of false credit information to a CRA or any other entity. The next subsection examines the failure to disclose the consumer's dispute of a debt.

Courts have found communicating the following information to be a FDCPA § 1692e(8) violation:

- Misstating as delinquent an account that is current or where no money is owed;[460]
- Misstating the amount owed;[461]
- Reporting a fraudulent debt as merely disputed;[462]
- Misstating the date of payment or default, particularly where this affects whether the debt is time-barred or obsolete so as not to be included in the consumer's credit file;[463]
- Reporting the same debt multiple times under different account numbers;[464]
- Reporting as owing debts discharged in bankruptcy;[465]
- Incorrect reporting of the status of a mortgage,[466] such as that a mortgage is in foreclosure where the foreclosure had not yet been filed;[467] and
- Reporting a false name for the creditor.[468]

Of course, not every interaction between a debt collector and a CRA is actionable under FDCPA § 1692e(8). The credit information furnished must be false;[469] and the debt collector must communicate to the CRA, not the CRA to the debt collector.[470] The FDCPA places no obligation on a debt collector to correct a CRA's mistakes, such as where a CRA mismerges the furnished information with the wrong consumer's file.[471]

In addition, it is not enough that the communicated credit information be false. The consumer must show that the debt collector knew or should know that the information was false.[472] A common situation is where a debt collection agency relies on the information supplied it by the creditor or a debt buyer relies on information supplied by the originating creditor. The consumer must then show that such reliance on the creditor was unreasonable and that the debt collector should have taken steps that would have uncovered the falsity of the information.[473]

For example, a consumer might show that the debt collection agency failed to request the full content of the creditor's file on the consumer or did not ask the creditor to pass on updated information received about a debt—a consumer's payment, dispute, or bankruptcy filing. A debt buyer typically receives only very minimal information about a debt, but may 460 Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *7 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (after receiving payment, defendant reported to credit bureaus that the debt was still outstanding while knowing it was not), related case, 2020 WL 5411574 (D. Conn. Sept. 9, 2020); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017) (mortgage servicer told CRA that balance was due where own affidavit stated that no balance was due); Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016); Justice v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2015 WL 235738 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 16, 2015) (mortgage servicer falsely reported account as delinquent to CRAs when homeowners were making full payments and were not delinquent); Randolph v. Northeast Legal Group, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2819122 (N.D. Ala. May 23, 2014), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2014 WL 2740309 (N.D. Ala. June 16, 2014); Lucero v. Cenlar, 2014 WL 12026660 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 3, 2014). See also Mayall v. The Randall Firm, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4696283, at *5 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2019) (medical debt not owed because bill had been waived due to treatment center's failure to provide preauthorization for procedure).

461 See Williams v. Columbia Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1063330 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 19, 2021); Miceli v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2016 WL 7666167 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2016); McKinney v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3659898 (E.D.N.C. July 1, 2016); Fulk v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 55 F. Supp. 3d 967 (E.D. Ky. 2014) (reporting debt as including prejudgment interest where no right to such interest); Grace v. LVNV Funding, Inc., 2014 WL 2167487 (W.D. Ky. May 23, 2014) (unlawful disguised interest); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (reporting debt included court costs that were not awarded); Appx. E.2.4.8, infra. See also Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 336 F. Supp. 2d 492, 503 n.4 (D. Md. 2004) (denying both parties' motions on grounds that there was triable issue of fact as to whether amount of debt stated in two tradelines arising from same debt were accurate).

462 Cf. King v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 452 F. Supp. 2d 1272 (N.D. Ga. 2006) (no violation where consumer only later demonstrated account to be fraudulent).

463 Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (alleged that defendant incorrectly reported to CRAs date of delinquency on account); Smith v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3107291 (W.D.N.Y. July 7, 2014); Randolph v. Northeast Legal Group, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2819122 (N.D. Ala. May 23, 2014), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2014 WL 2740309 (N.D. Ala. June 16, 2014) (reporting wrong year of payment); Daley v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 717 F. Supp. 2d 1150 (D. Or. 2010).

464 Gustafson v. Experian Info. Solutions Inc., 2014 WL 2115210 (C.D. Cal. May 21, 2014).

465 Garfield v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016).

466 Anderson v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 4631222 (D. Or. Sept. 12, 2014).

467 Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *11 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018).

468 See Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005).

469 See Abernathy v. Continental Serv. Grp., Inc., 2018 WL 3370524 (D. Nev. July 9, 2018); Drake v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2018 WL 1402586 (D. Or. Mar. 19, 2018) (collector accurately reported debt as in dispute); McGee v. Rockford Mercantile Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 1920130 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2018) (reporting accurate loan balance prior to confirmation of chapter 13 bankruptcy plan where that balance is later modified by confirmed plan); Frierson v. States Recovery Sys., 2017 WL 2546889 (E.D. Cal. June 13, 2017) (information reported was accurate).

470 Goodwyn v. Capital One, 127 F. Supp. 3d 1367 (M.D. Ga. 2015).

471 See Drake v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2018 WL 1402586 (D. Or. Mar. 19, 2018).

472 See Fulk v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 55 F. Supp. 3d 967 (E.D. Ky. 2014) (knowledge of identity theft not shown). Accord Stephens v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., L.L.C., 2018 WL 505593 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 22, 2018) (consumer never alleged collector knew or should have known). See also Hopkins v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 2557134, at *11 (E.D. Pa., May 20, 2020) (in light of property management's continued belief that tenant owed debt, debt collector "could not have known or found out that the debt was false"); Jones v. City Plaza, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2062325, at *7 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2020) (where lawful entitlement to payment of debt was a legal question to be decided by a court, it could not be said that collection agency knew or should have known that the debt it reported was false).

473 See also § 12.2.6, infra (discussing whether debt collectors' reliance on information from the creditor qualifies as a bona fide error).

have a contractual right to request additional information.[474] When the consumer disputes a debt, should the debt buyer go back to the originating creditor for more information, and should a debt collection agency go back to its creditor or independently seek out other information?

Where a debt buyer or debt collection agency inflates the amount due based on prejudgment or other interest charges or collection fees or attorney fees to which it is not entitled, it should know that it is not entitled to such charges.[475] A debt buyer or collection agency either knows or should know state law related to the charges it assesses.

A debt collector should also know that information it is reporting is false where it reports different information to different CRAs.[476] Where a consumer disputes a debt, and the collector has little information about a debt and what information it does have is conflicting, the collector should know that the information it is reporting is false, or at least should more thoroughly investigate prior to reporting it.[477]

7.2.8.4 Disclosure of the Consumer's Dispute of the Credit Information

7.2.8.4.1 Nature of the disclosure obligation

Whenever a debt collector knows or should know the consumer disputes a debt, and the collector communicates about the debt to a third party, then the communication must include an indication that the consumer disputes the debt.[478]

Specifically, if a debt collector reports a debt to a CRA, it must include in the report that the consumer disputes the debt, if it knows or should know about that dispute.[479] When a debt collector learns of a dispute, there is no affirmative obligation to report the dispute to a CRA, but it must do so the next time it reports about the debt to the CRA.[480] The same applies when the debt collector next communicates about the debt with any third party. This includes such communications as where a debt collection agency or collection attorney communicates with the creditor, a debt buyer communicates with its collection agency, or a debt buyer's servicer communicates with the debt buyer.[481]

While the collector has to accurately report to a CRA that the debt is disputed, the collector need not resolve the dispute.

474 See § 1.4.7.3, supra.

475 See, e.g., Fulk v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 55 F. Supp. 3d 967 (E.D. Ky. 2014) (illegal prejudgment interest); Grace v. LVNV Funding, Inc., 2014 WL 2167487 (W.D. Ky. May 23, 2014) (unlawful disguised interest); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (reporting debt that included court costs that were not awarded).

476 Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2015).

477 Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2015).

478 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018) (noting that failure in reporting to CRA that debt was disputed created risk of real injury and was material violation); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416, 418 (8th Cir. 2008); Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. 1998). See also Webster v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 473 F. Supp. 3d 861 (S.D. Ind. 2020); Goss v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 2219048, at *5 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2020); Krier v. United Revenue Corp., 2020 WL 2065618, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 2020); Centeno v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2173779, at *3–4 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 2019); Francisco v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 498936, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 2019); Odsather v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6696688 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 20, 2018); Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Mack v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 7794344, at *2 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2017); Mohamed v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 215 F. Supp. 3d 85 (D.D.C. 2016); Miceli v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2016 WL 7666167 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2016); Pygott v. Metro Area Collection Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 2522636 (D. Or. June 26, 2012); Quigley v. Verizon Wireless, 2012 WL 1945784 (N.D. Cal. May 30, 2012).

479 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(8), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

480 Llewellyn v. Allstate Home Loans, Inc. 711 F.3d 1173 (10th Cir. 2013) (no obligation to correct credit information at CRA where collector does not communicate with CRA); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416, 418 (8th Cir. 2008); Alcivar v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2020 WL 2559845, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. May 20, 2020) (debt collector has no affirmative obligation to update credit bureaus on status of consumer's debt, but if collector chooses to discuss consumer's debt with third party it must inform that third party of disputed nature of debt); Whitehead v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 8277269, at *6 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 2, 2019) (whether defendant had affirmative, independent duty to report consumer's dispute letter was "of no consequence" where consumer did not claim such affirmative duty; rather, consumer alleged that defendant violated FDCPA by reporting information to CRA about debt after receiving dispute letter without also disclosing dispute), adopted, 2020 WL 1467253 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 8, 2020); Levine v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 1077126, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 7, 2019) (consumer disputed debt before debt collector reported it as undisputed to CRA); Mack v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 7794344, at *2 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2017) (violation is not that failed to report dispute, but that failed to report dispute when collector re-reported credit information); Danehy v. Jaffe & Asher, L.L.P., 2015 WL 1249879 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 17, 2015) (no affirmative duty to report consumer's dispute to CRA); Rogers v. Virtuoso Sourcing Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 772865 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 28, 2013) (no affirmative duty unless report to CRA after learning of dispute); Edeh v. Aargon Collection Agency, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2963855 (D. Minn. June 20, 2011) (no obligation to disclose where collector learns of dispute after report to CRA), adopted, 2011 WL 2910750 (D. Minn. July 20, 2011); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(8), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra (collector need not report dispute if first became aware of it after reporting debt to credit bureau). See also Rivera v. Med-Bill Corp., 2020 WL 4583084 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 10, 2020) (debt collector that reported debt before consumer disputed it did not have continuing obligation to update CRA); Mitchell-Williams v. Capio Partners, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3586363 (E.D. Mich. July 26, 2018) (debt buyer did not violate FDCPA by waiting almost a month after receiving consumer's dispute letter to notify credit reporting agency of dispute); Luxenburg v. Equifax Credit Info. Services, 2005 WL 78947 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 12, 2005) (delay of about two months reasonable; no requirement to notify CRA within certain amount of time). But see Farren v. RJM Acquisition Funding, L.L.C., 2005 WL 1799413 (E.D. Pa. July 26, 2005) (once debt collector learns of dispute, it must notify CRA within reasonable time). Cf. Acri v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 1998 WL 255271 (9th Cir. May 19, 1998) (summary judgment finding no violation of § 1692e(8) affirmed on basis of uncontroverted evidence that collector immediately advised credit reporting agencies of disputed nature of debt upon its receipt of dispute).

481 See § 7.2.8.4.2, infra.

The collector can continue to report the same credit information if it has reason to believe it to be true, as long as it includes in the report that the consumer disputes the information.[482] But the very fact of the dispute might lead the debt collector to know or have reason to know that the credit information is false.

The consumer should not rely on the collection agency to correct information on the consumer's credit report that the consumer disputes. While the consumer should notify the debt collector of the dispute, the consumer should also notify the CRA. Then the CRA must ask the entity that furnished the disputed information to reinvestigate that information. The furnisher should then report the results of its investigation to the CRA. It is at that point that the consumer may have a cause of action under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) against the CRA or furnisher, as discussed later in this treatise as well as in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[483]

Where the consumer had disputed the debt with the CRA and the debt collector is responding to the CRA's request for a reinvestigation, the debt collector may not be required in subsequent communications with the CRA to reiterate that the debt is disputed.[484] But it must fulfill its obligations under the FCRA.

7.2.8.4.2 Disclosure requirement applies to communications with any third party

FDCPA § 1692e(8) applies to any debt collector and any communication to a third party, including the creditor,[485] a debt buyer,[486] or a CRA.[487] FDCPA § 1692e(8) also applies to a covered debt buyer's communications to a collection agency or collection attorney.[488] A debt collector bringing suit against the consumer may even have an obligation to disclose to the court that the consumer disputes the debt, either in the complaint,[489] or otherwise.[490]

When a consumer seeking a mortgage loan has disputed a debt and asks the lender to contact the debt collector about its report of negative information about the consumer, and the debt collector communicates with the lender, it must disclose the consumer's dispute as to that debt.[491]

7.2.8.4.3 Informing the debt collector of the dispute

The debt collector—whether it is a debt buyer, collection agency, or collection attorney—has an obligation to include the consumer's dispute when it knows or should know of that dispute.[492] A debt collector certainly knows of the consumer's dispute where the consumer directly informs the debt collector of the dispute.

The consumer can do so either in writing or orally.[493] A consumer's dispute of debt in documents filed in the collector's lawsuit is sufficient to notify the collector, requiring the collector to note the dispute when it next communicates with a CRA or other third party.[494]

---

482 See Moonflower v. Columbia Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2019 WL 461122 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 6, 2019).

483 See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library; § 14.6, infra.

484 See McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909 (8th Cir. 2014); Schwantes v. Monco Law Offices, 2014 WL 4163024 (D. Minn. Aug. 21, 2014).

485 See Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Baker v. I.Q. Data Int'l, Inc., 2015 WL 1945148 (D. Colo. Apr. 29, 2015); Hudspeth v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 674019 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2013); Kinel v. Sherman Acquisition II, L.P., 2007 WL 2049566 (S.D.N.Y. July 13, 2007) (attorney debt collector failed to communicate dispute to its client); Perez v. Telecheck Services, Inc., 208 F. Supp. 2d 1153 (D. Nev. 2002) (communication to Walmart).

486 See Burdick v. Palisades Collection L.L.C., 2008 WL 80943 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2008); Stiff v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 2006 WL 141610 (D. Ariz. Jan. 17, 2006). See also Magrin v. Unifund CCR Partners, Inc., 2002 WL 31804268 (9th Cir. Dec. 10, 2002).

487 See Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 303 Fed. Appx. 297 (6th Cir. 2008); Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Sayles v. Advanced Recovery Sys., Inc., 206 F. Supp. 3d 1210 (S.D. Miss. 2016), aff'd, 865 F.3d 246 (5th Cir. 2017); Quale v. Unifund CCR Partners, 682 F. Supp. 2d 1274 (S.D. Ala. 2010); Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009); Randall v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2358350 (D. Neb. July 23, 2009); Davis v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 526 F. Supp. 2d 577 (W.D.N.C. 2007) (falsely reporting balance of account to credit bureau survived motion to dismiss); Kinel v. Sherman Acquisition II, L.P., 2007 WL 2049566 (S.D.N.Y. July 13, 2007); Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006); Stiff v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 2006 WL 141610 (D. Ariz. Jan. 17, 2006); Sullivan v. Equifax, Inc., 2002 WL 799856 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 19, 2002).

488 Plummer v. Atl. Credit & Fin., Inc., 66 F. Supp. 3d 484, 492 (S.D.N.Y. 2014) ("[D]ebt collectors may not benefit from unlawful collection practices merely by enlisting third-party debt collectors to act on their behalf. To read the statute otherwise would allow debt collectors to escape liability through the simple act of transferring a debt and would enable subsequent debt purchasers or assignees to circumvent the statute by remaining purposely ignorant of a loan's legal status."). See also Finley v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions L.L.C., 2015 WL 3750140 (N.D. Cal. June 15, 2015) (debt buyer and collection agency should have disclosed to each other their knowledge of consumer's dispute).

489 Hollis v. Stephen Bruce & Assoc., 2007 WL 4287623, at *3 (W.D. Okla. Dec. 5, 2007) (denying motion to dismiss).

490 See Gough v. Bernhardt & Strawser, P.A., 2006 WL 1875327 (M.D.N.C. June 30, 2006) (no violation where collection attorney, in letter, notified court of consumer's dispute).

491 Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. 1998).

492 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8).

493 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 347 (7th Cir. 2018); Dixon v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 640 Fed. Appx. 793 (10th Cir. 2016); Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64, 66 (1st Cir. 1998) ("[c]learly, the ordinary usage of 'dispute' does not contemplate a writing"); Hudspeth v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 674019 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2013). See also Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin. Inc., 430 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 2005); Rusk v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2772771, at *9 (S.D. Ga. May 28, 2020); Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 176 F. Supp. 3d 1054 (D. Colo. 2016). Cf. Cramer v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5188942, at *6 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 15, 2019) (consumer may dispute debt verbally, but here it was clear that plaintiff did not dispute debt, either verbally or in writing, until she sent her dispute letter to CRAs).

494 Patterson v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 2018 WL 5269810 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 23, 2018) (debt was disputed in consumer's answer to collector's state court collection suit).

While FDCPA § 1692g provides the consumer with certain verification rights if the consumer disputes the debt in writing,[495] there is no requirement that the consumer's notification of the dispute be in writing for purposes of FDCPA § 1692e(8).[496] Nor does the consumer have to exercise rights under FDCPA § 1692g for the collector to know that the consumer disputes a debt.[497]

The consumer must convey the dispute to the debt collector, but need not address it to any particular department, such as a debt buyer's disputes department.[498] To avoid the collector claiming never to have received a dispute letter, however, it is prudent to send a letter with a return receipt or a dated fax.

The consumer need not use the words "dispute" or "verify" to dispute the debt.[499] A consumer is not required to use legally precise or sophisticated language to assert FDCPA protections.[500] There is no requirement that the individual's dispute be valid or even reasonable.[501] Instead, the consumer simply makes clear that they dispute the debt.[502] Debt collectors cannot determine unilaterally that a dispute lacks merit and should not be reported.[503]

Consumers should be wary of credit repair, debt settlement, debt elimination, or similar agencies, not just for potential fraudulent practices, but also because creditors and collectors may decide to pay no attention to their correspondence. But if such an agency has sent a collector a dispute on behalf of the consumer, the collector should then know about the dispute.[504]

The consumer's attorney can send the dispute letter.[505] Debt collectors have complained that the consumer's dispute is buried in a long letter from the consumer's attorney and that the letter's purpose was not to inform the collector of the dispute, but to game the legal system. The Seventh Circuit has rejected this argument as long as the dispute language itself is clear.[506] Another court required the consumer's attorney to pay fees

---

495 See also § 9.10, infra (discussing the right to dispute a debt under § 1692g(a)(3) either orally or in writing).

496 Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64, 67 (1st Cir. 1998) ("Applying the meaning of 'disputed debt' as used in § 1692g(b) to § 1692e(8) would thus render the provision's 'knows or should know' language impermissibly superfluous."). See also Sayles v. Advanced Recovery Sys., Inc., 865 F.3d 246 (5th Cir. 2017). But see Mellinger v. Midwestern Audit Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 405008 (E.D. Mich. Feb.8, 2012) (where consumer waited more than 30 days to dispute debt, collector could assume debt not valid and that where debt is not valid it need not be communicated to CRA).

497 Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. 1998). See also Rusk v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2772771, at *9 (S.D. Ga. May 28, 2020) (sections 1692g and 1692e "operate independently of one another").

498 Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Flores v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 5891032 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2017); Bowse v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 218 F. Supp. 3d 745 (N.D. Ill. 2016), aff'd sub nom. Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018).

499 Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 955 F.3d 453, 460–461 (5th Cir. 2020) ("The relevant part of the letter reads: 'My monthly expenses exceed my monthly income . . . and the amount you are reporting is not accurate either.' Aside from invoking the word 'dispute,' we struggle to see how a debtor could dispute a debt more clearly than by writing, 'the amount you are reporting is not accurate.'"); Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 346 (7th Cir. 2018) ("the amount reported is not accurate" called into question amount owed and therefore constituted dispute); Dixon v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 640 Fed. Appx. 793, 795 (10th Cir. 2016) (reasonable fact finder could treat "I feel that all I owe is $20" as dispute of alleged $102.99 debt); Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64, 66 (1st Cir. 1998); Washington v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 1093152 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2017) (debt not accurate). See also Goss v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 2219048, at *4 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2020) (where consumer said she did not know anything about debt, "in contrast to other cases where debtors disputed how much they owed, here, Goss was disputing that she owed any debt at all." (emphasis in original)); Levine v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., 2019 WL 1077126, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 7, 2019) (consumer's statement that he had already paid amount and that he no longer owed anything on his account called debt into question); Sanchez v. Pinnacle Credit Services, L.L.C., 195 F. Supp. 3d 1184 (D. Colo. 2016) (consumer's statements during telephone call that she owed much less than was claimed on phone bill was sufficient); Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 176 F. Supp. 3d 1054 (D. Colo. 2016) (violating § 1692e(8) where consumer claimed that she "did not owe that much"); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 6833932 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2016) (amount owed not accurate); Carter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2014 WL 4976320 (D. Colo. Oct. 6, 2014) (issue of material fact as to whether consumer's statement to collection agency that insurance should have paid amount at issue was "dispute" for purposes of § 1692e(8) claim); Palmer v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 1655569 (N.D. Cal. June 7, 2007).

500 See Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (interpreting another FDCPA provision concerning notice of employer's policy against debt collection calls at work).

501 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 347 (7th Cir. 2018); Mohamed v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 215 F. Supp. 3d 85 (D.D.C. 2016); Carter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2015 WL 4450698, at *3 (D. Colo. July 20, 2015) (consumer "need not prevail on the merits of her argument that she is not liable for the debt in order for the debt to be disputed within the meaning of Section 1692e(8) . . . [T]he FDCPA obligated the Defendant to report that debt as disputed."); Hudspeth v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 674019 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2013).

502 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 347 (7th Cir. 2018).

503 See Bowse v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 218 F. Supp. 3d 745 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (FDCPA does not permit debt collectors to withhold disputed nature of debts, even in instances when debt collector considers that dispute invalid), aff'd sub nom. Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018); Mohamed v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 215 F. Supp. 3d 85 (D.D.C. 2016); Hoffman v. Partners in Collections, Inc., 1993 WL 358158 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 14, 1993) (dispute need not be demonstrated as "valid" for protection to apply).

504 See Ridgeway v. AR Res., Inc., 2017 WL 3736650 (D.N.J. Aug. 30, 2017) (credit repair agency sent dispute for consumer). But see Taylor-Burns v. AR Res., Inc., 2017 WL 3034353 (S.D.N.Y. July 14, 2017) (violating Credit Repair Organizations Act where dispute was not conveyed by consumer, but by CRA that voided consumer's relationship with repair agency and voided her dispute letter); Robinson v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 6462278 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 1, 2016) (no § 1692e(10) violation in refusing to note dispute from consumer's credit counseling agency; debt collector was not refusing to note oral dispute, but was requiring that consumer personally affirm dispute orally or otherwise).

505 Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Bowse v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 218 F. Supp. 3d 745 (N.D. Ill. 2016), aff'd sub nom. Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 6833932 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2016).

506 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 347 (7th Cir. 2018).

and costs for a tricky dispute letter,[507] but this decision was reversed on appeal where the Fifth Circuit found that the district court had overlooked the actual language of the letter and improperly inferred subjective bad faith on the part of the consumer's counsel.[508]

7.2.8.5 Collector Defenses to FDCPA § 1692e(8) Claims

Where a court requires that a misrepresentation in violation of FDCPA § 1692e be material,[509] courts usually have little trouble finding FDCPA § 1692e(8) violations to be material. Failure to communicate with a CRA that a debt is disputed affects the consumer's credit rating, and thus it is material.[510]

FDCPA § 1692e applies only to representations and practices "in connection with the collection of any debt."[511] A threat by a debt collector to communicate false credit information is intended to coerce payment and therefore is made in connection with the collection of a debt, as is actually furnishing information to a CRA.[512] But courts generally find a lack of connection with collection of a debt when the CRA asks the debt collector to reinvestigate the consumer's dispute, and the debt collector then responds to the CRA request for information.[513]

Bona fide error, examined in detail at § 12.2, infra, is an affirmative defense. A collection agency that does not report a dispute may not hide behind a glitch in its computer system to claim that its violation was a bona fide error where the glitch could have been easily overcome by the debt collector.[514]

The FDCPA § 1692e(8) violation must have occurred within one year of the consumer's FDCPA action.[515] But each monthly report to a CRA by a debt collector in violation of FDCPA § 1692e(8) presents a separate harm to the consumer and an independent opportunity for a debt collector to comply with the statute. Even if some monthly reports are outside the one-year statute of limitations, a plaintiff could proceed based on the monthly reports made within the one -year period.[516] The FDCPA statute of limitations for continuing violations is examined at § 12.3.3.3, infra.

A thorough discussion of case or controversy Article III standing in federal court is found at § 11.15, infra. Standing for FDCPA § 1692e(8) claims, specifically, is discussed at § 11.15.7, infra.

7.2.8.6 FCRA Claims Complementing FDCPA § 1692e(8)

The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) offers consumers a procedure to correct inaccurate information in their credit reports, as outlined at § 14.6.2, infra, and in more detail in 507 Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1612856, at *4 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 2, 2018) ("[T]he evidence shows Plaintiff's counsel is involved in a scheme to force settlements from debt collectors by abusing the FDCPA. . . . Viewing the [ambiguous, tricky dispute] letter as it was intended by Plaintiff's counsel, the debt collector understands the letter to say the debtor cannot afford to pay the debt. The debt collector then fails to mark the debt as disputed and Plaintiff's counsel files suit for violation of the FDCPA. Facing the high costs of discovery and trial, the debt collector settles the lawsuit, paying the debtor's attorneys' fees."). See also Huebner v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 897 F.3d 42, 52, 57 (2d Cir. 2018) (consumer lawyer plaintiff sanctioned for trying "to provoke an FDCPA [§ 1692e(8)] violation"). But see Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 7052288 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2017) (finding § 1692e(8) violation with similar letter).

508 Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 955 F.3d 453, 460–461 (5th Cir. 2020) ("The relevant part of the letter reads: 'My monthly expenses exceed my monthly income . . . and the amount you are reporting is not accurate either.' Aside from invoking the word 'dispute,' we struggle to see how a debtor could dispute a debt more clearly than by writing, 'the amount you are reporting is not accurate.'"; finding that district court had no basis to ignore language of letter and instead infer subjective bad faith).

509 See § 7.3.9, infra.

510 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 349 (7th Cir. 2018); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 6833932 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2016); Daley v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 717 F. Supp. 2d 1150 (D. Or. 2010). See also Whitehead v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 8277269, at *6 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 2, 2019), adopted, 2020 WL 1467253 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 8, 2020).

511 See § 4.3, supra, § 7.3.2, infra.

512 McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909 (8th Cir. 2014) (while reinvestigating debt is not in connection with debt, reporting debt initially is in connection with collection of debt); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *6 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019); Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *11 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018); Davis v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 526 F. Supp. 2d 577 (W.D.N.C. 2007); Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 336 F. Supp. 2d 492, 503 n.4 (D. Md. 2004) ("act of a debt collector reporting the status of a consumer debt to a credit reporting agency is an activity that would certainly appear to meet the statute's requirement that the false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means be 'in connection with' the collection of a debt").

513 McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909 (8th Cir. 2014); Fulton v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5661588 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2016).

514 See Holmes v. NCO Fin. Services, Inc., 538 Fed. Appx. 765, 766 (9th Cir. 2013) ("had NCO clicked on the applicable button on the Oasis interface, it would have discovered that its access to essential information was blocked and needed to be restored before NCO could report the account to a credit reporting agency"). See also Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018) (no bona fide error defense where mistakenly thought FDCPA requirement did not apply to consumer's dispute); Valenta v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1429656, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2019) (no bona fide error defense where system could not receive dispute letter on Friday evening and update report it sends to credit bureaus by following Friday, since such system is not "reasonably adapted" to avoid FDCPA violations); Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018) (failure to report consumer's dispute); Daley v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 717 F. Supp. 2d 1150 (D. Or. 2010) (misreporting date of default not bona fide error). But see Washington v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 1093152 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2017) (defense shown when failure to report dispute caused by clerical mistake in typing wrong code and requirements of bona fide error defense met).

515 See Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416, 418 (8th Cir. 2008).

516 See Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2007 WL 421828 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 2, 2007).

NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[517] Claims under the FCRA often are complex. It is advisable for a less experienced consumer lawyer to join with experienced FCRA consumer attorneys in cases with FCRA claims. A reliable directory of consumer attorneys with FCRA experience is available at www.consumeradvocates.org.

To bring an FCRA claim against the debt collector, the consumer must first initiate with the consumer reporting agency (not just the collector or creditor) a dispute of information in the consumer's credit file. Then the reporting agency will request the entity that furnished the information to reinvestigate the information that it previously reported.[518] A furnisher that fails to fulfill its FCRA obligation to conduct a reasonable reinvestigation may be liable to the consumer under the FCRA for statutory, actual and punitive damages, attorney fees, and costs.[519] FCRA and FDCPA claims may be combined in the same complaint where they are based on the same transaction.[520] Even where a FDCPA claim is not successful, the FCRA claim may still prevail.

7.2.9 False Impression of Writing's Source, Authorization, or Approval, FDCPA § 1692e(9)

7.2.9.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(9) The use or distribution of any written communication which simulates or is falsely represented to be a document authorized, issued, or approved by any court, official, or agency of the United States or any State, or which creates a false impression as to its source, authorization, or approval.[521]

FDCPA § 1692e(9) is closely related to section 1692e(1), which prohibits misrepresentation of government affiliation, and section 1692e(13), which prohibits misrepresentation of documents as legal process. FDCPA § 1692e(9) prohibits simulating legal process[522] and using bogus legal documents.[523] When collectors include legal captions or legalistic formats, titles, or phraseology in their collection letters, they are apt to violate FDCPA § 1692e(9).[524] A collection law firm that mails the consumer a confession of judgment with legal captions and references to the consumer as the defendant violates FDCPA § 1692e(9).[525]

FDCPA § 1692e(9), like section 1692e(1), also prohibits writings that appear to be authorized, issued, or approved by a branch of government.[526] Useful precedent for FDCPA

517 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 6 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

518 15 U.S.C. § 1681*i*. See § 14.6.2.1, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

519 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681s-2(b), 1681n (generally creating cause of action for willful noncompliance), § 1681o (generally creating cause of action for negligent noncompliance). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10, Ch. 11 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

520 E.g., Siconolfi v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2009 WL 10656481 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 22, 2009). See also Zaby v. Perfection Collection, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5067184 (D. Nev. Oct. 9, 2019); Mushala v. US Bank, 2019 WL 1429523 (D.D.C. Mar. 29, 2019); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 172 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (rejecting defendant's contention "that the FCRA provides the exclusive remedy for misrepresentations to a credit reporting agency").

521 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(9). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(3); Appx. E.2.4.13, infra.

A provision similar in most respects to this section was contained in each major bill leading to the Act. The last clause of the subsection was added by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Compare, e.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804(2) (1975), and H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(9) (1976), with Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(9) (1977).

522 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra (FDCPA prohibits "simulating court process"). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(9)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

523 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra (FDCPA prohibits "utilizing bogus legal documents"). See also Kachlic v. Bursey & Assoc., 2013 WL 820375 (D. Ariz. Mar. 5, 2013) (providing affidavit in support of state court debt collection claim in response to verification request); Johnson v. Eaton, 873 F. Supp. 1019 (M.D. La. 1995) (mailed questionnaire and unfiled, draft consent judgment created false impression that they were issued or approved by court). But see Yohannes v. Olympic Collection, Inc., 2019 WL 5103777, at *11 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 11, 2019) (no evidence that writs of garnishment were falsely represented as official court documents where they were not recorded in state court docket and required fees were not paid).

524 See Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984) (letter labeled "FINAL NOTICE" with legal caption, red notary seal, and indicating copy to court clerk); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983) (form letter with caption, pink paper, bold lettering, direction to bring notice, and make no phone calls suggested officially authorized legal compulsion); 122 Cong. Rec. H7309 (daily ed. July 19, 1967) (remarks by Rep. Annunzio) (giving example of letter with official-looking gold seal simulating subpoena or judgment). See also Kachlic v. Bursey & Assoc., 2013 WL 820375 (D. Ariz. Mar. 5, 2013) (response to verification request had the facial appearance of legal document); Johnson v. Ardec Credit Services, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24889 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 21, 1984) (collection letter headed "Total Equity d.b.a. Manchester Apartments v. Jessie Johnson"); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(9)-1 (this provision prohibits creating false impression that document comes from any source other than collector), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Schorr, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 27, 1981); DiPippa, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 5, 1981); Wehrwein, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 7, 1980); Aycock, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 13, 1978); Hoivik, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 30, 1978).

525 See Erekson v. Clarkson & Hale, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4220603 (D.S.C. Sept. 5, 2018).

526 See Tolentino v. Friedman, 833 F. Supp. 697 (N.D. Ill. 1993) (placing collection attorney's notice in same envelope as summons and complaint would mislead debtor about court's role); Thomas v. Nat'l

§ 1692e(9)'s application to such practices are older circuit court rulings finding such practices to be deceptive pursuant to the FTC Act.[527]

FDCPA § 1692e(9) is broader in scope that just misrepresentations related to legal processes and government affiliation. It prohibits any written communications that creates a false impression of source, authorization, or approval, including:

- Letters sent by a creditor on a collection agency's stationery;[528]
- Letters misrepresenting the creditor's identity;[529]
- An invalid execution served on a bank that appears to be authorized[530]
- A collection law firm adding unauthorized fees to a garnishment order, where a consumer would assume the dollar amount to be garnished had been approved by a court;[531] and
- A collection attorney entering into a settlement without authorization of its client and where the settlement is later rejected by the client.[532]

Misrepresentations that a collector is a credit reporting agency certainly violate FDCPA § 1692e(9), but may be better challenged under section 1692e(16) (the false representation or implication that a debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency).

On the other hand, courts have found not to violate FDCPA § 1692e(9):

- Letters that include at the bottom the name of an executive at the collection agency, where that name does not imply that individual is the letter's signatory;[533]
- Use of the name "Bureau of Medical Economics," since there was no implication that the debt collector was a government agency, as there were no government symbols or indicia, the email domain was .com (not .gov), and the letter indicated it was from a debt collector on behalf of a medical creditor;[534]
- Using the word "State" in the collection agency's name;[535]
- Using the name "Credit Protection Association";[536]
- Including "Revenue Department" on the envelope's return address.[537]
- An envelope stating "official notice" and "important information enclosed";[538]
- Service of an unfiled summons and complaint;[539]
- Use of a state "General Business License" number in the signature block;[540] and
- Use of an information subpoena prepared by the issuing lawyer, not by a court, as allowed by state law.[541]

7.2.9.2 Where Debt Collector Is Related to Source, Authorizer, or Approver

Where the debt collector is closely related to the source, authorizer, or approver, whether the debt collector's representation of source, authorization, or approval violates FDCPA § 1692e(9) may depend on the legitimacy of that representation. A unanimous Supreme Court in Sheriff v. Gillie found no FDCPA § 1692e(9) violation when attorneys hired as special Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984) (forms appeared to be government forms, word "National" in collector's name prominent, and at least one form contained prominent box stating "Pursuant to the Federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Section 809, Validation of Debts"). See also N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 2008 WL 346021 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 7, 2008) (including stipulation of settlement and collection letter with service of summons and complaint); Douglass, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 26, 1993). Cf. Gartrell v. J.J. Marshall & Assoc., Inc., 2020 WL 3250219, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2020 (recommending that North Star Capital Acquisitions analysis be applied to claim brought under state debt collection statute's provision that is analogous to § 1692e(9) where language and sending of letter itself arguably gave appearance that defendant was licensed and authorized by state of Florida to collect consumer debts, when it is not), adopted, 2020 WL 3250037 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2020).

527 See Floersheim v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 411 F.2d 874 (9th Cir. 1969) (using government letter format, Gothic type, D.C. address); Slough v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 396 F.2d 870 (5th Cir. 1968) (mailing forms seeking location information from mail drops in appropriate state capitals and using official sounding titles, such as "County Agent"); United States Ass'n of Credit Bureaus v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 299 F.2d 220 (7th Cir. 1962) (including American Eagle and red, white, and blue shield with stars); Bennett v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 200 F.2d 362 (D.C. Cir. 1952) (using D.C. address, letter format similar to VA, and official-sounding title, "disbursement officer"; consumer locating company).

528 See Durve v. Oker, 1996 WL 355311 (Ohio Ct. App. July 8, 1996). Cf. Raff, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 11, 1986) (proposed demand letter printed on collection agency letterhead has potential to mislead consumers that, at time letter is received, collection agency is involved in collection process).

529 Wallace v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012) (identifying wrong bank created problems for consumer in resolving debt); Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012) (identifying bank as creditor before bank was assigned mortgage note).

530 See Dina v. Cuda & Assoc., 950 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Conn. June 13, 2013).

531 See Eger v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2015 WL 3915776 (D. Minn. June 25, 2015).

532 Duell v. First Nat'l Bank of Omaha, 2015 WL 4602008 (S.D. Cal. July 29, 2015). See also Deschaine v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 12121197 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 7, 2013) (stating twice in collection letter that Paragon Way is the "client," "Current Creditor" is Precision Recovery Analytics, Inc., and "Original Creditor" is GE Money Bank/JC Penney Consumer, without any further explanation).

533 Campuzano-Burgos v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 550 F.3d 294, 298 (3d Cir. 2008).

534 Empire v. Med. Soc'y Bus. Services Inc., 2014 WL 5080414 (D. Ariz. Oct. 9, 2014).

535 Molesky v. State Collection & Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5746835 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 30, 2015).

536 Campbell v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P. 2013 WL 1282348 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 27, 2013).

537 Johnson v. NCB Collection Services, 799 F. Supp. 1298 (D. Conn. 1992).

538 McRobie v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2018 WL 5608121 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 30, 2018).

539 LeClair v. Suttell & Assoc., 2010 WL 417418 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 29, 2010).

540 Washington v. Merchants Credit Guide Co., 2020 WL 435463 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 28, 2020) (neither letterhead nor body of letter suggested that collection agency was acting under any government authority, and signature block did not represent agency as debt collector "to" or "for" state of Ohio).

541 Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413 (3d Cir. 2015).

counsel by a state attorney general for the collection of debts used the state attorney general's letterhead while disclosing that they were acting as special counsel.[542] The state attorney general had required the special counsel to use the letterhead. There was no misrepresentation in that the special counsel accurately represented the relationship to the state attorney general.[543]

On the other hand, the Seventh Circuit found that an attorney who owns both a law firm and an intertwined collection agency violated FDCPA § 1692e(9) by allowing mass mailings of collection letters to be sent on his law firm letterhead and over his facsimile signature. The attorney was not involved in the matter as an attorney, since he did not review debtor files, did not decide which letters to send, and did not see particular letters before they were sent. "The attorney letter implies that the attorney has reached a considered, professional judgment that the debtor is delinquent and is a candidate for legal action." That was not the case.[544] Note also that FDCPA § 1692e(3) prohibits the false representation that a communication is from an attorney.[545]

7.2.10 Deception in Collecting a Debt or Obtaining Consumer Information, FDCPA § 1692e(10)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(10) The use of any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer.[546]

FDCPA § 1692e prohibits "false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt." FDCPA § 1692e(10) is quite similar, prohibiting false representations and deceptive means to collect a debt. Courts generally view FDCPA § 1692e(10) as being as broad in scope as the general deception prohibition in the first sentence of section 1692e,[547] and, like that sentence, it is a "catch-all" provision.[548] FDCPA § 1692e(10) makes clear that it can apply to both attempting to collect a debt and obtaining information concerning a consumer.

FDCPA § 1692e(10) is to be construed broadly by the courts to deal with new deceptive collection methods as they emerge.[549] When alleging a violation of one of the other fifteen enumerated violations found in FDCPA § 1692e, it is prudent to also allege a section 1692e(10) violation in case the court finds the practice does not fall within the more specific prohibition. The converse is also prudent—when pleading a FDCPA § 1692e(10) violation, also plead any applicable more specific prohibition because a court may be more comfortable ruling on something more specific A practice can violate both § 1692e(10) and another provision of section 1692e. Even if a court were to dismiss the FDCPA § 1692e(10) claims as duplicative of the other,[550] this is unlikely to affect the consumer's damage recovery.

Because of its general nature, applicable to all forms of deceptive representations and practices in connection with collection of a debt, this subsection will not list all the types of conduct that violate FDCPA § 1692e(10). Instead, reference should be made to the other subsections in this chapter, with particular attention to § 7.3, supra, which discusses general standards as to deception, and to § 7.4, infra, which sets out

542 578 U.S. 317, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016).

543 See also Solberg v. Victim Services, Inc., 415 F. Supp. 3d 935, 951–952 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (private entity administering bad-check diversion programs authorized to use district attorneys' letterhead and send out letters under name of district attorneys did not violate § 1692e(9)); Bednarski v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 896777, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 7, 2017) (no violation where letter was analogous to that in Sheriff; debt collector represented United States Department of Justice in matter, as was stated in first sentence of letter).

544 Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 229 (7th Cir. 1996).

545 See § 7.2.3, supra.

546 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(10). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(d).

This provision first appeared in its present form in H.R. 13720 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(10) (1976) and was contained in each subsequent major bill leading to the Act.

547 E.g., Teemogonwuno v. Todd, Bremer & Larsen, Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21720 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 1991) (violating §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(10) where debt collector's attempt to collect amount which included, but did not itemize, $4000 as collection fees on student loan would deceive "least sophisticated consumer" concerning character and amount of debt). See In re Eastman, 419 B.R. 711 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2009) (violating § 1692e(10) when defendants filed claim to recover on debt that was not recoverable due to discharge in bankruptcy); FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 807(1), 807(10)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; § 7.3.2, infra. See also Dutton v. Wolhar, 809 F. Supp. 1130 (D. Del. 1992) (mere re-allegation of violations of other sections of FDCPA was not sufficient to constitute violation of § 1692e(10)), aff'd, 5 F.3d 649 (3d Cir. 1993).

548 See Bicking v. Law Offices of Rubenstein & Cogan, 783 F. Supp. 2d 841, 846 (E.D. Va. 2011) (§ 1692e(10) is not limited to use of false threats; "If subsection e(10) barred only the use of false threats, the phrase 'deceptive means' would be rendered meaningless.").

549 Congress included this general proscription in recognition of its inability to foresee every conceivable abusive debt collection method. According to the Senate report, "this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed." S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

550 Despite innumerable examples of courts finding violations of both § 1692e(10) and other § 1692e provisions, a few courts refuse to find a § 1692e(10) violation when the consumer also alleges violation of another § 1692e provision applicable to the exact same conduct. See Barlow v. Safety Nat'l Cas. Corp, 2014 WL 1327922 (M.D. La. 2014), aff'd, 586 Fed. Appx. 191 (5th Cir. 2014); Lee v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 846 F. Supp. 2d 716 (S.D. Tex. 2012); Wideman v. Monterey Fin. Serv. Inc., 2009 WL 1292830, at *3 (W.D. Pa. May 7, 2009); Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932, 942 (D. Ariz. 2003); Dutton v. Wolhar, 809 F. Supp. 1130, 1140 (D. Del. 1992); Beattie v. D.M. Collections, Inc., 754 F. Supp. 383, 394 (D. Del. 1991).

caselaw finding violations as to selected topics, where the court often finds violations under FDCPA § 1692e(10)—such as deceptive offers to settle, representations regarding time-barred debts, deception in collection litigation, misrepresentations regarding mortgage servicing and foreclosures, and deception as to student loans, credit reporting, and the nature of the collector.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) issued Official Interpretations about false representations or deceptive means related to social media under this FDCPA provision. These are discussed at § 7.4.2, infra.

7.2.11 Notice of Attempt to Collect a Debt, FDCPA § 1692e(11)

7.2.11.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(11) The failure to disclose in the initial written communication with the consumer and, in addition, if the initial communication with the consumer is oral, in that initial oral communication, that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose, and the failure to disclose in subsequent communications that the communication is from a debt collector, except that this paragraph shall not apply to a formal pleading made in connection with a legal action.[551]

FDCPA § 1692e(11) and Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1) and (e)(2) set out three separate requirements:

1. If a collector's initial communication with a consumer is oral, then the collector must, in that oral communication, state that the collector is attempting to a collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose;
2. In the initial written communication, even if there is a prior oral communication, the collector must make the same disclosure.
3. In all other communications, whether written or oral, the communication must disclose that it is from a debt collector.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) adds the additional requirement that the disclosures must be in the same language or languages used for the rest of the communication in which the debt collector conveyed the disclosures.[552] Any translation of the disclosures a debt collector uses must be complete and accurate.[553] The Reg. F Official Interpretations set out this example.

> ABC debt collector is collecting a debt. ABC debt collector's initial communication with the consumer takes place in Spanish. [Reg. F §] 1006.18(e)(4) requires ABC debt collector to provide in Spanish the disclosure required by [Reg. F] § 1006.18(e)(1). Thereafter, ABC debt collector has a communication with the consumer that takes place partly in English and partly in Spanish. During this communication, the debt collector must provide the disclosure required by [Reg. F] § 1006.18(e)(2) in both English and Spanish.[554]

A debt collector must make the disclosure required in the debt collector's initial communication with a consumer, regardless of the medium of communication and regardless of whether the debt collector or the consumer initiated the communication.[555] The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide an example of a debt collector who has not previously communicated with a consumer that leaves a limited-content message for the consumer to which the consumer responds. Under Regulation F, limited-content messages are not communications.[556] Because the consumer-initiated call is considered the initial communication between the debt collector and the consumer, the debt collector must disclose during that telephone call that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose.[557]

The Regulation F supplemental information discusses when a communication is a subsequent communication requiring a new disclosure or where it is a continuation of an existing communication not requiring new disclosures:

> On one hand, communications that occur in different media, such as an email message followed by a text message, or communications that have no inherent connection between them, such as two letters, seem to be exactly the kind of "subsequent communications" where a new disclosure would further the purposes of the FDCPA section 807(11) [§ 1692e(11)] and final [Reg. F] § 1006.18(e)(2). On the other hand, some communications, such as a webchat session, may be closer to individual telephone calls where new disclosures throughout the conversation would likely be unnecessary.[558]

The disclosure requirements apply to all debt collector communications, even those not designed to deceive consumers as to the purpose of the communication.[559] But a formal pleading 551 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11) See also Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1), (2).

552 Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(4).
553 Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(4).
554 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(4)-1(i).
555 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(1)-1.
556 See § 7.2.11.2, infra.
557 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(1)-1.
558 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,830 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnote omitted).
559 See Hulshizer v. Global Credit Services, Inc., 728 F.2d 1037 (8th Cir. 1984); Garrick v. Hosp. Collection Services, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20961 (D. Conn. Jan. 31, 1990).

in a legal action is not a written communication for purposes of FDCPA § 1692e(11), as examined at § 7.2.11.4, infra.

Regulation F specifically lists the disclosures required by FDCPA § 1692e(11) and Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1) and (2) as required validation information that must be provided to the consumer.[560] The Official Interpretations to that rule specify that, where the validation information is provided in a written or electronic notice provided within five days of the initial communication, the debt collector complies with Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1) by making either the disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1) or the disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(2).[561]

Prior to 1996 amendments to the FDCPA,[562] except when acquiring location information from a third party, the debt collector under section 1692e(11) had to disclose in all communications that the communication was for the purpose of collecting a debt and that any information received would be used for that purpose.[563] Thus, older court decisions interpreting the section as written prior to 1996 may no longer be applicable.

Before the 1996 amendments, the provision applied to communications with the consumer and with third parties.[564] The current provision applies to consumers,[565] and does not apply to communications with other parties.[566]

This 1996 change eliminating the provision's applicability to third parties has limited significance because FDCPA § 1692c prohibits most third-party contacts, except for communications seeking the consumer's location information, and FDCPA § 1692b regulates communications seeking location information. But FDCPA § 1692c does not limit communications with the "consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), guardian, executor, or administrator."[567]

Consequently, FDCPA § 1692e(11) appears to offer no protection when a collector contacts such individuals, unless the collector is alleging that they are obligated on the debt, in which case the provision applies. A number of courts also find that when a debt collector contacts the consumer's attorney, FDCPA § 1692e(11) does not apply—the provision applies to communications with the consumer.[568]

A collector is strictly liable for non-compliance.[569] Whether the non-disclosure was material to the consumer is irrelevant—even if materiality is a requirement for a deception claim, it is not required where the debt collector fails to make a required disclosure.[570]

---

560 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1). See § 9.4.3, infra.

561 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(1)-1.

562 See § 3.4.2.3, supra.

563 Text of former section 1692e(11): "(11) Except as otherwise provided for communications to acquire location information under section 804, the failure to disclose clearly in all communications made to collect a debt or to obtain information about a consumer, that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose."

564 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11) as amended by Pub. L. No. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009, the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997, § 2305 (Sept. 30, 1996). 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11) previously read: "[T]he following conduct is a violation of this section: . . . (11) Except as otherwise provided for communications to acquire location information under section 1692b of this title [section 804], the failure to disclose clearly in all communications made to collect a debt or to obtain information about a consumer, that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose." 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11) (Supp. II 1979). The original provision was first proposed in the initial House bill and omitted from the second. H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(10) (1975).

In later House proceedings, three other (subsequently omitted) subsections were proposed prohibiting deceptive survey, prepaid package, and free gift ruses commonly used to obtain location information. See H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. §§ 806(11), 806(12), 806(13) (1976). While the other subsections were deemed superfluous in view of other FDCPA protections, this section was included in Senate bills because it required affirmative disclosures not required by other parts of the Act.

565 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3). See Isaac v. RMB, Inc., 2014 WL 3566069 (N.D. Ala. July 18, 2014) (§ 1692e(11) applies even where consumer does not owe debt), aff'd, 604 Fed. Appx. 818 (11th Cir. 2015); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013) (same). Cf. Hadler v. Alltran Fin., L.P., 2019 WL 1433666 (D. Minn. Mar. 5, 2019) (no § 1692e(11) claim in "mistaken contact" case, since allegations did not support inference that defendant asserted at any time that plaintiff was obligated to pay any debt), adopted, 2019 WL 1429617 (D. Minn. Mar. 29, 2019).

566 See Girdler v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 7479541 (D. Mass. Dec. 29, 2016) (debt collector claimed that it thought person answering phone was not consumer but third person); Kempa v. Cadlerock Joint Ventures, L.P., 2011 WL 761500 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2011) (no violation where person answering phone refused to identify himself as consumer). But see Prendergast v. First Choice Assets, L.L.C., 317 F. Supp. 3d 1018 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (cannot use third-party defense contact when debtor adequately identified himself by name and address, even though would not provide Social Security number).

567 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(d). See § 5.10, supra.

568 See, e.g., Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007); Dikeman v. National Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949 (10th Cir. 1996); Condon v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2010 WL 5071014 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 7, 2010); Young v. Manley, 2000 WL 1280968 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 6, 2000).

569 See, e.g., Doshay v. Global Credit Collection Corp., 796 F. Supp. 2d 1301, 1304 (D. Colo. 2011); Gryzbowski v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 691 F. Supp. 2d 618, 625 (M.D. Pa. 2010); Garrick v. Hosp. Collection Services, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20961 (D. Conn. Jan. 31, 1990).

570 Warren v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 676 F.3d 365, 374 (4th Cir. 2012), abrogated on other grounds by Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016); Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 208 (E.D.N.Y. 2019) (failure to make disclosure actionable per se, without any requirement of materiality); Price-Richardson v. DCN Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 902167, at *6 (D. Md. Feb. 15, 2018) ("Although courts have generally required that other § 1692e violations rest upon material misrepresentations, holding that immaterial statements are non-actionable, this requirement does not attach to a § 1692e(11) disclosure omission. Therefore, a mere failure to disclose is actionable under the FDCPA."). See also Prendergast v. First Choice Assets, L.L.C., 317 F. Supp. 3d 1018, 1026 (N.D. Ill. 2018) ("it is not clear that this materiality requirement applies § 1692e(11) specifically—and if it does, violations of § 1692e(11) are per se material"); Heyer v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 75739, at *13 n.5 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2017) ("It is not at all clear that the materiality requirement applies to omissions under Section 1692e(11)."); Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303377 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2011) (non-disclosure is material). Cf. Driesen v. RSI Enters. Inc., 2019 WL 283646, at *4 (D. Ariz. Jan. 22, 2019) (in Ninth Circuit "a materiality requirement probably applies to claims arising under § 1692e(11)"; alleged omission in this case was material); Fausz v. NPAS, Inc., 237 F. Supp. 3d 559, 570 (W.D. Ky. 2017) (applying materiality requirement; consumer did not show that debt collector's failure "to identify itself as a debt collector or to provide that any information that it obtained

FDCPA § 1692e(11), being a disclosure provision, is likely to draw a challenge as to whether a claim involves an Article III case or controversy. This issue is discussed at § 11.15, infra, and with particular application to FDCPA § 1692e(11) at § 11.10.5.5, infra.

7.2.11.2 Is a Voicemail or Other Contact a "Communication"?

FDCPA § 1692e(11) specifies required notices during a debt collector's "communication." A preliminary issue in FDCPA § 1692e(11)'s application is whether a voicemail or other minimal contact with the consumer is a communication. The FDCPA defines a communication as "conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium."[571] A voicemail message or any other contact with a consumer is certainly via a medium that conveys information directly or indirectly to a person. The question is whether the information is regarding a debt.

Regulation F resolves this issue by introducing the concept of a limited-content message, as examined in more detail at § 4.9, supra. A limited-content message is a voicemail that contains only certain required and optional content. Regulation F's Official Interpretations provide that a limited-content message is not a "communication" because it does not convey information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person.[572] As a result, a debt collector who leaves only a limited-content message for a consumer need not make the disclosures required of a debt collection communication.[573] "However, if a debt collector leaves a voicemail message for a consumer that includes content in addition to the content described in [Reg. F] § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2) and that directly or indirectly conveys any information regarding a debt, the voicemail message is a communication, and the debt collector is required to make the [Reg. F] § 1006.18(e) disclosures."[574] The consumer's response to a limited-content message is a communication, and then the disclosures are required at that point, even though the communication is initiated by the consumer.[575]

The remainder of this section describes the law that applied to voicemail messages prior to November 30, 2021. This law is still valid precedent to the extent that a voicemail message does not qualify as a limited-content message.

It is enough to show a call is regarding a debt if the call identifies itself as being from a debt collector; the call need not indicate an attempt to collect on the debt.[576] A voicemail can be ruled as regarding a debt where the voicemail contains a long reference number and the caller said there were documents pertaining to the consumer in the caller's office.[577]

Even where the debt collector just leaves a person's name and a phone number to call back, the majority position is that this is a communication and that FDCPA § 1692e(11) applies if the purpose of the message is debt collection.[578] The same is the case where the call tells the consumer to hold and someone will be with them shortly.[579] Some courts find that FDCPA § 1692e(11) does not apply to a debt collector merely leaving a message with a callback number.[580]

Debt collectors argue that a message that avoids mention of a debt should not be covered because the collector would otherwise be placed in a difficult position. If the collector is obligated to identify a voicemail as from a debt collector, would be used for a debt collection purpose was materially false or misleading"); Kagan v. Selene Fin. L.P., 210 F. Supp. 3d 535, 548 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) ("Although the Second Circuit has not clearly established that violations of § 1692e(11) must be material in order to be enforceable, it has cited other circuits (even if in a summary order) so holding with apparent approval and numerous courts therein have adopted the materiality requirement.").

571 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2).

572 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 2(d)(2).

573 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)-1.

574 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)-1.

575 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(1)-1.

576 Hart v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 871 F.3d 1255, 1258 (11th Cir. 2017) ("This is Credit Control calling with a message. This call is from a debt collector. Please call us at 866-784-1160."). Cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.2(j), which does not include a disclosure that the call is from a debt collector as either required or optional content for a limited-content message).

577 Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1438763 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2010). Cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.2(j), which does not include reference numbers or references to documents as either required or optional content for a limited-content message).

578 See Winehouse v. GC Services L.P., 2017 WL 2455075 (E.D.N.Y. June 6, 2017); Pisarz v. GC Services L.P., 2017 WL 1102636 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2017) Rhodes v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 6472112 (D. Colo. Oct. 31, 2016); Lyon v. Bergstrom Law, Ltd., 2016 WL 4161107 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2016); Kersten v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2015 WL 105797 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 2015); Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 114 F. Supp. 3d 243 (E.D. Pa. 2015); Erez v. Steur, 2014 WL 6069847 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 13, 2014); Isaac v. RMB, Inc., 2014 WL 1278096 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 27, 2014), aff'd, 604 Fed. Appx. 818 (11th Cir. 2015); Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 791308 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (left message to call because conducting investigation that involves you directly); Thompson v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5372577 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2012); Thorne v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 3108662 (S.D. Fla. July 24, 2012); Whatley v. Creditwatch Services, Ltd., 2012 WL 2885640 (E.D. Tex. July 13, 2012) (prerecorded message required to comply), adopted, 2012 WL 3151261 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 2, 2012); Pawelczak v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., 2012 WL 2192263 (N.D. Ill. June 14, 2012); Wood v. GC Services, L.P., 2012 WL 995207 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2012); Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011); Stewart v. Regent Asset Mgmt. Solutions, 2011 WL 1766018 (N.D. Ga. May 4, 2011); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069, 1076 (E.D. Cal. 2007); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1116 (C.D. Cal. 2005). See also Appx. E.2.4.9, infra. But cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.2(j), which requires limited-content messages to include the name of a natural person that the consumer can contact and a call-back number).

579 Paul v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2012 WL 12838293 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2012).

580 Stewart v. Nathan & Nathan, 2014 WL 977979 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 12, 2014); Makreas v. Moore Law Group, A.P.C., 2011 WL 4803005 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 11, 2011); Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1438763 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2010); Biggs v. Credit Collections, Inc., 2007 WL 4034997 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 15, 2007). Cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.2(j), which requires limited-content messages to include a call-back number).

third parties (e.g., children, roommates, or other employees) might overhear the voicemail, resulting in a third-party contact prohibited by FDCPA § 1692c(b). But courts find that this is no reason not to comply with both FDCPA §§ 1692c(b) and 1692e(11).[581]

At least one court has held that there can be a violation of FDCPA § 1692e(11) even if a consumer does not listen to a voicemail.[582] But the Sixth Circuit has ruled that where the consumer never received a writing, there can be no violation based on that writing.[583]

Some courts find that FDCPA § 1692e(11) does not apply where the collector hangs up before giving a message or where the message is inaudible.[584] But another court found it did apply where the collector called fifty times and hung up before the consumer could answer.[585]

Issues also arise as to whether not just a voicemail but also a debt collector's written communication is regarding a debt and thus a covered communication.[586] A collector's letter seeking stipulation of discontinuance of a debt collection suit against the consumer could be found to be regarding a debt.[587] Where a collector merely sought information regarding the consumer's possible bankruptcy, the court could not determine on the facts whether this was regarding a debt, and so could not rule at the summary judgment stage.[588] Where a consumer disputes a debt and a debt collector reports what it believes to be the current status of a debt, this was found to be in relation to a debt.[589] Neither an assignment of mortgage nor its recording is an initial or subsequent communication sent to a debtor or third parties in connection with collection of debt for the purposes of FDCPA § 1692e(11).[590]

Prior to the FDCPA's 1996 amendment, the relevant language read: "failure to disclose clearly in all communications made to collect a debt or to obtain information about a consumer . . ." Since this language is different than "conveying of information regarding a debt,"[591] decisions interpreting FDCPA § 1692e(11)'s applicability to communications prior to the 1996 amendments are of limited value.

In addition to the discussion of limited-content messages in § 4.9, supra, voicemail messages and their implications under FDCPA §§ 1692c(b) and 1692d(6) are discussed at §§ 5.7.8 and 6.8, supra.

7.2.11.3 Collector's Adequate Disclosure of FDCPA § 1692e(11) Notices

A collector's disclosure of the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notices must be clear and effective.[592] It is not adequate to place the notice on a separate document[593] or on the letter's reverse side[594] without the letter's front referencing that the notice is on the other document or the letter's reverse side. The reference must also be conspicuous.[595] But courts have found it adequate where a letter's front side clearly and conspicuously refers 581 Edwards v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 584 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2009); Pawelczak v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., 2012 WL 2192263 (N.D. Ill. June 14, 2012); Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1438763 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2010) (voicemail must comply with §§ 1692c(b), 1692d(6), and 1692e(11)). But cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.2(j) and the safe harbors created for compliant limited-content messages).

582 Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 114 F. Supp. 3d 243 (E.D. Pa. 2015). Cf. Grosz v. Cavalry Portfolio Servs, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4888583, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2019) (amended complaint and motion remained silent as to whether the wife-plaintiff ever actually heard the voicemail message but husband-plaintiff did hear the message).

583 Hardin v. Finkelstein, Kern, Steinberg & Cunningham, P.C., 707 Fed. Appx. 855, 858 (6th Cir. 2017).

584 Isaac v. RMB, Inc., 2014 WL 1278096 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 27, 2014), aff'd, 604 Fed. Appx. 818 (11th Cir. 2015); Lynch v. Fin. Recovery Services of Minn., Inc., 2013 WL 11971263 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 30, 2013) (where predictive dialer left voicemail only containing series of beeps, series of numbers that might be phone number, and "thank you," call was not communication within § 1692a(2) violating § 1692e(11)); Garza v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3527072 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 15, 2012).

585 Sussman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 928 F. Supp. 2d 784 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

586 See Brinkley v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5017307 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 19, 2016) (filing certified copy of state court judgment with county register of deeds was not communication from debt collector).

587 See Hummel v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2017 WL 4697514 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 19, 2017).

588 Buckley v. Bass & Assoc., 249 F.3d 678 (7th Cir. 2001).

589 Mennes v. Capital One, 2014 WL 1767079 (W.D. Wis. May 5, 2014).

590 See, e.g., Tardi-Osterhoudt v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway L.L.C., 2019 WL 4242410, at *7 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 6, 2019).

591 See § 3.4.2.3, supra.

592 See Dykes v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 111 F. Supp. 3d 739 (E.D. Va. June 30, 2015) (Spanish language § 1692e(11) notice to a non-Spanish speaker was not effective). See also Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(1) ("validation information required by paragraph (c) [which includes the § 1692e(11) disclosure] must be clear and conspicuous").

593 Sylvester v. Laks, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21777 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 1, 1991). Cf. Day v. Law Offices of A. Lysa Simon, 2019 WL 1751824, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 4, 2019) (letter provided notice in the "Notice of Rights" in complaint, which was included with letter and deemed incorporated by reference). Cf. Reg. F, Appx B-1 Model Validation Notice (placing § 1692e(11) notice on the front side of the model validation notice).

594 See Lee v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 9275411 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 25, 2016) (disclosure was not in a sufficiently obvious location); Phillips v. Amana Collection Services, 1992 WL 227839 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 1992); Read v. Amana Collection Services, 1991 WL 5155 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 15, 1991); Butler v. Int'l Collection Services, Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19102 (D. Conn. June 6, 1989). See also Friedman v. HHL Fin. Services, Inc., 1993 WL 367089 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 17, 1993) (debt collection warning pursuant to § 1692e(11) is sufficient when stated on front of collection letter and need not be restated on back). Cf. Reg. F, Appx. B-1 Model Validation Notice (placing § 1692e(11) notice on the front side of the model validation notice). But cf. Weber v. Payco-General Am. Credits, 1990 WL 341654 (D. Conn. Dec. 13, 1990) ("extraneous verbiage" included in debt collection warning required by § 1692e(11) which was located on reverse side of demand letter, did not violate FDCPA).

595 Rabideau v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 805 F. Supp. 1086 (W.D.N.Y. 1992); Siler v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 1992 WL 32333 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 1992). See also Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(1) ("validation information required by paragraph (c) [which includes the § 1692e(11) disclosure] must be clear and conspicuous").

to important information on the reverse side.[596] Whether the notice itself is in large enough type size or otherwise conspicuous enough will be a question for the fact finder.[597]

In any phone call, the collector must make the full, required disclosure, but a court may find no liability where the consumer interrupts the call and makes it impossible for the collector to make the disclosure.[598]

Where a collector's voicemail message appeared to seek to make the required disclosure, but the call was cut off, it is a question of fact whether the collector is liable where it is unclear whether the fault is with the collector's phone system or the consumer's voicemail.[599] However, if a call drops in the middle of leaving a limited-content voicemail message, and the partial message did not include all of the required elements of a limited-content message, there would be no violation of FDCPA § 1692e(11), because a partial limited-content message is still only an attempt to communicate and not a communication.[600]

The language required in the initial communication is fairly specific—the collector must disclose both that it is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose. Even if the collector is not seeking to obtain information, it must still disclose that any information obtained will be used to collect a debt.[601]

More open to interpretation is what language is sufficient in subsequent communications, since FDCPA § 1692e(11) just requires that the collector disclose that the communication is from a debt collector. No specific language is required, as long as the language utilized is sufficient to disclose that the communication is from a debt collector.[602]

This requirement has been found satisfied where a voicemail message states it is from the creditor's collection division,[603] a letter indicates it is from a professional debt collector,[604] where a letter states it is from a law firm and indicates in large upper case letters that it is seeking to collect a debt,[605] or it is clear the communication is about collection of a debt.[606] The Eighth Circuit found it sufficient to repeat the language required in the initial disclosure in a subsequent communication—that "this is an attempt to collect a debt and any information obtained will be used for that purpose."[607] The name "Collection Bureau" and reference to a file number have been found sufficient to disclose the call is from a debt collector.[608]

But a court has found not sufficient identification that a call is from a debt collector where the call indicates it was about settling a case or a legal action affecting the consumer's tax liability.[609] The debt collector's name alone is not sufficient where the name provided does not signify that the agency is 596 See Youngblood v. GC Services L.P., 186 F. Supp. 2d 695 (W.D. Tex. 2002); O'Connor v. Check Rite, 973 F. Supp. 1010 (D. Colo. 1997). See also Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (§ 1692e(11) disclaimers were "sufficiently noticeable" on second page of collection letter); Gaalswyk-Knetzke v. Receivable Mgmt. Services Corp., 2008 WL 2224833 (M.D. Fla. May 27, 2008) (factual question whether light grey ink and poor quality paper of collection letter effectively conveyed disputed rights).

597 Vaughn v. CSC Credit Services, Inc., 1995 WL 51402 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 1995). But see Latimer v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 842 F. Supp. 274 (E.D. Mich. 1993) (smaller type complied).

598 See, e.g., Churchwell v. Ray Klein, Inc., 2019 WL 1553674 (D. Or. Feb. 1, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 3577659 (D. Or. Aug. 6, 2019); Dodd v. Delta Outsource Group, Inc., 2016 WL 4479240 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 25, 2016); Lauer v. Credit Control Services, 2015 WL 5824941 (D. Utah Oct. 6, 2015); Wisdom v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 1892956 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 24, 2015).

599 See Alvarado v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2015 WL 1815863 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 22, 2015).

600 CFPB, FAQ, Limited Content Messages #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov. See also § 4.9, supra (discussing limited-content messages).

601 Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805 (2d Cir. 1989); Chandler v. Eichel, 2017 WL 4236569 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 25, 2017); Sandlin v. Shapiro & Fishman, 919 F. Supp. 1564 (M.D. Fla. 1996); Peters v. Collection Tech. Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21810 (D. Or. Dec. 5, 1991) (failing to inform that any information obtained would be used for purpose of collection).

602 Davis v. Hollins Law, 832 F.3d 962, 967 (9th Cir. 2016) ("§ 1692e(11) does not require a subsequent communication from the debt collector to use any specific language so long as it is sufficient to disclose that the communication is from a debt collector, as it was here"); Shanker v. Fair Collection & Outsourcing, L.L.C., 2009 WL 1767580 (D.N.J. June 19, 2009) (debt collector need not use "magic words" as long as it is clear it is from debt collector).

603 See Meyer v. Christus Health, 2017 WL 4295233 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 27, 2017).

604 Wade v. DCS Fin., Inc., 2016 WL 6267803 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 26, 2016). See also Ross v. Commercial Fin. Services, Inc., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1077 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (letter asserted defendant was "different kind of debt collector").

605 See In re Holyfield, 740 Fed. Appx. 695 (11th Cir. 2018); Geiger v. Creditors Interchange, Inc., 59 Fed. Appx. 803 (6th Cir. 2003). See also Stewart v. Nathan & Nathan, 2014 WL 977979 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 12, 2014); Taufen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2014 WL 668019 (D. Minn. Feb. 19, 2014); Bank v. Cooper, Paroff, Cooper & Cook, 2009 WL 4825207 (2d Cir. Dec. 16, 2009) (stated that law firm had been retained to collect debt of $2,854.79 consisting of past due rent); Laws v. Cheslock, 1999 WL 160236 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 8, 1999).

606 Freeman v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 12884665 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 15, 2012) (clear from transcript that consumer understood caller was debt collector calling to collect).

607 Volden v. Innovative Fin. Sys., Inc., 440 F.3d 947 (8th Cir. 2006). See also In re Holyfield, 740 Fed. Appx. 695 (11th Cir. 2018) (using similar language); Gaston v. Fin. Sys. of Toledo, Inc., 2019 WL 2210769, at *2 (N.D. Ohio May 22, 2019); Danehy v. Jaffe & Asher, L.L.P., 2015 WL 1249879 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 17, 2015); Campbell v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2013 WL 1282348 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 27, 2013); Hinds v. AR Res., Inc., 2013 WL 1811322 (D. Minn. Apr. 30, 2013); Purdy v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2012 WL 1019115 (D. Nev. Mar. 23, 2012); Lorandeau v. Capital Collection Serv., 2011 WL 4018248 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 8, 2011); Degonzague v. Weiss, Neuren & Neuren, 89 F. Supp. 2d 282 (N.D.N.Y. 2000). Cf. Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(1)-1.

608 Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 432 Fed. Appx. 918 (11th Cir. 2011). See also Lopez v. Mid-America Accounts Control Bur. Inc., 2014 WL 6908140 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 8, 2014) (name Mid-America Collections was sufficient); Paul v. Metro Area Collections, Inc., 2011 WL 2270515 (D. Or. May 4, 2011) (collector stated he was calling from Metro Area Collections about unpaid dental bill, and he and plaintiff had spoken on phone previously on multiple occasions), adopted, 2011 WL 2261301 (D. Or. June 8, 2011).

609 Sears v. Fed. Credit Corp., 2009 WL 2601378 (W.D. Va. Aug. 18, 2009).

a debt collector,[610] and certainly does not apply where a voicemail just leaves an individual's name.[611] Similarly inadequate is disclosure of just the name of a law firm,[612] even with the additional disclosure that the law firm has been retained in relationship to a debt obligation.[613]

Where the initial communication indicates that a named entity is a debt collector, subsequent communications cannot assume the consumer will remember that association.[614] One initial letter is not enough to excuse a subsequent voicemail from identifying itself as coming from a debt collector.[615]

But the Ninth Circuit found that, where the debt collector and consumer had extensive phone communications with each other, there reached a point where the collector identifying itself on voicemail as "Gregory at Hollins Law" was sufficient.[616] Where a letter properly indicates it is for purposes of collection of a debt and refers the consumer to the collector's website for payment, the website need not comply with FDCPA § 1692e(11) where the site can be used for payment only by inserting information found in the letter.[617] A court has found there is no requirement for a debt collector to identify itself as such when responding to the consumer's communication to them asking for a payment plan.[618]

7.2.11.4 Exemption for Legal Pleadings

FDCPA § 1692e(11) states that its requirements "shall not apply to a formal pleading made in connection with a legal action."[619] This statutory exemption was added by 1996 amendments.[620] Prior to that amendment, FTC staff had, consistent with the 1996 amendment, interpreted the Act not to require the FDCPA § 1692e(11) disclosure and warning in a formal pleading made in connection with a legal action.[621]

Some courts interpret the exemption broadly. Courts have viewed the Congressional intent that a consumer would know when sued that the purpose of filings in the suit is to collect a debt.[622] Thus courts have found to be exempt formal pleadings:

- Affidavits attached to the complaint;[623]
- Requests for admission attached to the complaint where complaint included the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notice;[624]
- The collection attorney's notice of appearance;[625]

610 Wong v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4418077 (D.N.J. Sept. 5, 2014) (leaving the name Greentree); Paul v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2012 WL 12838293 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2012) (Central Financial Control); Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303377 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2011) (leaving the name Greystone). See also Meyer v. Phoenix Recovery Group, 2019 WL 2564572, at *2 (W.D. Tx. Feb. 21, 2019) (leaving individual's name and "the Phoenix Group," but neglecting to identify Phoenix Group as debt collector).

611 Lyon v. Bergstrom Law, Ltd., 2016 WL 4161107 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2016); Kersten v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2015 WL 105797 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 2015); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2007); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1116 (C.D. Cal. 2005). Cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing required content for limited-content voicemail messages).

612 Erez v. Steur, 2014 WL 6069847 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 13, 2014); Pasquale v. Law Offices of Nelson & Kennard, 940 F. Supp. 2d 1151 (N.D. Cal. 2013). Cf. § 4.9, supra (discussing required content for limited-content voicemail messages).

613 Calvert v. Alessi & Koenig, L.L.C., 2013 WL 592906 (D. Nev. Feb. 12, 2013) (failing to state law firm for homeowners' association was "debt collector"). See also Okulovich v. Durham & Durham, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4355258 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 2, 2017); Ellis v. Alessi Tr. Corp., 2013 WL 2475764 (D. Nev. June 7, 2013) (disclosure that ATC was acting on behalf of Arrow Creek HOA for past due assessment payments is not sufficient to disclose that ATC is debt collector).

614 Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303377 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2011).

615 See Okulovich v. Durham & Durham, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4355258 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 2, 2017); Makreas v. Moore Law Group, A.P.C., 2011 WL 4803005 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 11, 2011). See also Garo v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2011 WL 251450, at *5 (D. Ariz. Jan. 26, 2011) ("The fact that a debt collector may leave a message, in which the debt collector is otherwise unidentified, to contact the consumer at a phone number that had previously been contained in the debt collector's correspondence with the consumer is insufficient to identify the subsequent communication as being from a debt collector as is required by § 1692e(11).").

616 Davis v. Hollins Law, 832 F.3d 962, 967 (9th Cir. 2016). See also Brannigan v. Harrison, 2018 WL 1942520 (D.N.J. Apr. 24, 2018) (after extensive communications, sufficient where voicemail stated "This is Joy from Attorney Michael Harrison calling you regarding New Century Imagine."); Lopez v. Mid-America Accounts Control Bur. Inc., 2014 WL 6908140 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 8, 2014) (where collection agency made full disclosure in its initial communication, a telephone call, identifying both agency and its employee by name in voicemail that was left two days later clearly conveyed that communication was from debt collector); Forcier v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 6473043 (D.N.H. Nov. 17, 2014) (indicating nature of initial communication relevant as to adequacy of identification in subsequent communications).

Prior to § 1692e(11)'s 1999 amendment, the Ninth Circuit found a proper warning in the initial communication excused the identical warning in subsequent communication. Pressley v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 760 F.2d 922, 926 (9th Cir. 1985). In 1999, Congress explicitly required there be a different warning in subsequent communication, making Pressley no longer good law.

617 Berger v. Northland Group, Inc., 886 F. Supp. 2d 59 (D. Mass. 2012).

618 Boedicker v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1408158 (D. Kan. Apr. 20, 2017). See also Biggs v. Credit Collections, Inc., 2007 WL 4034997 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 15, 2007) (§ 1692e(11) does not apply where consumer initiates call).

619 See also Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(3).

620 See § 3.4.2.3, supra.

621 See Freeman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1988); Anderson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 5, 1987); Coury, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 7, 1978). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(2)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But cf. Shibley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 14, 1988).

622 D'Altilio v. Noam J. Cohen, P.A., 2018 WL 5263972 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2018); Bohannon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 893362 (E.D. Va. Mar. 2, 2015); Motherway v. Gordon, 2010 WL 2803052 (W.D. Wash. July 15, 2010). See also Rivas v. Pollack & Rosen, P.A., 2019 WL 6468709 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 2, 2019); Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006) (rejecting that subsequent filings in foreclosure case are not formal pleadings).

623 Bohannon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 893362 (E.D. Va. Mar. 2, 2015); Roberson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4748305 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 23, 2014); McGhee v. Buffaloe & Assoc., P.L.C., 2014 WL 1333730 (E.D. Tenn. Apr. 2, 2014); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4010257, at *4 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 5, 2013).

624 See Aqeel v. Cach L.L.C., 2016 WL 5334751 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 22, 2016).

625 See McKee v. Ingram Law Office, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6157807, at *4 (N.D. Ala. Oct. 24, 2016).

- Objections to the consumer's motion to dismiss;[626]
- Filings in a state court foreclosure action;[627]
- A proof of claim in a bankruptcy proceeding;[628]
- The debt collector's response to the consumer's motion to dismiss the debt collection suit;[629]
- A motion seeking a garnishment order;[630]
- The collector's motion to revive a judgment;[631]
- A motion for a telephonic appearance;[632] and
- A collection attorney's notice of voluntary dismissal of the state court action.[633]

Some courts even view the exemption so broadly as to apply to all court filings, such as requests for admissions, notice of hearings, summary judgment motions, or a proposed order.[634]

On the other hand, courts have found not to be exempt pleadings:

- A conversation between the consumer and a collection lawyer in the court house hallway;[635]
- A letter accompanying the complaint and summonses;[636]
- Interrogatories;[637]
- An income execution;[638] and
- Notice of a foreclosure sale.[639]

While the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notice need not be included in formal pleadings, the debt collector can do so as long as the inclusion does not mislead the consumer.[640]

A complaint and summons in an underlying state court action are clearly formal pleadings, but they do not qualify as the "initial communication" for purposes of FDCPA § 1692e(11), and thus a letter sent subsequent to the complaint and summons is the initial communication that is subject to the requirements of the provision.[641]

7.2.11.5 Other Situations Where FDCPA § 1692e(11) May Not Apply

Courts generally find that a debt collector need not provide the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notice where the collector is responding to the consumer's communication.[642] However, Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that where a consumer initiates communication with the collector after receiving a limited-content message, the collector must provide a FDCPA § 1692e(11) disclosure.[643]

Communications from a court or court clerk need not include the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notice, even when dealing with collection of a debt.[644]

A collector, though, cannot avoid liability by hiding behind a third party. Where a debt collector prepared and mailed a letter, it was no defense that it arranged for the creditor to sign it.[645] Where a debt collector sent a letter, it was no defense that the district attorney authorized the collection contact.[646] A third party working with a debt collector cannot seek the consumer's phone number and not disclose to the consumer that it is attempting to a collect a debt and any information obtained will be used for that purpose.[647] This third party is a debt collector even though it only assists the collector and does not seek to collect debts itself.[648]

FDCPA § 1692e(11) applies where a debt collector seeks to collect a debt, even where that debt has been converted into a court judgment against the consumer. There is no exemption from the provision just because a communication is postjudgment.[649]

The interplay between the FDCPA and the Bankruptcy Code raises issues examined in detail at Chapter 13, infra. The Third Circuit has ruled that, since the automatic stay in the consumer's bankruptcy prevents the collector from seeking to collect from the consumer, any letters and subpoenas the collector might send to the consumer would violate that stay 626 See D'Altilio v. Noam J. Cohen, P.A., 2018 WL 5263972 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2018).

627 See Stephens v. Manley Deas Kochalski, 2017 WL 5454458, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 14, 2017); Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208, at *14 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2006).

628 Townsend v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 535 B.R. 415 (M.D. Fla. 2015).

629 See Lambe v. Allgate Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 3115755, at *2 (S.D. Fla. July 20, 2017).

630 Thomas v. Stokes & Clinton, P.C., 2014 WL 3385305 (N.D. Ala. July 10, 2014).

631 See McKee v. Ingram Law Office, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6157807, at *4 (N.D. Ala. Oct. 24, 2016).

632 Rivas v. Pollack & Rosen, P.A., 2019 WL 6468709 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 2, 2019).

633 Rivas v. Pollack & Rosen, P.A., 2019 WL 6468709 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 2, 2019).

634 See Motherway v. Gordon, 2010 WL 2803052, at *3 (W.D. Wash. July 15, 2010).

635 See Turner v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 6908541 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 8, 2014).

636 Chandler v. Eichel, 2017 WL 4236569 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 25, 2017).

637 Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 235 n.2 (4th Cir. 2007); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010). But see Motherway v. Gordon, 2010 WL 2803052 (W.D. Wash. July 15, 2010) (it did not make sense to require debt collection law firm to restate it is debt collector in state court discovery requests and motions).

638 Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 211–212 (E.D.N.Y. 2019).

639 Heyer v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 75739 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2017).

640 Ramsay v. Sawyer Prop. Mgmt. of Md. L.L.C., 593 Fed. Appx. 204 (4th Cir. Dec. 9, 2014).

641 Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948, 960 n.4 (W.D. Wash. 2019).

642 Lee v. Cohen, McNeile & Pappas, P.C., 520 Fed. Appx. 649, 651 (10th Cir. 2013); Geiger v. Creditors Interchange, Inc., 59 Fed. Appx. 803 (6th Cir. 2003); Price-Richardson v. DCN Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 902167 (D. Md. Feb. 15, 2018); Chapman v. J & M Sec., 2015 WL 5785952 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 1, 2015).

643 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(e)(1)-1. See also § 4.9, supra (discussing limited-content messages).

644 See Hardin v. Finkelstein, Kern, Steinberg & Cunningham, P.C., 707 Fed. Appx. 855, 857 (6th Cir. 2017); Zevgolis v. Greenberg Law Firm, P.C., 2011 WL 251024 (E.D. Va. Jan. 26, 2011).

645 Dowling v. Kucker Kraus & Bruh, L.L.P., 2005 WL 1337442 (S.D.N.Y. June 6, 2005).

646 Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010).

647 Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998) (talking telegrams tricking consumers into revealing their phone numbers).

648 Id.

649 See Frey v. Gangwish, 970 F.2d 1516 (6th Cir. 1992).

if they indicated that the document was intended to collect on a debt. The more specific requirements of the automatic stay prevail over any required disclosure pursuant to FDCPA § 1692e(11).[650] But the Bankruptcy Code displaces FDCPA § 1692e(11) only when there is a conflict between the two. There is no conflict where a debt collector, after a bankruptcy discharge, sends a letter violating the bankruptcy discharge and also violating FDCPA § 1692e(11).[651]

7.2.12 False Implication That Accounts Have Been Transferred to Innocent Purchasers, FDCPA § 1692e(12)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(12) The false representation or implication that accounts have been turned over to innocent purchasers for value.[652]

FDCPA § 1692e(12) prohibits a debt collector's misrepresentation that it has purchased a debt from the creditor, rather than been hired to collect a debt. This may persuade a consumer that any claims or ill feeling they have against the original creditor should not be directed to the debt collector and that the debt collector has paid good money for the consumer's debt and should not suffer a loss. While FDCPA § 1692e(12) may also prohibit a debt collector from misrepresenting that it is an innocent purchaser not subject to the consumer's claims and defenses against the creditor,[653] section 1692e(6)(A) more clearly prohibits such misrepresentations.[654]

7.2.13 Falsely Implying That Documents Are Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692e(13)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(13) The false representation or implication that documents are legal process.[655]

A collector's use of simulated process renders actual legal process less recognizable to consumers, increasing the likelihood of default judgments. The false representation of participation by the courts to collect a debt undermines the dignity of the courts, deceives consumers, and gives deceptive collectors an unjust advantage over competitors.

A collection letter closely resembling the format, words, and type size and style of a court summons or complaint simulates legal process and violates FDCPA § 1692e(13).[656] One court also found that mailing a collection letter with legal process sent to the consumer violates FDCPA § 1692e(13) because its inclusion implies that the letter, too, is legal process even though its appearance does not so indicate.[657]

Prohibitions similar to FDCPA § 1692e(13) are found in section 1692e(1) prohibiting misrepresentation of government affiliation,[658] section 1692e(2)(A) regarding misrepresentation of the legal status of a debt,[659] and section 1692e(9) prohibiting the simulation of government documents.[660]

650 Simon v. FIA Card Services,732 F.3d 259 (3d Cir. Oct. 7, 2013). Cf. Garfield v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016).

651 Garfield v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016).

652 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(12). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(vi).

This section first appeared in a House bill and was included in each subsequent major bill. The word "implication" was first added by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Compare H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(14) (1976), with Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(14) (1977).

653 See Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (literally false statement—that creditor was holder in due course—violated FDCPA as matter of law). But cf. Miller v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 561 F.3d 588 (6th Cir. 2009) (statement in court pleading that "acquired, for valuable consideration, all right, title and interest in and to the claim" not actionable).

654 See § 7.2.6, supra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(12)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

655 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(13). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(vii).

656 See Zimmerman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 276 F.R.D. 174 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (enclosing bogus summonses and complaint with cover letter indicating that this is lawsuit collector intends to file); Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984) (letter labeled "FINAL NOTICE" with legal caption, red notary seal and indicating copy to court clerk); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983) (form letter with caption, pink paper, bold lettering, direction to bring notice, and make no phone calls suggested officially authorized legal compulsion); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(13)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; King, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 22, 1979). But see McCoy v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2773703, at *3 (N.D. Ill. July 2, 2019) (claim failed where there was "every indication from the face of the letter that Midland sent it and none that a court sent it" where Midland's logo, name, and contact information appeared at top of letter, back of the letter stated that it "is a communication from a debt collector" and "an attempt to collect a debt," and letter provided an "internal legal account number" next to "court file number," reinforcing the message that Midland was not the court and that Midland sent letter); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 229 F. Supp. 3d 457 (E.D. Va. 2017) (student loan collection agency's letter giving notice of administrative wage garnishment did not imply that legal process was being pursued, as there was no implication of court or agency involvement).

657 Tolentino v. Friedman, 833 F. Supp. 697 (N.D. Ill. 1993).

658 See § 7.2.1, infra.

659 See § 7.2.2, infra.

660 See § 7.2.9, infra.

7.2.14 Collector's Use of a False Name, FDCPA § 1692e(14)

7.2.14.1 Generally

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(14) The use of any business, company, or organization name other than the true name of the debt collector's business, company, or organization.[661]

FDCPA § 1692e(14) prohibits a debt collector from using a fictitious name. A debt collection agency cannot identify itself as the creditor or use the creditor's letterhead,[662] except possibly where collection agency employees are closely supervised by the creditor and can be considered employees of the creditor.[663]

A debt buyer or its attorney cannot bring a collection lawsuit in the name of the originating creditor.[664] Where a debt buyer purchases a judgment, it cannot substitute counsel in the name of its assignor.[665]

A debt collector seeking collection on an insufficient funds check violates FDCPA § 1692e(14) by misrepresenting that it is calling from the DA's office or the sheriff's office when the collector has no such authority.[666]

On the other hand, there may not be a violation where the collector's reference to a law enforcement agency is not deceptive. The Supreme Court ruled that a special counsel hired by a state attorney general office did not violate FDCPA § 1692e(14) where the state required it to use the state attorney general letterhead when collecting debts for the state, and where the letter said that the state attorney general was responsible for collecting the debt and disclosed that the sender was a special counsel acting for the state attorney general.[667]

FDCPA § 1692e(14) can apply not just to collectors but also to creditors. FDCPA § 1692a(6) includes in the definition of a debt collector "any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts."[668] A creditor doing so not only becomes covered within the scope of the FDCPA, but also violates section 1692e(14).[669]

FDCPA § 1692e(14) does not prevent a collector from identifying other parties in its communications, as long as it does not imply that the collector and that other party are one and the same.[670] A court rejected the argument that a letter with both the current and new loan servicer's names at the top violated FDCPA § 1692e(14).[671]

FDCPA § 1692e(14) is violated if the name on the caller ID of a debt collector's call is not the name of the individual calling.[672] But other courts have found no FDCPA § 1692e(14)

661 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(14). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(4).

Somewhat different provisions addressing the use of fictitious names were contained in the initial House bill and were deleted in subsequent House bills. H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. §§ 804(3), 804(5) (1975). Major Senate bills prohibited the use of any alias or fictitious name. The present language was first adopted by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Compare S. 3838, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 806(17) (1976), and S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(17) (1977), with Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(14) (1977).

662 Carrizosa v. Stassinos, 2010 WL 144807 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 10, 2010); Palmer v. Stassinos, 2009 WL 86705 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2009) (debt collectors sending letters on letterhead of creditor); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, Inc., 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (W.D. Wis. 2002); Zager, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 10, 1992).

663 See DeMayo, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 1, 2000); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 803(6)-4(a), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

664 See Nottingham v. Houston Hosps., Inc., 2018 WL 4604023 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2018). See also Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016) (stating § 1692e(14) claim but FDCPA claim was time-barred).

665 See Dilallo v. Miller and Steeno, P.C., 2016 WL 4530319 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2016).

666 Ortega v. Griggs & Assoc., 2012 WL 2913202 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012) (stated they were from the "D.A.'s Office"); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 210 F. Supp. 2d 907 (W.D. Mich. 2002) (debt collector, independent contractor with county, sent notices purporting to be from sheriff's department giving false impression that they were from sheriff).

667 Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 317, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016). See also Solberg v. Victim Services, Inc., 415 F. Supp. 3d 935 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (private entity administering bad-check diversion programs authorized to use district attorneys' letterhead and send out letters under the name of the district attorneys did not violate § 1692e(14)).

668 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6); § 4.7.4, supra. See also Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013) (liability "where the creditor merely implies that a third party is collecting a debt when in fact it is the creditor that is attempting to do so").

669 See Lester E. Cox Med. Ctr. v. Huntsman, 408 F.3d 989 (8th Cir. 2005) (hospital using name of debt collector); Young v. Citicorp Retail Services, 1998 WL 537530 (2d Cir. June 29, 1998) (collection letters by Citicorp on letterhead of private attorney was § 1692e(10) violation); Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013) (creditor can be liable under § 1692e(14)); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(14)-2, -4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

670 See Christy v. Designed Receivable Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 4008982 (D. Nev. Aug. 21, 2018) (listing the creditor on its communications but indicating the debt collector was collecting on behalf of the creditor). See also Daley v. Bono, 420 F. Supp. 3d 1247, 1264 n.22 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (no violation where attorney wrote letters on creditor's letterhead, since letters noted that attorney was "acting on behalf" of the doctor, and that "[o]wnership of these bills remains fully with the MEDICAL PROVIDERS").

671 See Geary v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1286347 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 20, 2015).

672 See Aurandt v. Brown, 2017 WL 1215451 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2017) (used spoofing to impersonate police); Sohns v. Bramacint, L.L.C., 2010 WL 3926264 (D. Minn. Oct. 1, 2010) (used spoofing to show phone number of debtor's mother-in-law); Knoll v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 502 F. Supp. 2d 943 (D. Minn. 2007). See also Knoll v. Intellirisk Mgmt., 2006 WL 2974190 (D. Minn. Oct. 16, 2006); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(14)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

violation where the caller is identified as "unavailable"[673] or the caller ID indicates that the call is local when it is long distance without misrepresenting the name of the caller.[674]

7.2.14.2 Misleading Use of One of Collector's Alternative Names

In its Staff Commentary, the FTC stated that:

> A debt collector may use a name that does not misrepresent his identity or deceive the consumer. Thus, a collector may use its full business name, the name under which it usually transacts business, or a commonly used acronym."[675]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) does not provide any Official Interpretations of the section of the regulations corresponding to FDCPA § 1692e(14).[676] However, Regulation F creates a new definition of limited-content messages that require disclosure of a business name for the debt collector when leaving a voicemail for a consumer. Interpretations of this similar requirement are discussed at § 4.9.2, supra.

A debt collector may avoid liability under FDCPA § 1692e(14) where it properly registers its incorporated and any alternate trade names.[677] Using a name not registered with a state may be deceptive, because it can make it more difficult for the consumer to research the entity contacting them.[678]

There may be no FDCPA § 1692e(14) violation where the collector has registered its initials with the state as a name under which it is doing business and the communication provides the collector's contact information.[679] Where a communication uses the collector's correct business name, the same communication can also use the name's abbreviation.[680]

The debt collector can make minor modifications to its name where this does not prevent the consumer from researching about the collector, such as using both the names "Cohen & Slamowitz" and "Law Offices of Cohen & Slamowitz."[681] And a collector can use a registered trade name even if that is 673 Glover v. Client Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2902209 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 2, 2007). Cf. Bryan v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 3d 686 (W.D.N.C. 2021) (intentionally causing phone number to appear as "Unknown" on caller ID may violate §§ 1692e and 1692e(10)).

674 Cunningham v. Radius Global Solutions L.L.C., 2020 WL 5518073 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 14, 2020); Mendoza v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 2524117 (E.D. Pa. June 18, 2019); Bermudez v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 415569 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 1, 2019); Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015) (using spoofing technology to make long distance calls appear local did not violate FDCPA); Bien v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 5554670 (D.R.I. Sept. 21, 2015) (collection agency's caller ID disclosed its true name, but falsely displayed Rhode Island area code); Scheffler v. Integrity Fin. Partners, Inc., 2013 WL 9768539 (D. Minn. Oct. 28, 2013) (called from Minnesota, but used Kansas number that it owned). But see Charles v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2015 WL 13373812 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 26, 2015) (denying dismissal of § 1692e claim alleging that collection agency's spoofing call showed, on caller ID, local number when agency had no presence at all in area).

675 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(14)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also Levins v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group L.L.C., 902 F.3d 274 (3d Cir. 2018) (name "ARS" in voicemail for consumer was neither collector's full business name, name under which it usually transacts business, or commonly used acronym for its registered name, "ARS Account Resolution Services"), on remand, 2020 WL 3169356 (D.N.J. June 15, 2020) (where defendant sent consumers three letters and left them five voicemails that identified the entity attempting to collect the debt as "HRRG" and made no mention of the ARS division, such use of "HRRG" was "plainly inconsistent" with HRRG's subsequent use of name "ARS").

676 See Reg. F § 1006.18(c)(4).

677 Boyko v. Am. Int'l Group, Inc., 2012 WL 2132390 (D.N.J. June 12, 2012) ("the Court holds that a debt collection company may excuse itself from liability under section 1692e(14) where it properly registers its incorporated name and any alternate trade names in any of 1) the debt collection company's place of incorporation, 2) the debt collection company's principal place of business, or 3) the state in which the plaintiff was injured"). Contrast McLain v. Head Mercantile Co., 2017 WL 3710073 (M.D. La. Aug. 28, 2017) (violation where used unregistered name even though also listed previous name with "fka" and included correct address and phone number).

678 See Boyko v. Am. Int'l Grp., Inc., 2009 WL 5194431, at *7 (D.N.J. Dec. 23, 2009) ("Given however that the purpose of the provision is to prevent fraud and misleading representations, and given that Congress used an exacting term like "true name," the Court is convinced that § 1692e(14) requires debt collectors to use a precise, official name when conducting debt collection activities."). Cf. 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,752 (Nov. 30, 2020) (discussing requirement under Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(1) for limited-content messages, Regulation F supplemental information notes that: "Including the debt collector's business name will enable consumers to verify the debt collector's legitimacy and make a better-informed decision about what action, if any, to take in response to the limited-content voicemail message. Consistent with the advice of several Federal agencies, consumers who are suspicious of a limited-content message can use the debt collector's business name to research the company and reply using contact information the consumer finds rather than relying on the telephone number included in the message.") (footnote omitted).

679 See Hsu v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 2018 WL 315758 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 5, 2018). See also Espinal v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 2020 WL 4048213 (D.N.J. July 16, 2020) (as long as debt collector is consistent when dealing with consumer, registered acronym can constitute collector's true name for FDCPA purposes); Cobb v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 2020 WL 1158468 (D. Conn. Mar. 10, 2020) (finding no violation and awarding defendant attorney fees of over $41,000 under § 1692k(a)(3) because, inter alia, consumer persisted in litigating the claim even in wake of Hsu). But see Urquiaga v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 6877735 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 22, 2016) (denying motion to dismiss where collector did not provide evidence that it registered its initials as alias).

680 Klein v. Credico Inc., 922 F.3d 393, 396 (8th Cir. 2019); McBroom v. Syndicated Office Sys., L.L.C., 2018 WL 6199014 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 28, 2018).

681 Suquilanda v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 2011 WL 4344044 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 8, 2011). See also Starosta v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2007 WL 2007944 (11th Cir. July 12, 2007) (use of "P.A." after law firm's name not a violation even though firm was not entitled to use the initials P.A.); DiGiacomo v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 1349483, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2019) ("The inclusion of a fictitious DBA name, previously used to obtain a judgment, in a postjudgment information subpoena, alongside the current, substantially similar registered business name, would not confuse the least sophisticated consumer. The acronym 'DBA' does not suggest that there are multiple companies to whom a debt might be owed. Rather, it suggests that there is one entity, Midland Funding, L.L.C., that is known by two names, and that that one entity is the sole debt collector."); Amina v. WMC Fin. Co., 2019 WL 112769 (D. Haw. Jan. 4, 2019); Scheffler v. Alltran Fin., LP, 2019 WL 93390 (D. Minn. Jan. 3, 2019). But see Boyko v. Am. Int'l Group, Inc., 2009 WL 5194431 (D.N.J. Dec. 23, 2009) (where Credit Control not the formal name of the corporation.[682] A law firm can use its name even after it is dissolved where the firm was winding down its business and state law allowed it to file garnishments under its dissolved name.[683] Where a collector identifies its name in a communication, a court found no violation where a descriptor was added to that name— "PROFESSIONAL DEBT COLLECTORS." Consumers would not be misled into thinking that was the name of the collector.[684] A violation of FDCPA § 1692e(14) must be material in order to survive dismissal.[685]

7.2.14.3 Use of Employee Aliases

While FDCPA § 1692e(14) prohibits a debt collector from using a fictitious name, prior to the implementation of Regulation F, case law was divided as to whether a debt collector's employee must use the employee's real name or can use an alias.[686] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) now states that:

> This section does not prohibit a debt collector's employee from using an assumed name when communicating or attempting to communicate with a person, provided that the employee uses the assumed name consistently and that the debt collector can readily identify any employee using an assumed name."[687]

Here "this section" refers to the regulations implementing FDCPA § 1692e. Regulation F does not directly address the use of aliases in the context of other FDCPA provisions such as section 1692d(6)'s "meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity" requirement.[688]

The Regulation F supplemental information clarifies that responsibility for complying with this Reg. F requirement is not only on the employee, but also on the employer. "The Bureau finds that any system of managing assumed names must ensure that the employee uses the assumed name consistently and that the employer can readily identify the employee even if the employee is using the assumed name."[689]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations also place responsibility on the employer:

> A debt collector may use any method of managing assumed names that enables the debt collector to determine the true identity of any employee using an assumed name. For example, a debt collector may require an employee to use the same assumed name when communicating or attempting to communicate with any person and may prohibit any other employee from using the same assumed name.[690]

Use of this one-to-one link between an alias and the real name is not required, but the CFPB "anticipates, however, that a debt collector who permits many employees to use the same assumed name, e.g., for a specific letter campaign, would be unable to readily identify any employee communicating or attempting to communicate with any person."[691]

7.2.15 Misrepresenting How Consumer Should Respond to Legal Process, FDCPA § 1692e(15)

> A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:
>
> ***
>
> (15) The false representation or implication that documents are not legal process forms or do not require action by the consumer.[692]

FDCPA § 1692e(15) prohibits a collector from misrepresenting the nature of a court summons for a collection lawsuit or misrepresenting that the consumer need not respond to the summons. A debt collector may not deceive a consumer into failing to respond to legal process by concealing the import Services used the name Credit Collection Services, denying motion to strike; finding deception need not be pleaded).

682 Cruz v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 2017 WL 5195225 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 8, 2017); Velez v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017); Miles v. Retrieval-Masters Creditor's Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 1258481 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2016); Mahan v. Retrieval-Masters Credit Bur., Inc., 777 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (S.D. Ala. 2011). See also Hubbard v. Med. Data Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 5459073, at *6 (N.D. Ga. June 24, 2019) (letter explicitly stated at bottom that it was from "MEDICAL DATA SYSTEMS, INC. D/B/A MEDICAL REVENUE SERVICE," and although top of letter indicated it was from "Medical Revenue Service," it also stated, albeit in smaller print, that it was from Medical Data Systems; "the use of a registered trade name is not an abusive, deceptive, or unfair debt collection practices meant to be prohibited by the FDCPA"), adopted, 2019 WL 5460663 (N.D. Ga. July 19, 2019).

683 Thomas v. Stokes & Clinton, P.C., 2014 WL 3385305 (N.D. Ala. July 10, 2014).

684 Klein v. Credico Inc., 922 F.3d 393, 396 (8th Cir. 2019); McBroom v. Syndicated Office Sys., L.L.C., 2018 WL 6199014 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 28, 2018).

685 See Tavernaro v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2020 WL 5747920 (D. Kan. Sept. 25, 2020); Poole v. MED-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1317450, at *5 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 20, 2020); DiGiacomo v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 1349483, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2019); Marciuleviciene v. Elmhurst Lake Apt., L.L.C., 2012 WL 2374676, at *2 (N.D. Ill. June 21, 2012); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Ford, 2020 WL 1910207, at *6 (Minn. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 2020). See also Klein v. Credico Inc., 922 F.3d 393, 397 n.2 (8th Cir. 2019) (stating that there was no need to address propriety of district court's application of materiality standard for § 1692e(14) because statements at issue were not false, deceptive, or misleading, but noting that other circuits have adopted materiality standard for § 1692e).

686 See § 6.8, supra.

687 Reg. F § 1006.18(f).

688 See § 6.8, supra.

689 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,831 (Nov. 30, 2020).

690 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 18(f)-1.

691 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,832 (Nov. 30, 2020).

692 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(15). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(viii).
Section 807(15) was added by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(15) (1977).

of the papers, thereby subjecting the consumer to a default judgment.[693] For example, it should be a FDCPA § 1692e(15) violation for a collector, upon suing a consumer, to tell the consumer they need only send in a payment or agree to a payment plan, when in fact not answering the complaint results in a default judgment.

In McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C.,[694] the Ninth Circuit, without specifically citing FDCPA § 1692e(15), found unfair and deceptive in violation of the FDCPA requests for admissions in a collection lawsuit served on the consumer that asked the consumer to admit facts the consumer had denied in his answer. The collector was hoping that the consumer would not respond to the request and that court rules would thus deem admitted facts the consumer was disputing.

7.2.16 Implying Collector Is a Consumer Reporting Agency, FDCPA § 1692e(16)

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

***

(16) The false representation or implication that a debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency as defined by section 1681a(f) of this title.[695]

FDCPA § 1692e(16) prohibits a debt collector from representing or implying that it operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency (CRA).[696] A CRA is defined as one meeting the definition found in the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) at section 1681a(f):

> [A]ny person which, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of assembling or evaluating consumer credit information or other information on consumers for the purpose of furnishing consumer reports to third parties, and which uses any means or facility of interstate commerce for the purpose of preparing or furnishing consumer reports.[697]

The provision prohibits a collector's use of a name including "credit reporting agency," "credit rating bureau,"[698] or words of similar meaning[699] where the collector is not a consumer reporting agency.[700] Courts in the past found violations in the use of the words "credit bureau" in a debt collector's name to be a violation.[701] At the time, most consumer reporting agencies had the words "credit bureau" in their names, and "credit bureau" was used to indicate a consumer reporting agency. Today that association is more tenuous, and courts may not find a violation when a debt collector has those words in its name.[702]

Logos and other messages in dunning letters that may create the false impression that the collector is a consumer reporting agency are also prohibited.[703] FDCPA § 1692e(16) was violated where a collection agency's letter included at the 693 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(15)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

694 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

695 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(16). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(b)(1)(ii).

This section first appeared in the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(16) (1977).

696 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

697 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(f). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

698 Cater v. Credit Rating Bur., Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21731 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 31, 1991); Cravey v. Credit Rating Bur., Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21812 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 24, 1991); Fishman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 26, 1982). But see Shrestha v. State Credit Adjustment Bur., Inc., 117 F. Supp. 2d 142 (D. Conn. 2000) (collector's name was not misleading, particularly in view of its written disclaimer stating that it was debt collector and not credit reporting agency).

699 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(16)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Shatsky, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 19, 1978) (General Credit Control); DeCou, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 12, 1978) (Credit Bureau Collection Agency); Cole, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 28, 1978) (Credit Converters).

700 Difficult issues may arise if a debt collector is also a consumer reporting agency. See Charles v. Credit Bur. Services, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19665 (E.D. La. Dec. 17, 1999) (company that operated as both credit reporting agency and collection agency did not deceive or mislead when it used name "credit bureau"); Byes v. Credit Bur. Enters., 1996 WL 99360 (E.D. La. Mar. 6, 1996) (using "Credit Bureau Enterprises" did not violated § 1692e(16) by deceptively suggesting defendant was consumer credit reporting company as collector operated as both credit reporting agency and collection agency); Byes v. Credit Bur. Enters., Inc., 1995 WL 540235 (E.D. La. Sept. 11, 1995) (discovery regarding collector's credit reporting activities was relevant to claim that collector used deceptive name); Anthes v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 765 F. Supp. 162 (D. Del. 1991) (debt collector's statement that debt would be referred to credit management services office, which it owned, was not deceptive); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(16)-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Ambrose, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 27, 1978).

701 McKenzie v. E.A. Uffman & Assoc., Inc., 119 F.3d 358 (5th Cir. 1997); Case v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1983 WL 931780 (D. Or. Jan. 10, 1983); Isgrigg, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 10, 1992); Nobel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 18, 1980).

702 See Durr v. Rochester Credit Ctr., Inc., 2012 WL 2130953 (E.D. Pa. June 5, 2012) (question of fact whether use of name "Credit Bureau" is deceptive); Sakuma v. First Nat'l Credit Bur., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19120 (D. Haw. Nov. 15, 1989) (use of term "credit bureau" in name of collection agency not misleading); Wright v. Credit Bur. of Ga., Inc., 555 F. Supp. 1005 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'g 548 F. Supp. 591 (N.D. Ga. 1982). See also Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000) (using "Retrieval Masters Creditors Bureau, Inc." did not create false impression); Dankowski, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 6, 2000).

703 Trull v. GC Services L.P., 961 F. Supp. 1199 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (collection letter containing statements: "Your name will be retained as part of our records along with others who, despite their good name and reputation, have shirked their payment responsibility"; "YOUR ACCOUNT HAS BEEN TRANSFERRED TO [agency's] MASTER DEBTOR FILE";

top the agency's name and the phrase "Affiliated with Trans Union Credit" (Trans Union is a major CRA) where its relationship with Trans Union Credit was not any different from the relationship Trans Union Credit had with many other debt collection agencies.[704] On the other hand, it would not be a violation simply to disclose that the debt collector would report information to a CRA such as Trans Union.[705]

7.3 General Deception Standards

7.3.1 Selected Text and Legislative History of FDCPA § 1692e

The first part of FDCPA § 1692e provides:

> A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:[706]

FDCPA § 1692e then continues with sixteen examples of conduct violating the section. The text and analysis of each of these sixteen provisions is found at §§ 7.2.1 through 7.2.16, supra.

Early bills leading to the Act generally proscribed only "false or misleading" collection methods.[707] The Senate added the provision prohibiting "deceptive" representations and collection means.[708] Several previous bills had contained language identical to current FDCPA § 1692e(10) prohibiting the use of "deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt."[709]

7.3.2 In Connection with Collection of Any Debt

FDCPA § 1692e applies to representations or means "in connection with the collection of any debt." Thus, the provision does not apply to debt collector communications not viewed as in connection with a debt.

For a general discussion of cases interpreting "in connection with the collection of any debt" that cuts across different sections of the FDCPA, see § 4.3, supra. The question of whether a contact is in connection with a debt most frequently arises in the context of mortgage loans, where the question becomes whether communications from a mortgage servicer may not be demanding payment, but are discussing loan modifications, escrow payments, and the like. Cases in this area are examined at both § 4.7.5.2.3, supra, and § 7.4.11.1, infra.

7.3.3 Relation of Enumerated FDCPA § 1692e Provisions to Its General Deception Standard

FDCPA § 1692e prohibits false, deceptive, or misleading representations or means. In addition, without limiting the general application of the foregoing, section 1692e then enumerates sixteen prohibited practices. A violation of any of the sixteen provisions is actionable, but if a practice does not fit within any of these sixteen, the general section 1692e prohibition of deception still applies.[710]

Congress recognized that it would be impossible to foresee every type of deceptive collection misbehavior and expressly provided a general standard to give courts the flexibility to proscribe improper conduct not specifically anticipated by and addressed in the Act.[711] "The Act prohibits a wide array of specific conduct, but it also prohibits, in general terms, any harassing, unfair, or deceptive debt collection practice, which enables 'the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed.'"[712] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) also explicitly states that "debt collector must not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt, including, but not limited to, the conduct described in paragraphs (b) through (d) of this section [where the enumerated prohibitions are listed]."[713] and "We are anxious to clear our record as well as yours"); Mansfield, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 20, 1978).

---

704 Mandel v. Associated Collection Serv. Inc., 2015 WL 1508842 (D. Ariz. Mar. 31, 2015). See also Williams v. Northwest Collectors, Inc., 2018 WL 6505431 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2018) (although collection agency indicated elsewhere in its collection letter that it is a debt collection agency, its statement that it is a "reporting member" of national credit bureaus could reasonably imply that it operates as, or is employed by, a credit reporting agency); McCurdy v. Grant & Weber, Inc., 2018 WL 3831532 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 13, 2018) (consumer plausibly alleged that collection agency violated § 1692e(16) by including the phrase "Member of Experian" under agency's name on collector's initial letter to consumer), related case, 2019 WL 4735440 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2019) (granting defendant's motion for summary judgment where consumer failed to produce extrinsic evidence, such as a consumer survey, to demonstrate that the unsophisticated consumer would find the words "Member of Experian" misleading or deceptive).

705 See Davis v. Commercial Check Control, Inc., 1999 WL 89556 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 1999).

706 15 U.S.C. § 1692e. See also Reg. F § 1006.18(a).

707 See, e.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 804 (1975); S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 806 (1977).

708 S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807 (1977).

709 E.g., H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(10) (1976); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 806(19) (1976).

710 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1320 (2d Cir. 1993); Terry v. C & D Complete Bus. Solutions, 2011 WL 144920 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 18, 2011).

711 Congress included this general proscription in recognition of its inability to foresee every conceivable abusive debt collection method. According to the Senate report, "this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed." S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

712 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 533 (6th Cir. 2014).

713 Reg. F § 1006.18(a).

When one of the subsections of FDCPA § 1692e is clearly applicable to a particular consumer's case, the consumer should proceed under it as well as the section's general standard. Using the more specific provisions of FDCPA § 1692e(1) through (16) may avert proof problems and the possibility of unnecessarily narrowing judicial construction of the general standard.[714] Adding a claim under FDCPA § 1692e(10) may also be helpful, because its prohibition is very similar to the general section 1692e prohibition.[715] If for any reason the court finds a more specific provision found at FDCPA §§ 1692e(1) through (16) not to apply, the court may find that section 1692e's general prohibition still applies.

7.3.4 False vs. Deceptive or Misleading

FDCPA § 1692e prohibits false, deceptive, or misleading representations. Some literally true statements are deceptive or misleading, and thus can be violations, even if not false. Moreover, even if a representation does not mislead a consumer, if it is false, it may be actionable.[716] The Eleventh Circuit noted:

> The use of "or" in § 1692e means that, to violate the FDCPA, a representation by a "debt collector" must merely be false, or deceptive, or misleading. A false representation in connection with the collection of a debt is sufficient to violate the FDCPA facially, even where no misleading or deception is claimed.[717]

7.3.5 The Deception Standard

7.3.5.1 Generally

FDCPA 1692e borrows the legal concept of deception from the FTC Act.[718] Courts construing FDCPA § 1692e find decisions and principles of construction under the FTC Act persuasive. See NCLC's Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library, for a detailed discussion of the FTC deception standard.

Since the FDCPA expressly recognized the inadequacy of existing laws, including the FTC Act, to protect consumers,[719] the FDCPA standard of deception was intended to be even more protective of consumers than the standard applicable to the FTC Act.[720] The FDCPA standard approaches a requirement of collectors of honest openness and truthful frankness when dealing with consumers.[721] Applying these requirements furthers the congressional FDCPA purpose that "debt collectors who refrain from abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged."[722]

Many of the elements of common law fraud are irrelevant to an FDCPA claim for deception. There is no requirement that intent to deceive be established.[723] Knowledge of a statement's falsity is not a necessary element to establish deception.[724] The FDCPA provides for strict liability.[725] The fact that a practice is customary does not prevent it from being deceptive.[726]

The "capacity" or "tendency" to deceive should be sufficient, so that actual deception need not be shown except to establish actual damages.[727] The concept of deception protects even the ignorant, the unthinking, the credulous, and the least sophisticated consumer.[728] Showing detrimental reliance is unnecessary.[729]

Good faith is not a defense,[730] although bona fide error may be a defense if the collector can show all the elements of the

---

714 See Graziano v. Harrison, 763 F. Supp. 1269, 1278 (D.N.J. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991) (finding no maintainable violation of FDCPA where consumer alleged violation of § 1692g, but holding that violation was of § 1692e(10), not § 1692g, which consumer had not asserted). See also Amina v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2011 WL 1869835 (D. Haw. May 16, 2011) (plaintiff must base violations of §§ 1692e and 1692f on conduct other than that already identified in other sections of FDCPA). Cf. Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009) (subsections of § 1692e are merely non-exclusive examples of ways section can be violated). But cf. Tarrant v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2011 WL 5042057 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 24, 2011) (identical facts can constitute distinct violations of different provisions of FDCPA).

715 See § 7.2.10, supra.

716 But see § 7.3.9, infra, where some courts suggest a false statement still must be material to the least sophisticated consumers.

717 Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012).

718 15 U.S.C. § 45. See Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985); Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 778 (9th Cir. 1982); § 3.2.1, supra.

719 15 U.S.C. § 1692(b).

720 See Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985); § 3.2.1, supra.

721 See Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168, 1178 (11th Cir. 1985) (one of the purposes of the FDCPA is "[t]hat every individual, whether or not he owes the debt, has a right to be treated in a reasonable or civil manner." 123 Cong. Rec. 10241 (1977) (statement of Representative Annuzio, Chairperson of Subcommittee which sponsored the legislation).

722 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e).

723 See § 3.2.4, supra, § 12.2, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.4 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

724 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.5.1 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, 460 F.3d 1162, 1176 (9th Cir. 2006); Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991, 995 (7th Cir. 2003). But see Jenkins v. Heintz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997) (adopting narrow interpretation prohibiting deception only if debt collector knew statement was false).

725 See § 3.2.4, supra, § 7.2.2.2, supra.

726 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.8 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

727 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.9 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library. But see Adams v. Skagit Bonded Collections, L.L.C., 836 Fed. Appx. 544 (9th Cir. 2020) (debtor lacked standing to pursue claim that collection letters failed to clearly identify his current creditor; in absence of allegation of reliance, deception is insufficient to establish Article III standing). See § 11.15.3.1, infra, for a circuit-by-circuit overview of decisions applying Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins to FDCPA claims.

728 See § 3.2.1, supra.

729 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.12 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

730 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.6 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

defense.[731] "Puffing" is not a defense unless the deception has no capacity to deceive.[732] Some courts, for at least most FDCPA § 1692e violations, may require that the materiality of the deception be shown, or at least inferred.[733]

The misrepresentation need not be a factual one, but may be a misrepresentation of the consumer's legal rights.[734] The failure to disclose information is deceptive if necessary qualifications are not made, material information is omitted, or the disclosures made are too inconspicuous.[735] Note that disclosures are affirmatively required in several FDCPA § 1692e subsections,[736] illustrating the adoption of the principle that affirmative disclosures are sometimes necessary to avoid a statement's deceptive implication.

The language in a debt collection communication should not be viewed in isolation; the communication must be viewed "as a whole" to determine whether it runs afoul of the FDCPA.[737] Literally true, half-true, or ambiguous statements can be deceptive.[738] Accurate but confusing language can be deceptive. "Confusing language in a dunning letter can have an intimidating effect by making the recipient feel that he is in over his head and had better pay up rather than question the demand for payment."[739]

7.3.5.2 Seventh Circuit's Unique Approach

The Seventh Circuit has uniquely looked more to trademark law than FTC precedents to address the deception standard. Beginning with his decision in Bartlett v. Heibl, Judge Posner and most other the Seventh Circuit judges equate "confusion," a key operative term in trademark law, with "deception," and so look to see whether the least sophisticated consumer would be confused.[740]

7.3.5.3 Actual Injury

Proof of actual damage is not required to establish liability for statutory damages,[741] but proof that the deception caused injury will be required to recover actual damages.[742] In addition, a FDCPA claim brought in federal court must meet the Article III case or controversy standard for standing.[743] Whether a FDCPA § 1692e claim provides sufficient standing is examined at § 11.15.5, infra.

7.3.5.4 Literal Truth, Half-truths, and Deception

Literal truths and half-truths can be deceptive if they will mislead the least sophisticated consumer. Where such a statement is reasonably susceptible to more than one interpretation and one has the capacity to deceive, courts find such statements, even if literally true, to be actionable under FDCPA § 1692e.[744] This is consistent with well-established case law

731 See § 12.2, infra.

732 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.10 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library. But cf. Gruber v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 742 F.3d 271 (7th Cir. 2014); Taylor v. Calvary Inv., L.L.C., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004); Blanchard v. N. Am. Credit Services, 2016 WL 1408592 (S.D. Ill. Apr. 11, 2016).

733 See § 7.3.9, infra.

734 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010); Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 931 (8th Cir. 2016) (while not every debt collector's violation of state law violates FDCPA, "debt collectors' false representations about the availability of remedies or amounts owed under state law, like representations of fact, are to be viewed through the unsophisticated-consumer standard and [were] actionable pursuant to the FDCPA"); Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014) (not every violation of state law is violation of FDCPA; proper question "is whether the [consumer] alleged an action that falls within the broad range of conduct prohibited by the Act; legality of the action taken under state law may be relevant," as it was in this case); Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987) (collector misrepresented state university's legal rights and obligations to withhold student transcripts); Ensminger v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 6905882 (D. Kan. Nov. 23, 2016); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983) (collector violated § 1692e(2)(A), (B) by attempting to collect illegal $15 service charge on bad checks without disclosing that charge had been added to amount demanded and by implying charge was lawful); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(10)-4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. See also § 7.4.4, infra.

735 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.15 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library; Delgado v. Capital Mgmt. Services L.P., 2013 WL 1194708 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2013) (debt collector did not disclose that debt could not be enforced and, by offering settlement, implied that debt was enforceable); Anderson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 18, 1988). But see Alvarado Martinez v. Eltman Law, P.C., 444 F. Supp. 3d 748 (N.D. Tex. 2020) ("violations of § 1692e require an affirmative misrepresentation or act, not inaction"), citing Todd v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 694 F.3d 849 (7th Cir. 2012) (per curiam)

736 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8), (11); §§ 7.2.8, 7.2.11, supra.

737 See Campuzano-Burgos v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 550 F.3d 294, 300 (3d Cir. 2008); Schweizer v. Trans Union Corp., 136 F.3d 233, 238 (2d Cir. 1998); Pierson v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 957 (E.D. Tenn. 2013); Shami v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., 914 F. Supp. 2d 353 (E.D.N.Y. 2012); Adams v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 777 F. Supp. 2d 1193 (D. Minn. 2011).

738 See § 7.3.5.4, infra.

739 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009).

740 128 F.3d 497, 499 (7th Cir. 1997). See also Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 629 (7th Cir. 2009); Socha v. Collecto, Inc., 2006 WL 8443178, at *3 (E.D. Wis. May 24, 2006) ("In the Seventh Circuit, the pleading standard for an FDCPA claim of confusion is very low. The reason for the low standard is because courts are poor proxies for the unsophisticated consumer on the issue of whether a legal notice is confusing."); Young v. G.L.A. Collection Co., 2011 WL 6016650, at *2 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 1, 2011) ("[S]imple 'confusion' in the colloquial sense is not legal 'confusion' as contemplated in the FDCPA. Courts finding that a debt collector's communication is confusing have only done so when this confusion bears the potential to adversely affect the debtor.").

741 See § 11.9.4, infra. See also Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985) (actual deception of plaintiff relevant to damages but not liability); Francisco v. Doctors & Merchants Credit Serv., 1998 WL 474107 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 1998) (may determine violation of § 1692g without reference to evidence of actual consumer confusion); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998).

742 See § 11.8, infra.

743 See § 11.15, infra.

744 Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 905 F.3d 159, 163 (3d Cir. 2018) ("even if the language in a letter is true, it can still be deceptive where under the FTC Act.[745] On the other hand, courts find a second deceptive meaning to a statement not actionable where even the most unsophisticated consumer would not understand the statement as having such a second meaning.[746]

Collectors often state that the consumer "could" be sued or other actions "might" be resorted to or the consumer would be impacted "if" the collector took certain actions. While this use of the conditional allows for one interpretation of the statement to be literally true, the consumer may understand the same statement as threatening the action. If the action cannot or will not be taken, this can be deceptive.

For example, a statement that a settlement may have tax consequences is deceptive where it is clear that a settlement will not have tax consequences for the particular consumer.[747] On the other hand, courts have found this not deceptive where a settlement for that consumer may or may not have tax consequences.[748]

7.3.6 The Least Sophisticated Consumer Standard

As discussed in § 3.2.1.2, supra, the majority of circuit courts have adopted the least sophisticated consumer standard to evaluate alleged FDCPA violations, while a few have adopted a similar standard evaluating whether the "unsophisticated consumer" would find the language of the collection letter deceptive. These tests are aimed at protecting the "naive"[749] and the "gullible."[750] On the other hand, some courts find an interpretation of a statement as deceptive is too "idiosyncratic" for even the least sophisticated consumer.[751] For a more detailed discussion of this standard, see § 3.2.1, supra.

7.3.7 Deception in Communications to the Consumer's Attorney

The majority view is that FDCPA § 1692e applies to communications to a consumer's attorney, but that the least sophisticated consumer standard should not be the standard to determine if such a communication is misleading. In Heintz v. Jenkins, the Supreme Court assumed that FDCPA § 1692e it can be reasonably read to have two or more different meanings, one of which is inaccurate"); Tatis v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 882 F.3d 422, 429 (3d Cir. 2018); Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679, 687 (7th Cir. 2017); Buchanan v. Northland Grp., Inc., 776 F.3d 393, 396 (6th Cir. 2015); Walker v. Shermeta, Adams, Von Allmen, P.C., 623 Fed. Appx. 764, 767 (6th Cir. Aug. 10, 2015) (literally false statements may be deceptive); Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 825 (7th Cir. 2012); Grden v. Leikin Ingber & Winters P.C., 643 F.3d 169, 172 (6th Cir. 2011) ("Truth is not always a defense under this test, since sometimes even a true statement can be misleading."); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1062 (9th Cir. 2011) ("Nevertheless, it is well established that '[a] debt collection letter is deceptive where it can be reasonably read to have two or more different meanings, one of which is inaccurate' . . . and consumers are under no obligation to seek explanation of confusing or misleading language in debt collection letters."); Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 441 (6th Cir. 2008); Rosenau v. Unifund Corp., 539 F.3d 218, 221 (3d Cir. 2008) ("A debt collection letter is deceptive where it can be reasonably read to have two or more different meanings, one of which is inaccurate."); Campuzano-Burgos v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 550 F.3d 294 (3d Cir. 2008); Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450 (3d Cir. 2006) (A debt collection letter is deceptive where "it can be reasonably read to have two or more different meanings, one of which is inaccurate."); Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 227 (7th Cir. 1996); Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 35 (2d Cir. 1996); United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Gammon v. GC Services, 27 F.3d 1254 (7th Cir. 1994); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1318 (2d Cir. 1993). But see Winans v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 3942073 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 16, 2018) (other than vaguely mentioning "further procedures" being taken and including unchecked boxes entitled "Employment Verified" and "Assets Located," collection letter contained no suggestion that collection agency would conduct an immediate investigation into consumer's employment status or assets, although it might been different if these boxes had been checked).

---

745 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.13 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

746 See Dunlap v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 419 F.3d 1011, 1012 (9th Cir. June 7, 2005) (per curiam) ("CPA's letter would not impermissibly mislead the least sophisticated debtor into believing that his credit would be damaged by a failure to pay a de minimis debt. Any inference regarding credit reporting that can be drawn from CPA's name [Credit Protection Association] is, at best, very weak."); Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005); Hipolito v. Alliance Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2005 WL 1662137 (N.D. Cal. July 15, 2005) (statement in initial dun to "pay in full to [stop] all collection activity" did not unlawfully suggest to least sophisticated consumer that payment was only method to stop subsequent collection).

747 Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 905 F.3d 159, 163 (3d Cir. 2018) (no tax consequences because debt under $600). See also Heredia v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 942 F.3d 811 (7th Cir. 2019); Tatis v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 882 F.3d 422, 429 (3d Cir. 2018) (alternative meaning that consumer subject to lawsuit is deceptive where the debt is time barred); Campuzano-Burgos v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 550 F.3d 294, 298 (3d Cir. 2008); Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 441 (6th Cir. 2008); Rosenau v. Unifund Corp., 539 F.3d 218, 222 (3d Cir. 2008); Brown v. Card Serv. Ctr., 464 F.3d 450, 455 (3d Cir. 2006); Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 35 (2d Cir. 1996); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1062 (9th Cir. 2011); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1319 (2d Cir. 1993).

748 Dunbar v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 896 F.3d 762 (7th Cir. 2018) (statement that settlement "may" have tax consequences is literally true and not misleading to least sophisticated consumer). But cf. Heredia v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 942 F.3d 811, 815–816 (7th Cir. 2019) (clause stating that settling debt for less than balance owed may have tax consequences and creditor "may" file 1099C form violated FDCPA; "Information about filing a 1099C form . . . is information within the knowledge of the creditor. This makes the 1099C Clause materially different than the tax consequences clause at issue in Dunbar. Only the debtor knows whether, given her financial situation as a whole, she will have to pay taxes on the forgiven debt. The creditor, however, knows whether it will have to file a 1099C form or not.").

749 E.g., United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131, 136–139 (4th Cir. 1996).

750 Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1318 (2d Cir. 1993) ("The basic purpose of the least-sophisticated-consumer standard is to ensure that the FDCPA protects all consumers, the gullible as well as the shrewd. This standard is consistent with the norms that courts have traditionally applied in consumer-protection law."). See also Appx. E.2.2.4.1, infra.

751 See, e.g., Gabriele v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 503 Fed. Appx. 89 (2d Cir. 2012); Santiago v. A.R. Res., Inc., 2015 WL 851818 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 26, 2015); Kassel v. Universal Fid. L.P., 2014 WL 824335 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2014).

applied to a settlement letter sent to the consumer's attorney.[752] While Heintz did not address specifically whether FDCPA § 1692e applies to representations to the consumer's attorney, Heintz has been persuasive to courts that communications to attorneys are covered.[753]

The Fourth,[754] Seventh,[755] Eighth,[756] Tenth,[757] and Eleventh[758]circuits apply the FDCPA to communications with the consumer's attorney. Despite earlier Second Circuit dicta suggesting communications to attorneys are not covered,[759] that circuit has clarified that it has not yet ruled on the issue.[760]

The only circuit to rule otherwise is the Ninth,[761] although several district courts follow the Ninth Circuit approach where their own circuit court has not yet ruled on the issue.[762] But other courts in districts that have not ruled on the issue follow the majority of circuits and find that FDCPA § 1692e applies to communications with attorneys.[763]

The majority view that attorneys are covered has the better of the argument. The FDCPA defines a covered communication as "the conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium."[764] A communication to consumer's counsel is an indirect communication to the consumer.[765] It would be odd if a debt collector could engage in deceptive conduct just because the consumer has legal representation.[766]

Even though the majority view is that communications to attorneys should be covered, courts often do not apply the least sophisticated consumer standard to see if the communication is misleading. A number of courts instead consider whether a competent lawyer (not necessarily a specialist in consumer law) would be deceived.[767] Of course, a competent lawyer could easily be deceived where the communication provided false information about the debt, such as the balance or certain other charges.[768] Moreover, courts apply the least sophisticated standard even to communications with an attorney if the attorney is also the consumer.[769]

7.3.8 Proving Deception—Is It a Matter of Law or Fact?

Whether a question is one of law or fact may determine whether the question is subject to a motion to dismiss[770] or a summary judgment motion, or whether the question must go to the jury. Questions of law are outside the province of the jury. If a question of law, it may be considered de novo on 752 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995).

753 See Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 232–233 (4th Cir. 2007).

754 Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226 (4th Cir. 2007).

755 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007). Accord Bravo v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 812 F.3d 599 (7th Cir. 2016). See also Weber v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 1519163 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018); Matmanivong v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 1181529 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 28, 2009) (communications to lawyers and court are subject to § 1692e just like communications to consumers); Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 4365745 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 10, 2007) (communication to consumer's agent with power of attorney, mediation service that did not provide legal advice, was communication to consumer, following Evory).

756 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Servs, Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015). See also Ferkingstad v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1373261 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2017).

757 Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949 (10th Cir. 1996).

758 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015). Accord Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016).

759 Kropelnicki v. Siegel, 290 F.3d 118 (2d Cir. 2002).

760 Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70, 97 n.6 (2d Cir. 2015).

761 Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926, 939 (9th Cir. 2007). See also Plumb v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2020 WL 2476752 (D. Alaska May 13, 2020); Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016); Angel v. Am. Recovery Services Inc., 2012 WL 3594371 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 22, 2012).

762 See Villegas v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 723 F. Supp. 2d 755 (M.D. Pa. 2010); Wright v. Phelan, Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2010 WL 786536 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 8, 2010).

763 See Polinsky v. Cmty. Health Partners Reg'l Health Sys., 858 F. Supp. 2d 891 (N.D. Ohio 2012); Misleh v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 786 F. Supp. 2d 1330 (E.D. Mich. 2011); Quesenberry v. Alliant Law Group, P.C., 2010 WL 1189457 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 5, 2010), adopted, 2010 WL 1189481 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 24, 2010).

764 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(2).

765 See Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 232–233 (4th Cir. 2007).

766 See Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1302–1303 (11th Cir. 2015); Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007).

767 Bravo v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 812 F.3d 599 (7th Cir. 2016) (collection letters did not violate § 1692e because false representation that Bravo still owed a debt that was discharged in a prior settlement was made to attorney that negotiated settlement, and competent attorney can determine if client still owes a debt and would not be deceived by letters); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015) (discovery requests); Simon v. FIA Card Services, 2015 WL 1969411 (D.N.J. Apr. 30, 2015); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 733 F. Supp. 2d 635 (D. Md. 2010); Duraney v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2008 WL 4204821 (W.D. Pa. Sept. 11, 2008), aff'd, 388 Fed. Appx. 102 (3d Cir. 2010).

768 See Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769, 775 (7th Cir. 2007) ("A false claim of fact in a dunning letter may be as difficult for a lawyer to see through as a consumer. Suppose the letter misrepresents the unpaid balance of the consumer's debt. The lawyer might be unable to discover the falsity of the representation without an investigation that he might be unable, depending on his client's resources, to undertake. Such a misrepresentation would be actionable whether made to the consumer directly, or indirectly through his lawyer."); Caprel v. Specialized Loan Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 1739919, at *4 (N.D. Ill. May 4, 2017); Mehling v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 2016 WL 7231931 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 12, 2016).

769 See Woerthwein v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 6194908 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 24, 2016); Sulaiman v. Biehl & Biehl, Inc., 2016 WL 5720476 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2016); Gesten v. Phelan Hallinan, P.L.C., 57 F. Supp. 3d 1381 (S.D. Fla. 2014). See also Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949, 954 (10th Cir. 1996) ("[w]e are not holding here that an affirmative misrepresentation to a lawyer would be excusable merely because a lawyer could see through the false statement").

770 See, e.g., Samuel v. Approved Credit Solutions, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4548745, at *2 (S.D. Ind. July 28, 2015) ("Only the rarest FDCPA complaint that alleges a dunning letter is misleading or confusing may be dismissed on the pleadings.").

appeal. If a question of fact, appellate deference must be given to the lower court's finding.

Circuit courts disagree as to whether deception is a matter of fact or law, and the result may also depend on how clear the case is that the communication is or is not deceptive. The Fourth, Eighth, and Ninth Circuits find deception often is a matter of law.[771] The Fifth, Sixth, and Eleventh Circuits hold that, where it is a close question, deception is a question of fact to be decided by the fact finder.[772] The Seventh Circuit has a similar standard: it is question of law when the statement is clearly deceptive or clearly not deceptive; and a question of fact when a reasonable fact finder could reasonably find the statement deceptive or not.[773] Lower courts in other circuits generally consider the issue one of fact[774] or a mixed question of fact and law for the jury.[775]

Where determination of a FDCPA § 1692e violation requires a factual determination, it will usually be one as to whether a communication or practice is misleading as to the least sophisticated consumer. In this case, testimony from experts in a relevant field will be very helpful as to whether the communication or practice would in fact mislead the least sophisticated consumer.[776] If a communication is false, rather than just misleading, the consumer's factual burden is different and may require different testimony, because the consumer need only show that the communication is false. But whether a communication is false or misleading, it may be important also to present evidence that the statement is material to the least sophisticated consumers. An expert witness may be helpful to show this materiality, but often such materiality should be obvious without extensive evidence. See the discussion at § 7.3.9, infra.

The Seventh Circuit uniquely has expressed a preference that expert testimony that the communication would be misleading as to the least sophisticated consumer be based on a survey of consumers, instead of other grounds for an expert opinion.[777] In part, this is based on the Seventh Circuit (largely alone) finding the trademark law concept of confusion a closer analogy to FDCPA § 1692e than the FTC Act concept of deception. Such surveys can be extremely expensive, and their required use as evidence, even in trademark law, is open to question.[778]

Moreover, even the Seventh Circuit finds that a survey may not always be required and the consumer's own testimony as to whether a communication was misleading and material can be determinative.[779] This is the case also under trademark law.[780] Moreover, as described earlier in this subsection, the Seventh 771 E.g., Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 763 F.3d 385, 395 (4th Cir. 2014); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1060–1062 (9th Cir. 2011) (debt buyer's letter threatening to report obsolete debts to credit reporting agencies when it would not do so was deceptive as matter of law); Peters v. General Serv. Bur., Inc., 277 F.3d 1051 (8th Cir. 2002) (collector's letter requesting consumer's voluntary appearance in lieu of service of process was not false, deceptive, or misleading on its face, in absence of evidence of its deceptiveness).

772 Kuehn v. Cadle Co., 335 Fed. Appx. 827, 830 (11th Cir. 2009) ("if there are two sets of reasonable inferences that could be drawn from a dunning letter, and one set of inferences would result in a violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(10), while the other would not, it was appropriate for a jury to decide which set of inferences to draw"); Gonzalez v. Kay, 577 F.3d 600, 606–607 (5th Cir. 2009) (issue of deceptiveness was too close to treated as an issue of law and the lower court's dismissal of the complaint was reversed); Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 441 (6th Cir. 2008) ("a jury should determine whether the letter is deceptive and misleading-specifically, whether the letter gives the impression that it is from an attorney even though it is not").

773 See Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 822, 826, 827 (7th Cir. 2012). See also Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 825 F.3d 317 (7th Cir. 2016) (verification rights notice violated § 1692g as matter of law); Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 630 (7th Cir. 2009) (deception not clear, consumer's survey rejected, but not consumer's testimony that she was confused, and jury decision required on deception); Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769, 776 (7th Cir. 2007); Taylor v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004) (as matter of law. letter was not confusing or deceptive); Al v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2019 WL 189248, at *3 (E.D. Wis. Jan. 14, 2019) (plaintiff raised triable issue of fact as to whether letter was misleading); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 2644763 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2016).

774 See, e.g., Schaefer v. ARM Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 2847768 (D. Mass. July 19, 2011); Brazier v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 2009 WL 764161 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2009); Harry v. Pentagroup Fin., L.L.C., 2007 WL 812998 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 14, 2007); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services L.L.C., 489 F. Supp. 2d 1140 (S.D. Cal. 2007); Dupuy v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 442 F. Supp. 2d 822, 824 (N.D. Cal. 2006); Gionis v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 405 F. Supp. 2d 856, 873 (S.D. Ohio 2005); Shimek v. Weissman, Nowack, Curry & Wilso, P.C., 323 F. Supp. 2d 1344 (N.D. Ga. 2003); Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1099 (D. Or. 2000).

775 See, e.g., Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008); Baptist v. Global Holding & Inv. Co., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1989450 (E.D.N.Y. July 9, 2007); Dupuy v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 442 F. Supp. 2d 822, 824 (N.D. Cal. 2006). See also Pescatrice v. Orovitz, 539 F. Supp. 2d 1375 (S.D. Fla. 2008).

776 See, e.g., Rabideau v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 805 F. Supp. 1086 (W.D.N.Y. 1992) (expert in organizational communication to testify about debt validation notice); Siler v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 1992 WL 32333 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 1992) (expert's opinion usefulness). See also Beeman v. Lacy, Katzen, Ryen & Mittleman, 892 F. Supp. 405 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) (expert testimony may be presented regarding contradiction between demand and validation notice and effect on least sophisticated consumer).

777 See § 11.6.3, infra.

778 See Robert H. Thornburg, Trademark Survey Evidence: Review of Current Trends in the Ninth Circuit, 21 Santa Clara Computer & High Tech. L.J. 715, 717 (2005) (most basic trademark survey costs hundreds of thousands of dollars). See also Katie Brown, Natasha T. Brison, & Paul J. Batista, An Empirical Examination of Consumer Survey Use in Trademark Litigation, 39 Loy. L.A. Ent. L. Rev. 237, 258 (2018–2019) ("Obtaining and using survey evidence can also be time-consuming, expensive, and some experts may experience logistical issues associated with locating an appropriate universe of individuals to participate in the study."); Irina D. Manta, In Search of Validity: A New Model for the Content and Procedural Treatment of Trademark Infringement Surveys, 24 Cardozo Arts & Ent. L.J. 1027 n.5 (2007).

779 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009).

780 See McGraw-Edison Co. v. Walt Disney Prod., 787 F.2d 1163, 1172–1173 (7th Cir. 1986); Duncan McIntosh Co. Inc. v. Newport Dunes Marina L.L.C. 324 F. Supp. 2d 1078 (C.D. Cal. 2004) (plaintiff introduced evidence in form of declarations of other people to support finding of actual confusion).

Circuit finds deception a matter of fact only in close calls, but otherwise finds it a matter of law.[781]

7.3.9 Materiality in FDCPA § 1692e Claims

7.3.9.1 Generally

Many FDCPA § 1692e claims are based on misleading or deceptive communications. The Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Circuits require that, for the deception to be actionable, it must be material to the least sophisticated consumer.[782] A non-precedential Second Circuit decision reaches the same conclusion.[783] The Supreme Court, though, has not ruled as to whether deception must be material, avoiding the issue in a 2016 case.[784] It is prudent to always plead and be prepared to prove the materiality of the deception.[785]

In addition to the materiality requirement that many courts impose, the consumer must have suffered a concrete injury in order to have Article III standing to file an FDCPA case in federal court. Whether or not a deceptive statement is material, practitioners need to consider and be prepared to address Article III standing when filing new litigation. Article III standing is discussed in § 11.15, infra.

Courts have found that materiality is not required where the FDCPA § 1692e violation is not based on deception, but on a statutory requirement. There is no materiality requirement for a violation of FDCPA § 1692e(11), which requires disclosure of certain information during a debt collection contact.[786] If the information is not disclosed, there is a violation whether or not the non-disclosure is material to the consumer.

Courts also find that it is always material for a collector to violate FDCPA § 1692e(8) by failing to communicate with a consumer reporting agency (CRA) that a debt it is reporting to the CRA is disputed; this always affects the consumer's credit rating, and is thus material.[787] So is reporting to the CRA false information.[788]

Courts applying a materiality requirement apply an objective test: whether a deceptive statement would make a difference to the least sophisticated consumer,[789] rather than a subjective test of how it would affect the plaintiff.[790] Nevertheless, lower federal courts, in determining materiality in practice, often will look at the deception's impact on the actual plaintiff, perhaps using the plaintiff as a rough approximation of the least sophisticated consumer.[791] Thus, it is prudent to explain why 781 See Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 822, 826, 827 (7th Cir. 2012).

782 See, e.g., Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 880 F.3d 362 (7th Cir. 2018); Coyne v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 895 F.3d 1035 (8th Cir. 2018); Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 868 F.3d 771, 776 (9th Cir. 2017); Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227 (4th Cir. 2015); Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413, 420–422 (3d Cir. 2015); Wallace v. Washington Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012); Wiley v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 780763 (D. Minn. Mar. 1, 2021).

783 Gabriele v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 503 Fed. Appx. 89, 94 (2d Cir. 2012). See also Bryan v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 954 F.3d 576 (2d Cir. 2020) (remanding for district court to consider issue of materiality on § 1692e claim and suggesting that collection letter's erroneous identification of creditor was not necessarily materially misleading to least sophisticated consumer).

784 Sheriff v. Gillie, 578 U.S. 317, 327 n.6, 136 S. Ct. 1594, 194 L. Ed. 2d 625 (2016) ("Because we conclude that the letters sent by petitioners were truthful, we need not consider the parties' arguments as to whether a false or misleading statement must be material to violate the FDCPA.").

785 Camarena v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 4055631 (D. Minn. Aug. 14, 2014); Caulfield v. Am. Account & Advisors, Inc., 2013 WL 1953314 (D. Minn. May 10, 2013) (consumer did not articulate that statement undermined her ability to make intelligent choice); Giovia v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 2013 WL 6039039 (E.D. Va. Nov. 13, 2013) (consumer must plead why false statement of debt amount was misleading); Hegwood v. Lighthouse Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2012 WL 693658 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 1, 2012) (not argued to be material and dismissed).

786 Warren v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 676 F.3d 365, 374 (4th Cir. 2012), abrogated on other grounds by Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016); Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201 (E.D.N.Y. 2019); Price-Richardson v. DCN Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 902167 (D. Md. Feb. 15, 2018); Prendergast v. First Choice Assets, L.L.C., 317 F. Supp. 3d 1018, 1026 (N.D. Ill. 2018); Heyer v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 75739 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2017); Kagan v. Selene Fin. L.P., 210 F. Supp. 3d 535 (S.D.N.Y. 2016). But see Driesen v. RSI Enters. Inc., 2019 WL 283646, at *4 n.2 (D. Ariz. Jan. 22, 2019) (construing Ninth Circuit precedent as "requiring a showing of materiality in all § 1692e(11) cases," but acknowledging that the law is "unsettled in other Circuits as to whether materiality is required in the § 1692e(11) context"); Fausz v. NPAS, Inc., 237 F. Supp. 3d 559, 570 (W.D. Ky. 2017). See § 7.2.11.1, supra.

787 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 349 (7th Cir. 2018); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008); Patterson v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 2018 WL 5269810 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 23, 2018); Daley v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 717 F. Supp. 2d 1150 (D. Or. 2010).

788 Mehling v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 2016 WL 7231931 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 12, 2016) (inaccurately reporting amount of debt).

789 See, e.g., Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227 (4th Cir. 2015); Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 755 F.3d 1109, 1121 (9th Cir. 2014) ("[T]he factual errors in Paragon Way's letters to Tourgeman could easily cause the least sophisticated debtor to suffer a disadvantage in charting a course of action in response to the collection effort."); Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119, 127 (4th Cir. 2014) ("the inquiry is not whether the least sophisticated consumer would have acted differently . . . Instead, it is whether the information would have been important to the consumer in deciding how to respond to efforts to collect the debt." (emphasis in original)); Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 629 (7th Cir. 2009); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 229 F. Supp. 3d 457 (E.D. Va. 2017); Kaymark v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 2016 WL 7187840 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 12, 2016); Gorman v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 755618 (D. Minn. Feb. 25, 2016) (materiality requirement for § 1692e is objective, not subjective); Hudspeth v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 674019 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2013).

790 See Afewerki v. Anaya Law Group, 868 F.3d 771, 776 (9th Cir. 2017); Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2014); Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 723278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2018); Richardson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4921971 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 31, 2017) (FDCPA claim satisfied materiality requirement where collection letter regarding time-barred debt could influence unsophisticated consumer to pay debt instead of doing nothing (which was favorable option)); Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013).

791 See, e.g., Fears v. Sys. & Services Technologies, Inc., 2020 WL 7351112 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 25, 2020); Jimenez v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4922251 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 31, 2017) (consumer could not demonstrate that misrepresentation materially misled her); Gonzalez a deceptive communication is material not only to the least sophisticated consumer, but also to the consumer bringing the FDCPA § 1692e actions. If is not material to the consumer, stress to the court caselaw allowing the consumer to show the practice's materiality to the least sophisticated consumer.

For deception to be material, it must make a difference to a consumer. This occurs when, for example, a communication misleads the consumers as to the nature of the debt or impedes a consumer's ability to decide how to respond to, or whether to dispute, collection of the debt.[792] A misrepresentation might not be material if it makes no difference to the least sophisticated consumer—the consumer will pay no attention to it.[793]

But even if a consumer would not understand what the representation means, it can be material. As the Seventh Circuit stated: "Confusing language in a dunning letter can have an intimidating effect by making the recipient feel that he is in over his head and had better pay up rather than question the demand for payment."[794] Another court put it this way as to confusing language in a collection lawsuit: "[C]ourt proceedings are intimidating to the average individual. The inclusion of confusing or incomplete language in a court filing like the Motion could make the least sophisticated consumer feel even further out of his league . . ."[795]

7.3.9.2 Materiality As to Consequences of Payment or Non-Payment

Misleading the consumer as to the consequences of payment or non-payment will almost always be material because it will affect the consumer's decision-making as to payment of the debt. Misrepresentations that the amount due will continue to increase if payments are not promptly made are thus material,[796] because this can affect the consumer's decision to pay promptly.[797]

Conversely, misrepresentations as to the benefits of prompt payment are also material, such as that the collector will waive charges or part of the principal where the collector was not authorized to do so.[798] Misrepresenting the positive effects on the consumer's credit rating of a payment is also material,[799] as are misrepresentations as to the impact of non-payment on a consumer's credit rating.[800]

Threatening a lawsuit is material.[801] Misrepresenting the impact on the consumer if the collector files a collection

v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2017 WL 2798404 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2017) (statement regarding effects of bounced check not material as plaintiffs would not be paying by check); Stockman v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2017 WL 2798403 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2017) (consumer did not present any evidence showing that she intended to pay debts by check); Peterson v. Meyer, 2016 WL 5249219 (N.D. Ind. Sept. 22, 2016) (not materially misleading to debtor's husband); Datiz v. Int'l Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 4148330 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2016); Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2016) (focused on plaintiff's confusion); Conteh v. Shamrock Cmty. Ass'n, Inc., 2015 WL 5177752 (D. Md. Sept. 3, 2015) (homeowners not misled by inaccurate statement of amount due, because homeowners paid only amount homeowners claimed was due); Burd v. Manley Deas Kochalski P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 12572908 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 31, 2014).

792 See Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119, 127 (4th Cir. 2014). See also Laporte v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 2814184, at *6 (W.D. Va. May. 29, 2020) (writ misrepresentation that wages would be garnished was material even if consumer was aware debt was already satisfied because defendant's "inconsistent representations are enough to cast doubt in the mind of the least sophisticated consumer"); Madison v. Equityexperts.org, L.L.C., 2020 WL 555249, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 4, 2020) (representing that attorney fees had been incurred and charged when they had was material "because it tends to mislead an unsophisticated debtor regarding the character of the debt, and impairs his ability to knowledgeably assess its validity"). But see Tiene v. Drexel Univ., 816 Fed. Appx. 707 (3d Cir. 2020) (because use of incorrect residential address prevented consumer from receiving notice of suit, it could not have affected his decision-making and therefore was not actionable).

793 See Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012), Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 629 (7th Cir. 2009); Hegwood v. Lighthouse Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2012 WL 693658, at *2 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 1, 2012) (false statement that collector had previously spoken with consumer not materially false: "[The plaintiff] knows whether he spoke to someone or did not. He can then assess that knowledge and disregard the assertion if it's false (as alleged here)."); Kromelbein v. Envision Payment Solutions, Inc., 2013 WL 3947109, at *9 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2013) (check collector misrepresenting that it had filed consumer's driver license number when consumer did not have one: "Even the least sophisticated consumer would not be misled by a statement that he knows to be false."). But cf. Wheeler v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 1469449, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2020) (although consumer already knew debt was time-barred, misrepresentation about this still material because the issue of whether debt is legally enforceable is central fact about character and status of debt).

794 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 629 (7th Cir. 2009).

795 Schendzielos v. Borenstein, 2016 WL 614473 (D. Colo. Feb. 16, 2016)

796 See Lopez-Gordillo v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2019 WL 527627 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2019); Knepp v. Huffman, 2018 WL 4680020 (N.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2018) (interest will accrue); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (17% collection charge); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (17% collection charge); Moran v. Greene & Cooper Attorneys L.L.P., 43 F. Supp. 3d 907 (S.D. Ind. 2014).

797 See Spuhler v. State Collection Services, Inc., 2018 WL 3651356 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 1, 2018) (accruing interest). Lukawski v. Client Services, Inc., 2013 WL 4647482 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 29, 2013) (that consumer might now know interest was accruing was material even where defendant offered to settle for less than 50% of amount due).

798 Franklin v. Nat'l Credit Audit Corp., 2018 WL 1155973 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 22, 2018) (statement that it would waive collection fees and interest that it was not authorized to assess).

799 Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 2644763 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2016) (misleading consumer to believe that obsolete debt was legally reportable to consumer reporting agencies, and that making payment on that debt would improve their credit score).

800 See Wheeler v. Credit Bur. of Santa Maria, 2015 WL 12669881 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2015) (could report to consumer reporting agencies that debtor's nonpayment was made "without reason" and that debtor "evidently [doesn't] care about [his] credit record"); Hudspeth v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 674019, at *7 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2013) (debt would remain on report indefinitely). Cf. Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 961 F.3d 975 (7th Cir. 2020) (threatening to report debt to consumer reporting agencies when had already done so survived motion to dismiss, but consumer failed to produce sufficient evidence using objective measure, so summary judgment granted to collector).

801 See Cadiz v. Credence Res. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2018 WL 4052159 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 24, 2018) (false threat of litigation).

lawsuit is material, even if the collection lawsuit is never filed.[802] Threatening seizure of assets or other unavailable creditor remedies should be material.[803] Mention of possible tax consequences or IRS reporting requirements in connection with a proposed settlement is material because it can imply to the least sophisticated consumer that failure to pay in full will involve the IRS in the consumer's affairs, and thus affect their decision-making process.[804]

7.3.9.3 Materiality As to Inaccuracy of the Amount Due

A collector's misstatement of the amount due, such as by including unauthorized charges, should almost always be considered material,[805] unless the discrepancy is found to be de minimis.[806] The misstatement of the amount due can lead to the consumer paying amounts not owed.[807] Understating the amount due can also be material in that this, too, may affect the consumer's repayment decision.[808] Confusing or conflicting demands for payment can also affect the consumer's determination if the amount is proper or if the debt should be disputed, and is thus material.[809]

The Seventh Circuit found it not material to a consumer who doesn't contest owing the amount claimed that the principal balance includes past interest charges added to principal, rather than breaking out the past due interest as a separate line item.[810] The Eighth Circuit found not material a representation that a small amount of interest was due based on application of one interest rate where the interest charge also included a small amount of interest assessed at a different interest rate, where both rates were legal.[811] Similarly not found material is that a statement in a letter that the amount was due on a date ten days prior to the letter's mailing.[812]

7.3.9.4 Materiality As to the Nature or Identity of the Creditor or Collector

The Ninth Circuit has stated that the identity of the original creditor is "a critical piece of information."[813] Misrepresenting 802 Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012).

803 Watkins v. Inv. Retrievers, Inc., 2018 WL 558833 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2018) (collection letter falsely stated "We understand you are still in possession of your vehicle"); Weisheit v. Roseberg & Assoc., 2017 WL 5478355 (D. Md. Nov. 15, 2017) (seizure of home).

804 Velez v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2016 WL 1730721 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2016). See also § 7.3.9.1, supra.

805 Coyne v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 895 F.3d 1035, 1038 (8th Cir. 2018) ("a false representation of the amount of a debt that overstates what is owed under state law materially violated § 1692e(2)(A)"); Afewerki v. Anaya Law Group, 868 F.3d 771 (9th Cir. 2017); Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2014); Walker v. Hill, 2021 WL 1062238, at *16 (E.D. Va. Mar. 19, 2021) (misrepresentation was material, as inflated fee misstated total amount due by $2450, or 16% of demand of $14,700, and "courts have typically found misstatements of more than 10% sufficient to be material to the least sophisticated consumer"); Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521, at *12 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017) ("failure to accurately represent an amount owed in a communication to a debtor, or failure to provide an explanation as to how that amount was calculated, are material errors under the FDCPA"); Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016) (seeking full amount of debt instead of agreed settlement amount); Hines v. HSBC Bank, 2016 WL 5716749 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2016); Heling v. Creditors Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4625683 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 6, 2016) (overstating $518 debt balance by $20 could mislead an unsophisticated consumer and could have been factor in consumer's decision-making process); In re FDCPA Cognate Cases, 2016 WL 1273349 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2016) (claiming costs that were not due in garnishment action until garnishing party prevailed—even in small amounts as low as $10—was material misstatement); Gorman v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 755618 (D. Minn. Feb. 25, 2016) (including unauthorized court costs); Crafton v. Law Firm of Jonathan B. Levine, 2013 WL 3441243 (E.D. Wis. July 9, 2013) (false representation of the homeowner's association assessments and fees). But see Grunwald v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 172 F. Supp. 3d 1050 (D. Minn. 2016) (adding $30 cost of service—an amount roughly equal to three-tenths of one percent of actual total of debt—not material).

806 See Cummings v. Jaburg & Wilk P.C., 711 Fed. Appx. 418 (9th Cir. Feb. 14, 2018) (understating amount owed by $20 in debt of over $9000); Fuqua v. Associated Credit Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 2371102 (E.D. Wash. May 24, 2018) (bogus $5 notary fee not material); Archie v. Nagle & Zaller, P.C., 2018 WL 3475429, at *5 (D. Md. July 19, 2018); Cordova v. Jenkins, 2018 WL 5112907 (D.N.M. Oct. 19, 2018); Matuszczak v. Miramed Revenue Group L.L.C., 2017 WL 5467117 (N.D. Ind. Nov. 13, 2017) (45 cent rounding error); Gordon v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 1377673 (D.N.J. Apr. 12, 2017) (seeking excess of $390 on nearly $222,000 that was concededly owing); Robbins v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 891329 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 9, 2016) (one dollar discrepancy); Akoundi v. FMS, Inc., 2014 WL 3632008 (S.D.N.Y. July 22, 2014) (rounding up by penny). See also Cicalo v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, 2018 WL 1514245 (D. Conn. Mar. 27, 2018).

807 Afewerki v. Anaya Law Group, 868 F.3d 771 (9th Cir. 2017).

808 See Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 566 (7th Cir. 2004); DeFrancesco v. Veripro Solutions Inc., 2015 WL 179376 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 14, 2015). But see Arnett v. Hodges Law Office, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4195343, at *4 (E.D. Va. Sept. 4, 2019) (understatement of debt by $75, or 1.9%, was "minimal discrepancy" that did not rise to level of important misstatement that could affect consumer's decision-making); Cicalo v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1514245, at *1 (D. Conn. Mar. 27, 2018) (letter understating amount owed as $115,058.54, when true amount owed was $122,387.54; nothing in record indicated how miscalculation could have been material).

809 See Aubrey v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3912353, at *6 (D.S.C. Aug. 14, 2018) ("Plaintiff had no way to assess which parts of the lump sum of $16,251.83 constituted her unpaid fines, assessments, attorneys' fees or costs, and therefore had no way to assess the validity of the debt."); Vogel v. McCarthy, Burgess, & Wolff, Inc., 2018 WL 3729329 at 4 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 2018) (statement of debt as one lump sum of $3,036.83, without stating its fees and charges, was plausibly materially misleading on character of debt, because it could influence what consumer would do in reaction to debt-collection attempt); Boedicker v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1408158 (D. Kan. Apr. 20, 2017) (conflicting statements of amount due); Smith v. Am. Revenue Corp., 2005 WL 1162906 (N.D. Ind. May 16, 2005) (follow-up letter demanding payment of lump sum for fourteen accounts).

810 Hahn v. Triumph P'ships L.L.C., 557 F.3d 755, 757 (7th Cir. 2009); Wahl v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 556 F.3d 643 (7th Cir. 2009) (upholding rejection of claim that collector misrepresented character of debt). But see Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) (requiring itemization of debt since itemization date as part of validation information); § 9.4.7, infra.

811 Donohue v. Quick Collect, Inc, 592 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 2010).

812 Davis v. White, 2017 WL 6273488 (E.D. Va. Dec. 8, 2017).

813 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 755 F.3d 1109, 1121 (9th Cir. 2014).

the original creditor can unduly complicate a consumer's efforts to investigate the nature of the debt or know how to respond to the collection effort.[814] So can a misrepresentation of who owns the debt at the time of collection, because, again, this affects the consumer's efforts to contact the owner.[815] It is also material for a collector to misrepresent that it owns the debt, because the consumer, after paying that party, may still owe the real owner.[816]

But some courts find it permissible for a mortgage loan owner's servicer to imply it owns the debt, because this might in fact help, not hinder, the consumer's effort at obtaining more information.[817] Similarly, where an auto dealer originates credit but immediately assigns the obligation to its financing arm, describing the latter as the original creditor may not be material.[818]

Deception is material where a collector tricks consumers into contacting them, pretending to be someone else.[819] Misrepresentation that the collector is licensed is material because it may prevent the consumer from raising a valid defense to a collection lawsuit.[820]

Misrepresenting that a communication or court document was drafted by an attorney is material to a consumer because it suggests that an attorney has reached a considered professional judgment that the consumer owes the debt and that the debt is a candidate for a collection lawsuit.[821] Misrepresenting that a solo law firm has multiple attorneys can influence how a consumer responds.[822]

On the other hand, a court has found not material the fact that a collector's communication did not disclose that the collector was a law firm.[823] Courts have found minor aspects of the collector's self-identification not to be material, such as where the collector represents itself as a certified debt collection specialist,[824] lists addresses in two states,[825] misrepresents that the collection agency is highly rated by an outside reviewer,[826] or describes itself both as a collector and a creditor.[827]

7.3.9.5 Materiality As to the Nature of the Debt and Debtor Rights

Deception concerning a consumer's legal rights can be material, such as where deception impairs a consumer's rights to verification of the debt,[828] prevents rights to dispute a debt,[829] or hides a consumer's legal defenses to a debt.[830] Courts, though, have found that some misrepresentations of legal rights are unlikely to be material.[831]

814 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 755 F.3d 1109, 1121 (9th Cir. 2014); Winslow v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2017 WL 6375744 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 13, 2017); McGinty v. Prof'l Claims Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6069180 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 17, 2016); Hall v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2016 WL 4441868 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 23, 2016); Burdick v. Bank of Am., 140 F. Supp. 3d 1325 (S.D. Fla. 2015); Green v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 4599480 (S.D. Ind. July 29, 2015); Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397 (Mont. May 4, 2016) (servicer's misrepresentation that it was secured party was material). But see Klein v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 2011 WL 5354250 (D. Conn. Oct. 28, 2011).

815 Wallace v. Washington Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323, 327 (6th Cir. 2012).

816 McCrobie v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 359 F. Supp. 3d 239 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013). See also Eun Joo Lee v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 926 F. Supp. 2d 482 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

817 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 86 (2d Cir. 2018). Cf. Duffey v. Nationstar Mortg., 614 Fed. Appx. 330 (6th Cir. 2015) (listing Deutsche Bank as loan servicer, instead of Bank of America, not material, as statement identified correct entity to contact, which represented both creditor and loan servicer); Sedillos v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 13081650 (D.N.M. Mar. 29, 2012) (no evidence that anyone would have acted differently had they known the call was from agency rather than CitiBank).

818 See Golden v. Prosser, 2014 WL 4626489 (D. Minn. Sept. 15, 2014).

819 See Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4264967 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 11, 2016) (door hanger asked consumer to call about property inspection, but number called was debt collector).

820 Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

821 Satran v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2464486, at *7 (W.D. Wis. June 1, 2018) (complaint purportedly filed by attorney undoubtedly has ability to influence consumer's decision about how to proceed, since it "'implies that the attorney has reached a considered, professional judgment that the consumer is delinquent and is a candidate for legal action'"); Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665, 681 (E.D. Wis. 2018).

822 Jones v. Jason A. Craig & Assoc., 2019 WL 362273, at *3 (M.D. Ga. Jan. 29, 2019) ("The Court finds plausible that the misrepresentation of having more than one attorney in the law firm could have objectively affected the decision-making process of the least sophisticated consumer.").

823 Fondacaro v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2018 WL 4054075 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 24, 2018).

824 See Bassili v. CIR Law Offices, L.L.P., 2015 WL 11752142 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2015).

825 See Klein v. Credico, Inc., 2018 WL 3404156 (D. Minn. July 12, 2018), aff'd on other grounds, 922 F.3d 393 (8th Cir. 2019).

826 Bryan v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 4326041 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2017) (false statement of Better Business Bureau A+ rating).

827 See Scheuer v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 43 F. Supp. 3d 772 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 9, 2014).

828 See Mikolajczyk v. Universal Fid., L.P., 2017 WL 706301 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 22, 2017); Hale v. AFNI, Inc., 2010 WL 380906, at *8 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 26, 2010) (statement that defendant was "unable to investigate due to insufficient information" was material as it impaired consumer's ability to challenge debt and her decision to pay debt).

829 See Abramov v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 54 F. Supp. 3d 270 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (requiring disputes based on identity theft be in writing). See also Christopher v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2015 WL 437541 (D. Ariz. Feb. 3, 2015) (sending collection letter to someone who does not owe debt is material because it could confuse or mislead unsophisticated consumer).

830 See Hordge v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 2018 WL 3741979 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 7, 2018) (time-barred debt); Richardson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4921971 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 31, 2017); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 2644763 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2016).

831 See Lopez-Gordillo v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2019 WL 527627 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2019) (after cease communication letter, collector notified consumer it would cease communication); Berry v. Van Ru Credit, 2017 WL 8950428 (D. Utah Sept. 11, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 4342072 (D. Utah Sept. 29, 2017) (false statement that all student loan rehabilitation agreements had to be verbal); Elliott v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1495402 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2010) (heading collection letter with "warning" before required disclosure that this was attempt to collect debt).

A confusing communication about the status of a debt will often be material.[832] For instance, where a misrepresentation regarding the statute of limitations on the consumer's debt has the potential to affect the consumer's decision-making process, such misrepresentation is material.[833]

But some facts about a debt have been found not material, such as the date a debt buyer purchased a debt, where that would not affect a consumer's actions.[834]

7.3.9.6 Materiality of Deceptive Practices in Collection Litigation

A collector's deception in its collection action can be material to the consumer, since it can affect whether and how the consumer makes decisions relevant to the litigation. A collector's misrepresentation that it intends to prove its collection action, when it had no such intent, is material, because it can affect whether the consumer decides to pay the debt or defend the lawsuit.[835] Similarly, a collector filing an invalid claim is material because it can affect the consumer's decision to pay on the debt.[836]

An affidavit falsely stating that facts were based on personal knowledge can be material because it may affect whether the consumer challenges the affidavit's admissibility and whether the consumer might question the facts stated therein.[837] The same is the case where the affidavit has been fraudulently notarized[838] or contains false statements.[839]

Seeking amounts not owed in a collection case can be material in that it can lead to an excessive judgment against the consumer[840] or the consumer voluntarily paying more than the consumer would otherwise pay. A collector's misrepresentations about a consumer's ability to vacate a default judgment can also be material because this can affect the consumer's decision whether to seek to vacate the judgment.[841]

On the other hand, where the consumer does not deny a collector's allegations, minor inaccuracies in the proof of those allegations may not be material.[842] A minor error in legal pleadings is not actionable where the consumer does not show how the error affected the consumer's decision-making.[843] A mistake in a pleading can be corrected later in the litigation, and then the original mistake may no longer be material.[844]

A mistake in litigation documents can also be immaterial where even the least sophisticated consumer is not misled by a minor mistake.[845] A court has found a collector's representations that it had mailed a notice of trial a few days prior to its actual mailing was not material.[846] And a court found that any alleged confusion as to whether payment had to be sent by the consumer or received by the collection agency by the date specified in a collection letter was not material where the perceived ambiguity would merely cause the consumer to transmit payment a bit early.[847]

7.4 Application of FDCPA § 1692e to Selected Collection Topics

7.4.1 Nature of the Debt Collector and the Payment Process

A debt collector misrepresenting the debt collector's nature can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation. Examples are 832 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009).

833 Chandler v. NCB Mgmt. Services, Inc., ___F.3d ___, 2021 WL 1108637 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2021).

834 Beaufrand v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 6065355 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 20, 2018).

835 Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013). See also § 7.4.10.4.2, infra (initiating lawsuit without sufficient evidence of debt).

836 See Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019) (failure to provide consumer with statutory right to cure); Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665, 681 (E.D. Wis. 2018) (same).

837 Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 4473016 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 22, 2016); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961, 971 (N.D. Ohio 2009).

838 See Newman v. Encore Capital Group, 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017). But see Lembach v. Bierman, 528 Fed. Appx. 297 (4th Cir. 2013) (not material where wrong person signed complaint where debt was clearly owed and complaint's allegations were accurate).

839 See Winemiller v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1457749 (D. Md. Apr. 15, 2011).

840 See Maronyan v. Fin. Credit Network Inc., 2017 WL 57835, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2017) (complaint sought attorney fees in excess of maximum allowed by state law was "undoubtedly material"); McInerney v. Roosen Varchetti & Olivier P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 4778724 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 23, 2017) (seeking costs before awarded by court); Heling v. Creditors Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4625683 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 6, 2016).

841 Heling v. Creditors Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4625683 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 6, 2016).

842 See Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018).

843 Simon v. FIA Card Servs., 639 Fed. Appx. 885 (3d Cir. 2016) (subpoenas stating that sent to consumers personally was technically false); Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413, 420–422 (3d Cir. 2015) (subpoena included signature of retired, rather than sitting clerk); Lembach v. Bierman, 528 Fed. Appx. 297 (4th Cir. 2013) (forged signature on document); Miller v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 561 F.3d 588 (6th Cir. 2009) (calling credit card account a "loan").

844 See Kelsey v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 353 F. Supp. 3d 223 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (misrepresentation leading to default immaterial where default judgment set aside); Dolan v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 2018 WL 6604212 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 17, 2018) (consumer failed to show how any misrepresentation connected with mistake in calculating prejudgment interest was material where it was withdrawn and later corrected in subsequent motion); Browning-Fote v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 2011 WL 13279173 (S.D. Ga. May 20, 2011) (error immaterial where collection action dismissed three days later).

845 Carpenter v. Monroe Fin. Recovery Group, L.L.C., 119 F. Supp. 3d 623 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (false representation that consumer possessed credit card agreement not material where consumer would know whether she had a copy of agreement in her possession). See also Washington v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.P.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (W.D. Mich. 2012).

846 See Lang v. Automated Accounts, Inc., 2014 WL 6473670 (E.D. Wash. 2014). See also Scarbrough v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornick, L.L.P., 2018 WL 5869647, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2018) (date of filing debt collection suit had no repercussion for consumer).

847 See Leifer v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2020 WL 6507325 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 5, 2020).

misrepresentations of the number of collection agency employees or that they include special investigators,[848] that the agency has widespread offices or affiliates,[849] or that the collector is an attorney,[850] a credit reporting agency,[851] or the owner of the debt.[852] Collectors can also misrepresent their identity by use of a misleading or false name.[853] It has been held to be deceptive for a debt buyer to claim it is a debt collection agency.[854]

A FDCPA § 1692e violation is stated where a collector for a debt buyer does not make clear why the debt buyer is demanding payment and the consumer only knows of liability to the original creditor. In that instance, the consumer is confused whether to pay the creditor or debt buyer.[855]

A FDCPA § 1692e violation can result from a debt collector masking its identity when contacting the consumer, such as using a false caller ID (spoofing),[856] intentionally blocking its telephone number,[857] or claiming the collector was investigating the consumer's Social Security number.[858] Other actionable misrepresentations involve the collector's success in collecting debts,[859] or that a collector was immune from the FDCPA.[860]

Also actionable under FDCPA § 1692e are misrepresentations of the relationship between the collector and the consumer. Examples include misrepresenting that the collector had communicated numerous times with the consumer,[861] or that the collector was handling the consumer's collection case when it was only sending out letters.[862]

It is deceptive for a collector to represent that the consumer's payment can be made only to the debt collector and not to the creditor where this is not the case.[863] Misrepresenting that the collector only has authority to accept payment in full can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[864] Where the collector will accept any form of payment, a letter can be deceptive where it states payment must be by a certain means, such as wire transfer or express mail.[865] For a discussion of unauthorized payment processing charges as a FDCPA § 1692e violation, see § 7.2.2.7, supra.

7.4.2 Debt Collector's Use of Social Media

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), implementing FDCPA § 1692e(10), prohibits the "use any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer."[866] Regulation F Official Interpretations provide examples of two different ways that a debt collector using social media would violate this provision: one in contacting the consumer and one in contacting third parties for location information.

The Regulation F supplemental information explains:

> First, given the purpose of social media platforms marketed for social or professional networking purposes, such as Facebook or LinkedIn, a consumer who receives a "friend" or "connection" request on such a platform would take away from the request that the requester is interested in a social or professional networking relationship. This consumer takeaway would be false if the request is from a debt collector in connection with the collection of a debt, and this false claim may cause the consumer to accept a request that the consumer otherwise would not have accepted. Such deceptive means of engaging with the consumer violate [Reg. F] § 1006.18(d).[867]

The first example of a violation involves a debt collector that sends a private message, in connection with the collection of a debt, requesting to be added as one of the consumer's contacts on a social media platform marketed for social or professional networking purposes. There is a violation of Reg. F § 1006.18(d) if the debt collector does not disclose their identity as a debt collector in the request.[868]

848 See Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000) (had multiple detectives and investigating division).

849 United States v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17964 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 11, 1982).

850 See FDCPA § 1692e(3). See § 7.2.3, supra.

851 See FDCPA § 1692e(16). See § 7.2.16, supra.

852 See Cole v. Noonan & Lieberman, Ltd., 2005 WL 2848446 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 26, 2005); Wright v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 2000 WL 33216031 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 30, 1999) (collection agency allegedly misrepresented its ownership of debt and its authority to sue).

853 See FDCPA § 1692e(14). See § 7.2.14, supra.

854 See Pacheco v. Joseph McMahon Corp., 698 F. Supp. 2d 291 (D. Conn. 2010).

855 ValleCastro v. Tobin, Melien & Marohn, 2015 WL 6478412 (D. Conn. Oct. 27, 2015).

856 See FDCPA § 1692e(14). See § 7.2.14, supra.

857 See Bryan v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 3d 686 (W.D.N.C. 2021) (intentionally causing phone number to appear as "Unknown" on caller ID may violate §§ 1692e and 1692e(10)).

858 Krapf v. Collectors Training Inst. of Ill., Inc., 2010 WL 584020 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 16, 2010).

859 See Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16069 (D. Or. Sept. 2, 1999), later op. at 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000) (debt collector claimed he was multimillionaire and always collects his debts).

860 Basinger-Lopez v. Tracy Paul & Assoc., 2009 WL 1948832 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2009).

861 See Forsberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, LTD, 2004 WL 3510771 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 2004). See also Baker v. Citibank, 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998) ("[w]e have tried repeatedly to talk to you but [to] no avail" was misleading where collector called the wrong phone number).

862 Randle v. GC Services, L.P., 25 F. Supp. 2d 849 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

863 See Lake v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2015 WL 8770719 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 14, 2015); Stroud v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 4620482 (E.D. Mo. July 31, 2015).

864 See Spinella, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 21, 1990); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 807(10)-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

865 See Ransom v. Telecredit Serv. Corp., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22738 (D. Md. Feb. 5, 1992). But see Mebane v. GC Services L.P., 481 F. Supp. 2d 249 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (letter restricting payment to cashier's check or money order did not violate FDCPA, even if collector would accept personal check).

866 Reg. F § 1006.18(d). See § 7.2.10, supra.

867 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,829 (Nov. 30, 2020).

868 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1(i).

The second situation where a debt collector's use of social media can lead to deception is where a debt collector communicates privately with a third-party on a social media platform to obtain location information for the consumer. The Regulation F Official Interpretations state that a collector, in making such a third-party communication to seek location information, must communicate using a profile that accurately identifies the debt collector's individual name.[869] However, the employee may use an alias, if this complies with Regulation F, as set out at § 7.2.14.3, supra.[870]

In using social media to obtain location information, the debt collector also must comply with the other applicable Regulation F requirements for obtaining location information, such as those with respect to stating that the debt collector is confirming or correcting location information concerning the consumer and, only if expressly requested, identifying the name of the debt collector's employer.[871] The use of social media to obtain location information must also be viewable only by the person being contacted, and cannot be viewed on the social media by the general public or the person's social media contacts.[872]

7.4.3 Misrepresentations About Third-Party Contacts and Location Information

The FDCPA regulates a debt collector's third-party contacts, generally prohibiting them except when seeking information on the consumer's location.[873] Even seeking location information is regulated.[874]

Thus, sending a privacy statement to a consumer indicating that any information obtained can be shared with third parties is deceptive, even when the statement also states that it will do so to the extent allowed by law.[875] Courts also find actionable under FDCPA § 1692e threats to investigate the consumer's employment, because this suggests a threat of a prohibited third-party contact with the employer.[876]

Any threat to contact third parties contrary to the Act should be actionable under FDCPA § 1692e.[877] It can also be deceptive to pretend that a third-party contact is to obtain location information, where the real purpose of contacting the third party is to put pressure on the consumer to pay the debt.[878]

It can also be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to trick consumers into providing their telephone or other contact information. In one such instance, Western Union mailed debtors requesting them to call Western Union to confirm information to arrange delivery, and then forwarded to debt collectors the phone number they obtained.[879]

7.4.4 Misrepresentation As to Consumer's FDCPA Rights

FDCPA § 1692g provides certain rights for the consumer to obtain verification of a debt. While a collector's misconduct in this regard can violate FDCPA § 1692g,[880] misrepresentations of verification rights can also be deceptive in violation of section 1692e. A FDCPA § 1692e violation can be stated where the collector's validation notice omits that the consumer must write to the debt collector to obtain verification of the debt.[881] A validation notice can also violate FDCPA § 1692e where it is unclear what address the consumer should use to write to obtain verification.[882] A collection letter containing multiple addresses that does not specify to which address a consumer should send disputes may violate FDCPA § 1692e[883] unless the address is clearly designated within the context of the letter.[884] Where the collector presents evidence that the consumer could send a dispute to any of the addresses listed and such dispute would be properly processed, a court may nevertheless deny summary judgment for the collector in order to allow discovery to take place.[885]

869 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1(ii).

870 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1(ii).

871 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1(ii), referencing Reg. F § 1006.10.

872 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1(ii), referencing Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4).

873 See FDCPA § 1692c(b). See § 5.7, supra.

874 See FDCPA § 1692b. See § 5.2, supra.

875 Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009); Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2013) (privacy notice violated § 1692e since it stated that debt collector shares certain nonpublic information with third parties); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007).

876 Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988). See also §§ 7.2.11, supra.

877 See § 7.2.5.4.3, supra.

878 See Gearman v. Heldenbrand, 2015 WL 5255335 (D. Minn. Sept. 9, 2015).

879 Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998).

880 See Ch. 9, infra.

881 See Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016).

882 See Carbone v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2016 WL 8711197 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2016).

883 See Schmelczer v. Penn Credit Corp., 2021 WL 325982 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 1, 2021); Rhee v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 4188161 (D.N.J. July 21, 2020); Musarra v. Balanced Healthcare Receivables, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1166449 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2020); Zevon v. Balanced Healthcare Receivables, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4188040 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 7, 2020); Pinyuk v. CBE Group, Inc., 2019 WL 1900985, at *7 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019) ("The letter on its face contains three different addresses and it is unclear which one the defendant is urging the consumer to contact.").

884 See Rajkumar v. FBCS, INC., 2021 WL 949867 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2021); Leifer v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2020 WL 6507325 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 5, 2020); Kim v. Advanced Call Ctr. Techs., L.L.C., 2020 WL 5893964 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 5, 2020) (though letter did not formally define "this office," multiple signs pointed to conclusion that one of the addresses was defendant's office address for disputes); Kucur v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2020 WL 1821334 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 9, 2020); Park v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2019 WL 5895703 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 12, 2019); Saraci v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2019 WL 1062098 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2019).

885 Klein v. Transworld Sys. Inc., 2020 WL 5704715 (E.D.N.Y. July 9, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 5678034 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 24, 2020).

A communication can be deceptive where it conflicts with or overshadows verification rights. Examples include telling the consumer not to write to the collector[886] or a collector's statement that it need not provide information about a debt to an identity theft victim.[887] But not every collector demand for payment overshadows the consumer's right to demand verification of a debt.[888]

A consumer can always dispute a debt and this places certain obligations on the collector under the FDCPA. While a consumer has a limited period of time to request verification of a debt under FDCPA § 1692g, this does not foreclose the consumer from disputing a debt obligation after that time period. To represent that the consumer's dispute rights are limited in time can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[889] The same is the case with a collector communication stating that the consumer can only dispute a debt in writing,[890] or that the consumer must explain the basis of their dispute.[891]

Since the FDCPA gives consumer's rights to stop collection calls, it can be deceptive for a debt collector to claim it has the right to call the consumer no matter what.[892] Also deceptive is for a collector to misrepresent that the consumer has no rights under the FDCPA.[893]

7.4.5 Communications Where Format or Language Is Confusing

Even where a communication does not contain false or deceptive information, the manner of presenting the information can be so confusing or obscure as to present a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[894] "Confusing language in a dunning letter can have an intimidating effect by making the recipient feel that he is in over his head and had better pay up rather than question the demand for payment."[895] There can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation where a collection letter instructs the recipient to turn to the reverse side for important information, but the reverse side is blank,[896] or where a collection letter written in Spanish is sent to a non-Spanish speaker.[897]

7.4.6 Deception Related to Credit Reporting

FDCPA § 1692e(16) prohibits a debt collector from representing or implying that it operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency (CRA), as discussed at § 7.2.16, supra. FDCPA § 1692e(8) prohibits communicating or threatening to communicate to a CRA or to any other person credit information which is known or which should be known to be false, including the failure to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed.[898] This provision is examined at § 7.2.8, supra.

Even if the threatened communication to a CRA is not false, it can violate FDCPA § 1692e(5) for a collector to threaten to report a debt to a CRA when it has no intention of doing so.[899] Even if literally true, threats to report a debt to a CRA can be deceptive where they are confusing or misleading.[900]

A common misrepresentation actionable under FDCPA § 1692e is that payment will improve the consumer's credit rating when it will not.[901] This is certainly the case where, after a creditor has sent a debt to collection, neither it nor the debt collector subsequently furnishes payment information to a CRA.[902]

886 Vu v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 293 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

887 See Randall v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2358350 (D. Neb. July 23, 2009).

888 Zemeckis v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 679 F.3d 632 (7th Cir. 2012) (letter's insistent language and repeated threats of legal action were mere puffery and did not overshadow verification rights notice).

889 See Grant-Fletcher v. Brachfeld Law Group, P.C., 2012 WL 2523094 (D. Md. June 28, 2012); Velderman v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2005 WL 2405959 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 29, 2005). See also Nelson v. Select Fin. Services, Inc., 430 F. Supp. 2d 455 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (violating §§ 1692e and 1692e(10) where collector's letter falsely represented to plaintiff that her inaction "verified the validity" of debt).

890 Vetrano v. The CBE Grp., Inc., 2016 WL 4083384 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 1, 2016).

891 Mikolajczyk v. Universal Fid., L.P., 2017 WL 706301 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 22, 2017).

892 Toth v. Stephens and Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2014 WL 5687418 (D. Nev. Nov. 4, 2014).

893 Toth v. Stephens and Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2014 WL 5687418 (D. Nev. Nov. 4, 2014).

894 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009). See also Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., Inc., 869 F.2d 1222, 1226 (9th Cir. 1988); Coulter v. Receivables Mgmt. Sys., 367 F. Supp. 3d 307 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (letter misleadingly suggested that consumer could raise insurance-related dispute regarding debt by telephone); Adler v. Penn Credit Corp., 2020 WL 4474624 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 2020) (claim stated based on appearance of detachable coupon and lack of clear instructions in letter). But see Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 470, 473 (7th Cir. 2007) ("rule against trickery differs from a command to use plain English and write at a sixth-grade level"; latter is not required by FDCPA). Cf. § 9.6, infra. (discussing Regulation F's requirements for form of validation information and safe harbor for those using model validation notice).

895 Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009).

896 Papetti v. Rawlings Fin. Services, L.L.C., 121 F. Supp. 3d 340 (S.D.N.Y. 2015).

897 See Dykes v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 111 F. Supp. 3d 739 (E.D. Va. June 30, 2015).

898 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8).

899 See § 7.2.5.3.3, supra.

900 Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, Inc., 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (threat to report to credit bureau any debt left unpaid more than forty-five days from "date of placement," without any explanation of when account was so "placed," was confusing and misleading).

901 But see Franklin v. Nat'l Credit Audit Corp., 2018 WL 1155973 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 22, 2018) (no deception found where asserted that payment is "excellent opportunity" to improve credit score, as it only stated that there was chance score could improve).

902 See Fainbrun v. Southwest Credit Sys., L.P., 246 F.R.D. 128 (E.D.N.Y. 2007); CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores (July 10, 2013); Am. Express Centurion Consent Order, Am. Express Bank, FSB Consent Order, and Am. Express Travel Related Services Co. Consent Order (collectively "American Express Consent Orders"), Oct. 1, 2012, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov. See also Koller v. West Bay Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1189481, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 9, 2012) (while collectors would not report debt to CRA, statement that they would pursue "continued collection efforts" could be read by least sophisticated consumer "to include adverse credit reporting, as credit

Payment also is unlikely to improve a credit rating where a debt is so old (usually seven years) that pursuant to Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) requirements it is considered obsolete.[903] The CRA is no longer permitted to report negative information on that debt.[904] Similarly, while there may be no FDCPA § 1692e requirement that a collector disclose that obsolete debts will not be reported,[905] it can be deceptive to represent that a debt will stay on a consumer's credit report longer than allowed by the FCRA (such as by indicating the seven years started later than they actually did)[906] or to threaten to report an obsolete debt to a CRA.[907]

Due to the complexity and largely proprietary computation of credit scores, a collector may have no basis to claim that a payment on a debt already in collection will improve a credit score.[908] The same can be said about promises that payment will improve a consumer's credit, credit rating, or creditworthiness—so many factors are involved in a creditor's decision to offer credit (including payment history on other debts and the total debt outstanding) and such factors will vary by creditor. Thus, a collector will have no basis to promise that a consumer will become more creditworthy by making a payment on a debt already in collection.[909]

Promises to completely remove a debt from the consumer's credit report may also be deceptive. Even if a debt is no longer past due, the credit report will still include the information that the debt had been past due and was in collection status, and this can seriously impact a consumer's credit rating.[910] While it may be accurate to say that payment will remove the current status of the debt as in default, it will not remove all indication of the default from a consumer's credit reports unless the collector acts to have the tradeline deleted entirely.

7.4.7 Deceptive Offers to Settle the Debt

7.4.7.1 Generally

A common debt collector practice is to seek payment by offering the consumer to settle for less than the full amount if the consumer makes one payment for the settlement amount, or starts a series of payments pursuant to the settlement, or just agrees to the settlement terms. Offers to settle a time-barred debt and use of such settlements to revive a time-barred debt are discussed at § 7.4.9, infra.

It can be deceptive for a collector to make a settlement offer without disclosing its true cost, such as that interest will continue to accrue while the consumer makes a series of payments under the settlement.[911] A court found deceptive a settlement offer that contained an open-ended clause providing for the payments to increase at a future date.[912] A court found misleading a collection letter stating that the consumer would not lose her FDCPA § 1692g dispute rights if she did not accept the settlement offer, but not explicitly describing what her FDCPA § 1692g dispute rights would be if she did accept the offer.[913]

The failure of the creditor and its collection agency to honor their settlement agreement states a FDCPA § 1692e claim.[914] A collector's misrepresentation of their authority to compromise and settle their creditor client's claim is also actionable.[915]

On the other hand, a FDCPA § 1692e claim was rejected where a collection letter congratulated the consumer on being "pre-approved for a discount program designed to save you money," invited the consumer to act now to "put this debt behind you," gave two discounted payment options, and indicated that the consumer can save an amount certain by taking advantage of the offers. The Seventh Circuit held that the meaning of the letter was clear that, if the consumer took reporting is one of the most commonly taken steps in debt collection efforts," thus violating § 1692e).

903 See 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(a)(4); National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 5.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

904 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011); CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores (July 10, 2013).

905 Monroe v. Miramed Med. Grp., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4558007 (M.D. Pa. Oct. 12, 2017); Olsen v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4248009 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 11, 2016).

906 See Cobb v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 4433579 (M.D. La. Sept. 21, 2011) (stated debt would stay on credit report until at least 2010, when debt could no longer appear on credit report after 2008); Creighton v. Emporia Credit Serv., Inc., 981 F. Supp. 411 (E.D. Va. 1997) (seven years from date of collection letter).

907 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011); Slick v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2014 WL 4100416 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2014).

908 CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores (July 10, 2013).

909 Dauval v. Preferred Collection and Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 5928622 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 26, 2012); Nielsen v. United Creditors Alliance Corp., 1999 WL 674740 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 19, 1999) (settlement of debt would not "repair" one's credit); CFPB, Bulletin 2013-8: Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores (July 10, 2013). But see Burgess v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 726 Fed. Appx. 622 (9th Cir. 2018) (noting that there conceivably could be benefit to consumer's credit rating in paying on debt that is not obsolete).

910 See Elzaghal v. Ray Klein, Inc., 2012 WL 4863704 (D. Or. Oct. 11, 2012); White v. Fin. Credit Corp., 2000 WL 816783 (N.D. Ill. June 21, 2000) (granting class certification, because original delinquency would continue adversely to affect debtor's credit rating).

911 Watson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 2527295 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2019) (unclear whether interest and fees would accrue); Marucci v. Cawley & Bergmann, L.L.P., 66 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2014). See also Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 13027349 (D. Conn. Aug. 13, 2012) (letter violated § 1692e where interest accrued on daily basis while settlement offer was open).

912 See Dixon v. Law Office of J. Scott Watson P.C., 2018 WL 705032 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 5, 2018).

913 See Anderson v. Capio Partners, L.L.C., 2021 WL 279612, at *5 (W.D. Va. Jan. 26, 2021) ("the least sophisticated consumer may reasonably believe that she may have no dispute rights if she accepts the settlement because Capio did not describe her dispute rights if she were to accept the settlement").

914 Russo v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 2014 WL 7140498 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 12, 2014) (final payment refused and demand made for original full balance); Figueroa v. Law Offices of Patenaude & Felix, 2014 WL 12597118 (C.D. Cal. May 30, 2014) (collection attorneys filed suit without waiting for consumer's timely payment).

915 See Duell v. First Nat'l Bank of Omaha, 2015 WL 4602008 (S.D. Cal. July 29, 2015).

advantage of one of the discounted payoff options, he would be rid of the debt. "A consumer who interpreted the letter to mean that the debt could survive the payoff and be sold to another debt collector either would be misreading the words or engaging in a flight of fancy."[916]

Sometimes, contrary to a settlement agreement, a different debt collection agency or a debt buyer will pursue collection, and then it may be unclear who is at fault—the original collector for not notifying the subsequent collector of the settlement or the subsequent collector for pursuing a debt which it should have known was settled.[917] The most prudent course may be to bring both collectors into the FDCPA claim.

Offers for settlement may imply that acceptance of the settlement will not harm a credit score or may even improve it. Such a deceptive representation was found where the collector's settlement offer stated "If you pay less than your full balance, we will report your account as Paid in Full for less than the full balance,"[918] implying that this will be a positive report. Other misrepresentations regarding the impact of a settlement on a consumer's credit rating are examined at § 7.4.6, supra.

7.4.7.2 Limited One-Time Offers to Settle

There is a tension when a debt collector makes a settlement offer. On the one hand, it is a FDCPA § 1692e violation to represent that a settlement offer to reduce the debt amount is a final offer, or that it is a one-time offer or must be accepted in a fixed time period, when that is not the case.[919] On the other hand, one cannot expect a debt collector to make an offer but also say that, if the consumer turns it down, the collector will offer the consumer a better deal.[920] The Seventh Circuit suggests that an offer not be considered as deceptively implying it is a final or one-time offer if the collector merely states "We are not obligated to renew this offer."[921] Even if this safe harbor language does not appear in the letter, there is no violation if the letter does not represent that no future settlement offers will be available or that it is the only opportunity to settle the debt.[922]

Where the collector said it was authorized to offer a reduced amount, but the offer is only valid for a fixed number of days, it is a question of fact whether the offer implied falsely that it was a final offer.[923] It can be deceptive for a collector to require the consumer to act promptly to accept an offer, when the collector does not define promptly, and it is willing to accept the offer for some extended time.[924]

But a court found not deceptive an offer "at this time" of a specific amount for a certain number of days, where the collector might make another offer in the future.[925] Also not deceptive is an offer that must be accepted within a certain number of days, otherwise accruing interest will require a higher settlement amount after that time,[926] or an offer that does not 916 Preston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 948 F.3d 772, 787 (7th Cir. 2020). See also Cosio v. AFNI Inc., 2020 WL 836546 (D. Ariz. Feb. 20, 2020) (offer stating that payment of discounted amount would result in account being "closed and marked settled in full" was not internally inconsistent or materially misleading, since it was "unreasonable" for consumer to interpret to equate term "settled in full" with "paid in full").

917 Cf. Brunett v. Vital Recovery Services L.L.C., 2018 WL 3104441, at *4 (E.D. Wis. June 22, 2018) ("Defendant cannot be held liable because someone else may, at some unspecified time, unearth a record of Plaintiff's debt and fraudulently seek to collect it.").

918 Knight v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 755 Fed. Appx. 170 (3d Cir. Nov. 8, 2018), on remand, 2019 WL 1516941 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2019) (denying summary judgment for defendant since statement "We can't change the past, but we can help with the future" implies consumer could improve her credit score by paying debt; granting class certification). But see Dotson v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 828 Fed. Appx. 150 154 (3d Cir. 2020) (rejecting as "speculation" argument that least sophisticated consumer may be misled into paying full amount based on mistaken belief that creditor would deny credit or offer less favorable terms in future if consumer did not pay full amount, or that paying in full would improve consumer's creditworthiness).

919 Goswami v. American Collections Enter., Inc.,377 F.3d 488 (5th Cir. 2004); Buzoiu v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 22938052 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 15, 2003); Pleasant v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 164227 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 23, 2003).

920 See DeKoven v. Plaza Assoc., 599 F.3d 578 (7th Cir. 2010). See also King v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2003 WL 21780973 (E.D. Pa. July 31, 2003) (consumer would understand first offer as settlement position that could be renewed).

921 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc.,505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007). See, e.g., Schmeling v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2020 WL 6382676 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 30, 2020) (safe harbor language did not violate FDCPA, even though more beneficial offers were extended later); Duarte v. Client Services, 2019 WL 1425734, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2019) ("An unsophisticated consumer is protected from receiving false impressions of their options when safe harbor language is included in a settlement offer."); Preston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4205420 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 4, 2018) (followed Evory), aff'd in part, rejected in part, 948 F.3d 772 (7th Cir. 2020); Bass v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 4005199 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2018) (citing Evory, finding that settlement letters did not violate §§ 1692e or 1692f where each contained "safe harbor" notice of "We are not obligated to renew this offer."); Kryluk v. Northland Group, Inc., 2014 WL 6676728 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 25, 2014) (no violation where safe harbor used).

922 Nagan v. Optio Solutions, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5061838 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 27, 2020) (letter represented amount that defendant was willing to settle for and included invitation to discuss debt).

923 See DeKoven v. Plaza Assoc., 599 F.3d 578 (7th Cir. 2010) (consumers did not present adequate surveys to show deception); Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007). See also Pettaway v. National Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 955 F.3d 299 (2d Cir. 2020) (least sophisticated consumer would not be misled to believe that payment of settlement by date specified was only opportunity to settle debt, since letter explained how consumer could negotiate settlement online).

924 Al v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2018 WL 1972486 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 26, 2018).

925 See Gully v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 3486815 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 1, 2006). See also Waters v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 1344452 (D. Mass. Mar. 4, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1344544 (D. Mass. Mar. 22, 2011); Callanta v. GC Services, 2006 WL 1072028 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 21, 2006) (did not state that offer was effective "only" in that time frame); Kiliszek v. Nelson, Watson, & Assoc., L.L.C., 2006 WL 335788 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 14, 2006) (deadline did not imply that offer was one-time offer).

926 Jackson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 445 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (N.D. Ill. 2006). See also Golubeva v. GC Services L.P., 767 F. Supp. 2d 369 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

require a response within any set period of time and does not state it is a final offer.[927]

7.4.7.3 Representations Regarding Tax Consequences of Forgiven Debt

Forgiven debt may be taxable income to the consumer. For amounts forgiven of $600 or over, an IRS Form 1099-C must be sent to both the consumer and the IRS.[928] The amount reported on the 1099-C form does not include that portion of the forgiven debt that was incurred as interest or fees, but relates only to forgiven amounts of the loan principal. In many cases, the consumer need not treat even the amount of the forgiven principal balance as taxable income, such as where the consumer is insolvent (debts exceed assets), in bankruptcy, or where the debt is disputed.[929]

It is deceptive for a collector to state categorically that a consumer will have to pay taxes on any amount forgiven as part of a debt settlement. It is also deceptive to indicate that a Form 1099-C will be sent for the forgiven debt where the form will not be sent if the principal amount (not including interest) forgiven is under $600.[930]

On the other hand, in Dunbar v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., the Seventh Circuit found not deceptive a statement that "this settlement may have tax consequences."[931] But the Seventh Circuit also found that a letter's 1099-C clause stating that settling a debt for less than the balance owed may have tax consequences and that the creditor "may" file a 1099-C form could violate the FDCPA. The court explained that information about filing a 1099-C form is information within the knowledge of the creditor: "This makes the 1099C Clause materially different than the tax consequences clause at issue in Dunbar. Only the debtor knows whether, given their financial situation as a whole, they will have to pay taxes on the forgiven debt. The creditor, however, knows whether it will have to file a 1099-C form or not."[932]

The Second Circuit has found that it is not deceptive for a collector to fail to disclose to the consumer that a settlement may have tax consequences.[933]

7.4.8 Student Loans

FDCPA violations involving student loans are also detailed in another NCLC's treatise, Student Loan Law, at § 14.2.3. Although generally not dischargeable in bankruptcy, federal student loans offer a number of special rights to discharge or restructure a student loan obligation, including closed school, false certification, disability, and bankruptcy discharges.[934] Thus, it can be deceptive for a student loan collector to indicate that a student is ineligible for a discharge where that is not the case. While the right to a bankruptcy discharge is limited, it is a FDCPA § 1692e violation to represent that the discharge is impossible.[935]

---

927 See Pescatrice v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2006 WL 8432179 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 18, 2006). See also Kubert v. Aid Assoc., 2006 WL 328239 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2006) (offer could not be reasonably interpreted to be limited time).

928 26 C.F.R. § 1.6050P-1(a). See § 11.14.2.6, infra.

929 Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C. §§ 61(a)(12), 108.

930 Saroza v. LTD Fin. Services, L.P., 2018 WL 4204443, at *3 (D.N.J. Sept. 4, 2018) ("[A] reasonable finder of fact could find that Defendant's language would be confusing to the least sophisticated debtor. This is because nowhere within Defendant's letter is there mention of the $600 IRS threshold."); Konyo v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2018 WL 1420494 (D.N.J. Mar. 22, 2018) (mention of filing of 1099C makes no mention of exceptions for amounts under $600 or for interest and fees); Disla v. Northstar Location Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2799691 (D.N.J. June 27, 2017); Carlvin v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 635151 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2017); Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 226 F. Supp. 3d 131 (E.D.N.Y. 2016); Foster v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 1719824 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 28, 2016); Kaff v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2015 WL 12660327 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015) (mentioned exclusion for under $600, but did not mention exception for forgiven interest payments); Good v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 55 F. Supp. 3d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (mentioned exclusion for under $600, but did not mention exception for forgiven interest payments). But see Garretson v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 2018 WL 1659477 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 3, 2018) (no deception where said may have to issue 1099-C if forgiven debt is over $600 and told to consult tax expert); Moses v. LTD Fin. Services I, Inc., 2017 WL 3421531 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 9, 2017) ("You will receive a copy of the Form 1099-C if one is required to be filed with the IRS" not deceptive where was possible that forgiven principal could be $600); Elmore v. Northeast Fla. Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 4480419 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2011) (no violation where debt collector said it "may" file form 1099-C).

931 896 F.3d 762 (7th Cir. 2018). See also Ward v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 3604093, at *4 (D.N.J. July 2, 2020) (permissive language used in collection letter did not create "deceptive scenario" in which least sophisticated consumer "would equate a statement that there may be tax consequences with a statement that there will be tax consequences and that a tax form issue"); Simins v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2066574 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 29, 2020); Church v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 1383231 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2018); Ceban v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2018 WL 451637 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 17, 2018); Antista v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 259771 (D.N.J. Jan. 2, 2018) (settlement offer "may have tax consequences" not deceptive); Rhein v. Forster, Garbus & Garbus, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4969335 (D.N.J. Nov. 1, 2017); Smith v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 2345600 (S.D. Ill. May 30, 2017).

932 Heredia v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 942 F.3d 811, 815–816 (7th Cir. 2019). See also Leonard v. Capital Mgmt. Services, 364 F. Supp. 3d 198, 203 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (statement that creditor "may" file a 1099-C form could be misleading or deceptive: "One reasonable interpretation of the use of the word 'may' in the 1099-C clause is that, upon the debtor's acceptance of the settlement offer and settling the debt for less than the total due, CMS or Discover might choose to report the cancelled debt to the IRS, and the debtor might face adverse tax consequences. Interpreted in that fashion, the statement is false.").

933 Altman v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 786 F.3d 191 (2d Cir. 2015). See also Simins v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2066574 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 29, 2020); Smith v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 1194494, at *3 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 30, 2017); Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2015 WL 3823654 (S.D. Tex. June 18, 2015), rev'd on other grounds, Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 836 F.3d 507, 512 (5th Cir. 2016); Landes v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 774 F. Supp. 2d 800 (E.D. Va. 2011); Schaefer v. ARM Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 2847768 (D. Mass. July 19, 2011).

934 See National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

935 Easterling v. Collecto, Inc., 692 F.3d 229 (2d Cir. 2012).

Federal law also provides a right to rehabilitate a student loan after default, and it can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to misrepresent that right.[936] Where federal law allowed student loan borrowers to make reasonable and affordable payments and avoid certain harsh student loan collection remedies, it was deceptive for a collector to fail to offer that option to a borrower.[937]

Defaulted federal student loans can lead to a unique administrative wage garnishment not dependent on a court judgment. However, certain hearing rights and the ability to enter into plans to avoid the garnishment accompany this remedy. It is deceptive to misrepresent those rights.[938]

Student loans offer other special collection remedies. But it can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to claim remedies that are not available, such as the ability to withhold the student's school transcripts after the loan is discharged in bankruptcy.[939] Similarly deceptive is a claim that a student's grades and diploma could be cancelled for non-payment of a loan to the school.[940]

7.4.9 Unfair and Deceptive Practices Involving Time-Barred Debts

7.4.9.1 Generally

This section considers violations both of FDCPA § 1692e (deception) and § 1692f (unfairness) concerning a debt collector collecting on, threatening to sue on, or suing on time-barred debts. Additional court cases involving these issues are summarized in Appx. E.2.4.17, infra.

Litigants should not jump too quickly to a conclusion that a debt is or is not time-barred. Whether a statute of limitations on a debt has run often requires a determination of which state's law will apply (choice of law), the applicable limitations period among the different statutes of limitations in that state, whether the limitations period has been tolled or revived, and when the limitations period began to run on a debt. These issues are examined in detail in another NCLC treatise,[941] but briefly summarized at § 7.4.9.2, infra. Understanding these issues often is an essential first step in determining whether a FDCPA claim is available.

7.4.9.2 Statute of Limitations Law in Three Paragraphs

The determination of the statute of limitations that applies to the collection of a consumer debt may be a complicated legal question. The various considerations are discussed comprehensively in NCLC's Collection Actions,[942] and are summarized in the next three paragraphs.

With rare exceptions (such as federal student loans),[943] the applicable limitations period will be determined by state, not federal, law. Where a collection lawsuit is based on a contract that includes a choice of law provision, states differ as to whether the applicable statute of limitations is provided by the state chosen in the contract, the forum state, or the state with the shortest limitations period.[944] A state "borrowing" statute may also affect the state whose limitations period applies, and may allow the shorter of the limitations period of the consumer's home state and that of the creditor.[945]

A state typically has different limitations periods that apply to different causes of action, such as limitation periods for written contracts, non-written contracts, credit sales, enforcement of a note, quantum meruit, and the like.[946] Questions may arise as to the applicable limitations period for certain transactions—for example, for a credit card debt, utility service debt, or a deficiency action on a motor vehicle credit sale.[947]

Questions also may arise as to when a limitations period begins to run, such as for credit card debt—e.g., when the first payment is missed, the last payment is made, or when the debt is accelerated.[948] Partial payment, acknowledgment of the debt, bankruptcy, moving out of state, military service, or other actions may either temporarily pause the 936 Ellis v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 274 F.R.D. 53 (D. Conn. 2011) (claiming must make nine consecutive monthly payments when only had to make nine out of ten). See also Alexander v. Coast Prof'l Inc., 2016 WL 972793 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 7, 2016) (following class certification in this case in which collection agency allegedly did not properly calculate reasonable and affordable rehabilitation payment on defaulted FFEL Program loans or Direct Loans, court approved class settlement); Stinson v. Delta Mgmt. Assoc., Inc., 302 F.R.D. 160 (S.D. Ohio 2014) (approving class settlement in case alleging collection letters contained false or misleading information about loan rehabilitation).

937 Arroyo v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2001 WL 1590520 (E.D.N.Y. July 19, 2001).

938 Kort v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 2001 WL 881449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2001) (misrepresentations as to time period and nature of presentation of consumer defenses to administrative wage garnishment). Lawson v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 1997 WL 283027 (N.D. Ill. May 15, 1997) (misrepresentation that debtor could not request hearing).

939 Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987) (misrepresentation of legal right to withhold school transcript from former state school student after loan discharged in bankruptcy and collector's false representation of legal obligation to withhold transcripts from delinquent graduates).

940 United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

941 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

942 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

943 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.2.1 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

944 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

945 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.3.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

946 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.4.1 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

947 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

948 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.7 (5th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

running of the limitations period or re-start it from the beginning.[949]

7.4.9.3 Suits on Time-Barred Debts

Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), numerous courts had concluded that suing on a time-barred debt violated FDCPA § 1692e (deception) or § 1692f (unfairness).[950] Regulation F codified this, providing that, "[a] debt collector must not bring or threaten to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt."[951]

Regulation F defines "time-barred debt" as "a debt for which the applicable statute of limitations has expired"[952] and "statute of limitations" as "the period prescribed by applicable law for bringing a legal action against the consumer to collect a debt."[953]

The provision applies to collectors bringing or threatening to bring a "legal action," not just a "lawsuit."[954] The only exception from this prohibition is for proofs of claim in the consumer's bankruptcy, as examined at § 7.4.9.5, infra. The Regulation F supplemental information explains that, "[t]he Bureau does not see a basis to categorically exclude other types of legal actions, such as garnishment and probate actions, from the prohibitions in [Reg. F] § 1006.26(b)."[955]

The Regulation F supplemental information makes clear "a debt collector may violate final [Reg. F] § 1006.26(b) even if the debt collector neither knew nor should have known that a debt was time barred."[956] "The Bureau is not finalizing the proposed knows-or-should-know standard and is instead finalizing a strict liability standard."[957] In addition, "threatening to bring a legal action to collect a time-barred debt is a deceptive practice under FDCPA section 807 [§ 1692e] even if expiration of the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense rather than a categorical bar to suit."[958]

Prior to Regulation F's effective date, some courts found that the bona fide error defense was available in certain cases alleging that the collector filed suit on a time-barred debt,[959] or otherwise found no violation of the FDCPA where state law was not clear as to whether a lawsuit is time-barred and the collector filed the lawsuit in good faith.[960] The Regulation F supplemental information notes that "a debt collector who brings or threatens to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt may [have a bona fide error defense], depending upon the reason for the debt collector's error."[961] The bona fide error defense is discussed in detail at § 12.2, infra.

A collection action can in some instances raise multiple legal claims relating to the same debt, and each claim may have a different limitations period.[962] The Regulation F supplemental information makes clear that, in that situation, one legal claim may not violate Regulation F, while another time-barred claim would lead to a violation.[963]

Suing on a time-barred debt as well as seeking admissions that would undermine the consumer's ability to raise the

949 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.8 (5th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

950 Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127 (9th Cir. 2021); Crawford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 758 F.3d 1254 (11th Cir. 2014); Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 736 F.3d 1076 (7th Cir. 2013); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (rejecting bona fide error defense raised by debt collector that had sued on time-barred debt in violation of FDCPA); Deangelo v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 3468061 (D.N.J. June. 25, 2020) (debt buyer initiated garnishment on default judgment in action that state court subsequently dismissed on merits as time-barred); Bright v. Bergstrom Law, Ltd., 2018 WL 3469011 (D. Nev. July 18, 2018) (law firm misrepresented in state court that student loan agreement was executed in 2016 when, in fact, it was executed in 2001 or 2002); Ferrell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2450615 (N.D. Ala. May 22, 2015); Puffinberger v. Commercion, L.L.C., 2014 WL 120596 (D. Md. Jan. 10, 2014); Sierra v. Rubin & Debski, P.A., 2010 WL 4384216 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 28, 2010); Thompson v. D.A.N. Joint Venture III, L.P., 2007 WL 1625926 (M.D. Ala. June 5, 2007); Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480, 1487 (M.D. Ala. 1987). See also Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2017); In re Dubois, 834 F.3d 522, 527 (4th Cir. 2016); Masters v. Harrison & Johnston P.L.C., 2018 WL 988097 (W.D. Va. Feb. 20, 2018); Appx. E.2.4.17, infra. But see Ordinario v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 852843 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 4, 2016) (where consumer made appearance in collection lawsuit and did not raise statute of limitations defense, consumer waived that claim in subsequent FDCPA litigation).

951 Reg. F § 1006.26(b).

952 Reg. F § 1006.26(a)(2).

953 Reg. F § 1006.26(a)(1).

954 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5781 (Jan. 19, 2021).

955 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5781 (Jan. 19, 2021).

956 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5777 (Jan. 19, 2021).

957 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5781 (Jan. 19, 2021).

958 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5779 (Jan. 19, 2021).

959 See Abdollahzadeh v. Mandarich Law Grp. L.L.P., 922 F.3d 810 (7th Cir. 2019) (bona fide error defense protected collector charged with attempting to collect time-barred debt that relied on data provided by its client which did not identify that debtor's last attempt at payment was reversed and final payment to clear was prior year); Gray v. Suttell & Assoc., 123 F. Supp. 3d 1283 (E.D. Wash. 2015) ("bona fide error defense may be available in a case alleging defendants filed suit outside the applicable statute of limitations where the applicable limitations period has not been provided by the state legislature or resolved by the state courts"); Hare v. Hosto and Buchan, P.L.L.C., 774 F. Supp. 2d 849 (S.D. Tex. 2011); Krawczyk v. Centurion Capital Corp., 2009 WL 395458 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 18, 2009); Simmons v. Miller, 970 F. Supp. 661 (S.D. Ind. 1997). See also Kaiser v. Cascade Cap., L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1140 (9th Cir. 2021) ("mistakes about the time-barred status of a debt can be bona fide errors"; treating mistake about whether a debt is time-barred as a mistake of fact). But see McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (no bona fide error defense where reliance on creditor's representation was unreasonable); Pettitt v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 419 F. Supp. 3d 627 (distinguishing Abdollahzadeh where, in this case, collector relied on communication from creditor, rather than on account information itself).

960 See Sprayberry v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 1109388 (D. Or. Jan. 28, 2021) ("PRA did not make a mistake of law about the applicable statute of limitations, but rather the applicable statute of limitations was unknowable."). But see Diaz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2012 WL 1882976 (E.D.N.Y. May 24, 2012) (fact that state has not ruled on applicable statute of limitations was no defense for collector where applicable statutes are clear on their face that lawsuit was time-barred).

961 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5777 (Jan. 19, 2021).

962 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

963 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5777 (Jan. 19, 2021).

statute of limitations as a defense has been found abusive and unfair[964] and were among the activities leading to a large verdict for the consumer in the Ninth Circuit case McCollough v. Johnson.[965]

7.4.9.4 Threats to Sue on Time-Barred Debts

Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), courts consistently found FDCPA § 1692e violations where a collector threatens to sue on time-barred debt.[966] FDCPA § 1692e(5) prohibits "the threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken" and suing on a time-barred debt is an action that cannot be legally taken.[967] The practice should also violate FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) (debt's legal status) and § 1692e(10) (deception) because, by threatening, the collector "implicitly represented that it could recover in a lawsuit, when in fact it cannot properly do so."[968]

Regulation F codified this, providing that, "[a] debt collector must not bring or threaten to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt."[969] Suits on time-barred debts and content relevant to both suits and threats of suits are discussed at § 7.4.9.3, supra.

The Regulation F supplemental information states that the prohibition applies to both explicit and implicit threats of legal action on time-barred debts.[970] Prior to Regulation F, courts have similarly held that a veiled threat of litigation on a time-barred claim may also be deceptive,[971] although merely seeking collection on a time-barred debt is not a threat to sue on the debt.[972]

7.4.9.5 Time-Barred Proofs of Claim in Bankruptcy Cases

In Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson,[973] the Supreme Court held that a debt buyer's proof of claim in a chapter 13 bankruptcy case on an obviously time-barred debt was not "false" or "deceptive" in violation of FDCPA § 1692e or unfair under FDCPA § 1692f. The debt collector, Midland Funding, filed a proof of claim that stated the last time that any charge appeared on Johnson's account was in May 2003, well beyond the six-year Alabama statute of limitations. On its face, the proof of claim indicated that the limitations period had run. The court found that the debt still constituted a "claim" or "right to payment" under the Bankruptcy Code because, under the relevant Alabama law, as it is in almost all states, the statute of limitations does not extinguish a debt, but only 964 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 610 F. Supp. 2d 1247 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (debt collector sued on time-barred debt; requested for admission from pro se consumer that payment was made when debt collector's records showed it was not in order to extend statute of limitat ons).

965 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 645 F. Supp. 2d 917 (D. Mont. June 3, 2009) (jury awarded consumer $250,000 in compensatory damages, $1000 in FDCPA statutory damages, and $60,000 in state law punitive damages and court awarded attorney fees in full amount requested of over $93,000 commenting, inter alia, that litigation "confers a meaningful public benefit by discouraging illegal debt collection" in state), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

966 See Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Mgmt., 641 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 2011) (per curiam) (whether there is FDCPA violation turns on whether collection letter threatens litigation); Castro v. Collecto, Inc., 634 F.3d 779 (5th Cir. 2011) (while threatening to sue on time-barred debt can violate FDCPA, debt in this case was within state statute of limitations and shorter FCC statute did not apply); Reyes v. Manchester Gardens Condo., 2020 WL 3791964 (D. Md. July. 7, 2020) (plausible § 1692e(5) claim based on debt collector's threat to file statement of lien that included allegedly time-barred homeowners' association dues); Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017); Cortes-Goolcharran v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 2018 WL 3748154 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 2018); Todorov v. Easy Loans Corp., 2014 WL 2803423 (D. Nev. June 19, 2014); Puffinberger v. Commercion, L.L.C., 2014 WL 120596 (D. Md. Jan. 10, 2014); Janti v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3058260 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2010). See also Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2017) (while not facts of this case, it is settled law that such threat is violation). But see Swann v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6198997 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 28, 2018) (while threatening to sue on time-barred debt is deceptive, not violation to seek to resolve time-barred debt while disclosing that would not be sued on debt).

967 See e.g. Larsen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 533 F. Supp. 2d 290 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

968 Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480, 1489 (M.D. Ala. 1987). See also Janti v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3058260 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2010).

969 Reg. F § 1006.26(b) (emphasis added).

970 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5781, 5782 (Jan. 19, 2021).

971 See Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1271–1272 (11th Cir. 2019) (concluding that "with regard to a collection letter seeking payment on a time-barred debt, an express threat of litigation is not required to state a claim for relief under § 1692e so long as one can reasonably infer an implicit threat"; here, letter's offer to "resolve" time-barred debt, together with deadline to accept reduced-payment offer and warning that offer might not be renewed if payment was not timely made, language "taken in its entirety, could plausibly deceive or mislead an unsophisticated consumer as to the legal status of the debt, even in the absence of an express threat of litigation"); Karr v. Med-I Solutions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1870928 (S.D. Ind. May 7, 2014) (granting consumer summary judgment where showed that collector referenced "possible" legal action and stated that debt collector "could" take the consumer to court); Crawford v. Vision Fin. Corp., 2012 WL 5383280 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 1, 2012) (claim stated where collector mentioned "further financial liability," but not where collector offered to "settle").

972 Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Mgmt., 641 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 2011). See also Rozario v. Admin Recovery, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4188131, at *3 (D.N.J. July 21, 2020) (letter's use of offering to "close this account" did not qualify as legal threat, nor did it convey a false sense of urgency that may mislead consumer into believing debt was still enforceable; "The letter explicitly refers to Plaintiff's debt collection account and states that a partial payment will lead to the closure of that particular account. Defendants merely offered Plaintiff the opportunity to make a partial payment to resolve the debt."); Solis v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 2523047 (E.D.N.Y. May 15, 2020) (letter did not have any language that least sophisticated consumer could plausibly interpret as a settlement offer, demand for payment, or threat of litigation); Plumb v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2020 WL 2476752, at *9 (D. Alaska. May 13, 2020) (although letter did not include disclaimer indicating that debt was time-barred or any language indicating that collection agency "will not sue," nothing falsely implied that debt was enforceable in court or that agency could bring legal action where letter contained "little beyond the debtor's balance and means of payment").

973 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

offers an affirmative defense to a collection lawsuit. The court concluded that "there is nothing misleading or deceptive in the filing of a proof of claim that follows the Code's similar system"[974] of allowing an objection to the proof of claim.

In addition, the court found that the filing of the proof of claim was neither misleading nor unfair, because the chapter 13 trustee "must examine proofs of claim and, where appropriate, pose an objection,"[975] including on the basis that the debt was time-barred.

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) generally follows Midland and provides that the prohibition on a debt collector bringing or threatening to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt "does not apply to proofs of claim filed in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding."[976]

Neither Midland nor Regulation F address a proof of claim on an extinguished debt. Under state law in Mississippi, North Carolina (for debts owned by a debt buyer), and Wisconsin,[977] the running of the limitations period also extinguishes the legal right to collect as well as the legal remedy.[978] Where a time-barred debt is extinguished, a debt collector who files a time-barred proof of claim still risks FDCPA liability because the collector is not only seeking payment where a lawsuit would be time-barred, but also seeking payment on a debt that is no longer owed.[979] However, filing a proof of claim on a time-barred, extinguished debt still does not violate Reg. F § 1006.26(b) because of the specific exception for proofs of claim.

Neither Midland nor Regulation F address what happens when a debt collector files a proof of claim that is not obviously time-barred and contains misleading, deceptive, or false information related to the statute of limitations. The principal rationale behind the ruling in Midland Funding was that the claims allowance process prescribed by the bankruptcy court rules gave debtors and trustees an adequate opportunity to object to a proof of claim as time-barred. Even if it does not violate Reg. F § 1006.26(b), such a proof of claim may violate provisions in the FDCPA such as sections 1692e or 1692f that prohibit false, misleading, unfair and deceptive practices and make no exception for bankruptcy proofs of claim.

Courts applying the FDCPA to systemic practices have recognized this distinction. In In re Thomas,[980] the court held that a debt collector violated the FDCPA by engaging in a systemic practice of filing proofs of claim falsely reporting that the claim amounts were entirely principal when they also included interest, fees, and costs. By doing this, Midland avoided having to itemize these items in the Rule 3001 form and debtors were not aware of the amount of interest, fees, and costs they were being charged. The practice was designed to deter debtors from objecting to proofs of claim. According to the court, a mere failure to comply with Bankruptcy Rule 3001 might not trigger an FDCPA violation, but the misrepresentations calculated to frustrate use of the claims objection process amounted to distinct violations of the FDCPA under sections 1692e and 1692f. A similar rationale should apply to intentional, systemic misrepresentations of information related to the time-barred status of proofs of claim.

7.4.9.6 Deceptive Collection Contacts Related to Time-Barred Debts

7.4.9.6.1 Introduction

The statute of limitations is a defense to a lawsuit on a debt, but, except in Mississippi, Wisconsin, and, for debts owned by a debt buyer, North Carolina,[981] it does not extinguish the debt.[982] For that reason, it is not always deceptive to seek voluntary payment on a time-barred debt. There may be no FDCPA § 1692e violation as long as the collector does not imply that the debt can be legally enforced or otherwise engages in deception.[983] Where a time-barred debt is not obsolete under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (seven years old), there conceivably could be a benefit to the consumer's credit rating in paying on such a debt.[984]

Unlike other states, the running of the applicable limitations period under Mississippi, North Carolina (for debts owned by debt buyers), and Wisconsin law extinguishes the debt.[985] Thus, it is deceptive to collect or attempt to collect on a time-barred debt from a consumer where the debt has been extinguished under one of these state laws.[986]

In other states, collectors seek payment on time-barred debt at their own risk because such contacts can be deceptive in a number of ways. It is deceptive to even imply that a time-barred debt is legally enforceable, such as by making offers to 974 Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. at 1412, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

975 Id. At 1413.

976 Reg. F § 1006.26(b).

977 Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-3(1); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(4) (debts owned by debt buyers); Wis. Stat. § 893.05.

978 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 11.3.9.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

979 See, e.g., §§ 7.2.2.3, 7.2.5, 7.2.10, supra. But see In re Martin, 617 B.R. 866, 878 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2020) (no FDCPA violation even though state law extinguishes debt).

980 2020 WL 6703166 (Bankr. W.D. W. Va. 2020).

981 Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-3(1); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(4) (debts owned by debt buyers); Wis. Stat. § 893.05.

982 See Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Mgmt., 641 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 2011).

983 Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Mgmt., 641 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 2011); Freyermuth v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 248 F.3d 767 (8th Cir. 2001); Donaldson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 97 F. Supp. 3d 1033 (S.D. Ind. 2015); Haynes v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2015 WL 429800 (D. Neb. Feb. 2, 2015); Price v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 2014 WL 2930723 (E.D.N.C. June 27, 2014); Johns v. Northland Group, Inc., 76 F. Supp. 3d 590 (E.D. Pa. 2014); Jenkins v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2013 WL 589006 (W.D.N.C. Feb. 14, 2013); Schaefer v. ARM Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 2847768 (D. Mass. July 19, 2011); Johnson v. Capital One Bank, 2000 WL 1279661, at *1–3 (W.D. Tex. May 19, 2000).

984 Burgess v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 726 Fed. Appx. 622 (9th Cir. 2018). See also § 7.4.6, supra.

985 Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-3(1); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(4) (debts owned by debt buyers); Wis. Stat. § 893.05.

986 See Klewer v. Cavalry Invs., L.L.C., 2002 WL 2018830 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 30, 2002).

"settle" or "resolve" a time-barred debt.[987] The terms "settle" and "resolve" may imply to an unsophisticated consumer that the debt is legally enforceable.

The Seventh Circuit has found that it is a FDCPA § 1692e deception violation to tell a consumer "because of the age of your debt we will not sue you for it."[988] This implies that the collector can sue the consumer, but chooses not to because the debt is old. The truth is that, because the debt is so old, the collector cannot sue on the debt.

Some courts go a step further and find a collector's failure to disclose that a time-barred debt is not legally enforceable may be actionable.[989]

It can be deceptive to represent that the consumer will save money by accepting the collector's offer of reduced payments on a time-barred debt, because the consumer legally need make no payments on the debt.[990]

Some debt is not only time-barred, but over seven years has elapsed since the last payment. In that case, the debt is obsolete under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, so that the debt cannot affect the consumer's credit score or be included in a credit report. It is deceptive to represent that payment of an obsolete debt will help the consumer's credit rating or that non-payment will result in damage to the consumer's rating.[991]

7.4.9.6.2 Failing to Disclose That Payment Revives the Limitations Period

In many states, even after the limitations period has run, the consumer's partial payment on the debt, or even just an agreement to make a payment on the debt, can revive the running of the limitations period. That is, for example, a four-year limitations period would still have four years to run after a partial payment or agreement to pay.[992] Debt collectors may seek an agreement from the consumer for small payments not primarily for the payment in itself, but for the increased leverage the payment or agreement to make a payment gives the collector—to be able to sue and threaten suit on the debt.

An offer that the consumer make reduced payments to satisfy a debt can be deceptive where it does not warn the 987 Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1271 (11th Cir. 2019) ("offer to 'resolve' a time-barred debt, combined with a deadline to accept the reduced-payment offer and a warning that the offer might not be renewed if payment is not timely made . . . could plausibly deceive or mislead an unsophisticated consumer as to the legal status of the debt, even in the absence of an express threat of litigation"); Tatis v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 882 F.3d 422 (3d Cir. 2018); Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 836 F.3d 507 (5th Cir. 2016) (regardless of whether litigation is expressly threatened, offering to "settle" time-barred debt, without explaining that debt is not enforceable, can violate §§ 1692e and 1692f); Buchanan v. Northland Grp., Inc., 776 F.3d 393 (6th Cir. 2015) (letter offering "settlement" on debt that is time-barred falsely implied underlying debt was enforceable); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014); Manuel v. Merchants & Prof'l Credit Bur., Inc., 402 F. Supp. 3d 361, 373 (W.D. Tex. 2019) (collection letter that does not inform consumer that judicial enforcement of debt is time-barred or that any partial payment could defeat otherwise absolute defense of statute of limitations is violation of § 1692e; "The Court believes that this determination is the one most consistent with the Fifth Circuit's edict to construe the FDCPA broadly in favor of the consumer. Further, this determination is necessary and appropriate to vindicate the broad remedial scope of the FDCPA, which was designed to eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors."), aff'd, 956 F.3d 822 (5th Cir. 2020); Filgueiras v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 1626958 (D.N.J. Apr. 25, 2016) (consumer stated claim that letter offering to settle debt was deceptive if debt was time-barred); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 535859 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2015) (certifying classes against debt buyer who mailed "settlement offers" without disclosing that debt was time-barred); Rice v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 302155 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 22, 2015) (settlement offer on time-barred debt deceptive). See also Thompson v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2015 WL 1486974 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 31, 2015) (collection calls and letters contained misleading statements and innuendo regarding enforceability of debt). But see Woodward v. Collection Consultants of California, 381 F. Supp. 3d 1234, 1238–1239 (C.D. Cal. 2019) (letter offered to "resolve" and "close" plaintiff's account, but did not use language that would imply potential suit (such as "settle") and did not make any statements as to what would happen if plaintiff continued not to pay debt; "The least sophisticated debtor would not construe the language in the letter as anything other than a prudential reminder that the debt is outstanding."), aff'd, 801 Fed. Appx. 521 (9th Cir. 2020); Olsen v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4248009 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 11, 2016) (allegations that collection agency offered to "settle" debt after statute of limitations expired did not state claim); Elrich v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2015 WL 6470453 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2015) (rejecting complaint based on debt buyer's offer to "settle" debt without disclosing that debt was time-barred).

---

988 Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2017). See also Gunther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4621764, at *8 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2018). But see Contreras v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 204114 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 10, 2020) (letter that contained disclosure that debt buyer would not sue on time-barred debt, but did not state it would be unlawful to sue, did not violate § 1692e); Goodman v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 428 F. Supp. 3d 526 (D. Colo. Dec. 20, 2019) (use of phrase "will not sue" rather than "cannot sue" was not misleading); Smith v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2019 WL 2236264 (M.D. Ga. May 23, 2019); Cooper v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 6517448 (M.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2018) (no violation for letter stating "The law limits how long you can be sued on a debt and how long a debt can appear on your credit report. Due to the age of this debt, we will not sue you for it or report payment or non-payment of it to a credit bureau."); Jones v. Synergetic Commc'n, Inc., 2018 WL 6062414 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2018).

989 See Tinsley v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2020 WL 1558105, at *6 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 2020) (denying motion to dismiss where collector failed to provide time-barred debt disclosure in payment portal); Odneal v. Midwest Recovery Sys. L.L.C., 2020 WL 1974375 (N.D. Ind. Apr. 24, 2020) (same); Alexander v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2020 WL 1559861 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 2020) (same); Snyder v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1910989 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 27, 2015); Harris v. Total Card, Inc., 2013 WL 5221631 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2013) (disclosure may be required if failure to disclose would mislead unsophisticated consumer about character or legal status of debt); McRill v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2012 WL 6727974 (C.D. Ill. Dec. 6, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 6727722 (C.D. Ill. Dec. 28, 2012).

990 See Gunther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4621764, at *8 (D. Utah Sept. 26, 2018).

991 See Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 2644763 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2016) (granting summary judgment to consumer; misleading consumer to believe that obsolete debt was legally reportable, and that making payment on that debt would improve their credit score, was deceptive); Smith v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3107291 (W.D.N.Y. July 7, 2014). See also § 7.4.6, supra.

992 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 3.7.8.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

consumer that payment or agreement to pay on a time-barred debt will revive the limitations period,[993] thus making the consumer worse off than before. Even if the collector has a policy of not suing on a revived debt, courts may still find a violation, since the least sophisticated consumer would not know about such an internal policy.[994]

The communication may not be deceptive, though, if a partial payment under state law will not revive the limitations period or lead to the consumer being sued.[995] The failure to provide specific legal advice as to the consequences of partial payment on a debt is not necessarily deceptive.[996]

7.4.10 Deceptive Practices in Collection Lawsuits

7.4.10.1 Generally

Millions of lawsuits are filed to collect on consumer debts, and almost all result in default judgments.[997] Collection law firms file these suits in astonishing volumes, and often will little effort to investigate a case or to carefully draft legal pleadings.[998]

This section examines whether the collector's conduct in such litigation violates FDCPA § 1692e. Another section considers whether litigation conduct is unfair and thus violates FDCPA § 1692f.[999] Section 7.2.5, supra, examines deceptive threats to file suit and § 7.4.9, supra, considers the filing of time-barred suits. Section 7.4.11, infra, analyzes the application of FDCPA § 1692e to foreclosure actions and mortgage servicing, while residential evictions are examined briefly at § 7.4.12, infra.

Of special relevance, § 4.3.3, supra, covers whether a debt collector's litigation practices are within the scope of the FDCPA. Section 7.3.7, supra, considers whether the fact that the consumer is represented in the collection action affects the debt collector's FDCPA liability.

A debt collector may raise a number of defenses when an FDCPA action is brought after a collection lawsuit alleging misconduct in the collection lawsuit—usually the FDCPA claim can be drafted to avoid these defenses:

- Whether the FDCPA claims should have been brought as compulsory counterclaims in the collection lawsuit;[1000]
- Whether rulings in the collection lawsuit collaterally estop an FDCPA claim;[1001]
- Whether the state court judgment in the collection case is res judicata on the FDCPA action;[1002]
- Whether the Rooker-Feldman doctrine deprives a federal court in the FDCPA action from having jurisdiction to review a state court judgment in the collection lawsuit;[1003]

993 Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2017); Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 836 F.3d 507 (5th Cir. 2016) (regardless of whether litigation is expressly threatened, offering to "settle" time-barred debt, without explaining that debt is not enforceable, can violate §§ 1692e and 1692f); Buchanan v. Northland Grp., Inc., 776 F.3d 393 (6th Cir. 2015); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014); Wheeler v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 1469449 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2020); Gomes v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 4179059 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 22, 2018) (collection letter stating that "first payment must be received NO LATER than" a certain date, would mislead least sophisticated consumer into taking action that would serve to restart statute of limitations); Shadow v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 4357980 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2018) (no defense for collector that state law required written acknowledgment of debt in addition to partial payment); Baye v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 4918998 (E.D. La. Oct. 31, 2017) (consumer stated §§ 1692e and 1692f claims where debt buyer's letters attempting to collect time-barred debt disclosed that it would not be suing in view of age of debt, but did not disclose that payment may revive debt); Bereket v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 4409480 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 4, 2017); Palmer v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2348704 (M.D. Fla. May 4, 2016); Smothers v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 7485686 (D. Kan. Dec. 29, 2016); Lopera v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 6650744 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 10, 2016); Yang v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 393726 (D. Kan. Feb. 2, 2016). See also Jennings v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions L.L.C., 441 F. Supp. 3d 106 (D. Md. 2020); Alston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 3309725 (D.S.C. July 3, 2018).

994 See, e.g., Perea v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 5763647 (N.D. Ill., Sept. 28, 2020); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 723278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2018).

995 Burgess v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 726 Fed. Appx. 622, 623 (9th Cir. 2018); Yip v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5549263 (N.D. Ga. June 18, 2019) (under Georgia law, partial payment alone does not restart statute of limitations on alleged debt), adopted, 2019 WL 5549952 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 26, 2019); Stimpson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 347 F. Supp. 3d 538 (D. Idaho 2018), aff'd, 944 F.3d 1190 (9th Cir. 2019); Miran v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 1410296 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 20, 2017). See also Christie v. Contract Callers, Inc., 2021 WL 689548, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 23, 2021) (partial payment would not revive debt under applicable state law); Rozario v. Admin Recovery, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4188131, at *5 (D.N.J. July 21, 2020) (lack of disclosure created no additional risk for consumer, because partial payment would not restart statute of limitations, "and importantly, there is no indication, or even argument by Plaintiff, that if a debtor were to make a partial payment on the debt, he or she would also have to make a declaration that the entire debt would also be paid"); Domke v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2020 WL 513807, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 31, 2020) (no violation where letter stated that in many circumstances person can renew debt and restart time period for filing of a lawsuit if person takes specific action, such as making certain payment on debt; in Florida, partial payments may be evidence of intent to repay, but are not sufficient to restart statute of limitations, which requires written and signed document, and letter's statement was accurate); Goodman v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 428 F. Supp. 3d 526 (D. Colo. Dec. 20, 2019) (statute of limitations not revived by partial payment alone); Judah v. Total Card, Inc., 2017 WL 2345636 (D.N.J. May 30, 2017) (letter included statement that consumer would not be sued; rejecting arguments that payment would revive statute of limitations); Boedicker v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 227 F. Supp. 3d 1235 (D. Kan. 2016) (debt buyer had written policy not to use any payments to recalculate statute of limitations, even if permissible under state law).

996 See Stimpson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 944 F.3d 1190, 1198 (9th Cir. 2019) (stating that nothing in FDCPA "require[s] debt collectors to provide legal advice on revival statutes").

997 See §§ 1.4.9.1, 1.4.9.4, supra.

998 See § 1.4.8, supra.

999 See § 8.3.6, infra.

1000 See § 12.6.2, infra.

1001 See § 12.6.2, infra.

1002 See § 12.6.2, infra.

1003 See § 12.6.4, infra.

- Whether litigation or witness immunity for conduct in the collection lawsuit protects an FDCPA defendant;[1004] and
- Where the collection lawsuit has not been concluded when the FDCPA claim is brought, that the federal court use its discretion to delay the FDCPA claim until the state action is resolved.[1005]

The fact that the collector does not prevail in its collection lawsuit does not in itself prove a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[1006] For example, the collector might not have engaged in any deception in its presentation of the case, but the court might find it has not met its burden of proof. Simply opposing the consumer's position is not deceptive even where the consumer prevails.[1007]

While not prevailing in a collection lawsuit in itself is not deceptive, the collector's conduct in that lawsuit can be deceptive. As set out in the remainder of this § 7.4.9, such conduct actionable under FDCPA § 1692e can include false or misleading statements or practices in the service of process, in the initial complaint and its attachments, in requests for admissions and other discovery, in affidavits, and in other documents submitted during the litigation. A federal court, while granting judgment on the pleadings for the debt buyer, noted a number of potential FDCPA violations involved with hypothetical facts in a collection case. "That they did not have accounts with Citibank; that the accounts at issue were fraudulently opened; that they did not incur a debt to Citibank; that their debt to Citibank was not included in the debts Cavalry purchased from Citibank in bulk; that the debt-amounts listed were inaccurate; that Cavalry sought unauthorized interest, fees, or charges; or that Cavalry sued the wrong persons. Any single one of these factual allegations could state a claim under the FDCPA."[1008]

Conversely, that the collector prevailed in the collection lawsuit is not a defense to a challenge to the collector's practices in that lawsuit, as long as the consumer does not directly challenge the court's ruling in that lawsuit.[1009] What is at issue is whether specific collector practices in that lawsuit are deceptive and affect the consumer's decision-making, not the court's eventual ruling.

1004 See § 12.6.6, infra.

1005 See § 12.6.3, infra.

1006 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 295–296, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995); Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 888 F.3d 343, 346 (8th Cir. 2018). See also Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015); Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A. 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012).

1007 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015); Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A. 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012); Anderson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1779424, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 4, 2018), adopted in relevant part, 2018 WL 1779446 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 25, 2018); Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2017).

1008 Gordon v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3545119 at *1, 2 (E.D. Mich. July 24, 2018).

1009 See § 12.6.4, infra.

7.4.10.2 Does FDCPA § 1692e Apply to Filings Submitted to the Court?

The Seventh Circuit has held that FDCPA § 1692e does not apply to collector representations directed at the court, such as where attachments to a pleading filed with the court were fabricated and were meant to deceive the court, not the defendant.[1010] But even the Seventh Circuit finds that legal pleadings filed with the court can violate FDCPA § 1692e where the claim is that the deception is on the consumer.[1011]

Other circuits also find that FDCPA § 1692e applies when the consumer's complaint alleges that deceptive court filings have an impact on the consumer's decision-making,[1012] or even just on that of the consumer's lawyer.[1013] As a routine matter, most documents a collector files with the court are also sent to the consumer, and misrepresentations in those documents can materially deceive the consumer, affecting the consumer's decision-making.[1014] To the extent that copies of the collector's filings with the court were not sent to the consumer, but should have been sent to the consumer, this can also be deception directed at the consumer.

Moreover, FDCPA § 1692e states "A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt." There is no limitation that FDCPA § 1692e applies only to representations directed primarily or only to consumers.[1015] Other FDCPA provisions (such as section 1692c(a)) apply only to representations received by consumers, but section 1692e does not have such a limitation.

7.4.10.3 Deceptive Initiation of a Case and Excessive Requests for Relief

7.4.10.3.1 Service of the complaint and accompanying documents

FDCPA § 1692e can be violated where a collector improperly serves a court summons or complaint and misrepresents in the affidavit of service that it was properly served—also known as sewer service.[1016] FDCPA § 1692a(6)(d) exempts

1010 O'Rourke v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 635 F.3d 938 (7th Cir. 2011).

1011 Marquez v. Weinstein, Pinson & Riley, P.S., 836 F.3d 808, 810–812 (7th Cir. 2016). Cf. Ciesniewski v. Aries Capital Partners, 2020 WL 1493019, at *3 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 27, 2020) (rejecting plaintiff's contention that Marquez effectively adopted concurrence in O'Rourke).

1012 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 613 (6th Cir. 2009). See also Brief of CFPB and FTC As Amicus Curiae Supporting Plaintiffs, Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc. L.L.C. (2d Cir. Nov. 15, 2013), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

1013 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1297–1300 (11th Cir. 2015); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 231 (4th Cir. 2007).

1014 Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 674 F.3d 814, 818 (8th Cir. 2012).

1015 But see O'Rourke v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 635 F.3d 938, 941 (7th Cir. 2011) (finding legislative intent to cover only communications to consumers).

1016 See Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201 (E.D.N.Y. 2019); Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252 from the FDCPA process servers "serving or attempting to serve legal process on any other person in connection with the judicial enforcement of any debt." Courts hold that this exemption does not apply to a process server's filing of a false affidavit.[1017]

Moreover, debt collectors knowingly filing such affidavits violate FDCPA § 1692e.[1018] Collectors hiring such process servers also can be liable for the sewer service of their agents.[1019] Collectors knowing a judgment was obtained by sewer service also violate FDCPA § 1692e by seeking to enforce that judgment[1020] or by opposing the consumer's attempt to set aside the judgment.[1021]

It can violate FDCPA § 1692e to fail to send the consumer subsequent pleadings in a case. For example, it is deceptive to not send the consumer a copy of an amended complaint that results in a default judgment against the consumer.[1022]

A collector's inclusion of additional material with a complaint and summons served upon the consumer can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation. Examples include attachment of a motion for default to a state complaint;[1023] inclusion of a debt collection letter because it implies the letter is an official court document;[1024] inclusion of a FDCPA § 1692g validation notice with the complaint;[1025] inclusion of a letter that had the appearance that it was previously sent to the consumer, but that never was sent.[1026]

It is also deceptive to send a collection letter simulating legal process.[1027]

Some courts have found not deceptive such errors as a debt buyer's failure to post a state court bond before serving the consumer with a debt collection summons and complaint,[1028] failure to comply with state procedural rules requiring certain documents to be attached to state court complaints,[1029] failure to attach documents that the complaint indicates are attached,[1030] and failure to redact the consumer's loan account number, date of birth, and Social Security number in state court pleadings.[1031]

(S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018); Bevan v. Butler & Assoc., 2017 WL 6557418 (D. Kan. Dec. 22, 2017); Gary v. Badger Process Services, Inc., 2017 WL 5356487 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 13, 2017) (false affidavits of service); Rendon v. HBLC, Inc., 2017 WL 7275423 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 25, 2017); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (affidavit of service's physical description of person served does not match anyone in household); Polanco v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 132 F. Supp. 3d 567 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 2015); Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650046 (N.D. Cal. July 21, 2015); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

1017 See Makhnevich v. MTGLQ Investors, L.P., 2020 WL 764158 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 14, 2020); Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650046 (N.D. Cal. July 21, 2015); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Ansari v. Elec. Document Processing Inc., 2013 WL 4647621 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2013); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., L.L.C., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

1018 Greco-Rambo v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 2011 WL 3759676 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2011) (consumer alleged that service was made at time when residence was "a foreclosed property which was locked and boarded up" and thus defendants knew that she was never properly served, but they went ahead with obtaining default judgment); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., L.L.C., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010). See also Armstead v. Feldman, 2020 WL 4753837 (D. Md. Aug. 17, 2020) (theory of liability was predicated not on actions of process server in providing false information in return of service affidavits, but on collector's act of filing those documents in collection action; no violation found).

1019 Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650046 (N.D. Cal. July 21, 2015).

1020 Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201 (E.D.N.Y. 2019).

1021 See Coble v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 824 F. Supp. 2d 568 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

1022 Coleman v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 2015 WL 4524599 (E.D. Mo. July 27, 2015).

1023 Grden v. Leiken Ingber & Winters, P.C., 643 F.3d 169 (6th Cir. 2011).

1024 Tolentino v. Friedman, 833 F. Supp. 697 (N.D. Ill. 1993). But see Edstrom-Smith v. Kass Shuler, P.A., 680 Fed. Appx. 813 (11th Cir. 2017) (nothing in FDCPA prohibited inclusion of notice in state complaint, and nothing about notice was confusing or deceptive); Morrison v. Hosto, Buchan, Prater & Lawrence, P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 3010917 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 17, 2009) (note attached to complaint was factually true, included statutorily mandated language, invited settlement, and contained no deception).

1025 Goldman v. Cohen, 445 F.3d 152, 155–156 (2d Cir. 2006); Payne v. Sansone Law, L.L.C., 2016 WL 827943 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 3, 2016); Campbell v. Sansone Law, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4089349 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 2, 2016) (including § 1692g in state collection complaint could confuse unsophisticated consumer, when initial communication triggering § 1692g had not occurred).

1026 Matmanivong v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 1181529 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 8, 2009); Manlapaz v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 3015166 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 15, 2009).

1027 See § 1692e(13) prohibiting "[t]he false representation or implication that documents are legal process," discussed at § 7.2.13, supra. See also Zimmerman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 276 F.R.D. 174 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (enclosing bogus summonses and complaint with cover letter that this is lawsuit collector intends to file).

1028 See Ramirez v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 4603277 (D. Minn. Sept. 25, 2018).

1029 Walsh v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 255802 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 27, 2012).

1030 Washington v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.P.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (W.D. Mich. 2012).

1031 See Tschudin v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2014 WL 7272668 (D. Neb. Dec. 18, 2014) (distinguishing Douglass v. Convergent Outsourcing by narrowly construing it). See also Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227, 236 (4th Cir. 2015) ("While, conceivably, a threat to expose one's social security number might pressure a debtor to pay off a debt, there is no allegation that Appellees ever made such a threat."); Diaz v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4236060 (D.N.J. Sept. 22, 2017) (disclosure of four digits of Social Security number in state court debt collection complaint not violation of FDCPA); Pittenger v. John Soliday Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1856224 (N.D. Ohio May 10, 2010); Feltman v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2008 WL 5211024 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2008). Cf. Husainy v. Gutwein L.L.P., 2020 WL 5076791, at *3 (N.D. Ind. Aug. 27, 2020) (dismissing § 1692e claim based on alleged disclosure of Social Security number, but denying dismissal of § 1692e claim based on alleged false representation to state court about whether it set as confidential documents containing Social Security number).

7.4.10.3.2 Complaints that mislead as to collector's right to sue the consumer

A complaint that misrepresents that the collector has a valid lawsuit against the consumer can violate FDCPA § 1692e. Filing a time-barred complaint as a FDCPA § 1692e violation is examined at § 7.4.9.3, supra. Res judicata may also bar a collection suit, and suing the consumer despite that can be deceptive.[1032]

It can be similarly deceptive to sue on a debt discharged in bankruptcy or in violation of a bankruptcy automatic stay.[1033] Most collectors use data servicers that "scrub" the names of consumers who have filed for bankruptcy protection, so that the collector should be aware of any bankruptcy. In any event, ignorance of the bankruptcy is not a defense unless the collector proves all the elements of the bona fide error defense.[1034]

Also deceptive is suing a member of the active duty military in violation of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act.[1035] It can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to file a complaint prior to expiration of a statutory right to cure a delinquency,[1036] or to sue a consumer while knowing that the debt was not owed.[1037]

A FDCPA § 1692e violation is stated where the plaintiff in a collection suit has not been properly assigned the obligation or has no proof of such an assignment, which would allow it to collect on the debt.[1038] Where state law requires that proof of ownership be included with the complaint, then failure to do so can violate FDCPA § 1692e, even if the collector could later obtain that information.[1039] It is also deceptive to allege ownership of the debt at the time the complaint is issued where that assignment of ownership only occurs later.[1040] Moreover, it can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation for an attorney to name the wrong trust as the owner of the debt.[1041]

It is deceptive for a complaint to be in the name of the originating creditor where the suit is being brought on behalf of a debt buyer.[1042] But where the complaint properly sets out the names of the merchant, originating creditor, and account holder, and state rules of procedure do not require more than what is found in the complaint, there may be no violation just because the complaint does not explain their relationship to the consumer.[1043]

It can violate FDCPA § 1692e for an attorney to verify "upon personal knowledge" the complaint with only minimal knowledge of the facts of a case.[1044] That might not be the case if the attorney only stated the facts "upon information and belief,"[1045] but even then it is actionable if the attorney knew the facts were inaccurate.[1046]

7.4.10.3.3 Suing on an inapplicable or unclear legal theory

Collectors may sue the consumer on a legal theory inapplicable to the facts pled in the case. This can be the result of sloppiness where the collector is filing thousands of complaints on a cookie-cutter basis without professional attention

1032 See Montgomery v. Donnett, 2006 WL 293727 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 7, 2006).

1033 See § 7.2.2.3, supra. See also Murphy v. Stupar, Schuster & Bartell, 337 F. Supp. 3d 837 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2018) (suing pursuant to invalid reaffirmation of debts discharged in bankruptcy); Mogg v. Jacobs, 2016 WL 1029396 (S.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2016) (filing suit after notice of automatic stay).

1034 See also Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004).

1035 Maxwell v. St. Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 13, 2017) (collector knew consumer was on active duty); Owings v. Hunt & Henriques, 2010 WL 3489342 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2010) (defendant's false declaration that plaintiff was not in active military service).

1036 See Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2019 WL 357936 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 29, 2019) (Wisconsin right to cure credit card delinquencies). See also Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 358 F. Supp. 3d 767 (E.D. Wis. Jan. 8, 2019).

1037 See, e.g., Gamble v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2013 WL 979202 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 7, 2013). See also Gary v. Hladik Onorato & Federman, L.L.P., 509 F. Supp. 3d 368, 379 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2020) (denying motion to dismiss § 1692e claim based on allegation that foreclosure relied on fraudulent mortgage assignment).

1038 See Ferkingstad v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1373261 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2017); Matmanivong v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 1181529 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 8, 2009); Royal Fin. Group, L.L.C. v. Perkins, 414 S.W.3d 501 (Mo. Ct. App. 2013) (debt buyer could not prove it owned the debt). But see Kearney v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3778746 (E.D.N.Y. July 31, 2014) (servicer for debt owner could bring collection lawsuit under New York law); Ness v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (D. Minn. 2013) (no FDCPA violation where record showed that debt buyer offered proof of its purchase of debt that was rejected by state court as not authenticated); Clark v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 1258113 (W.D. Pa. Apr. 30, 2007) (no § 1692e violation where collector filed affidavit as to assignment of debt, but not actual assignment documents).

1039 See Grant-Hall v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 856 F. Supp. 2d 929 (N.D. Ill. 2012); Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (debt collector failed to offer evidence of written assignment required by state law).

1040 Ferkingstad v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1373261 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2017).

1041 Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 1436957 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2017), related case, 2020 WL 6681362 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 12, 2020).

1042 See McDermott v. Barton, 2014 WL 6704544 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 26, 2014). See also Eul v. Transworld Sys., 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017); Moss v. Barton, 2016 WL 1441146 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 8, 2016).

1043 Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 470 (7th Cir. 2007).

1044 Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004) (verified complaint including inflated collection attorney fees was deceptive, where complaint was verified based on personal knowledge, and not information and belief); Young v. Meyer & Njus, 1997 WL 452685 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 1997). But see Haworth v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 7161230, at *5 (D. Neb. Oct. 17, 2019) ("Plaintiffs' claims in this case focus on the affiant's alleged lack of personal knowledge, not any knowingly false statements about the nature of the debt itself."); Delisis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4393901 (E.D. Mo. July 16, 2015).

1045 Fisher v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2005 WL 1799275 (N.D. Ill. July 26, 2005); Gonzalez v. Lawent, 2004 WL 2036409 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 2004) (on information and belief); Forgey v. Parker Bush & Lane, P.C., 2004 WL 1945737 (D. Or. Sept. 1, 2004); O'Chaney v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2004 WL 635060 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2004) (collection attorney's affidavit based on information and belief, not based on personal knowledge).

1046 See Kamps v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 622505 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 19, 2013) (allegation that debt buyer proceeded in state court knowing consumer did not owe debt).

of an attorney. Or the practice can be deliberate because the inapplicable theory authorizes a larger recovery (such as attorney fees or prejudgment interest) and the collector assumes it will prevail by default on the inapplicable theory.

It can violate FDCPA § 1692e to bring a collection suit on credit card debt using a claim for "materials or services" in order to collect attorney fees and prejudgment interest where that relief would not have been available otherwise.[1047] The credit card issuer did not provide any materials or services so that the claim was totally inappropriate.

Texas has a unique cause of action for "sworn account" and Texas intermediate appellate courts have found that this claim is not applicable to credit card debt.[1048] Nevertheless, in an unreported decision, the Fifth Circuit affirmed a ruling that bringing a sworn account claim on a credit card debt is not deceptive since the Texas Supreme Court had not ruled on the issue, and a contrary holding would deprive debt collectors of the right to seek a change in the jurisprudence.[1049]

Collectors often do not sue on the contract, but on an account stated theory—that the creditor had sent the consumer a statement of the amount due, and the consumer's actions or inactions should be deemed an admission of that obligation.[1050] Where state law allows for an account stated claim, it is not deceptive to seek recovery on this basis instead of breach of contract.[1051] But it may be deceptive to seek recovery on an account stated where a statement of account was never sent to the consumer showing the amount sought in the litigation.[1052]

The Seventh Circuit finds it can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to state in a complaint that the debt is assumed valid unless the consumer disputes the debt within thirty days.[1053] This is a misrepresentation of the legal claim in the collector's collection lawsuit.

1047 Bassett v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 326 F. Supp. 3d 862 (D. Neb. 2018), vacated by 2019 WL 6767053 (D. Neb. July 29, 2019) (partial summary judgment vacated for purpose of facilitating settlement); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 612251 (D. Neb. Feb. 2, 2016).

1048 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 4.9 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1049 Drennan v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 389 Fed. Appx. 352 (5th Cir. 2010).

1050 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 4.7 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1051 Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 1055962 (D. Or. Mar. 20, 2017); Carpenter v. Monroe Fin. Recovery Group, L.L.C., 119 F. Supp. 3d 623 (E.D. Mich. 2015); Kniley v. Citibank, 2015 WL 1535668 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 6, 2015); Hadsell v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2013 WL 1386299 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2013).

1052 See Klein v. Stewart Zlimen & Jungers, Ltd., 2019 WL 79317, at *6 (D. Minn. Jan. 2, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss since plaintiffs "may have difficulty demonstrating materiality" but "they should have the right to try to develop it"; stating that Jorgensen case is "not binding here"). But see Jorgensen v. Accounts Receivable Serv., 250 F. Supp. 3d 351, 354 (D. Minn. 2017) (not misleading or material).

1053 Marquez v. Weinstein, Pinson & Riley, P.S., 836 F.3d 808, 810–812 (7th Cir. 2016).

7.4.10.3.4 Amounts sought

A collection lawsuit can violate FDCPA § 1692e where it seeks amounts the plaintiff is not entitled to,[1054] including stating an amount due that includes amounts that the plaintiff might have a right to in the future, but is not yet entitled to.[1055] A collector violates FDCPA § 1692e where, in litigation, it alleges the plaintiff is owed attorney fees to which the collector is not entitled,[1056] where it alleges it is owed interest charges not owed,[1057] or seeks other charges to which the plaintiff is not entitled.[1058] It can also be deceptive to seek the wrong principal balance because of failing to credit consumer payments.[1059]

1054 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) (FDCPA applied to deceptive practices during course of state debt collection suit by inflating amount claimed by adding charges for unauthorized force-placed insurance fees); Gionis v. Javitch, Block, Rathbone, L.L.P., 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 176–177 (3d Cir. 2015).

1055 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 176–177 (3d Cir. 2015).

1056 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 176–177 (3d Cir. 2015); Gionis v. Javitch, Block, Rathbone, L.L.P., 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007); Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (nonlawyers sought fees where state law limited attorney fees to lawyers); Kirk v. Gobel, 622 F. Supp. 2d 1039 (E.D. Wash. 2009) (attorney fees prohibited by state law); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 645 F. Supp. 2d 917 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (sought contractual attorney fees with no proof of contract); Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004) (denying motion to dismiss where contract unclear regarding creditor's right to attorney fees).

1057 Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. Sept. 21, 2016) (seeking prejudgment interest on prior interest charges in violation of state law forbidding compounding of interest); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014) (debt buyer seeking interest after creditor waived all future interest charges); Mellish v. CACH, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1472405, at *5 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 26, 2020) (motion to dismiss denied where plaintiff alleged facts showing that defendants violated Pennsylvania's Consumer Discount Company Act by seeking to collect more interest than they were not entitled to by law); Eul v. Transworld Sys., 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017) (interest rate in excess of state law); Wade v. Account Resolution Corp., 2016 WL 4415353 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 19, 2016) (added prejudgment interest to default judgment where, no interest was accruing on debt prior to judgment); Unifund CCR Partners v. Harrell, 509 S.W.3d 25 (Ky. 2017). See also Tabiti v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1382235, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2019) (plain language of purchase agreement did not transfer to debt buyer right to collect post-charge-off interest, and even if it did, creditor waived right to collect post-charge-off interest and debt buyer was bound by that waiver); Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019) (even if later successor in interest retained right to charge interest or fees prospectively, plaintiffs plausibly alleged that there was no right to collect amounts dating back to December 2009 and, therefore claim to such amounts in foreclosure was misstatement). But see Yip v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5549263 (N.D. Ga. June 18, 2019) (despite creditor's waiver, it was legal under Georgia law to apply statutory interest under the circumstances), adopted, 2019 WL 5549952 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 26, 2019).

1058 Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995) (holding FDCPA applied to deceptive practices during course of state debt collection suit by inflating amount claimed by adding charges for unauthorized forced-placed insurance fees).

1059 Eckert v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 647 F. Supp. 2d 1096 (E.D. Mo. 2009).

FDCPA § 1692e can be violated where a collector sues on a credit obligation that is usurious and thus void.[1060]

Questions arise as to whether an attorney is liable under FDCPA § 1692e for misstatements of the amount owed where the attorney is relying on information supplied by the client. As examined at § 7.2.2.2, supra, collectors are strictly liable for errors while demanding an amount due, subject only to the bona fide error defense.[1061] The same principle applies to errors in the amount demanded in litigation.[1062]

Whatever the liability of the collector's attorney, the attorney's client should be liable for misstatements of the amount due in the litigation if the client is within the FDCPA's coverage.[1063]

There may not be a FDCPA § 1692e violation where a collector seeks an amount in litigation less than the amount previously sought (unless the amount previously sought was in error, and then its prior demand for that erroneous amount could be a violation).[1064]

7.4.10.4 Initiating a Case Without Evidence or Review by the Attorney

7.4.10.4.1 Initiating lawsuit without meaningful attorney involvement

This subsection often overlaps with § 7.4.10.4.2, infra, on filing lawsuits without evidence of the claims in the lawsuit. In mass filing of collection lawsuits, collection firms may file complaints without meaningful review by an attorney or without possessing evidence to support the claim. These violations are distinct. One deceives consumers as to the involvement of an attorney in an action and the other misrepresents that there is evidence to substantiate the allegations in the complaint.

It is well accepted that it violates FDCPA § 1692e(3) for a communication to appear to be from an attorney where there has been no meaningful review by an attorney.[1065] This also extends to a complaint in a collection lawsuit that is signed by an attorney, but no attorney has meaningfully reviewed the matter.[1066] It is no defense to say that there can be no FDCPA § 1692e(3) liability if the attorney becomes meaningfully involved later on.[1067]

Evidence of lack of meaningful review can be shown by the number of suits the attorney filed in a fixed period of time,[1068] the attorney's heavy workload,[1069] attorney time sheets or 1060 Gerstle v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 76 F. Supp. 3d 503 (S.D.N.Y. 2015).

1061 See § 12.2.7, infra, on collector's reliance on information from the creditor as a basis for the bona fide error defense.

1062 But see Spangler v. Conrad, 2010 WL 2389481 (E.D. Tenn. June 9, 2010) (where amount uncertain, attorney can rely on client's computation).

1063 See, e.g., Kelly v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 954 (S.D. Ohio June 16, 2005).

1064 See Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 1055962 (D. Or. Mar. 20, 2017).

1065 See § 7.2.3.3, supra.

1066 Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019); Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665, 684 (E.D. Wis. 2018); Satran v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2464486 (W.D. Wis. June 1, 2018); Anderson v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2018 WL 1779446 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 25, 2018); Anderson v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2016 WL 9558952 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 7, 2016); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342, 1367 (N.D. Ga. 2015); Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 30 F. Supp. 3d 283 (D.N.J. 2014) (four seconds review of complaint); Champion v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2013 WL 8699367 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 15, 2013); Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86 (E.D.N.Y. 2009), on remand from Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003); Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009); CFPB v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2016-CFPB-0009 (Apr. 25, 2016) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov. Cf. Musah v. Houslanger & Assoc., 962 F. Supp. 2d 636 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (discussing situations requiring attorney involvement when seeking postjudgment remedies). See also Diehm v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 426 F. Supp. 3d 578 (W.D. Wis. 2019). But see Gordon v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3545119 (E.D. Mich. July 24, 2018) (consumers provided no evidence of lack of attorney involvement); Cheslek v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2017 WL 7370983 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 22, 2017) (dismissing pleading as lacking allegations of facts supporting § 1692e(3) claim); Lopez v. Law Offices of Faloni & Assoc., 2016 WL 4820629 (D.N.J. Sept. 14, 2016) (evidence of filing 195 cases on the same day not sufficient to show lack of meaningful attorney involvement); Donatelli v. Warmbrodt, 2011 WL 2580442 (W.D. Pa. June 28, 2011) (attorney testified that he reviewed correspondence and attached evidence of debt, making sure that two were consistent); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Ford, 2020 WL 1910207, at *5 (Minn. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 2020) ("Respondents submitted documents demonstrating that Messerli & Kramer P.A. conducted a thorough and meaningful review of Ford's account-documentation prior to signing the complaint.").

1067 Troutman v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2019 WL 2656212, at *4 (M.D. Ga. June 27, 2019) ("The Defendants' theory appears to be that even if a complaint deceptively indicates that it was prepared with meaningful attorney involvement, there is no FDCPA liability if the attorney becomes meaningfully involved later on. However, there is nothing in the FDCPA, and the Defendants cite no authority, to support such a carve-out.").

1068 Rossi v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2020 WL 869247 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2020); Satran v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2464486 (W.D. Wis. June 1, 2018) (attorney who signed complaint was attorney of record in at least 10,161 other cases in Wisconsin); Diaz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2012 WL 661456 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 28, 2012) (three attorneys filed over 13,000 complaints in one year), adopted, 2012 WL 1882976 (E.D.N.Y. May 24, 2012); Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (collection attorney and his partner signed 211 collection letters on the same day they signed plaintiff's letter and issued over 3000 letters in that month, leaving little time for legal review), on remand from Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003). But see Trivedi v. BD 112A L.L.C., 2020 WL 736239 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 13, 2020); Lopez v. Law Offices of Faloni & Assoc., 2016 WL 4820629 (D.N.J. Sept. 14, 2016) (evidence of filing 195 cases on same day not sufficient to show lack of meaningful attorney involvement).

1069 See Rossi v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2020 WL 869247 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2020) (attorney's workload made it "extremely unlikely" that attorney had time or ability to review file withstood motion to dismiss); Diehm v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 426 F. Supp. 3d 578 (W.D. Wis. 2019); Boerner v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665 (E.D. Wis. 2018). But see Trivedi v. BD 112A L.L.C., 2020 WL 736239 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 13, 2020); Richardson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6719110 (D. Md. Dec. 18, 2013) (court rejected plaintiff's claim that attorney who signed complaint could not have been meaningfully involved because he had signed approximately 11,668 other collection complaints).

similar evidence of attorney time spent on a case,[1070] or the minimal information about the debt available to the attorney to make a meaningful review.[1071] Other evidence is the use of boilerplate forms,[1072] the fact that there is no electronic record that the attorney of record has accessed a consumer's file,[1073] or the fact that the complaint's allegations were inconsistent with the credit agreement or the law.[1074]

7.4.10.4.2 Initiating a lawsuit without sufficient evidence of debt

Debt buyers may file suit with insufficient evidence to prove their case, on the assumption they will win by default. If the consumer contests the case, the debt buyer may or may not have any access to account-level business records on the debts that they buy.[1075] It may be a factual issue whether a debt buyer has or can obtain (from the original creditor or a prior debt buyer) the additional information and documentation. In addition, some creditors may have destroyed or warehoused the key transactional documents, making them irretrievable.[1076]

Courts may find that it is not a FDCPA § 1692e violation where the consumer's only allegation is that, prior to filing the case, the collection attorney did not possess sufficient evidence to prove the case, and where there are no allegations that the attorney could not later obtain that evidence.[1077] This should be distinguished from a situation where the collector files a lawsuit even though it is unable or has no intention to obtain the evidence needed to prove its case, which may be a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[1078] For example, a collection attorney may have no intention of obtaining evidence to prove its case where the attorney drops the case whenever the consumer contests the case.[1079] Similarly, there can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation where the collection attorney knows or should know that it cannot prove its case.[1080]

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) has alleged, in consent orders, a series of interrelated FDCPA § 1692e violations involving law firm practices in collection lawsuits where the law firms, without reviewing original account-level documentation, continued litigation:

- Implying that the law firm had a reasonable basis for the allegations in the complaint, even though it had no such substantiation;
- Knowing the consumer had disputed the debt and the law firm had no evidence to contest that dispute;
- Even though the law firm "had knowledge or reason to believe, based on its past course of dealing with its clients' accounts (including factors such as consumer disputes, inaccurate or incomplete information in the portfolio, and contractual disclaimers related to the accounts) that a 1070 Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (first noting time after complaint was filed).

1071 Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

1072 Anderson v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2018 WL 1779446 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 25, 2018).

1073 See CFPB v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2016-CFPB-0009 (Apr. 25, 2016) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

1074 Miller v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 687 F. Supp. 2d 86 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

1075 See § 1.4.7.3, supra.

1076 See, e.g., Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 357 F.3d 426, 432 (4th Cir. 2004) ("MBNA relies on testimony that, pursuant to its five-year document retention policy, the original account application was no longer in MBNA's possession"; thus, MBNA did not have original evidence of who was obligated on credit card account).

1077 Eades v. Kennedy, PC Law Offices, 799 F.3d 161, 172 (2d Cir. 2015); Harvey v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 453 F.3d 324 (6th Cir. 2006); Zachary v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3474691, at *3 (E.D. Pa. July 18, 2018) (dismissing §§ 1692e, 1692e(2), 1692e(10) and 1692f(1) claims: "Without more, the allegation that Defendant filed and pursued the underlying lawsuit without sufficient evidence fails to state a claim that the lawsuit was a false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means to collect a debt."); Zachary v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3474691 (E.D. Pa. July 18, 2018); Anderson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1779424, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 4, 2018), adopted in relevant part, 2018 WL 1779446 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 25, 2018) (dismissing § 1692e(2) claim against debt buyer and its attorneys for allegedly failing to support collection law suit with proof or documentation); Bandy v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 210730 (S.D. Ala. Jan. 18, 2013) (Alabama law already provided Bandy adequate protection against being sued without substantial justification); Polinsky v. Cmty. Health Partners Reg'l Health Sys., 858 F. Supp. 2d 891 (N.D. Ohio 2012) (collection lawyer need not conduct independent investigation prior to filing suit, but lawyer is strictly liable for misstating amount or consumer's liability for debt); Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (filing of foreclosure action by plaintiff in process of obtaining assignment not yet fully documented was not deceptive); Clark v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 1258113 (W.D. Pa. Apr. 30, 2007); Davis v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 290491 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 7, 2006); Deere v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone L.L.P., 413 F. Supp. 2d 886 (S.D. Ohio 2006).

1078 Harvey v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 453 F.3d 324 (6th Cir. 2006) (not ruling on where evidence unavailable, only ruling where evidence could be obtained later); Woychesin v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5893815 (N.D. Ala. Oct. 5, 2020) (alleging that debt buyer filed "bogus" lawsuit to collect debt that plaintiff did not owe with no intention of proving case); Hinten v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5739035 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 22, 2013) (alleging "that defendant commenced a judicial action with no intention of further prosecution, with insufficient evidence, and no intention of further seeking evidence"); Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321, 1333 (S.D. Ala. 2013); Kuria v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 752 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (N.D. Ga. 2010); Mello v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 526 F. Supp. 2d 1020 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (claim that collection attorney unable to obtain evidence of plaintiff's alleged debt).

1079 Stubbs v. Cavalry SPV I, 2013 WL 1858587 (N.D. Ill. May 1, 2013) (consumers stated claim for fraudulent initiation of collection action in violation of § 1692e(4) when they alleged that debt collectors filed lawsuits without reviewing or even possessing records of borrowers' debts, and that they then typically dismissed collection action when borrower appeared to be knowledgeable about debt or retained counsel). See also Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) (collection attorney on trial date, when seeing consumer represented, sought continuance). But see Velazquez v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2780372 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2009) (no violation, even where attorney dismissed suit because it knew it could not prove its allegations).

1080 Mason v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2017 WL 6994577 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 8186866 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2017) (collection lawyers should have known they could not prove their claims).

specific portfolio of clients' accounts might contain unreliable data."[1081]

The CFPB also survived a motion to dismiss in alleging it was deceptive for a collection lawyer to not bother to determine whether any underlying documentation for the debt was available and where the collection lawyer "failed to review the contracts governing the sale of accounts to determine whether those contracts disclaimed any warranties regarding the accuracy or validity of the debts."[1082]

Even where a collection attorney filing of lawsuits in mass with minimal evidence prior to filing is not found to be a FDCPA § 1692e violation, the practice should be relevant to whether the collector can raise a good faith defense to other FDCPA violations. The filing of mass lawsuits can indicate an absence of reasonable procedures to avoid the error.[1083]

7.4.10.5 Deceptive Affidavits and Business Records

Debt collection litigation often includes affidavits submitted by the collector—attached to the complaint, used to introduce business records, and in support of summary judgment. Even where the collector has prevailed in its collection lawsuit, misrepresentations in affidavits may be actionable under FDCPA § 1692e. Litigation or witness immunity claims generally will not apply to such deceptive affidavits,[1084] nor will the Rooker-Feldman doctrine be a bar.[1085] For example, FDCPA § 1692e is violated where a collector's affidavit filed in a collection action contains misleading statements as to the collector's right to recovery in the action or the status of the debt.[1086]

Debt buyers bringing collection actions may have little information about a debt,[1087] but typically introduce affidavits making allegations about the debt or introducing supposed business records of the originating creditor. This can lead to a number of FDCPA § 1692e violations. The business records, in fact, may have been created by the debt buyer for purposes of the litigation, not by the originating creditor.[1088] The debt buyer may falsely state that an affidavit is from an employee of the originating creditor and then forge that employee's signature.[1089] A debt buyer employee may sign an affidavit purporting to be on personal knowledge despite having no such knowledge.[1090]

On the other hand, courts have found no deception where a debt buyer employee claims to have personal knowledge of the debt buyer records that incorporate records from the originating creditor—the affiant is not stating knowledge of how the original records were created, but only as to their incorporation in the debt buyer's records.[1091]

1081 See CFPB v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2016-CFPB-0009 (Apr. 25, 2016) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov. See also Stipulated Final Judgment and Order, CFPB v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., Case No. 20CV1750 GPC KSC (S.D. Cal. filed Oct. 15, 2020), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov; CFPB v. New Century Fin. Services, Inc., 2016-CFPB-0010 (Apr. 25, 2016) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov; CFPB v. Encore Capital Group, 2015-CFPB-0022 (Sept. 9, 2015) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

1082 CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (denying motion to dismiss).

1083 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

1084 See § 12.6.6, infra.

1085 See § 12.6.4, infra.

1086 See Gionis v. Javitch, Block, Rathbone, L.L.P., 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007) (seeking attorney fees to the extent permitted by law where state law prohibited attorney fee recovery); Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (affidavit misrepresented that debt buyer was holder in due course).

1087 See § 1.4.7.3, supra.

1088 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009); Rice v. Javitch Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 2011 WL 3861701 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 31, 2011); Manlapaz v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 3015166 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 15, 2009). But see Myers v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 750 F. Supp. 2d 864 (S.D. Ohio 2010) (no deception where document indicated that it was created by debt buyer), aff'd, 472 Fed. Appx. 395 (6th Cir. 2012).

1089 Skinner v. Mountain Lion Acquisitions, Inc., 2014 WL 3853424 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2014). But cf. Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (no violation where affiant alleged to be debt owner's "employee/agent," but was employed by part of same corporate family acting as owner's agent).

1090 Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 4473016 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 22, 2016); CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342, 1375 (N.D. Ga. 2015); Rini v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.C., 2013 WL 2476367 (N.D. Ohio June 7, 2013); Simmons v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2012 WL 222935 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 25, 2012) (debt buyer affiant stated on personal knowledge, but debt buyer did not possess any of account's relevant documents); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp 2d 961 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (employee merely signed affidavits en masse, about 400 each day, without any personal knowledge about amount claimed or owed, or ownership of claim), modified on other grounds, 2009 WL 3086560 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 23, 2009); Gutierrez v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2009 WL 10699516 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 16, 2009) (certifying class action alleging § 1692e violation by debt buyer filing affidavits that falsely attested that affiant had "personal knowledge" of supporting account documents); Williams v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 480 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (S.D. Ohio 2007); Ison v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 2007 WL 2769674 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 18, 2007) See also Michelo v. National Collegiate Student Loan Tr. 2007-2, 419 F. Supp. 3d 668, 705 (S.D.N.Y. 2019). But see Haworth v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 7161230, at *5 (D. Neb. Oct. 17, 2019) ("claims in this case focus on the affiant's alleged lack of personal knowledge, not any knowingly false statements about the nature of the debt itself"); Hill v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1645553 (D. Md. Apr. 16, 2013) (no violation where did not state on personal knowledge, as required by law, and did not contain false statements); Myers v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 750 F. Supp. 2d 864 (S.D. Ohio 2010), aff'd, 472 Fed. Appx. 395 (6th Cir. 2012) (affiant only said competent to testify); Manlapaz v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 3015166 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 15, 2009) (falsity would not affect consumer's reaction to lawsuit).

1091 Clark v. Main St. Acquisition Corp., 553 Fed. Appx. 510, 514 (6th Cir. 2014); Casso v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 1359365 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 2016); Delisi v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4393901 (E.D. Mo. July 16, 2015) (affidavit explained that it was based only on personal knowledge of debt buyer's records); Collins v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 7335169 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 19, 2014) (granting judgment on the pleadings to collector on consumer's claim that debt buyer's affidavit of personal knowledge as to business records

Collection lawsuits for consumer debt are often filed en masse, almost on a cookie-cutter type of assembly line, producing hundreds of affidavits a day. This can lead to numerous problems with the affidavits, including some of the abuses described in the prior paragraphs. In addition, even the notarizations on an affidavit can be fraudulent, such as where a stamp is used without the notary present.[1092]

7.4.10.6 Requests for Admissions and Other Discovery

In seeking to win their case without producing evidence, collectors may send the consumer a request for admissions. The consumer's failure to timely respond, under applicable court rules, may be treated as admitting to all the statements in the request. For a discussion of the impact of failure to timely respond to requests for admission in the context of collection lawsuits, see NCLC's Collection Actions § 4.2.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Collection attorney conduct in discovery of consumer debtors can be subject to FDCPA § 1692e challenges, just as other aspects of the litigation.[1093] It can be a deceptive practice for a collector suing a pro se consumer to send a request for admissions that does not conform to facts of the case, particularly where the collection attorney does not disclose that the statements are deemed admitted if not timely answered.[1094]

Other discovery can be served upon the consumer hoping that this will discourage the consumer defending the case or that the consumer's failure to respond will lead to a default judgment. In serving such discovery on a pro se consumer, it can be deceptive to use confusing language such as captioning the discovery "interlocking discovery," which has no standard meaning,[1095] or telling the consumer the discovery responses must be "sworn" and "filed."[1096] Also deceptive is misrepresenting that discovery must be returned in ten days when court rules allow thirty days.[1097] The CFPB challenged as deceptive engaging in prejudgment discovery for the purpose of discovering assets to seize postjudgment.[1098] Sending discovery after voluntarily dismissing the case against a consumer can be a violation.[1099] The scheduling of what is stated to be a postjudgment "deposition" in aid of execution of judgment "when at most [the collector] sought only an informal conversation regarding the debtor's ability to satisfy his or her debt" has been found to violate FDCPA § 1692e.[1100]

But there are limits to when misleading discovery is actionable. The Sixth Circuit found that the consumer did not have Article III standing[1101] to bring suit alleging that the collection agency violated the FDCPA by requiring that responses to requests for admission be sworn and notarized. Though the consumer alleged a procedural violation of state law, the court found no "concrete injury," as the type of harm alleged by the consumer, namely that he would have been required to visit a notary, was "not the type of harm the FDCPA was designed to prevent."[1102] Similarly, the Third Circuit found that an information subpoena was not "falsely represented to be a document authorized, issued, or approved by any court [or] official" just because by state law it is allowed to be prepared by the issuing lawyer, not by a court, while carrying the name of a court clerk. That it was signed by a retired clerk of a different court, rather than an actual clerk of the court with jurisdiction, was not material, because under New Jersey law such technical errors in a subpoena do not affect its validity.[1103]

7.4.10.7 Misrepresentations in Seeking a Default Judgment

Since collectors often do not want to try a case, but are litigating on the expectation of a default judgment,[1104] they may engage in a number of deceptive practices to obtain a default judgment. The collector may violate FDCPA § 1692e by obtaining the consumer's consent to judgment based on misrepresentations to the consumer.[1105] The collector also violates was false or material); Jenkins v. Centurion Capital Corp., 2009 WL 3414248, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 20, 2009).

1092 See Newman v. Encore Capital Group, 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017).

1093 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567, 573 (8th Cir. 2015) (declining to adopt an inflexible rule that the FDCPA can never apply to discovery requests made directly to the consumer's attorney during the course of debt collection litigation, but reversing grant of class certification on this issue for lack of predominance); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 229 (4th Cir. 2007).

1094 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (requests for admissions asked consumer to admit facts the consumer had already denied; further, collector had information in its possession demonstrating that the request was false); Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017) (pro se consumer asked to admit to untrue facts). See also Heroux v. Callidus Portfolio Mgmt. Inc., 2018 WL 2018069 (D. Minn. May 1, 2018). Compare Clark v. Main Street Acquisition Corp., 2013 WL 2295879 (S.D. Ohio May 24, 2013) (defendant's admission requests did not violate FDCPA because they did not ask for admission of anything false).

1095 Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017). See also Heroux v. Callidus Portfolio Mgmt. Inc., 2018 WL 2018069 (D. Minn. May 1, 2018) (interlocking discovery); Ardino v. Lyons, Doughty & Veldhuis, P.C., 2011 WL 6257170 (D.N.J. Dec. 14, 2011) ("Certified Discovery").

1096 Washington v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2016 WL 1435665 (D. Neb. Apr. 11, 2016).

1097 Ardino v. Lyons, Doughty & Veldhuis, P.C., 2011 WL 6257170 (D.N.J. Dec. 14, 2011).

1098 CFPB v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2016-CFPB-0009 (Apr. 25, 2016) (consent order), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

1099 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) (alleged § 1692f(1) violation by sending discovery requests after dismissing state court collection action).

1100 Barenbaum v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4305761, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 10, 2019).

1101 See § 11.15, infra.

1102 Lyshe v. Levy, 854 F.3d 855, 859 (6th Cir. 2017).

1103 Jensen v. Pressler & Pressler, 791 F.3d 413 (3d Cir. 2015).

1104 See § 1.4.9.4, supra.

1105 Copeland v. Kramer & Frank, P.C., 2010 WL 2232712 (E.D. Mo. June 1, 2010).

FDCPA § 1692e by seeking a default judgment after misrepresenting to the consumer that a written answer was not necessary to respond to the collector's complaint[1106] or leaving the consumer with the impression that a settlement had ended the litigation.[1107]

There can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation where a collector attempts to obtain a default judgment by falsely representing to the court that the consumer had not responded to the collection complaint or a discovery request,[1108] or where the collector seeks a default judgment without properly notifying the consumer.[1109] State law may require the collector, before obtaining a default judgment against the consumer, to submit an affidavit showing the basis of the collector's claim.[1110] Such an affidavit can violate FDCPA § 1692e where the affidavit is false or misleading.[1111]

7.4.10.8 Garnishment; Postjudgment Remedies

7.4.10.8.1 Pursuing postjudgment remedies when debt no longer or never owed

It is a FDCPA § 1692e violation to agree to a settlement as full satisfaction for a judgment debt, but then continue pursuing postjudgment creditor remedies.[1112] Also deceptive is to continue to garnish or threaten garnishment even after prior garnishments had satisfied the judgment.[1113] Similarly it is a FDCPA § 1692e violation to collect on a judgment after it has been vacated.[1114] After the judgment has been vacated, it also violates FDCPA § 1692e to fail to timely return amounts previously garnished.[1115] It can also be deceptive where the creditor garnishes wages or levies on property of the wrong consumer.[1116] Where state law allows prejudgment garnishment in certain situations, prejudgment garnishment in other circumstances can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[1117]

7.4.10.8.2 Misrepresentations concerning exemptions

Exemptions may limit a collector's ability to garnish consumer income or assets or seize consumer property, and representations can be deceptive where they suggest a creditor can seize more than exemption law allows.[1118] State law may 1106 Pate v. Law Office of Joe Pezzuto, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12586733 (C.D. Cal. June 16, 2014) (consumer stated § 1692e claim where collection attorney stated that consumer's telephone call was sufficient answer to collection complaint, that no further action was necessary, and then took default judgment against consumer); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) (false representations that lulled consumer into believing that he need not file answer to state court complaint, and then procuring default judgment against him).

---

1107 Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 2002 WL 32993859 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 8, 2002) (agreeing to settle state collection suit, but then obtaining default judgment and garnishment).

1108 Schendzielos v. Borenstein, 2016 WL 614473 (D. Colo. Feb. 16, 2016) (falsely claimed consumer had not filed response to complaint); Harrington v. CACV, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (violating § 1692e(5)).

109 Weinstein v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2018 WL 6199249 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 28, 2018) (failure to provide consumer with copy of motion for default judgment as required by state court rules). See also Mitchell v. Patenaude & Felix A.P.C., 2019 WL 4043974, at *5 (W.D. Wash. July. 15, 2019) ("the failure to serve a copy of a motion for default can constitute false, deceptive or misleading representations to a court in connection with the collection of a debt"), adopted, 2019 WL 4034958 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 27, 2019); Coleman v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 2015 WL 4524599 (E.D. Mo. July 27, 2015) (failure to send consumer amended complaint which resulted in consumer's default judgment). But see Riess v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 5506290 (D. Minn. Nov. 10, 2011) (consumer only wrote informal letter to collection law firm); Harrington v. CACV, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (falsely stating consumer had not responded).

0 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 12.3.13 (5th ed. 2020).

1 Hasbrouck v. Arrow Fin. Services L.L.C., 2010 WL 1257885 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2010) (denying defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings where affidavit filed in state court was alleged to have falsely stated that it was based in part on account information provided by creditor).

2 See Kohli v. Javitch, Block, Rathbone, L.L.C., 2015 WL 3622353 (N.D. Ohio June 9, 2015) (from perspective of least sophisticated consumer, collection law firm's promise to accept monthly payments as part of "new agreement" would reasonably appear false, deceptive, or misleading in light of its act of garnishing consumer's wages shortly before new payment was due); Moore v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 2009 WL 1873654 (E.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 2002 WL 32993859 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 8, 2002) (agreeing to settle state collection suit, but then obtaining default judgment and garnishment).

1113 See Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011).

1114 See Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961, 974 (D. Minn. 2019); Hunter v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5513636 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 16, 2017). But cf. Oliphant v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 833636, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 20, 2020) (no violation where default judgment was void for lack of personal jurisdiction, since by filing garnishment application defendant did not represent that judgment was valid but "represented only that a default judgement was in fact entered against Oliphant, that it remained unsatisfied, and that Midland knew or had reason to believe Oliphant was indebted to Midland"); Carmona v. Gene Kazlow, P.C., 2017 WL 3316091 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 2, 2017) (no violation where collector did not inform government official executing on wages that court had vacated judgment).

1115 Polanco v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 132 F. Supp. 3d 567 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 2015) (debt buyer's ten-month long refusal to comply with two court orders that vacated fraudulently obtained debt collection judgment against consumer and refusal to return consumer's funds violated FDCPA).

1116 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 536 (6th Cir. 2014) (levy on property); Frias v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2021 WL 1192421 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 30, 2021); Estes v. Love, Beal & Nixon, P.C., 2015 WL 4508601 (N.D. Okla. July 24, 2015). But cf. Alvarado Martinez v. Eltman Law, P.C., 444 F. Supp. 3d 748 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 11, 2020) (denying consumer default judgment where pleadings did not demonstrate that service of writ of garnishment on bank was fraudulent representation; upon law firm's discovery that there was no account that matched name it had judgment against, it took no action to collect debt).

1117 See Picht v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 236 F.3d 446 (8th Cir. 2001) (state law did not allow remedy, because amount owed was uncertain and matter involved exercise of discretion).

1118 See Broughton v. Weltman, Weinberg and Reis Co., L.P.A., 2011 WL 1211461 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 31, 2011) (alleged threat to put lien on plaintiff's home stated legal impossibility because "home" qualified as a "homestead" and lien was not option legally available to defendant); Sunga v. Broome, 2010 WL 3198925 (E.D. Va. Aug. 12, 2010) (falsely stated that applicable state law homestead exemption was not provide for differing amounts that can be garnished depending on the consumer's status (such as head of family). It can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation for a collector to state that it believes the consumer has a particular status that allows for a higher garnishment amount.[1119]

It may not be deceptive merely to oppose unsuccessfully the consumer's claim of exemption where the collector had a reasonable basis to do so.[1120] But, in opposing a consumer's claim for exemptions, it can be deceptive for the collector to misrepresent the required nature of the consumer's proof of exemption or to continue to oppose a consumer's claim for exemption by falsely stating that the collector had a reasonable basis for that opposition.[1121] It may also be deceptive for a collector seeking garnishment to falsely represent the extent of the consumer's nonexempt assets.[1122]

A collector's use of an outdated statutorily mandated exemption claim form may not violate FDCPA § 1692e if such use is not material.[1123] Where a garnishment notice does not contain all of the state-mandated disclosures regarding exemptions, the consumer may not have standing to bring an FDCPA case.[1124]

7.4.10.8.3 Misrepresentations concerning creditor rights or the amount owed postjudgment

Collectors can violate FDCPA § 1692e by misrepresenting to the consumer the collector's rights in pursuing postjudgment remedies. It can be deceptive to inform the consumer that joint bank accounts are subject to complete seizure when they are not.[1125] It can also violate FDCPA § 1692e where the garnishment order sent to the consumer's employer and/or to the consumer contains a misrepresentation of state law garnishment requirements.[1126]

Also deceptive is a notice to the consumer concerning rights to challenge a garnishment action with a validation notice on the back, where the two notices are conflicting.[1127] Even if this inconsistency results from the differing requirements of state and federal law, the collector should at least explain the ambiguity to the consumer.[1128] Where state law requires that a purchaser of a judgment debt notify the consumer before seeking to enforce the debt, it was deceptive to do so without first notifying the consumer.[1129]

It is deceptive to demand or seek postjudgment remedies in an amount greater than allowed by the court judgment.[1130] Where a judgment excluded the right to postjudgment interest, it was a FDCPA § 1692e violation to seek such interest through postjudgment remedies.[1131] But courts have found no violation where the judgment authorized postjudgment attorney fees and the collector sought an amount for such fees, subject to court approval,[1132] or where the collector sought to garnish less than the amount due.[1133]

7.4.11 Deception re Mortgage Servicing and Foreclosures

7.4.11.1 Generally

Enforcement of a mortgage is the collection of a debt. As described at § 4.7.5, supra, the FDCPA applies to a wide range of mortgage collection and foreclosure activities carried out by law firms, mortgage servicers, and other players in the mortgage lending industry.

available); Seabrook v. Onondaga Bur. of Med. Economics, Inc., 705 F. Supp. 81 (N.D.N.Y. 1989) (threat to garnish 10% of consumer's wages was per se violation because of failure to disclose exemption of first $100.50 in weekly disposable earnings).

1119 See Reynolds v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 756469 (D. Neb. Feb. 25, 2016).

1120 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone L.L.P., 601 F.3d 654, 659 (6th Cir. 2010).

1121 See Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128 (2d Cir. 2017); Chalik v. Westport Recovery Corp., 677 F. Supp. 2d 1322 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (collectors' filing of sworn statement denying consumer's claim of exemption, without any specific knowledge regarding exemption). But see Fuqua v. Associated Credit Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 2371102 (E.D. Wash. May 24, 2018) (collector claimed "reason to believe" there were nonexempt funds, and state law places burden on consumer to identify any exempt funds).

1122 See Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., 434 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2006) (on interlocutory appeal from denial of judgment on the pleadings, rejecting collector's defense of immunity).

1123 Putnam v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 1878746 (E.D. Wash. Apr. 15, 2020).

1124 Kramer v. Ray Klein, 2019 WL 7756339 (D. Or. Dec. 10, 2019), adopted, 2020 WL 423380 (D. Or. Jan. 24, 2020). See § 11.15, supra.

1125 See Billiar v. Atl. Credit & Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 3418196, at *5 (D. Minn. Aug. 4, 2011).

1126 See Smeby v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2015 WL 1897853 (D. Minn. Apr. 23, 2015) (summons directed employer to hold funds for 270 days instead of the correct 180 days).

1127 See Dorsey v. David B. Schumacher, P.C., 2015 WL 569958 (D. Or. Feb. 11, 2015) (one notice provides 120 days to challenge garnishment and indicates not to use form to challenge debt itself and validation notice provides 30 days for consumer to dispute debt).

1128 Id.

1129 Musah v. Houslanger & Assoc., 962 F. Supp. 2d 636 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

1130 Overton v. Advanced Recovery Sys., 2018 WL 2752131 (S.D. Miss. June 7, 2018) (motion in state court attempting to force consumer's employer to continue garnishing wages overstated to state court amount owed); Drew v. Mamaroneck Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4018854 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 12, 2017) (balance stated in collection letter was thousands of dollars more than amount shown on recent state collection court's postjudgment records). See also Arias v. Columbia Debt Recovery L.L.C., 2021 WL 952559 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 10, 2021), adopted, 2021 WL 948834 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 12, 2021); Trice v. Oliveri & Assoc., 2020 WL 4732139 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2020) (attempt to collect postjudgment attorney fees by falsely representing that they were related to prior lien or judgment).

1131 Egletes v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2010 WL 3025236, at *4 (D. Conn. July 30, 2010) ("inexcusable" for collection lawyers to seek interest).

1132 Lowe v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 2018 WL 4693532 (D. Ariz. Sept. 27, 2018).

1133 Madrid v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2323801 (D. Or. Mar. 12, 2018).

The Supreme Court has held that only certain FDCPA prohibitions apply to companies whose principal business purpose is the enforcement of security interests. A limited debt collector definition applies to certain foreclosure law firms and trustees when they engage in activities limited to enforcement of a mortgage through state non-judicial foreclosure statutes.[1134] As described at § 4.7.5, supra, unless this narrow exception applies, companies collecting on mortgage debt can be subject to the full range of FDCPA provisions. FDCPA § 1692e applies to mortgages and foreclosures where the defendant is a debt collector under the FDCPA's primary definition of debt collector and the representation or practice is in connection with collection of a debt.

That certain law firms or trustees enforcing mortgage interests may not qualify as debt collectors is separate from the question whether a practice is "in connection with the collection of any debt," as required by FDCPA § 1692e. As a general rule, as described at § 4.3.4, supra, representations involving mortgages and foreclosures are almost always in connection with collection of a debt. This is the case even if a communication does not request payment, such as a loss mitigation solicitation.[1135] A good clue that a communication is in connection with a debt is if the communication states it is from a debt collector and sets out the amount due.[1136] Certainly, almost any representation in furtherance of a foreclosure is in connection with collection of a debt.[1137]

A mortgage servicer's periodic statements can be seen as in connection with a debt. This was found to be the case even though sent after the consumer's bankruptcy discharge and the communication included a disclaimer that it was only for informational purposes with regard to the secured lien, and was not an attempt to collect a debt. Such a disclaimer cannot prevent the statement from being in connection with a debt where the disclaimer is not sufficiently conspicuous or is contradicted by other content.[1138]

Courts, though, may consider whether a misrepresentation violating FDCPA § 1692e is material.[1139] For example, the Sixth Circuit found a misrepresentation not material where a letter misstated that the creditor was the servicer, and the letter told the consumer to contact the real servicer's attorney to arrange a modification, but the consumer never contacted the attorney or disputed the foreclosure.[1140]

This section focuses on three particular types of FDCPA § 1692e violations involving mortgage servicing and foreclosures. Section 7.4.11.2, infra, examines misrepresentations of the homeowner's legal rights as to mortgage servicing, loan modifications, foreclosures, and post-foreclosure activity. Section 7.4.11.3, infra, considers misrepresentations as to the party owning the mortgage, the party servicing the mortgage, and related deception. Section 7.4.11.4, infra, reviews violations involving demands for the amount due.

7.4.11.2 Misrepresentation of the Homeowner's Legal Rights As to Mortgage Servicing and Foreclosures

It can be deceptive and FDCPA § 1692e may be violated in a variety of circumstances where a collector misrepresents some aspect of a homeowner's legal rights as to mortgage servicing or foreclosures. These include where:

- A demand for payment is made after the homeowner obtains a bankruptcy discharge, even where a lien remains on the home;[1141]
- Payment is sought after the servicer has settled the obligation with the consumer,[1142] or the servicer is contacting the wrong consumer;[1143]
- A short sale or deed in lieu extinguishes a debt, but the collector seeks additional payment;[1144]

134 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus, L.L.P., ___U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

135 Gburek v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 614 F.3d 380, 385 (7th Cir. 2010). But see Farquharson v. Citibank, 664 Fed. Appx. 793 (11th Cir. 2016) (loss mitigation not related to debt collection).

136 McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014); Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559, (D.N.J. 2016) (borrower-initiated loss mitigation communications did not constitute debt collection).

137 In re Holyfield, 740 Fed. Appx. 695, 697 (11th Cir. 2018).

138 Tabb v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 798 Fed. Appx. 726 (3d Cir. 2020).

139 See § 7.3.9, supra.

140 Duffey v. Nationstar Mortg., 614 Fed. Appx. 330 (6th Cir. 2015) (listing of Deutsche Bank as loan servicer instead of Bank of America was not material where contact information was Bank of America's attorney and homeowner never tried to contact attorney).

1141 See Tabb v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 798 Fed. Appx. 726 (3d Cir. 2020); Garfield v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016) (attempt by mortgagee to collect mortgage payments discharged in bankruptcy violated both Bankruptcy Code discharge injunction and FDCPA; there was no conflict between two laws); Best v. Newrez L.L.C., 2020 WL 5513433, at *17 (D. Md. Sept. 11, 2020) (denying motion to dismiss where, despite bankruptcy disclaimer, statement included "several notations that at least muddy the waters" as to demand for payment); Parente v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1182714 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 12, 2020) (demanding payment following bankruptcy discharge); Miller v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 607 B.R. 1, 8–9 (D. Me. 2019) (denying motion to dismiss where postbankruptcy mortgage statements were replete with language that can be construed as payment demand); Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016) (implied that owed debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy); Parker v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 12577116 (M.D. Fla. July 10, 2014) (judicial foreclosure action that included demand for indebtedness discharged in bankruptcy). See also Ch. 13, infra. But see 11 U.S.C. § 524(j) (allowing certain post-discharge collections on mortgage debt limited to periodic payments due in order to prevent foreclosure).

1142 Pimental v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 5243325 (D.R.I. Sept. 4, 2015) (collecting debt not owed because of settlement).

1143 See Chyba v. Bay View Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4523265 (S.D. Cal. July 23, 2015).

1144 Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2017) (servicer made false representation as to character, amount, and status of mortgage debt where repeatedly sought payment after having released debtor from liability through deed in lieu of foreclosure); Molina v. Caliber Home Loans Inc., 2016 WL 11472751 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 8, 2016) (seeking payment of over $100,000 where debt should have been extinguished by deed in lieu); Yarney v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 929 F. Supp. 2d 569 (W.D. Va. 2013).

- In connection with loan modifications, communications misrepresent the status of the loan modification,[1145] the nature of the loan modification application process,[1146] the nature of loan modification options,[1147] or encourage the homeowner to submit additional paperwork after additional paperwork while knowing the modification application is hopeless[1148] provide the consumer with a confusing modification plan[1149] or seek payment on a plan different than the one agreed to;[1150]
- Despite there being no right to foreclose, a collector threatens to foreclose[1151] or actually pursues a foreclosure;[1152]
- A foreclosure is threatened or conducted in violation of federal regulations that prohibit foreclosures for a period of time while the servicer should be evaluating the homeowner for loss mitigation,[1153] or foreclosure is brought while a loan modification application is pending,[1154] or threatened while the homeowner is complying with a trial or regular loan modification plan;[1155]
- The collector misrepresents that acceptance of a loan modification plan will forestall a foreclosure if that is not the case;[1156]
- A foreclosure is threatened or occurs based on the terms of an unmodified mortgage when the servicer had modified 1145 Lucas v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 404033, at *6–7 (D. Mass. Jan. 31, 2019) (borrower pleaded potential violation of § 1692e involving servicer's misrepresentations to borrower's attorney about status of application for loan modification).

1146 Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397 (Mont. 2016).

1147 See Childress v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 3767464 (E.D. Ky. Aug. 9, 2019) (servicer incorrectly represented that escrow shortages were taken care of by loan modification); Ivey v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2018 WL 2021225 (N.D. Ill. May 1, 2018) (representations misled homeowners as to availability of HAFA deed-in-lieu of foreclosure). See also In re Hart, 246 B.R. 709 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000). But see Molina v. Caliber Home Loans Inc., 2016 WL 11472751 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 8, 2016) (while servicer's recommendation of short sale may have been improper, consumer failed to plead facts showing that suggested short sale rose to the level of false representation or deceptive means to collect debt).

1148 Deutsche Bank Tr. Co. Americas v. Garst, 2013 WL 4851493 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 11, 2013).

1149 Weiner v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 327 F. Supp. 3d 268 (D. Mass. Aug. 15, 2018), related op. at 424 F. Supp. 3d 163 (D. Mass. 2019). But see Fennimore v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 7075814 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 12, 2015) (no § 1692e claim where collector sent foreclosure notices mandated by state law despite loan modification plan); Bennett v. Bank of Am., 126 F. Supp. 3d 871 (E.D. Ky. 2015) (forbearance agreement did not misrepresent loss mitigation options where forbearance agreement did not suggest that it stated all loss mitigation options).

1150 Justice v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2015 WL 235738 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 16, 2015) (improperly increased monthly obligation agreed to in loan modification). See also Macholtz v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 499 F. Supp. 3d 434 (W.D. Mich. 2020).

1151 See Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019) (law firm asserted that fraudulently obtained mortgage was valid); Truhn v. Equityexperts.org, L.L.C., 418 F. Supp. 3d 186 (E.D. Mich. 2019) (condo management firm threatened to enforce lien when it had not perfected any lien); Bauer v. Roundpoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2018 WL 5388206 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 29, 2018) (threatened to foreclose when action could not legally be taken because of Illinois' rule allowing only one refiling of foreclosure action); Baker v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2018 WL 3496383 (S.D. Ohio July 20, 2018) (threatened foreclosure after statute of limitations to bring foreclosure action had expired); Hall v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2016 WL 3971428 (N.D. Ala. July 25, 2016); Gritters v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 7451682 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 31, 2014) (servicer falsely claimed consumer was in default). See also Kabir v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg L.L.C., 2015 WL 4730053 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 10, 2015) (continued foreclosure action even after court had dismissed it with prejudice); Puryer v. HSBC Bank, 2018 WL 2271425 (Mont. May 18, 2018) (repeatedly threatening to foreclose when no right to do so under terms of deed of trust stated claim under § 1692f(6)).

1152 Tevere v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 2019 WL 2341389 (N.D. Ill. June 3, 2019) (foreclosure complaint filed in violation of Illinois single refiling rule); Machles v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 2017 WL 5172516 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2017) (false statement in court proceedings that creditor had complied with FHA appraisal requirements); Bonfiglio v. Citifinancial Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5612194 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2015). See also O'Donnell v. Vial Fotheringham L.L.P., 2020 WL 6365521, at *4 (D. Or. Sept. 15, 2020) (filing of the foreclosure suit without satisfying statutory condition precedent deprived law firm of legal authority required by state law to seek foreclosure, "and courts have consistently held in a variety of different contexts that pursuing a legally defective foreclosure action violates the FDCPA"), adopted, 2021 WL 710725 (D. Or. Feb. 22, 2021).

1153 Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128, at *5 (D. Md. July 18, 2019) ("Because RESPA prohibits a foreclosure sale before such an application has been denied and all appeal rights exhausted, the scheduling of this sale could constitute a debt collector's 'threat' to take an action 'that cannot legally be taken' in violation of § 1692e(5)"); Weisheit v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2017 WL 5478355 (D. Md. Nov. 15, 2017) (falsely representing right to foreclose); Farber v. Brock & Scott, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5867042 (D. Md. Oct. 6, 2016). But see Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 6892465 (D.N.H. Nov. 21, 2016) (incorrectly asserting that solely state law not federal regulations control right to foreclose upon default). But cf. Landau v. RoundPoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2019 WL 2428443, at *5 (11th Cir. June 11, 2019) (mortgagee's motion to reschedule foreclosure sale was not "motion for order of sale," but rather "non-substantive, housekeeping-type motion").

